Two Third Period Esposito Goals Lift Bruins Past Rangers, 3-2

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins, frustrated much of the way, struck from behind on a pair of third period goals by Phil Esposito and edged the New York Rangers 3-2 Tuesday night to move within one victory of winning their National Hockey League quarter final playoff series.

Esposito scored on a pass from Wayne Cashman and then scored again on a long forward feed by Bobby Orr, pulling the Bruins from behnd and giving his team a 3-2 series advantage.

The Bruins can wrap up the series in New York Thursday night.

Orr sent Boston into a 1-0 lead with a rink-length dash at 2:44 after the opening faceoff, but the Rangers assumed command and were in charge until the Bruins came out fired up for the third period.

Esposito hit the post in a top off an Orr shot, but 30 seconds later tied the score 2-2 as he took a shoven pass from Cashman and beat New York goalie Ed Giacomin on a 15-footer.

The Bruins continued to apply pressure and at 7:59 Orr threaded a pass to Esposito behind the New York defense and the Boston center skated in all alone to score his sixth goal of the series.

In an effort to stem Boston's tremendous momentum, New York coach Emile Francis slowed down the game by sending out goalie Terry Sawchuk to replace Giacomin. Sawchuk played less than a minute before Giacomin returned to the goal. The strategy failed as the Bruins continued their sharp play and hung on for the victory.

After Orr's first period goal, New York tied the game on a tally by Rookie Jack Egers, who scored on a power play at 5:18 of the first period.

The Rangers went ahead midway through the second period as Orland Kurtenbach took a pass from Boston defenseman Don Awry long enough to get away a wrist shot that easily beat Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers.

A couple of Stanley Cup records for the most penalty minutes were set in the series. In five games the two teams have piled up 357 minutes in penalties, breaking the former mark of 340 minutes set by St. Louis and Philadelphia in a seven-game series in 1968.

With 198 minutes the Bruins became the most penalized team in playoff history for one series. The former record was 190 by St. Louis in the same series two years ago.

Winning Streak On Line As Stickers Open Season

Opponent is Middlebury

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Hosting Middlebury College the UMass lacrosse team will open its defense of the New England championship today in a 3:15 contest. Despite the construction going on behind Boyden, the games will still be played on that field.

The Redmen will be out to continue their 15 game winning streak which extends back to May 1968. They have won 20 out of their last 21 and the lone loss was a 6-5 heartbreaker to Amherst two years ago.

However, Middlebury is also coming off an impressive season, finishing 13-1 last year and second in New England to the Redmen. The Panthers also held the high scoring Redmen to only eight goals in an 8-3 loss and physically gave the Redmen all they could handle.

Both teams were hit hard by graduation this year and the coaches have been searching for replacements. Middlebury lost 11 seniors, including three of the top team scorers, and the loss of firepower has shown in the first two games. The Panthers defeated Adelphi 4-3 but then lost to Union 3-2 last week.

First year coach Bill Hess had an added problem facing him because goalie Rick Moore and high scorer Brad Bruce were declared ineligible by the E.C.A.C. for attending another school last fall. Both players were presumed lost for the season, but apparently the decision was reversed last week and they are expected to be in the lineup tomorrow.

Middlebury boasts a strong defense which plays a very physical type of game. Juniors Chris Grejtak and Dave Pierson are experienced defenders and will be bolstered by the return of Moore to the nets. Offensively captain Jeff Sturges has been moved from midfield to attack to boost the scoring and will be joined by sophomore Dito Staley and Vaugn Gooding. Bruce, who scored 30 goals last year and was All New England, will anchor the midfield. His presence could spell trouble for the Redmen.

UMass coach Dick Garber is optimistic about the first game but hesitated when it came to making predictions. "If we don't make any mental mistakes, then I think we will be in good shape," he said. Garber also has the problem of filling the shoes left by the loss of many of the top scorers from last year's team and the entire first two midfields.

All-American Tom Malone will lead the Redmen attack again this year. Malone, who holds the school scoring record with 88 points in a season, will be the prime target of defenders all year and Garber has been searching for scorers to help him out. Sophomore Paul Rich will play crease attack and Bob Waters will start at the third attack position with Steve Herschopf also due to see a lot of action.

The midfield will consist of almost all newcomers. John Gannon and Bob LaChance have some varsity experience and they will be joined on the first midfield by Lou Marinacci. Veteran Bob Florin is a possible starter, but has missed a great deal of practice due to delivering mail for the National Guard. Tim Bosworth, Larry Diamond and Dana Stone comprise the second midfield and Dale Bassuchas, Phil Sheridan and Paul Schacter make up the third line.

Redmen Open Homestand Against AIC Today

AIC Weak In Pitching

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

UMass baseball attempts to get back on the winning track this afternoon as American International College invades Varsity Field for a 3 p.m. contest. This is the first of a three game home stand for the Redmen.

The Yellow Jackets are hoping to rebound from last year's disappointing 5-8 season. Such a comeback may be difficult however, as four of the six top hitters are not back. This includes Chuck Paglerani, now a member of the Philadelphia Phillies farm system, who batted .354.

Co-captain Mike Delaney leads the present aggregation. A first baseman, Delaney hit .326 last spring with 11 RBI. Second baseman Alan Bush is the other co-captain. Bush, also known as a hoop star, was All-New England in the College Division as a sophomore.

Chris Serino brings his .286 average to shortstop while the third base job is up for grabs. Senior Bill Connolly appears to have the inside track.

The outfield picture is uncertain. Len Farquahar, Leo Prone Joe Chicanola, Mike Foley or even Connolly may see action.

AIC coach Art Ditmar, former star pitcher with the New York Yankees, has three hard hitting catchers. The members of this titanic trio are soph Rich Crowley, who was an All State selection in high school, junior Floyd Narcisse who hit .375 in summer action and soph Mike Nowak who always manages to get good wood.

The pitching was atrocious last year and Ditmar has only two sophs to supply new blood. The Yellow Jacket ERA was in excess of seven last year, certainly nothing to brag about.

The top returnee is John Leahy who was 2-2 last year with a 2.80 ERA, obviously the best on the squad. Other members of the staff are Dana Westlund, Tom Doyle and Mike Hambro. Doug Anderson and Paul McGrath are the sophomores.

Ditmar, who in 1959 and 1960 led the Yankees in ERA with consecutive marks of 2.90 and 3.04, is not too optimistic about prospects this year. With too many question marks with the pitching and the hitting AIC should not pose too much of a threat to opponents.

UMass Coach Dick Bergquist is expected to go with his usual lineup. Rich Rappoli is the probable starter. With Yankee Conference rival Vermont due Friday, a win today should put the Redmen on the right track towards defending their conference championship.

Tennis Team Dropped by HC, 5-4

UMass' tennis team completed its postponed match with Holy Cross yesterday afternoon and ended up losing, 5-4, to dip its record slightly to 1-1, but with a chance to improve on that this afternoon in a 3 p.m. contest at MIT.

The Redmen had originally started play against the Crusaders last Thursday and completed singles play on top, 4-2. Doubles competition had gotten under way, but was halted until yesterday.

In the first doubles match the UMass team of Alan Goldberg and Jon Bloom had lost its first set and was tied with the HC unit of Young and Bayotte, 3-3, in the second set, going into Tuesday. The Redman combo dropped that second set, 12-10).

The Mike Katz - Steve Gerickas unit, which was still in the first set against Holy Cross' Hughes-Carey duo as of Thursday (the score was deuce, 6-5) lost that set, 7-5, won the second set, 6-3, but fell in the deciding set, 6-4. This tied the meet at 4-4.

The third doubles match swung the meet in favor of the visitors as their Bier-Shick tandem, which had won the first set on Thursday, 6-2, also copped the second set, 6-4, for the victory. They were ahead in the letter match, 5-1, but UMass' Gus Peron and Ferdinand Wilder battled back to cut it to 5-4 before HC slipped across the crucial point.

Head tennis coach Steve Kosakowski expects MIT to be pretty much the same type squad as Holy Cross. Therefore, a tough, but interesting match is the order of the afternoon in Cambridge.

"Crucial Burn Looks Good"

Crippled Apollo Limps Earthward

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) - Three harried American Astronauts fired a 15-second rocket burn Wednesday night in an attempt to zero in on Earth and correct a course which would have missed the Earth by 104 miles and left them stranded in space.

"The thrust looks good," reported Mission Control immediately after the burst, but the space center said it would take several hours to determine if the course correction was a success.

However, all signs indicated at midnight last night that the burn was successful.

The burn came at 11:32 p.m. EST, eleven minutes earlier than planned.

At that point Apollo 13 was still some 175,000 miles from earth.

Before he took the controls, James Lovell told Mission Control, "I hope the guys in the back room have thought this up right."

Besides the descent engine in the lunar lander, the astronauts also have at their disposal the ascent engine and the small thrusters on both craft used to control position. All could be used for course corrections.

Mission Control said that although the burn looked good, the flight dynamics officer wanted some time to get radio tracking of the Apollo 13 before affirming or denying that the correction had worked.

There is ample time in the flight plan for future course correction attempts.

The hours before the rocket firing were punctuated with trouble. First there was a flashing battery alarm indicating that one of six batteries in the lunar lander was overheating. It turned out to be a false alarm.

Then the other coverall-clad astronauts complained as Lovell had earlier about the cold. In the power-off command ship which serves as little more than a bedroom at present, it was getting very cold.

"I don't know if we'll be able to sleep up there tonight," Swigert reported. "It must be 35 or 40 degrees."

Mission Control said it was getting much the same temperature reading by telemetry in the lunar lander. That might be so, Lovell agreed, "but there are usually two men in there and it doesn't seem so cold."

The command ship was powered-up briefly so that Mission Control could read by radio the various working systems. They even read off temperature measurements in the quiescent ship and everything looked normal.

Lovell who had not been able to sleep well because of the cold earlier Wednesday managed to catch some four or five hours of sound sleep before the rocket firing. "Glad to see you're catching up," Mission Control said.

Much of Wednesday was concerned with readying the ship for the rocket firing. Mission Control spent heavy effort diagnosing the flight path and trying to insure that this third course correction would work well.

"I believe they are farther off course than any other moon flight," said flight director Glynn Lunney after the afternoon briefing. "They are not in capture condition," meaning the spacecraft would not come close enough to earth to be pulled down by earth's gravity.

Two previous rocket burns to set an accurate course had failed. One coming shortly after the oxygen tank exploded Monday night aborting the mission, fired for one second too long. The other, coming Tuesday night, also failed. Mission Control, trying to save electrical power aboard the spacecraft, had decided to do the four minute burn without updating the lunar lander's guidance system. Experts guessed that guidance errors might have reduced the accuracy of the rocket firing.

On earth, the space agency mobilized all of its resources and those of the industrial concerns that built the spacecraft in an effort to protect the lives of the astronauts.

Lovell and Haise were, by the original schedule, to have landed on the moon Wednesday night for a 34-hour stay, man's third on the lunar surface.

Joining Britain, France, Brazil and Japan, the Soviet Union made an offer of naval help to rescue the astronauts if necessary. It said it was diverting two merchant ships to the splashdown area in the Pacific on Friday.

Because of the situation aboard the Apollo 13 spacecraft, all three television networks announced last night that they will present hourly bulletins on the progress of the mission until the scheduled splashdown Friday afternoon. The networks will also pre-empt normal programming for any special developments.

Harvard Square Violence, Fires Follow Boston Moratorium Rally

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Several thousand young people, splintering off from an anti-war rally on Boston Common, rampaged in Harvard Square Wednesday night, smashing windows and battling police.

As two policemen struggled with a young man and a woman they were arresting in Harvard Square, a dozen of the demonstrators joined in battling the police. Scores of youths of student age cheered on the demonstrators from the fence and dormitory buildings in the Harvard Yard.

Police who came to the rescue of the fighting pair ordered the students away from the fence, and when they didn't move, lobbed some tear gas canisters over the fence. The sound of breaking glass could be heard in the dark, and some of the canisters had gone into the buildings.

A fire broke out inside the Northeast Federal Savings Bank close to the square, after its front plate glass windows were smashed by thrown rocks.

The window smashing began as the splintered-off crowd crossed Harvard Bridge on Massachusetts Avenue to the Cambridge side. Among the first windows to go were a number in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology buildings at the edge of the Charles River.

Windows in a number of banks and branches in the Harvard Square area were broken as were some in stores, including the Harvard Coop, a cooperative store operated for Harvard faculty and students.

Showers of bricks, rocks and other missiles were flung at squads of police, gathered from Cambridge, Boston and other surrounding cities. A detachment of State Police joined forces with them. A number of police had police dogs with them.

There were several thousand in the crowd which went to Harvard Square from Boston Common, where police estimated 60,000 were on hand for the April Moratorium war protest.

Six months ago a similar rally drew a crowd which police estimated at 100,000.

One group, identified by rally sponsors as a radical group of students and others, tried to break through fence barriers surrounding the speakers' stand, but rally marshals pushed them back.

Two of the Chicago Seven, Abbie Hoffman and John Froines, were among the speakers at the rally.

So was Massachusetts state Rep. H. James Shea, D-Newton, sponsor of the recently enacted state law which declared that no Massachusetts resident should be compelled to serve in a war unless it is declared by Congress.

The new law calls for a state-instituted federal court suit to test the legality of the Vietnam War.

Shea attacked President Nixon and Congress for pursuing the war and said his bill is an appeal to the third branch of government, the judiciary.

He also rapped Vice President Agnew for "his attack on the press" and President Nixon for "his threatened increased surveillance on so-called subversive groups."

Student marches from intown colleges and from Harvard and others in Cambridge led to the rally.

"We are going to make sure that this is a 'not so silent spring,'" said Sam Brown, national coordinator of the Vietnam Moratorium Committee, one of the several pacifist groups who sponsored the rally.

The rally also was a kickoff for a petition drive in support of a bill submitted to Congress by Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., which calls for a complete withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam by next December.

A two-day "Thoreau Walk" for peace, culminating in a rally at Government Center preceded the rally on the common.

Demonstrators began their walk at Walden Pond in Concord Tuesday, stopping at the Internal Revenue Service office along the way to protest the use of tax money for war purposes.

About 200 tax-resisting protesters gathered at the John F. Kennedy Federal Building following the two-day march.

Michael Ferber, identified with draft resistance causes, told the group that tax resistence is "a symbolic cause, because they'll take our money out of our banks anyway."

Several doors on the Federal Building were chained closed from the inside and uniformed guards stood at the other unlocked doors.

There were no incidents of violence.

Windows Smashed in R.I.

PROVIDENCE (AP) - A shouting crowd of several hundred youths surged through dowatown Providence for about two hours Wednesday night, smashing several windows and shouting antipolice slogans, after attending an anti-war rally at the State House.

Police said there were no arrests or injuries.

The crowd formed at the State House shortly after 8 p.m. after the last speaker at the rally announced there would be an immediate march on the Providence Police Station to protest "police brutality" and racism.

It appeared that about one-third to one-half of the approximately 1,000 persons at the rally joined the anti-police demonstrations.

The crowd marched to the police station where the youths walked around the building under the watchful eye of several dozen policemen, some of whom wore protective helmets and carried clubs.

At the station, demonstrators shouted demands that the police release a youth.

Moratorium or No Moratorium
The Whitmore Flags Still Fly

By JILL WALLACH
Staff Reporter

Government and Administrative beaurocracy scored another victory yesterday as the third major Moratorium in Amherst was taking place.

Tuesday night, the Student Senate had passed a resolution to have the U.S. flag on Haigis Mall lowered to half mast in observance of the Moratorium. Wednesday morning, three students, Flo Polansky, Deb Sulnda, and John Zebruski, went to Chancellor Oswald Tippo asking permission to have the flag lowered to half mast for the day. Tippo told them that the flag could only be lowered by a State order.

The three students then approached the Student Senate, and were sent to Judy Gill, Chairman of USCC, who made several telephone calls to the State House.

She first called Secretary of State John F. X. Davoren, and was told that he was not in and would not be there until late in the afternoon. She then called the Governor's office and was told that a great deal of time and effort was needed to determine if the laws allowed this. She was later told by the Governor's Staff that several statutes indicated that the lowering of the flag for the Moratorium did not come under the Governor's jurisdiction.

The flags flew at full mast all day.

The Moratorium, Chapter Three

In the Stadium

By LOUIS DIMONACO
Executive Editor

"If the war is to be stopped it must be stopped by politics, Henry Steele Commanger stated as he addressed a crowd of approximately 3000 yesterday at Alumni Stadium. The Moratorium-Strike rally at the stadium was sponsored by the University Mobilization Committee, in conjunction with the Connecticut Valley Anti-War Coalition.

Commanger, delivering the key-note address, said that "Vietnamization of the war is a moral fraud" and that "President Nixon is trying to lull the American people into a state of apathy about the Vietnam conflict." The Amherst College History Professor went on to call the Vietnam war "part of our notion that we are an Asian power. We can no more order the affairs of Southeast Asia as China can order the affairs of North America."

In bringing his speech to a close, Commanger pleaded with the crowd to return to Congress those men who will stop the war.

Other speakers included Betty Richardson of the Springfield Welfare Rights Organization who spoke about the "war at home," and asked for contributions to help stem the poverty of welfare mothers.

Poet Denise Levertov spoke next and said that "We cannot bring wars to an end without bringing the capitalist, imperialis system to an end. The peace movement must become the revolutionary movement."

She went on to say that we must stop "one issue movements" and "the greed of the profit system underlies pollution of resources. Everyone who wants to end the war has a moral obligation to demand the end of Bobby Seale's trial."

Pete Diller of UMass. SDS, speaking after Sid Finehurst mentioned a car caravan to New Haven for the Panther Trial rally, said that Southeast Asia is one of the last resource areas and holds strategic raw materials that "the United States sees as a place to hold at any cost."

Two students from Springfield College spoke next and were followed by a Guerrilla theater performed by supporters and members of Women's Liberation.

Carl Chiaretto, an electrical union member, delivered a comparatively lengthy address about the need for unity among the working force and the youth movement. Chiaretto went on to say that the feeling of his fellow workers was that youth "turns them off," and there must be an effort to demonstrate "real patriotism" by getting rid of the people who are running and ruining this country.

The final speaker was Toba Singer, Socialist Workers' Party candidate for State Attorney General said that "Women are sick and tired of every mediocre double standard" and that "we should challeage our leaders to spend 50% of our taxes on what we need" instead of on war and military defense.

The crowd then dispersed to form a march to Amherst Commons.

On the Common

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Amherst Common, the second of yesterday's two major Moratorium Rallies, attracted 1000 students from the earlier Stadium rally and a host of area residents and students from other Valley colleges.

UMass faculty member John Clayton began the rally by making a plea for financial assistance for Eric "The Rat" Walgren. Walgren was recently arrested and jailed in Northampton on a Massachusetts state law of "persona non grattis?" Clayton termed the arrest political and said there should be no such law at UMass.

The next speaker, a former Marine Corps officer who spent some time in Vietnam called the Vietnamese "fantastic people." He spoke of alleged war crimes and made reference to the M-16 rifle, cluster bombs, napalm and white phosphorous. "It happens every day," said the service veteran of atrocities, but that the public doesn't hear about it because "the politicians don't want us to."

A former member of the Hello Friend singing group then led the crowd in the singing of the Byrds' "He Was A Friend of Mine" and two other songs. He asked the crowd to harmonize with him, because "when there is harmony there is peace in the world."

An active soldier back from Vietnam (whose name was not given) said the Vietnamese are "really nice people who just want their country back." He continued by saying that only thing left of the Viet Cong is the political faction, and that otherwise the Viet Cong and North Vietnam are inactive and the South Vietnamese countryside is calm.

He accused the Army of creating a "sterile environment" through discipline and harassment which is "driving everyone (the soldiers) to radicalism."

The crowd rose for a standing applause when the G.I. speaker stated, "I like the Vietnamese people and wish we'd stop killing them."

A representative of the Valley Peace Center then addressed the rally on the proposal for tax resistance as opposition to the war. He called for refusing to pay telephone tax, the federal income tax (by claiming more dependants - Vietnamese children) and asking for a refund of state tax because the Governor and legislature have passed a law which states that because Vietnam is a non-declared war, the Armed Forces cannot force any Massachusetts resident to serve there.

He added that such action is not necessarily a "lost cause" and that "gradually I feel we can undermine the whole system."

A final word came from an SDS member who urged everyone to attend an anti-ROTC meeting today in the Council chambers. Terming the war "bigger than bombs," he claimed ROTC makes a concrete contribution to the war effort. "You can do something about it," he concluded.

Marching Through the Once and Future Movement

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

Moratorium days always start very normally; people eating breakfast, going to classes, wondering about the moratorium.

Yesterday was no exception, as moratoria go. Many classes had been cancelled, but more people carried books than not.

One feels a certain wariness in the atmosphere. Those who are attending classes are at least conscious of their actions in relation to a "strike" of classes.

People sometimes look for a confrontation of their views. If students would stand in the dining commons and scream that they don't know what to do about a moratorium, moratoria in general would be easier to accept, at least during breakfast.

The morning was chilly, but the intense sun soon stripped men and women of their coats. Small groups carried signs and passed out literature. Slowly, UMass was awakening to the third attempt at mass student action against the war in Vietnam.

The calm was broken momentarily by a "minor scuffle" in front of Machmer Hall.

One passing student reacted to a misguided comment by another student passing out leaflets. The fight was broken up by several friends of the leafletter.

There seemed to be an atmosphere of concentrated pressure, which caused one man to lash out violently upon verbal provocation. A moratorium which calls on students to cut classes, forces individuals into very personal decisions, very personal pressures.

"Do you call everybody who wants to go to class an ass-hole?" challenged the man with a fight torn jacket.

The incident was characterized by one of the leafleters as "insignificant" when compared to the purposes of the strike day.

....and on the steps people come and go talking about "assholes" and calling fist fights "insignificant."

The students carrying signs in front of Bartlett decided to walk through the building. The idea was to confront individual teachers with the strike on classes.

Five minutes after the students entered the building, one tall rather lean young man ran from the front entrance to Bartlett. There was a small short wave radio attached to his belt, barking directions as he passed the students lounging near the stone wall.

The fire alarm sounded. The student was running to the fire. He was a volunteer fireman.

Brief conversation with a barefooted girl passing out "Strike Day" schedules:

"Everyone should become involved...should help the society," the blond haired girl argued.

"Which Society?" mused the reporter.

Observations at 11:02 a.m.: twenty five people in a row passed carrying books and notebooks. Classes were in session.

The morning ended with a gathering of people around the Campus pond; listening to the music, soaking up the sun. The band stopped and the mass of people turned towards the stadium.

The students walked through Southwest and gathered once again to hear another band play for a brief time. The organizers of the Day's events were trying to line people up "six abreast" for the "march" to the stadium.

several students were working steadily, in front of Dining Commons #1; scraping bark and axing knots on the logs being used by the students of a Botany class to build a log cabin.

The log cabin will serve as an impermanent student general store.

One frail looking young lady was wielding an axe with a seven inch head. Barefooted, hair turned into a bun she worked carefully shaping the logs as the march queued up.

A male student stood, hunched over the log with scraping tool, shearing the bark off the logs.

The contrast between their work and the festive gathering of students near the S.W. pyramids made one think of childhood impressions of how America was built; the very real sweat produced by the cabin builders working to build something worthwhile.

One of the students complained about people rolling the logs down the nearby stairs sometime during the previous evening.

As the lines moved towards the stadium, concerned individuals were circulating amongst those still listening to the band, questioning "Why aren't you joining the march? We want people to move out, now."

The reporter was sitting, quietly jotting down notes when confronted with the order to "march". The young lady walked away somewhat disgusted at his unwillingness to obey orders; the band continued to play on top of the pyramid.

The march line to the stadium was long. It filed down to the football field past the tall pine bushes which hide the rows of barbed wire, protecting the inner stadium, strung along the top of the chain mail fence.

A University Mobe Marshall explained that the people running the day's events were "dedicated" and had been involved with anti-war demonstrations for a long time.

The stadium continued to fill. The sun was hot. The rest rooms were not to be found.

The tone of many speakers at the stadium was "militant." "The peace movement must become the revolutionary movement!" "People must be prepared to act militarily!" "We must recognize the need for revolution."

The call for violence received enough support to make one uneasy about the fate of the "Peace Movement." The war can be stopped," decried a "rank and file worker," "by the youths...and militants. "The war can be stopped by intelligent action, intelligent action, intelligent action..." chanted the man who made effective use of catch phrases and emotional cliches.

The afternoon at the stadium was described by one top administrator as "dull." There were, however, in the words of a five year old observer, "a lot of people."

The decry was made to end the events; "We want the march to Amherst center to be well-numbered and militant."

The march to Amherst center was slow, many people dropped out. The speakers at the Amherst Common rally told of atrocities and made students feel like becoming committed to more radical means of changing America.

It is a strange feeling to think that your country is responsible for fostering acts of immorality and violence equaling all those ever committed by man.

It is frightening to think that, in the minds of more than a few Americans there is the thought of righting this violent situation with violence.

We, America, are facing critical times. At stake is human value. Many times this has been lost to cries for violence. Already we are a violent nation.

Somehow, the answer to our dilemma must be a peaceful one,

19 Blacks Dismissed By Springfield College

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - Springfield College dismissed 19 black students Wednesday and ordered disciplinary action against 30 others who took part in a three day takeover of a dormitory last month.

Dean of Students John Costello sent individual letters to each student informing them of the action.

The disciplinary orders ranged from immediate dismissal to probation lasting to Dec. 1st.

Costello said each of the students will have an opportunity to ask for an individual appeal hearing before the Faculty Hearing Committee. He said they also may apply for readmission to the college later, although in some cases this will not be until Sept 1, 1971.

Sheriff's deputies had to break through a chained glass door of Massasoit dormitory to arrest the black students who were protesting inaction on a list of demands made last Spring.

Black students wanted more black faculty and students, a black studies program and cultural center.

The 49 were found guilty of contempt of court because they refused to obey a restraining order to leave the dormitory. Most were sentenced to 20 or 30 days in jail, with execution stayed for one year.

Kopechne Inquest Transcript Released

BOSTON (AP) - A federal appeals judge cleared the way Wednesday for public release, possibly on Thursday, of the transcript of the Mary Jo Kopechne inquest.

But a final step remained necessary in the state court to put those papers on the public record, more than three months after conclusion of the secret inquest.

Publication of that 764-page record presumably will end the tangled courtroom sequence which began nearly eight months ago, after an automobile driven by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., plunged from a narrow bridge on Chappaquiddick Island.

Miss Kopechne, 28, a Washington secretary, drowned in the tidal pond.

The transcript, and the 12-page report of the inquest judge, James A. Boyle, had been scheduled for release Wednesday. But that timetable was blocked by the federal court appear of Sidney R. Lipman, a free-lance stenographer who claimed he alone had the right to reproduce and sell copies of the transcript.

A federal court order temporarily barred release of the transcript. But Lipman's bid for a permanent order was denied Wednesday. He filed an appeal and that, too, was rejected by Chief Judge Bailey Aldrich of the 1st. U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Lipman's suit through the federal courts was the only remaining obstacle to release of the inquest papers, planned by Edward V. Keating, clerk of the Suffolk Superior Court.

Keating arranged to distribute the transcript to newsmen at $75 a copy.

Lipman's price is $1.05 a page or $802.20 for the total document.

The circuit court decision put the issue once again before Superior Court Judge Wilfred J. Paquet, who set the original release time, then ordered it postponed because of the Lipman appeal.

It remained for Paquet to lift that order, but he already had indicated he wanted the transcript released as soon as the legal situation permitted.

However, Keating said Superior Court action was being held in abeyance. He said the Paquet order impounding both the transcript and the inquest report "remains in full force and effect."

The inquest ended Jan. 8 after 3 1/2 days of secret testimony. Kennedy was among the witnesses. It was at the request of Kennedy's lawyers that the sessions, originally planned in open court, were ordered held in secrecy.

The state supreme judicial court ordered the transcript withheld until all possibility of criminal prosecution in the case had passed. That order denied it even to the Dukes County Grand Jury, which spent two days inquiring into the accident, but adjourned without findings. At that point, Dist. Atty Edmund Dinis declared the case closed, and the inquest release became possible.

Nixon Postpones Vietnam Update

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon postponed Wednesday a report to the people on Vietnam and prospects of more troop withdrawals so the nation can keep better tabs on the plight of Apollo 13 and its three-man crew.

Nixon had slated a radio-television address for 9 p.m. EST Thursday to update his Vietnam appraisal and announce whether he is withdrawing more American military men. But this now will go over until the first of the week, the exact time to be announced later.

The president was described by press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler as wanting to avoid pre-empting time on the networks while a worried nation concentrates on the return of Apollo 13.

Originally, the goal had been to announce a decision on troop withdrawals by April 15 - Wednesday - with some signs that it might call for bringing an additional 50,000 American servicemen home.

In recent weeks, fresh trouble in Cambodia and Laos reportedly has brought pressure from U.S. military leaders to slow the withdrawals.

But Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird confirmed Wednesday that Nixon soon will announce a sizeable troop withdrawal.

Speaking at Ft. Riley, Kan., Laird did not say exactly how many will be withdrawn. But he assured his military listeners that troops soon to be returned to Ft. Riley from Vietnam under the current program "will be followed in the months immediately ahead by the redeployment of additional thousands of American troops as our Vietnamization program marches forward."

The existing ceiling on U.S. troops in Vietnam, as set by the President last December, is 434,000.

Justice Douglas Unfit to Serve On Court: Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) - House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford asserted Wednesday that Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas may be unfit to remain on the court because of questionable outside activities, including controversial writings and possible associations with underworld figures. In a wide-ranging attack on the 71-year-old justice, Ford told the House he supports creation of a select congressional committee to study Douglas' activities and determine what cause there might be cause for impeachment.

War News

The Southeast Asian War Continues

SOUTHEAST ASIA (AP) - The bodies of hundreds of Vietnamese possibly killed by Cambodians, floated down the Mekong River Wednesday while 65 miles to the southeast Cambodian troops teamed with South Vietnamese in a battle with the North Vietnamese inside Cambodia.

A police official at Neak Luong, where a ferry crosses the Mekong, said he had counted 400 bodies in the morning and still more could be seen. There was no direct evidence that Cambodian soldiers had killed the Vietnamese. But the government has been carrying on a violent propaganda campaign against the 600,000 Vietnamese living in Cambodia. The Viet Cong also has been killing Vietnamese in Cambodia.

The Khmers of Cambodia and the Vietnamese have been traditional enemies for centuries. The government that overthrew Prince Norodom Sihanouk last month has been rounding up Vietnamese as suspected security risks.

Cambodian soldiers have burned a number of villages inhabited by Vietnamese. In some instances they claimed the villagers fled with the Viet Cong.

At Bavet, on the Cambodian border 65 miles southeast of Neak Luong, about 100 Cambodian troops joined 2,000 South Vietnamese in a combined operation that smashed a North Vietnamese base 1 1/2 miles inside Cambodia, reliable sources said in Saigon.

South Vietnamese army headquarters reported 179 enemy killed at a cost of 7 government troops killed and 43 wounded, but claimed the battle took place in South Vietnam.

Witnesses, however, said they watched the fighting inside Cambodia and the Cambodians could be easily singled out by their uniforms.

Farther north in the central highlands, North Vietnamese besieging the Special Forces camp at Dak Seang shot down three U.S. helicopters, killing two Americans and wounding four.

On Holding Classes

To the editor:

This is in response to an unsigned letter which appeared in your issue of April 14th (p. 6).

Aside from the distortions and innuendo, I should like to make some observations as well as offer some suggestions to the unnamed letter writer.

1. Some, if not all, of the members of the faculty have been socialized to meet their obligations to the university on a responsible basis, the foremost of which is teaching. The syllabus for the course under discussion (Soc. 257) was distributed to the class and discussed at the first meeting of the semester.
2. Anyone with any experience with the scheduling of classes and examinations is aware of the difficulties of trying to RESCHEDULE an examination for 250 students. Of this number, only ONE requested a change so that he could participate in the April 15th activities. It should also be pointed out that the exam was scheduled for 6:30 p.m.
3. Neither the Faculty Senate nor the University administration sanctioned the cancellation of classes, or other academic obligations.
4. A men's political persuasion is a private matter, but I'm afraid the writer of the unsigned letter wasn't listening very carefully to what I had to say in response to the request, hence the distortion.
5. Those with an overwhelming committment to effect social change are invited to seriously consider scheduling events on evenings or weekends, which might, indeed, provide proof of the sincerity of their efforts by making this ultimate sacrifice. We may have similar goals, but we also have the inherent right to choose different means of achieving them.
6. Perhaps some students in their demand for egalitarian consideration in the matter of teachers' academic prerogatives will also agree that the latter meet their classes or not, as the spirit moves them, and as they see fit. Then, Nirvana having been attained, students and faculty will be free to do their own "thing," and we will have achieved that most glorious of all states, the perfect university.

The Old Nixon Returns

WASHINGTON - I can now reveal why President Nixon made his bitter attack on the Senate after the Judge Carswell defeat. From talking to inside White House sources and putting bits and pieces together, I have learned that this is what happened.

Wednesday night after Carswell has been defeated, everyone in Washington had gone to bed except the President at the White House and Martha Mitchell at the Watergate, who was still trying to rouse someone at the Arkansas Gazette.

The President was in a despondent mood and was pacing up and down his bedroom, when out of the clothes closet came the Old Nixon.

The Old Nixon seemed jibilant. "Well, you see what happens when you're Mr. Nice Guy."

"Oh, go away," the New Nixon said. "You always come around to gloat when something goes wrong."

The Old Nixon said, "You wouldn't listen to me, would you? You wanted to remain above politics, a statesman, a man of all the people. I told you it wouldn't work."

"How could I do otherwise?"

"You thought you could let Spiro do all the name calling and the mud slinging," the Old Nixon said. "But it wasn't that easy, Dicky."

"What can I do now?" the New Nixon protested loudly.

"Hush, you'll wake up Pat," the Old Nixon said. "This is what you can do. You can call the press and say that both Haynsworth and Carswell were victims of assaults on their honesty and racial beliefs because they were from the South. And you can hint that you will make it perfectly clear that anyone who voted against the Carswell appointment will be treated very roughly by the Administration."

"But that's dirty pool," the New Nixon protested. "Some of the men in the Senate voted their consciences."

"Haven't you learned anything since you've been in the White House?" the Old Nixon shouted, exasperated.

"Now YOU'RE going to wake up Pat," the New Nixon said.

"Sorry," the Old Nixon said. "Look, Dick. What is the most important thing in the whole wide world to you?"

The New Nixon thought for a moment. "Winning the South in 1972."

"Right. And the only way you can do it is by publicly stating tomorrow morning that both your nominees for the Supreme Court were defeated by a concerted effort of civil rights groups and liberals because they were Southerners."

"Can't Spiro do that?"

"No," the Old Nixon said. "The South wants to hear it from you. If you don't show them how mad you personally are, you can watch your whole Southern strategy go up in smoke."

"I can't do it," the New Nixon said. "I'm President of the United States. It would be lowering myself to make the Supreme Court a partisan political issue."

"All right," the Old Nixon said. "If you won't do it, I'll do it."

"You?"

"Why not? I've been holed up in that damn closet for over a year. Give me a chance, Dick."

The New Nixon thought hard for a few moments. "All right," he finally said. "Go ahead, but keep me out of it."

"Thanks, Dick. You won't regret this," the Old Nixon said, slapping him on the back. "Hey, let me borrow your razor. I need a shave before the press conference."

Business as Usual?

April 15-cessation of business as usual. Or is it? Sure, we called a strike, and many of us have left class to bring the blood bath of Vietnam to the people, but is this cessation of business as usual?

U. S. involvement in Southeast Asia, as well as in Greece, Brazil, etc., is a symptom of a sick, brutal society. Moratoriums are not cures for America's blood poisoning, they are products of it. The system is shrewd, it allows moratoriums so as to further the illusion of individual freedom in this country.

Business as usual in America is more than going to class or work; it is hating, fearing, and fighting our neighbors. America's "business as usual"is pollution: pollution and exploitation of the environment, the people, and the ideals of freedom and justice that this nation was supposedly founded upon.

We must fight against the exploitation of our brothers and our world, and at the same time strike out against the pollution of our minds. We must half business as usual and cease to perpetuate the hatred, suspicion, and greed so forcefully pressed on us by a sick and dying society.

True education has always been straddling the meridian of fulfilling its goals with regard to the development of universally-oriented people. Throughout the country each and every college administration has been negligent in departmentalizing and fusing university book-learning and the education of the streets. Campuses are becoming job-training centers and are mass-producing emotionless, insensitive robots who travel into the community (poverty program-under-arm) totally unprepared for the ghetto mystique. The neurotic student robot, who has by now blown several fuses, returns with the university's stamp of accredited approval, he or she remains disoriented that they have not changed the world, and the dynamite in the ghettos and communities threatens to ignite. Is something wrong or is something wrong?

The concept of "communiversity" must become an operable and successful attempt at immolating the myths and fantasies projected by routine prototypes which now incorporate the structure in many fields of study. The Community Action Foundation requests that the administration accept and enact its commitment in the program of "communiversity". Insofar as the problems of the community deal with the real living experience and the problems of the university produce professional technologists and teachers, it is encumbent upon the administration to provide the missing link of authoritarian, financial, and moral support to this particularly crucial learning process.

Life changes, and with this process of growth the necessary tools of enrichment and sustinence must be applied and implemented in order to create "communiversity". The proposal being presented by the Community Action Foundation shall, therefore, necessitate the support and future involvement of all branches of the university populace. "Communiversity" seeks the support of the student body, the faculty senate, department heads, all professors, student activist (and inactivist) groups and organizations, and of course the administration. All factions are necessary in cementing the path between the university and the community.

This past weekend, April 10, the Community Action Foundation presented a conference proposing the idea of "Communiversity." Members of Action Lab, the Street Academy, some Springfield community organizers, the Committee on Poverty, and the Committee of Racial Seminars all participated in exchanging ideas and suggestions for the expansion of "communiversity." It was agreed that universal principles must be examined as a substitute for all the too structured learning process now in existence in all educational systems. This restriction has created claustrophobic reactions on the part of many young people and here is where the drop-out situation is today. More and more people are dropping out of the old institutionalized systems; institutions which have been unable to expand with time and which, therefore, seriously arrest the esthetic sensibilities and talents of a more spiritually mature youth. There must be investigation of truth as it applies directly to all levels of modernized society. Values and old world norms are being scoffed at and rejected not because they were not at one time effective and beautiful, but because they simply no longer apply.

The stringency and inflexibility of existing educational systems is not only apparent and real, but dangerous. They are as withering weeds in the rosegarden of resolute possibilities. Simon Legree must be banished from the field of education. The Community Action Foundation feels that it has found one answer for unifying the university and the community, as it should be. For further information as to how you might contribute to the new world order, contact Robyn Chandler or members of Action Lab, Committee on Poverty or Street Academy.

Index Referendum

From above and below, from the right and from the left, the students of this university are being forced to pay a multitude of mandatory fees for things which they have no desire to obtain. The INDEX, that austere though elegant yearbook of the University of Massachusetts, is one of these forced taxes. Every undergraduate is forced to pay over $6 every year for the Index, whether he may want one or not. Next year this will amount to about $96,000 of student tax money. Although I have nothing against the INDEX, being more or less indifferent to its content, I cannot help but rebel against being forced to pay for something I don't want. Think of the especially hypocritical situation of the freshmen, who are paying over $6 for something they have never even seen. As far as I am concerned, I feel perfectly capable of deciding for myself whether or not I wish to spend my hard-earned money on an INDEX. without a paternalistic Student Senate deciding that I should be forced to buy one.

I am sick and tired of a paternalistic university forcing students to spend their money in a way that they don't want to. With the exception of the COLLEGIAN, the INDEX gets more of the student tax monies than any other organization, amounting next year to about $96,000. It is about time that the learning experience of the university included the option of the students to spend their money as they wish. If they want an INDEX they can buy one, if they don't want one, they can spend their money on something else. Don't you think its about time that the students were allowed to make their own financial decisions. Put an end to this paternalism by voting NO on the INDEX referendum on THURSDAY, April 16, along with the class officer primaries, and put an end to this hypocrisy.

Facts

To the editor:

Fact: The INDEX is the yearbook of the University of Massachusetts.

Fact: The INDEX cost approximately $6 per student per year.

Fact: The INDEX is one of the best yearbooks in the country.

Fact: A comparable yearbook without Student Activities Tax Fund (SATF) support would cost each student more than $20.

Fact: The Student Senate has a referendum this Thursday asking if the student body wants to continue funding INDEX.

Fact: If you want to continue to have a yearbook (and an outstanding one at that) you will vote to continue the SATF.

Fact: The INDEX needs YOUR vote.

Yahoo!

To the editor:

I have heard from several reliable sources that, like the Democratic Party, Yahoo is being financed out of existence. I think those responsible for the slashes of Yahoo's budget should take second thought at what they are doing.

Yahoo is the only campus humor publication that UMass has. The students who put it together have worked hard - both to keep the magazine on campus and to put together a good publication so that UMies can have something to laugh at. The magazine does express very succinctly campus views on many issues. The talents and the enthusiasm that goes into the publication of Yahoo should not be thwarted by those few who may not agree with the individuals who put out the magazine.

There has been a great deal of talk on this camous about freedom of speech - about letting others speak though one doesn't agree with their views. By cutting the budget of Yahoo, those responsible are being repressive. They are obstructing or repressing Yahoo's staff of their right to express their views.

Yahoo is here for the entertainment of the student body. They are not harmful to anyone. Repression hurts not only those repressed but it would be a great loss to the campus if Yahoo were to die for lack of funds.

24 hr. Flag

To the editor:

The University of Massachusetts has come up with a fantastic invention. It is a heavy-duty, twenty-four hour flag. This new remarkable fabric enables our banner to be displayed during the wickedest weather conditions and still "sparkle" like new. The miracle cloth also is not affected by any moonlight that is shed on it in th e early hours of the morning.

Think of the consequences that can occur. No more having to get our men wet to take in a flag on a wretched day. They can sleep later on weekdays and won't have to interrupt their suppers to fold our new product. Yes sir, UMass has done it again.

On April 22, over 1,200 colleges are going to observe National Earth Day with teach-ins on ecotactics. This is the book you'll want to consult—not only then, but for as long as the fight goes on!

How to stop them from polluting your world!

Here's the first book that tells you how to make war on the polluters. It's ECOTACTICS: The Sierra Club Handbook for Environment Activists with an introduction by Ralph Nader. It's a blueprint for direct action. For example:

- Who's who in the college conservation movement—how to apply their techniques.
- How to organize non-violent, direct actions against factories, supermarkets, department stores, the university, anti-conservation congressmen and others.
- Mistakes made and lessons learned in anti-pollution actions in Santa Cruz...Stanford...Washington, D.C.
- How to bring the war against pollution home to the "silent majority" in local communities.
- How to play the media game to help your ecology group get maximum coverage in campus publications and commercial media.

Computerized Model Train Show Processing Controls

Running the electric train in Room 112 of the Engineering East Building is not child's play. Controlled by a Digital Equipment PDP-I computer, the model train was set up last fall by a UMass graduate student to show the use of the calculating machine in "process controls."

Ben Abbassi, now an application programmer at Digital Equipment Corporation in Maynard, designed the train system as a thesis project for a master's degree in computer science. Director of the Research Computing Center Dr. Conrad Wolgrin acted as adviser for the project.

Process control systems are widely used in industry and the ultimate goal of the project is "to implement it in a 'real-life' situation," Abassi said in a recent telephone interview.

He said work on the project was divided into a "hardware phase" involving circuitry design for the train lay-out and a "software phase" that involved programming the computer.

The system was designed to permit changes in the train layout without the need for altering the program, he added.

Explaining that the computer controls the movement of the locomotive by opening and closing switches at intersections of the tracks, he said "We communicate with the computer over a teletype."

The computer can be asked to locate the train and "print out" all possible routes to a destination on any section of the layout, he added. The user can then choose a route and make this known to the computer.

"From there on," Abbassi said "the machine takes over."

University Theatre begins its run of three Albee plays tonight. Above is a scene from "Quotations from Chairman Mao". The other plays are "Box" and "Sandbox".

Tickets may be obtained at the UT Box Office, Bartlett Hall. The plays run tonight through Saturday. All performances are at 8 p.m.

New Marijuana Finding May Reverse AMA Stand

WASHINGTON (CPS) - A research team from the American Medical Association (AMA) has released startling new findings which are expected to reverse the association's anti-marijuana stand.

After a year of research, the AMA has announced that "only seven per cent of the brains of American pot smokers have turned to cream cheese."

Earlier, the AMA had maintained the cream cheese rate was significantly higher, according to research commission chairman Dr. Pink E. Lee.

"We're ready to admit we over-reacted in our original statement, and grass research will be higher on my priority list henceforth," Dr. Lee said. The AMA has estimated at least 173 million Americans smoke cannabis regularly.

In a related development, the Kraft Dairy Co. has offered to purchase the brains of deceased pot smokers for use in their production.

Horror Comedy To be Shown Friday Nite

This week the Spring Film Series offers a sophisticated comedy, starring Sharon Tate and Roman Polanski. This unusual movie "The Fearless Vampire Killers" (or "Pardon Me, But Your Teeth Are in My Neck") is in color and was directed by Roman Polanski in 1967.

The story involves several plots all with a variety of tongue-in-cheek approaches to the age old Dracula and vampire tales. Much of the action surrounds a crazy professor and his clumsy assistant who try to hunt and destroy vampires in a Transylvania-like setting.

These films will be shown Friday night, April 17, in the School of Education Auditorium, at 7:30 and 9:45.

Teacher Interests Students in Radio

School can be fun - for the teacher. At least Miss Judith Halperin, a graduate student at Harvard thinks so. She teaches five junior high classes at Burlington (Mass.) Junior High School where she helped one of her seventh grade classes to "put on" a radio broadcast, last month.

"Junior high school teaching is fun," she said, "when I can keep my students motivated." Her secret of a happy teaching experience is to show concern and interest in students.

"They really get excited and involved when they're interested in what they're doing," she said.

Such was the case last Thursday when one of her seventh grade classes "put on" a radio broadcast. The students came to class equipped with speaches, "rock" records, and even packages of sugarless gum for commercials. For 45 minutes, the students taped their radio broadcast complete with "rock" records, news, weather and sports reports, and even two commercials.

The highlight of the radio broadcast was an "eyewitness" news flash of a lunch protest, complete with sound effects, from the junior high cafeteria.

"It's really great to see how excited they get," she said, "they love to hear themselves on tape."

Miss Halperin sees method in her madness.

"Students not only get a certain satisfaction from hearing themselves on tape," she said, "but they also enjoy what they're doing. The tape of the radio broadcast will be sent to the students' speech teacher, and she, in turn, will help them with their oral speech problems. Fun and learning can be combined into one exercise."

April 10-11 Committee Studies Outline of Proposed Changes

By DON GLICKSTEIN
Staff Reporter

Polishing, condensing, and researching a 27-page skeletal outline of proposals promulgated this last weekend during the University Self-Evaluation are among the tasks facing the April 10-11 Committee before the May 7 referendum.

At an open meeting Tuesday evening in Bartlett Hall with approximately fifty faculty, administrators, and students in attendance, the April 10-11 Committee formed five working sub-committees: Referendum, dealing with the coordination of the May University wide referendum of the major proposals of the University Self-Evaluation; Communications; Proposal research, finding the studies for proposal rationales; Summer coordination, continuing research during the summer; and Human resources, communicating on a personal level with members of the University community. Meetings of these committees will begin this week and continue on a regular basis.

The April 10-11 Committee was formed last month to coordinate the first University Self-Evaluation. More than 2000 administrators, students, and faculty participated in the more than eighty discussion groups on various aspects of the University.

The Self-Evaluation attracted the media and schools throughout New England including WGBH-TV in Boston. The educational station taped a panel discussion on the University Self - Evaluation with Dean Seymour Shapiro, Master John Hunt, Vice-President Glen Elters, and students Deborah Grozen and Mark Mills participating. It will be seen on May 11 at 7:30 p.m. on the "After Dinner" program on Channel 2.

Student Employment Changes Demanded

Changes in campus working conditions and in society's attitudes toward women were called for Friday at a day-long meeting on student employment that was joined in the afternoon by a group of 30 discussing women's liberation.

At the morning session on employment, one student said he was paid 60 cents an hour less than full-time workers doing the same job.

Don Witkoski, last director of the Student Union Lobby Counter, proposed a survey to find out about wage scales for workers in various departments. At present, a "communications gap" exists between UMass student workers, he added.

A spokesman for the Placement and Financial Aid Office explained that some students are paid with federal funds, others with state funds and still others with money collected for the Food Services Department and the Student Union.

Talk at the afternoon session focused on women's liberation.

Discussion co-ordinator Dale LaBonte decried the idea that women should be "part of a consumer society." She added "Half of what we've got is useless."

Equality of opportunity at U-Mass was questioned. One woman siad she applied for a job on the staff and was turned down because the position was open only to men.

Black Repertory Theater Presents 'Ceremonies In Dark Old Men'

On the 17th, 18th, and 19th of April, the University of Massachusetts' Black Repertory Theatre will present one of this season's most provocative off-Broadway plays in Bowker Auditorium. It's author is an American Black, Lonne Elder III, director of the Playwrights Directors Division of the Negro Ensemble in New York. Curtain time for the second production of the Black Rep is Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2:30.

The Director for Ceremonies is Esther Terry, a Ph. D. candidate in the department of English. Members of the cast include Nate Sims as Mr. Russel B. Parker, the father; Rose Sims as Adele Parker, an only daughter; Anthony Pendleton as Bobby, a younger son, and Danny Scarborough as Theopolis, an older son. Also included in the cast are Mitch Williams as Mr. Jenkins, a friend of Mr. Parker, and Bill Hassen as Blue Haven (on Friday night). Saturday and Sunday Monte Jackson will be featured in the role of Blue Haven.

The play attempts to offer solutions to the problem of being Black in a society which condones racism. Yet, the play is more than a social commentary about a particular Black family. It moves beyond the realm of color and attempts to analyze the human predicament and what an individual should or should not do with his life. CEREMONIES attacks the problem of not just mere existence in a society but life itself.

The entire action of the play occurs in a small poverty-stricken barber shop in Harlem. Both the barber shop and its living quarters remind one of Lorraine Hansberry's description of the Younger's home in a RAISIN IN THE SUN in that "they have clearly had to accommodate the living of too many people for too many years--and they are tired." Tickets for the production are on sale at the Student Union Box office.

'The Sandbox' Opens Tonight

By HAROLD KOLTIN

A different and effective combination of unusual characters, multi-situational settings, simple props, and carefully coordinated lighting and sound effects contributes to what promises to be a new, exciting experience in theatre. Edward Albee's "Box," "The Sandbox," and "Quotations from Chairman Mao Tse-Tung" are three plays which are short in length yet which produce in the audience an almost irresistible feeling to ponder on an interpretation of each production.

In "The Sandbox," Gerry Pirkot portrays "Daddy" as a weak, completely submissive husband whose every act demonstrates naivite and awkwardness. Another outstanding character is "Grandma," played by Judy Keyes. Judy shows the versatility of first portraying an infant and then transforming herself into "Gramma."

"Quotations from Chairman Mao Tse-Tung," to an even greater extent than "The Sandbox" evokes a sense of the detachibility of each of the characters from one another.

And "Box" eliminates all characters from the stage by providing an audio tape.

The Albee plays will be presented April 16-19 at 8:30 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium. All seats are reserved. For tickets, call the box office, 545-2579.

Afro-Am Patrolmen Prexy Slated for Amherst Lecture

Renault Robinson, president and a founder of the Afro-American Patrolmen's League of Chicago, will speak at the University of Massachusetts Sunday, April 26, as part of a continuing community relations program sponsored by the Town of Amherst and the University.

The talk, "The Black Policeman's Role in Today's Struggle," will be at 1:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium, open to the public without charge. Representatives of police departments from this area have been invited to the talk and to participate in workshops afterwards.

The Afro-American Patrolmen's League received the 1969 Civil Liberties Award of the American Civil Liberties Union's Illinois Division for its "outstanding contribution to the cause of due process in police-community relations in its courageous opposition to such police practices as 'stop and frisk,' unwarranted arrest, and physical and verbal abuse of citizens in the black community."

The organization was founded by Robinson and other black police officers in the Chicago department who found it impossible to work within the framework of existing police organizations. The Chicago department has a larger number of black officers than any in the country.

Some of the league's objectives are to improve member's performance as police officers so that hey may exercise their authority with compassion and understanding in order to be of positive benefit to the black community, to help bring about improvements of the quality of life in black neighborhoods, to support all efforts devoted to establishing respect for black manhood, black womanhood and black pride within the law, and to dedicate themselves to the proposition that law enforcement may be practiced by black police officers with compassion, understanding and efficiency.

The talk is part of a cooperative effort by the town and the University to better police-community relations in the area, particularly the racial climate.

Frosh Baseball Grounds Wor. Acad.

By BRONA SIMON
Staff Reporter

After jumping ahead with five runs in the first inning, the UMass freshmen had no trouble beating Worcester Academy, 12-3.

It was a wild game as far as scoring was concerned. UMass took advantage of faulty fielding and not-so-hot pitching by the prep schoolers to take command of the game with a five run eight inning as well. The only time Worcester came close was in the seventh when the score was 6-3, UMass.

In the first, the frosh batted the cycle, using six hits and two walks to give pitcher Tom White a good lead to protect.

Centerfielder Earl Manley started things off right by pushing a double down the left field line off Worcester starter Bruce MacGelpin. He stayed at second when Dan Kelly beat out an infield grounder to the shortstop. Dan Esposito drove in Manley with a broken bat single to left center.

The game then started to get interesting, centering around freak fielding plays and the tough sun in rightfield.

Mark Palau hit a fly ball to the rightfield trouble spot for a single. But Kelly was thrown out at the plate on a good recovery by the Worcester outfielder.

Marchetta and White both had two RBI's in that first inning with singles.

Two more solo runs were scored by UMass, in the third and in the seventh, one by utilizing three walks and a groundout, the other on a home run by leftfielder Fred Kielbasa. Kielbasa's "blast" dropped in and out of the glove of Worcerter's leftfielder, with enough confusion on the baffled outfielder's part to enable Kielbasa to run the bases.

In the meantime, pitcher White was mowing down Worcester with 13 strike outs in the seven innings he threw. He seemed in very good form until tiring in the seventh, giving up two runs. Nevertheless White got the win, and Dick Russell the save by holding Worcester in the last two innings with five K's.

The eighth inning had quite a few wierd events highlighted by Marchetta's attempt to beat Kielbasa in a 90-foot clash to home plate. Kielbasa had reached on a single and Marchetta on a walk, with both eventually scoring on Dick Scapinato's single and error by the Worcester leftfielder, Kielbasa barely beating Marchetta.

Stickmen Soar, 17-3

By BOB GANLEY

Led by All – American Tom Malone, the UMass lacrosse team started right out where they left off last year by downing Middlebury College, 17-3, yesterday afternoon.

Malone had five goals and four assists in the three quarters he played, to pace the Redmen to their 16 straight win and 21st in their last 22 games. Fellow attackman

Paul Ritch contributed four goals and an assist to an attack which saw eight different Redmen put the ball in the net.

Middlebury started out like it would give the Redmen the tough game they expected. Dito Staley put the Panthers in front with an unassisted goal in the second minute of play and although this aroused the Redmen, it took them a while to catch up.

Middlebury goalie Vaugn Gooding, who was spectacular throughout the three quarters he was in the game, made a great stop on Malone at the eight minute point. The Redmen were controlling the game at this point but couldn't score until Ritch knocked in the rebound of a Bob Florin shot. Malone missed a great chance when he hit the pipe with his shot and the period ended with the teams tied, 1-1.

UMass blew the game open in the second period with seven scores to none for the Panthers. Dana Stone put the Redmen ahead early in the period, converting a great pass from Malone. After Malone hit the post with a wicked shot he scored his first goal of the year, unassisted, to put the Redmen ahead 3-1. Halfway through the quarter, Ritch scored his second goal and thirty seconds later Malone followed with his second marker.

The sixth Redman goal was scored by Bob Florin on a pass from Bob Waters. Malone then made a great play, intercepting a pass intended for the goalie behind the net and wheeled around to the front of the net and deposited the ball into the empty goal. Ritch followed with his third goal on a pass from Florin to make the halftime score 8-1.

As in the first half, Middlebury opened the scoring as the game went into the third quarter. Staley scored the goal, his second o the game, and the Panthers cu the lead to six. Lou Marinacci upped the lead to seven converting a pass from Phil Sheridan, anc the Redmen were off and running again. Waters scored an unassisted goal and moments later polished off a beautiful play to up the score to 11-2. The play began on a length of the field rush by Dana Stone, who passed to Ritch behind the net. Ritch hit Malone in the corner and Tom set Waters up in front for the goal.

Larry Diamond scored his first goal with an assist to Malone and Tom followed with his fourth goal of the day after receiving a Ritch pass. Steve Herschoff, who played a great game despite being the smallest man on the field, got into the scoring act as he made a great pass to set up Ritch for his fourth goal. He followed with a goal of his own making the score at the end of three periods 16-2.

Each team scored once in the last period as both benches were cleared. Malone closed out the Redmen scoring with an unassisted goal and Middlebury captain John Sturges put in the third Panther goal making the final 17-3.

Both goalies did fine jobs in the nets. Crawford made ten assists while Gooding kept the score respectable during his stint. Redmen defenders Al Ruggiano, Joe Smith, Bill DeVore and Fran Bositis kept the ball away from Crawford, when it got in that end of the field. Midfielder John Gannon proved to be a more than ample faceoff man, winning more than half of the all-important duals. Garber had a chance to view his entire team, using everyone in the fourth period, which is a tactic he used last year in building for this year's team.

A BAD START – Middlebury College pulled into a 1-0 lead as the Panthers Staley (24) best Redmen goalie Bruce Crawford in the second minute of the game. However, UMass and Crawford came back to play a great game and walk to an easy win, 17-3. Redmen defenders are Al Ruggiano (15) and Bill Devore (85). (MDC photo by Gunnar Myrbeck)

Redmen Route Yellow Jackets

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

With a 14-hit outburst, the U-Mass baseball team got back on the winning track by defeating American International College, 12-3, at Varsity Field, raising its season's record to 7-4 while handing its opponents their first loss and a 3-1 mark.

Redman bats, which slept during Monday's tilt against Tufts, really woke up against the Yellow jackets. Hosea Kelley and Steve Rogers were the heavy hitters with four and three hits respectively.

Kelley, sophomore second baseman, slashed out four singles in five trips to the plate; Rogers, senior center fielder, collected two bingles and the game's only homer, driving in three runs.

Brian Martin and Ray Ellerbrook had good days at the plate also; each banged out a double and a single and Martin had two RBI's.

Winning pitcher for the Redmen was Bob Fichera who, in relief of third-inning hurler Rich Rappoli, fired three frames of perfect baseball. The victory gave him a 2-0 record as the senior right-handed flinger struck out two Jackets and got the rest on five infield grounders, an infield pop-up and an outfield fly.

The game started slowly as Kelley got the only hit in the first two innings. Entering the third, UMass mentor Dick Bergquist changed pitching hands, turning the reigns over from starter Don Anderson to Rappoli.

It was in that inning that AIC enjoyed its only lead, coming up with two runs on two walks followed by back-to-back singles by Chris Serino and Dave Forbes.

The Redmen came right back at the Yellowjackets in their half of the third, ringing up five tallies. Runners were on first and third via a walk and an error when the third man up, Kelley, singled in one run. After an outfield fly kept runners on first and second, Martin sliced a double into left-center field, knocking in the second run.

Rogers was the next batsman and slashed a hard single to left, bringing the third run across the plate. The rest of the scoring in the third came on a Tom Semino broken-bat single and a Warren Mason sacrifice fly.

It was an excellent frame for the Redmen as they sent nine hitters to the plate, scored five runs and left only one man stranded on the basepaths.

With Ficher a mowing 'em down in the middle three innings, the home team added to the lead with two scored in the fifth and a pair in the sixth, increasing its advantage to 9-2.

With guys on first and third and two outs in the fifth, Chuck Newell ran a double into center field to make the score, 7-2. In the sixth, Martin sacrific-flied the first tally across and Rogers singled in the second.

Jack Bernardo hurled the seventh and eighth for UMass. He had little trouble, surrendering a meaningless run in the seventh on a walk, a sacrifice and a base hit.

The Redmen rounded out their day at the plate with two biggies in the seventh and one in the eighth. Jim Saracino followed a walk to Mason with a triple for the tenth tally and was rescued by a Bernardo sacrifice bunt for the 11th. The 12th run belonged all to Rogers as he banged out his home run with one out in the eighth.

Tall Tom Austin finished things up on the mound in the ninth for the Redmen as UMass now points to two tough Yankee Conference contests on Friday and Saturday against Vermont. Games get under way Friday at 3 p.m. and Saturday at 1 p.m.

DIAMOND DUST—AIC's running score went 3-4-3, three runs on four hits with three errors. . In comparison to that last figure, the home team committed no blunders with a very strong showing in the field. . .Fichera has now pitched eight and two-thirds innings this year and has yet to surrender a run, earned or otherwise. . .The Yellowjackets resembled the Oakland Athletics with their yellow uniforms, white shoes and white batting helmets. . .It was a long affair, lasting two hours and forty minutes. . .AIC basketballer Alan Bush (recall that American International inflicted the UMass hoop squad with one of its toughest-to-swallow losses) popped-up in the infield for the last our of the tilt. . Who caught that pop-up?. . .Redman basketball captain Ellerbrook. . .Who else?

Lonborg Leads Sox Over Yankees, 6-2

BOSTON (AP) - Jim Lonborg checked the New York Yankees with late relief help from Sparky Lyle and also smashed his second major league home run Wednesday as the Boston Red Sox fashioned a 6-2 victory.

Lonborg, seeking to regain his Cy Young Award winning 1967 from after two off season, had a three-hit shutout for seven innings before the Yankees rallied for two runs and drove him from the mound in the eighth. Lyle came on to preserve the tall right-hander's second straight triumph.

The Red Sox staked Lonborg to a 2-0 lead in the first inning on an infield hit by Mike Andrews, a walk, a run-scoring single by Carl Yastrzemski and a sacrifice fly by George Scott.

A walk plus singles by Tony Conigliaro and Gerry Moses produced another run in the fourth, and Boston hiked it to 5-0 in the fifth on singles by Andrews and Reggis Smith, a run-scoring ground out by Yastrzemski and a single by Rico Petrocelli.

Lonborg's homer into the left field screen made it 6-0 in the sixth, and he appeared home free until the Yankees rallied in the eighth.

Jerry Kenney singled and Jack Gibbs doubled to start the inning, and a wild pitch and a ground out produced two runs. When Gene Michael also doubled, Lyle came on to retire the side.

Lonborg struck out four batters, walked only one, and was particularly sharp until the Yankee rally as the New York batters were hitting low breaking stuff into the ground.

The Red Sox collected 10 hits including three by Mike Andrews, one of the few members of the team who was not off to a quick start in earlier games.

Gerry Moses, Carl Yastrzemski, Tony Conigliaro and Reggie Smith all stretched their streaks of having hit safely in each of the team's seven games. Moses was 2-for-3, lifting his batting average to .542 with 13 hits in 24 trips.

Lyle got credit for a save, and his perfect 1 1/3 innings gave Red Sox relievers a total of 15-2/3 innings in all appearances this season in which they still haven't allowed a run.

Yankee first baseman Danny Cater injured his hand when his bat splintered as he lined out to Lonborg in the second inning, and he left the game. It was announced that he had suffered a cut on the hand, but the extent of the injury was not immediately known.

Demonstration Protests Vernon Nuclear Plant

The partially constructed nuclear power plant at Vernon, Vermont will be the site of a protest march on Saturday April 18. The demonstration will be held in honor of the future victims of the plant's operation.

At 7 a.m. a bus and car pool will leave Amherst at the Town Common beside the Peter Pan Ticket office. The Amherst contingent will meet with other concerned groups of the Connecticut Valley at the parking lot gate of the Vermon plant at 8:30 in the morning. From there, the demonstrators will march to the Brattleboro Town Common for a rally, at 11:30. Among the speakers at the rally will be Dr. Irving Lyon, biology professor at Bennington College, Larry Bogart of the Anti-pollution League, and Dr. David Inglis of the Physics Department, UMass.

The power plant is being constructed by several privately owned Vermont power companies and is funded in large part by the Federal Government. Several years ago, the Atomic Energy Commission decided to make New England and New York the testing ground for atomic power plants. In fact the utilities are banking on the use of these plants for the future production of electricity.

The Vernon Power Plant has already violated many of the more basic regulations which the A.E.C. is supposed to be regulating. No plant is supposed to be constructed within 28 miles of a densely populated town. Brattleboro is only six miles away and a school enrolling 600 students is located 400 yards away from the plant.

Before any plant can be developed a public hearing is required by law to be held. There was a hearing held, but opponents of the planned nuclear plant were not given the chance to speak.

Besides the legal violations, the plant would contribute greatly to the pollution of the Connecticut Valley. In addition to thermal pollution, there is the insidious threat of radiation emitted by the plant. As Dr. Sternglass of the University of Pittsburg recently pointed out at the State Legislative hearings in the Ballroom there is a great danger of emitted radiation contributing to a high incidence of birt h defects and cancer.

CEQ says the time to act on the environmental traversity is now! Resideats of the Connecticut must turn out to protest this obvious infringment of environmental rights. CEQ wants you at the Amherst Town Common along with Coalition for Environmental Quality to stand up for the right to live!

CEQ Plans Programs

To emphasize the horrible state of our environment the Committee for Environmental Quality starting this Saturday will present a week long series of discussions, lectures, and exhibitions on this topic. Most topics will be especially pertinent to problems confronting UMass.

Students in this area and those which will be especially important to UMies as future housewives, homeowners, consumers, and taxpayers.

The first events will be on Saturday with an Environment Fair on the Amherst Town Common. There will be displays and slide shows on relevant topics concerning the Amherst area especially the common housewife.

Some time Tuesday there will be a panel discussion, at a yet undetermined site on "Benefits and Consequences of Manipulating the Environment" with Professor Rhodes, Chairman of Natural Resources, Bernard Berger, Jim McCann of Biology, Bruce Hodley of Wood Technology, and Donald Mader an ecologist.

All day Wednesday a smaller version of the Environment Fair will be presented in the Student Union Ballroom along with additional films and slides. Also, that evening Reverend Ralph Abernathy will speak in the Cage.

Tentative plans for Thursday call for a panel discussion probably focusing on the Population Bomb. On noon Thursday there will be a symbolic tree planting near the campus pond. Religious speakers will bless the tree.

Friday evening there will be a series of discussions and seminars on pertinent topics, all of which will be held in the School of Business Administration. A - mong the topics under discussion will be law as it relates to protecting the people or industry in conserving the environment, the question of whether population control is genocide, and whether the profit system can cure the environment. Also, later that evening will be a muiti-media show in the Student Union Ballroom on the environment.

On Saturday the 25th there will be an environment walk to Northampton and an environment fair at Pulaski Park in Northampton plus an all day panel discusslon in the Student Union Ballroom with distinguished panelists discussing topics such as the cost of a clean environment and the extent to which people would like to see their environment clean.

For further information on various events as well as how to actively participate, concerned students and faculty are urged to contact CEQ at 229B Bartlett Hall. The phone numbers are 545-0618 and 545-0619.

Common to Host Fair

The Amherst Common is going to be host of the first fair of the season, 'The Environmental Fair sponsored by the Coalition For Environmental Quality. Just what is going to be so special about this fair? In the light of new concern for quality environment, many people have questions which need to be answered.

What are the problems? What are the alternatives? What can an individual do? Come to the fair and find some answers to these questions. Booths and tables will include a health food table and refreshments, ecology action ideas, ecologically sound soaps, pollution control ideas, an electric panel truck, sales of helpful books, ecology posters and buttons, movies and slide shows and pictures showing local and nationwide pollution, paper drives, can drives, bottle drives, displays of what we have done to the environment and what we can do to the environment.

The Environment Fair will be on the Amherst Common from 12:00 to 4:00 April 18; in the Student Union Ballroom on Wednesday, April 22; and will culminate an environmental trash walk to Northampton on April 25 in Pulaski Park.

The Environment Fair is for everyone--it will be a real freak show for those who are totally aware and those who are unaware. And mostly for those who couldn't care less. Come and learn and act.

Forestry Dept. Holds Environment Panel

The graduate students and faculty of the Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management will hold a n Environmental Quality Week Forum: "Consequences of Manipulating Natural Environments", next Tuesday, April 21, from 2 to 4:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Questions will be entertained from the floor and are being solicited today in the lobby of the Student Union. The Forum is designed to provide an opportunity to address questions to a cross-section of resource specialists concerning the impact of manipulating the environment for human wants.

Collect, Non-Deposit Bottles

The Coalition for Environmenta Quality (CEQ) will sponsor a 'Non-Deposit Drive' during Environ - ment Week (April 18 to 25th). Place all non-deposit soda cans and bottles in official collection containers located in all campus living areas, the Union, and the Amherst Common. The drive wil be culiminated by joining the Environment Walk from Amherst Common at 8:30 a.m. on April 25th to Pulaski Park in Northampton then on to the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Northampton, later in the day. A ceremony will also be held in front of the Coca-Cola building.

Empty soda cans and bottles no not have to pollute our environmeat, but they will not disappear by themselves.

Literature

The University Library has assembled special browsing collections of books and U. S. government documents in the lobby of Goodell Library, in the Morrill Library, and in the Forestry Library. The browsing collections and an exhibit entitled "What you can do to save your environment", prepared by the Coalition for Environmental Quality, were assembled in connection with Earth Day April 22nd.

Room-to-Room 'Co-Ed'ing Disapproved

Student Life Sub-committee Favors 'Greenough Plan'

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

Dormitories attempting to become Co-Ed next year on plans other than "segregation" of females by floor ran into a wall of disapproval yesterday.

The Student Life Sub-Committee of the Board of Trustees approved a motion to recommend that dormitories going Co-Ed be restricted to the Greenough guidelines" set-up last year.

The Greenough proposal only allows for Co-Ed on a "floor to floor' segregation-of-females basis. The dormitories attempting other physical arrangements, particularly room-to-room will have to argue their case next Wednesday at the full Board monthly meeting, to be held on campus.

The members of the Committee disapproved of broader guidelines, as advocated by Cindi Olken, Student Senate President and member of the Board of Trustees. These new guidelines would have lifted specific restrictions of where male and females can live in a Co-Ed dorm.

Trustee Cloche argued at the meeting, held in the plush conference room at Whitmore, that Co-Ed dorm was still an "experiment" and that he would prefer to wait longer before creating "any" other Co-ed living units.

Chancellor Oswald Tippo recommended to the Committee that dormitories following the "floor to floor" arrangement of Greenough be approved, but stated that he did not feel other physical arrangements should be allowed.

Greenough is attempting to move from the floor-to-floor basis to a room-to-room set-up along with several other dorms; Lewis, Butterfield, Pierpont.

The basic opposition was in reaction to the mood of the legislature. Concern was expressed about how these types of changes at the University are distorted by taxpayers and legislators and eventually lead to a budget cut, "indirectly."

Present at the meeting was John Tierny from Greenough who told of the success with which Co-Ed has met at Greenough.

Students argued at length the advantages of Co-ed on a room-to-room set-up. Most of the arguments for this set-up were centered around the idea of creating a better living environment, in stark contrast to the normal dormitory at UMass.

The process of swaying enough opinion, on the Board of Trustees and in the legislature, in favor of "room-to-room" Co-Ed is going to be long and tedious.

Co-Ed Meeting

Because of the decislons concerning Co-Ed dorms made by the Student Life Sub-committee of the Board of Trustees, there will be a meeting Monday night in Greenough Lounge at 8 p.m.

The meeting is imperative as a preparatory meeting. The full Board of Trustees will meet Wednesday to decide the fate of Co-Ed dorms on campus. Please send representatives. For full information, call 5-2377 or 5-2376.

Rev. Ralph Abernathy is Featured As 'King Series' Speaker on Wed.

Nationally renowned civil rights leader the Reverend Ralph David Abernathy, successor to the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. as President of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, will speak at UMass Wednesday evening April 22.

Sponsored by the Third Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Lecture Series committee, Dr. Abernathy will speak at 8 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage. Other events are planned for the civil rights leader's day on the UMass campus.

Upon Dr. Abernathy's arrival in Amherst at 3 p.m. he will hold a Press Conference for members of the media in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. Immediately following the conference he will journey to Mills House for an open reception in his honor at the University's new Black Cultural Center.

Following the 8 p.m. lecture in the Cage there will be an open reception for Dr. Abernathy in Memorial Hall.

Dr. Ralph David Abernathy rose to national prominence when he and other young Negro leaders, including Martin Luther King, Jr., led the famous Montgomery, Alabama bus boycott of 1955-56. It was the boycott which acquainted the world with the practice of non-violent direct action against the cruelties and hardships of segregation and discrimination in the United States.

Since the Montgomery campaign, Dr. Abernathy has been jailed many times and has endured constant abuse and threats against his non-violent protest activities.

The 44-year-old Alabama-born Baptist preacher took over the reigns of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) upon the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. on April 4, 1968. As president, Dr. Abernathy is the chief administrative officer of the SCLC, it s various executive staff members and the 100 plus field staff scattered across the country.

Prior to becoming SCLC President, Dr. Abernathy was the chief financial and budgetary officer of the organization, and a close associate and adviser of his long-time friend, the first President and Founder, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Dr. Abernathy, together with other SCLC executives and Board Members direct the organization's programs and formulate policies.

House Supports Douglas Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) - Nearly one-fourth of the House membership Thursday backed calls for a special inquiry into Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas' activities.

Two committees appeared ready to take a look at impeachment questions raised about the 71-year-old jurist.

"Every day that his disruptive conduct is allowed to continue to pass unchallenged brings both the court and this House into disrepute," Rep. Louis C. Wyman, R-N.H., told colleagues.

He introduced a resolution to create a special six-man committee to determine whether any cause exists to impeach the justice. It is backed by 105 of the 431 House members, mainly Republicans and Southern Democrats. There are four vacancies.

This approach was supported by House GOP leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan who started the move with a free-swinging attack on Douglas Wednesday.

"I'm sure we'll get around to this but I can't give you any timetable," said Chairman William M. Colmer, D-Miss., whose House Rules Committee would consider the resolution.

However, at least one other member of the panel - Democrat Richard Bolling of Missouri added a dissident note: "I'm doing everything I can to cut this baby off at birth," he said.

Ford, in a 21-page speech, said Douglas may be unfit to serve on the high court because of questionable outside interests and possible associations with underworld figures.

While the Wyman approach goes to the Rules Committee, a straight impeachment resolution introduced by Rep. Andrew Jacobs, D-Ind. was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., said the Jacobs proposal will be considered at a closed meeting of the Judiciary Committee next Tuesday. Jacobs, a member of the unit, said he is neutral and offered the resolution only because Ford did not.

"It is my intention at that time to lay this matter before the full membership of the committee to chart our future course," said Celler. "Obviously, charges of impeachment leveled against a member of the high court warrant the most sober and searching and nonpartisan scrutiny."

Cambodia Seeks Aid In Arms and Material

WASHINGTON (AP) - Cambodia's new government, seeking to drive out North Vietnamese and Viet Cong invaders, has officially asked the United States for arms and material.

The Phnom Penh plea put President Nixon in a potentially embarrassing spot both on the home front and in foreign policy - and the adminsitration is treating the matter with great caution.

"Their request is being examined," State Department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said in announcing the Cambodian bid. He refused further details.

Nison's dilemma could be summed up this way:

- On the one hand, the Nixon doctrine for reduced U. S. presence in Asia, his program for U.S. withdrawals from South Vietnam and his avowed desire not to widen the war or impair Cambodia's neutrality all weigh against launching a U. S. military assistance program for Cambodia.

Congressional critics have made plain their distaste for a new U.S. arms aid undertaking in Indochina. This, they say, is how the United States got involved in Vietnam. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, for one, specifically urged rejection of the Cambodian request.

Apollo 13 Hobbles Homeward

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -The Apollo 13 pilots, four harried days behind them, sped into the last 100,000 miles home Thursday, their cold and ailing spaceship aimed at a Friday splashdown in the Pacific Ocean.

Their speed was picking up in answer to earth's gravity-and they ironed out plans for a possible last-minute thruster jolt to aim their ship more precisely for landing.

For the astonauts, James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr., and Jack L. Swigert Jr., the small course correction scheduled for 7:53 a.m. EST Friday is intended only to refine the ship's aim. It is already on a path that would land it in the Pacific without further adjustment.

The crippled Apollo 13 came within 100,000 miles of earth at precisely 5:13 p.m. EST Thursday.

The 50-degrees chill forced the astronauts to put on extra underwear and sleep huddled on the floor of the lunar lander, the warmest place they have.

With their home planet looming larger in their windows, the astronauts kidded about the cold in the cabin now reaching to some 45 degrees.

"Now you see why we call it the refrigerator," Swigert called down.

"Yeah, it's kind of a cold winter day up there, isn't it," Mission Control said. "Is it snowing in the command module yet?"

"No, not quite," Swigert replied.

Mission Control assured them lightly that "you'll have some time on the beach in Samoa to thaw out after this cold experience."

"That sounds great," Swigert said.

The astronauts are expected to be back in Houston sometime Sunday morning.

On the ground experts set up a tentative schedule for the morning's events. The timetable:

8:07 a.m. EST- Six hours before splashdown. Crew mans command ship.

8:23 a.m. - Jettison of crippled service module and attempt to photograph it.

11:53 a.m.-Jettison lunar lander.

12:53 p.m.-Begin reentry period; altitude 400,000 feet.

1:07 p.m.-Splashdown.

The astronauts were told to make the re-entry in light coveralls, leaving their heavy space suits in storage. All Apollo flights to date have made these so-called shirt-sleeve re-entries.

Going over the last minute details, Lovell told Mission Control that as soon as he finished maneuvering with the lunar lander's thrusters before re-entry Friday "I'll scramble up and close the LM hatch."

Mission Control approved his recital of the plan but added, "Don't forget to close the command module hatch on your way in."

"I'm already scared that Jack will have it closed before I get up there," Lovell said.

It was one of the few light moments since Monday night's spaceship-crippling accident. Plagued by short but apparently adequate supplies of water, oxygen and power.

"We have a lot of work to do because we have an unusual situation," explained Donald K. Deke Slayton, chief of the astronauts. Once re-entry procedures are perfected, he said, he would not be concerned about bringing the crew down safely.

To insure that safety, the crew of the next Apollo flight rehearsed the various proposed plans in spaceship simulators on the ground, searching for as practical a test as possible of what would work and what would not.

"We want to get rid of the service module as soon as possible and keep the lunar module as long as possible," Slayton said. "It gets a little sticky at times. But we're going to try to make the reentry as normal as possible and we've been running through a lot of things on the simulator."

Sargent Knocks Riot 'Won't Solve Problem'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) - Gov. Francis W. Sargent said Thursday that he will not tolerate further disorder in the state like that of Wednesday night.

" Dissent, yes, disorder no," Sargent said while touring riot-scarred Harvard Square.

Sargent briefly toured the rubble-strewn square in the aftermath of Wednesday night's clash between about 6,000 demonstrators and some 2,000 helmeted police officers. Several hundred persons were reported injured, including 23 policemen.

About 40 youths were arraigned Thursday morning on a variety of charges stemming from the demonstration, including assault and battery on a police officer and unlawful assembly.

Sargent, accompanied by William Powers, state public safety commissioner, said the riot was "not the way to solve the problem. We certainly don't want to start having wars right here in Cambridge. . .There's no sense in polarizing our society. . .It just doesn't make sense."

The governor stopped at several stores that had been damaged during the riot and told owners he had made arrangements with the Small Business Administration to provide assistance if needed.

Council Suspends WNEC Paper

The Student Council of Western New England College voted for the dismissal of the editor and editorial staff of the WESTERN, the college's weekly newspaper.

According to Jared Somerson, the editor from Wynwood, Penn., the controversy arose over a cartoon of a student in the April 14 issue. Wynwood said that the cartoon was not "of any one student in particular." The cartoon supposedly depicts the senior class president.

Also, in the same issue was a comic classified ad containing a phone number printed in error which resulted in the harrassment of its owner.

Officials at the school verified the reports but would not comment.

Channeling is an official publication of the National Office of the Selective Service System. Originally issued on July 1, 1965, as part of the Selective Service Orientation Kit, the essay was revised and reissued in September, 1967. The entire Kit is available from the Office of Public Information, Selective Service System, 1724 F. Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20435. The following is a condensed form of the 1965 version, Government Printing Office publication number 899.125

CHANNELING

More than ten years ago, it became evident that something additional had to be done to permit and encourage development of young scientists and trained people in all fields. A million and a half registrants are now deferred as students. One reason the Nation is not in shorter supply of engineers today is that they were among the students deferred by Selective Service in previous years. Similarly, Selective Service student deferments reduced what otherwise would have developed into more serious shortages in teaching, medicine, dentistry, and every field requiring advanced study. The System has also induced needed people to remain in these professions and in industry engaged in defense activities or in the support of national health, safety, or interest.

In the selective service system the term "deferment" has been used millions of times to describe the method and means used to attract to the kind of service considered to be most important, the individuals who were not compelled to do it. The club of induction has been used to drive out of areas considered to be less important to the areas of greater importance in which deferments were given, the individuals who did not or could not participate in activities which were considered essential to the defense of the Nation. The Selective Service System anticipates further evolution in this area. It is promoting the process by the granting of deferments in liberal numbers where the national need clearly would benefit.

Patriotism is defined as "devotion to the welfare of one's country." It has been interpreted to mean many different things. Men have always been exhorted to do their duty. But what that duty is depends upon a variety of variables, most important being the nature of the threat to national welfare and the capacity and opportunity of the individual. Take, for example, the boy who saved the Netherlands by plugging the dike with his finger.

At the time of the American Revolution the patriot was the so-called "embattled farmer" who joined General Washington to fight the British. The concept that patriotism is best exemplified by service in uniform has always been under some degree of challenge, but never to the extent that it is today. In today's complicated warfare when the man in uniform may be suffering far less than the civilians at home, patriotism must be interpreted far more broadly than ever before.

This is not a new thought, but it has had new emphasis since the development of nuclear and rocket warfare. Educators, scientists, engineers, and their professional organizations, during the last ten years particularly, have been convincing the American public that for the mentally qualified man there is a special order of patriotism other than service in uniform, that for the man having the capacity, dedicated service as a civilian in such fields as engineering, the sciences, and teaching constitute the ultimate in their expression of patriotism. A large segment of the American public has been convinced that this is true.

It is in this atmosphere that the young man registers at age 18 and pressure begins to force his choice. He does not have the inhibitions that a philosophy of universal service in uniform would engender. The door is open for him as a student to qualify if capable in a skill badly needed by his nation. He has many choices and he is prodded to make a decision.

The psychological effect of this circumstantial climate depends upon the individual, his sense of good citizenship, his love of country and its way of life. He can obtain a sense of well being and satisfaction that he is doing as a civilian what will help his country most. This process encourages him to put forth his best effort and removes to some degree the stigma that has been attached to being out of uniform.

In the less patriotic and more selfish individual it engenders a sense of fear, uncertainty, and dissatisfaction which motivates him, nevertheless, in the same direction. He complains of the uncertainty which he must endure; he would like to be able to do as he pleases; he would appreciate a certain future with no prospect of military service or civilian contribution, but he complies with the needs of the national health, safety, or interest -- or is denied deferment. Throughout his career as a student, the pressure -- the threat of loss of deferment -- continues. It continues with equal intensity after graduation. His local board requires periodic reports to find out what he is up to. He is impelled to pursue his skill rather than embark upon some less important enterprise and is encouraged to apply his skill in an essential activity in the national interest. The loss of derred status is the consequence for the individual who has acquired the skill and either does not use it or uses it in a nonessential activity.

The psychology of granting wide choice under pressure to take action is the American or indirect way of achieving what is done by direction in foreign countries where choice is not permitted. Here, choice is limited but not denied, and it is fundamental that an individual generally applies himself better to something he has decided to do rather than something he has been told to do. The psychological impact of being rejected for service in uniform is severe. The earlier this occurs in a young man's life, the sooner the beneficial effects of pressured motivation by the Selective Service System are lost. He is labeled unwanted. His patriotism is not desired. Once the table of "rejectee" is upon him all efforts at guidance by persuasion are futile. If he attempts to enlist at 17 or 18 and is rejected, then he receives virtually none of the impulsion the System is capable of giving him. If he makes no effort to enlist and as a result is not rejected until delivered for examination by the Selective Service System at about age 23, he has felt some of the pressure but thereafter is a free agent.

This contributed to establishment of a new classification of I-Y (registrant qualified for military service only in time of war or national emergency). That classification reminds the registrant of his ultimate qualification to serve and preserves some of the benefit of what we call channeling. Without it or any other similar method of categorizing men in degrees of acceptability, men rejected for military service would be left with the understanding that they are unfit to defend their country, even in war time.

From the individual's viewpoint, he is standing in a room which has been made uncomfortably warm. Several doors are open, but they will all lead to various forms of recognized, patriotic service to the Nation. Some accept the alternatives gladly -- some with reluctance. The consequence is approximately the same.

Sunday Panther Rally Set

Approximately 200 UMass students are expected to join a mass rally in New Haven Sunday to support the trial of Bobby Seale and other New Haven Black Panthers. Seale is charged with the murder of Alex Rackley, a murder Panthers maintain was committed by police.

The rally will begin at noon Sunday and continue until 4 p.m. at Beaver Pond Park in New Haven. The park is in the vicinity of Yale University. Definite speakers are not known at this time.

The UMass contingent is requested to assemble at 9:30 Sunday morning at Haigis Mall in front of Whitmore Hall. A car caravan will leave the mall at 10 a.m.

Cars are needed for the trip. Anyone who has a car that can be used can sign up at the table in the Student Union. Even if you don't have a car, all are urged to come.

Bergman's 'Ritual' Presented Tuesday

The Five Colleges - Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Smith, and Hampshire Colleges and the University of Massachusetts - in conjunction with the Janus Concert Society will present Ingmar Bergman's THE RITUAL on Tuesday, April 21 at Sage Hall, Smith College, at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

THE RITUAL has been described as "...perfect fare for Bergman's legion of admirers." In THE RITUAL, Bergman comments on the themes of obscenity and censorship. The motion picture represents a continuation of Bergman's emphasis on universal themes such as the nature of truth.

THE RITUAL is being programmed with several outstanding short films such as Wolfgang Urch's DAS MACHINES, an Academy Award entry. Each year the Janus Concert Society will utilize the short film to bring examples of new trends in filmmaking by emerging and established directors to American audiences.

Involvement

Involvement - discussion and action on numerous issues - seems to have become the byword on this campus in the past few weeks.

During this time USCC, the University and State Communications Council, has been working quietly and steadily to complete the details for the Legislators' Day which they are sponsoring on Friday, May 8th.

USCC is sponsoring this day in order to better the communications between the Massachusetts Legislature and the student body of the University in Amherst. It is hoped that the day will be an educational one for both the students and the Legislature and that the dialogue which is begun can be continued well after May 8th.

USCC has done much of the groundwork with the Legislature but they still need a great deal of help from the student body. They need students who are willing to escort the Legislators during the day, show them the campus, talk with them and try to give these Senators and Representatives a view of as much of University life as is possible in one day. USCC offers a channel for involvement that will cost no more than the exertion of talking to people. It is hoped too that Legislators' Day will also open up channels through which positive action can be taken to improve our University.

If you give a damn and want to get involved in constructive action, act now and get involved with USCC.

University Quotas

Vice-President Agnew has once again stated his views concerning racism, education, and the American way of life. He has attacked the quota system of this nation's universities, particularly that of the University of Michigan. A 10% black student population should not exist, says Agnew, when only 3% "is capable of handling a college curriculum." His figures, obtained from the Office of Education, show that out of all high school graduates, only 6% are black . . . and not all are "qualified". Agnew maintains that only "qualified" blacks have the right to an education at a university.

How does Mr. Agnew ever hope to conquer racism - institutional or personal? More than likely, he does not. Blacks cannot become "qualified" when educated in a second-rate school system and have grown up in a second-rate environment. Blacks cannot be expected to meet "white middle-class standards" when all they have known is poverty, oppression and despair.

The Vice-President may be implying that colleges should be separate - black and white. Southern conservatives know whose side the government is on. "Students needing special education services . . . should not be encouraged to apply in the first instance to such institutions . . ." He suggests that in this way a student "can advance to the limits of his capacity."

Because of standards, entrance exams (equivalent to literacy tests for voters) and limited enrollments, our black brothers are being denied their RIGHT to attend a university. A 10% quota is needed to make certain that blacks are getting a chance. Racism has existed throughout their lives - the university should be a turning point.

Dignity

He walked up to the flag in front of the Alumni Building and started lowering it to half-staff. "Who are you?" I asked. "You gonna report me?" he retorted. "No, I just asked to know who you were." Finishing quickly, he turned and walked away with a sarcastic remark about his student number.

My argument is not whether the flag should be at half-staff or not, but with this student's attitude.

If a person is ashamed or afraid to put his name to his actions, the dignity behind the action and the dignity of the man are lacking.

And, what is the Moratorium all about if not the dignity of man and his actions.

Quiet

To the editor:

An unusual event took place on Wednesday night, the night of the Moratorium, in Southwest. Several people got together, played conga and bongo drums, and a handful of others joined in with sticks and bottles; others clapped hands, danced, or did anything else to maintain the rhythm. However, the noise was quite loud and annoyed some of the residents in the area. As a result, the police came, broke up the crowd, took the instruments, and arrested three of the "noisemakers" for disturbing the peace.

An arrest for disturbing the peace is not an unusual event at the University, or anywhere else, what was unusual was that people got together and let their spirits fly. There was a sharing, a doing, a living, a loving and a peace among those people, which happens when people let it be, and loosen up naturally. Rhetoric and politics, at best, serve to tell us that we've got to get back to the garden; it is up to us to live in it and experience.

Those people were arrested for disturbing the quiet not the peace.

Rejoice, Rejoice!

We have no choice.

Glued Glasses

To the editor:

A group of us at the dining commons were wondering what type of people came to eat there. Lately we have been of the opinion that only pigs do, and we don't mean the kind that are around to uphold the "law". These pigs are those UMass students who think that they are in a sty, for their trays come downstairs in the most deplorable conditions; plates turned over and garbage spilled all over the trays. We all know the food isn't the best. But it's your fellow students who have to clean up after your mess, not the management of the dining commons.

Some fool thought it would be fun to glue two glasses together. We hope it makes him happy to hear that someone cut himself because one glass broke while he was trying to separate them. Why don't you "people" grow up?

Two Press Releases?

To the editor:

It is perhaps common knowledge that the local Amherst radio station, WTTT, is governed by a decidedly conservative point of view. This is evident every day through the tone and innuendo of the newscasts. It is perhaps less evident, however, when one of WTTT's "significant news items" explicitly reflects a serious distortion of the truth through a strong, politically conservative bias.

I refer specifically to a "news item" on the 9 o'clock newscast, Wednesday, April 15 - Moratorium Day. It was reported that on this day the demonstrations against the war would be "significantly smaller" than those demonstrations witnessed last fall. I immediately called the station and asked the newscaster where he got his information. He replied that he "drew" it from the press releases of the Moratorium Day Committee!! He said that according to the releases, PETITION SIGNATURES had been meagre and that volunteers to canvas the valley were far below the fall average. Fro m this he INFERRED that the demonstration would be "small".

Later in the day I read in the Daily Collegian that the strike petition drive was termed a "success"!! ". . . one of the most successful petitions ever circulated on campus". Moreover, it was reported that a crowd of 5000 participants were expected. Now, did the Moratorium Committee really hand out two press releases, each totally antithetical in content to the other? Did they really??

Stop and Look

To the editor:

Why doesn't anybody stop and look around. Where are we headed for. It took this Nation 200 years to develop into what it is today. (A Capitalist State.) For 200 years it has been controlled by capitalists. Where is the freedom that these capitalists (politicians) have been talking about. Shit. Can't you see that these capitalists have complete control over your lives, from the time you enter school until most of the lucky men get out of the Army. The most important years of your life are controlled by a monstrous capitalist machine, which produces the finished American.

Ecologists talk about population and 1990. Can't you people see that this big machine is running us into a wall. The problem is that there are too many people in Washington D.C. possessed with power and money, and not giving much thought to Ecology. If they don't give it much thought, we must! Open your eyes people, before it's too late.

Shalom

To the editor:

I am tired of being told who I am by those who do not know me. I am a Jew. I belong to a national community wit h its own religion. My community includes people of all colors, shapes, and sizes.

I am not enthusiastic about being called "cousin" by Arabs. I was invited home by King Faisal, who publicly expressed approval of Jewish nationalism, and then I was butchered in Hebron, 1929. I was a citizen in Bosnia, 1943, when I heard the Mufti admiringly declare in Berlin, "The Germans know how to get rid of Jews." But he laid the plans for the extermination of my parents.

I am disillusioned by begging for peace with the Soviet Union's friend Syria, where my family is tortured and imprisoned, and receiving only gunfire in reply. I am tired of hearing Arab refugees and freeloaders, victims of Syrian propaganda and twenty years of international financial support, blaming almost everyone else for keeping them in camps except their own lack of initiative and industry. I am no longer surprised to hear impartial news broadcasts from a public institution calling Israeli planes "war planes" consistently, but never extending this phrase to belligerent Arabic speaking countries.

I am tired of talking and receiving insults, empty promises, and the bodies of my murdered brothers. The time for talking for the present is over. Justice for the Jew never comes through the good intentions of his friends. Therefore, every Jew must commit himself to action that will bring freedom for his people. Such action includes (1) defending his people and his homeland, (2) dedicating his life in service to the State of Israel, (3) reading, writing, and speaking Hebrew as his first language, (4) acquiring and expressing a greater sense of "Hadar", a general concept that includes loyalty, respect, courage, refinement, and honesty, combined with a greater appreciation of the Jewish heritage. Only thus will the entire Jewish homeland be restored to a free Jewish people.

Concern for Community

To the editor:

Last Friday - April 10 - I enjoyed the most moving experience I have had during my four years at the University. The sense of genuine commitment and faith in peatedly displayed in the lively and creative sessions held in Southwest and East has renewed my own affection and optimism for this university.

Like so many staff and students, I faced the dilemma of choosing a place to go since so many of the topics were those in which I have long wished to have a good talk. As a result, I wandered a good deal last Friday - to the sessions on black studies, the future of the humanities, dining commons, teacher evaluation, residential hall life, grading, and academic freedom. I could have predicted 90 per cent of the faculty I saw there - old friends long interested in our community of learners - and I could have predicted the administrators I saw, too. But not the students; although I know a good number of the undergraduates most interested and active in various extracurricular concerns 90 per cent of the student faces were new to me.

It nothing else, April 10 and 11 identified two thousand people who demonstrated their concern. And they did so not because they turned out. Too often on this campus people turn out, out of curiosity if nothing else. On last Friday, I saw 2000 active participants - and no spectators! With this response to the Chancellor's trust and the Faculty Senate's and Student Senate's blessing for such a day, this University has shown me the kind of dedication and positive involvement that should go far in meeting our problems and spotting our crises - even before they occur.

I want to thank those that shared in giving me this memorable day - and I look forward to action on the proposals that resulted and a referendum on May 7 that will indicate even greater community sentiment and interest.

Co-ed Communities

To the editor:

The Student Life Sub-Committee of the UMass Board of Trustees voted yesterday not to change the format of Co-ed dorms on campus from that under which Greenough Dormitory is presently operating.

Students were arguing for the end of "segregation" of male and female within the Co-ed dorms, which the present "floor by floor" policy requires.

The Student Life Committee did, however, approve the idea of allowing other dorms to become Co-ed on the Greenough concept. There are approximately twelve dormitories now attempting to become Co-educational by September 1970. Several dormitories are following the present guidelines. Attempting a "room to room" physical set-up are Lewis, Butterfield, Pierpont, Greenough and others.

Chancellor Tippo recommended to the committee that "room to room" not be allowed. His voice swayed the critical committee vote.

There are several principles involved in this decision most of which can be classified as political, i.e. how to get money from the Legislature, how to pacify parents and legislators who feel that UMass is becoming an immoral place.

The Trustees have taken the path of least resistance; once again student ideas have been found expendable. The idea of ending segregation between male and female, is falling to the wayside.

The major problem of approving "room to room" Co-ed dormitories, according to those in decision making positions, is the effect these changes have on the State Legislature and taxpayers, i.e. the University budget.

If this is so, and it appears to be the situation, the University, as a whole, should be working to change the views of the Legislature. People should write to their State representatives and Senators. Parents should write to the Trustees.

One or two letters complaining about what happens at UMass to individual Trustee members, may be able to sway the entire Board. Possibly, a large number of letters to the Trustees, extolling the virtues of Co-ed living could prove even more persuasive.

Next Wednesday, students will argue for their right to create a better living environment at the University before the entire Board of Trustees. They can be successful only if UMass can present a politically sound image of itself, i.e. keep the budget intact. . . . maybe someday, people living a good life will take precedent over budget.

I now see crystal clear

The time has come upon me

For I feel war immoral
That men should kill men

I pray the Lord for courage
To see this to its end.

The Third World

To the editor:

In your report on the "Third World Teach-in" (Monday, April 13, p. 2), a member of the UMass faculty is reported as discussion Israel as an " 'illegitimate facade' created by the same expansionist, imperialistic and colonial forces that operate in Southern Africa, Southeast Asic and Latin America."

As an historian, I want to protest against such distortion of the facts and label it for what it is - demagogic, racist, reactionary propaganda. Just as Mussolini used to inveigh against "the plutocratic democracies," and Hitler used to rant against "the international Jewish capitalist conspiracy," now we hear again a form of fascist jargon presented under the disguise of "socialism" (remember that "Nazi" meant "National Socialist Workers Party"). It reminds me of the strange conglomerations of words issued by certain so-called "Marxist experts" during the period of the Stalin-Hitler pact of 1939-1941: no one was liberated by that alliance which ultimately brought incalculable suffering to the workers and peasants (and students) of Central and Eastern Europe.

Mr. Donaldson is quoted as calling for recommitment "by those who know there is a struggle ahead." As a Jew, I recommit myself to the side of my people - the Jewish people and the Jewish state. Were I an Israeli, I would not vote for the government of Premier Meier, but that will now sway me from loyalty to my people. Would an Irish-American stand aloof if the Irish Republic were threatened with "liberation" by the "progressive" (anti-popery) fanatics of Northern Ireland?

I sincerely hope Mr. Donaldson was misquoted in the M.D.C. article, but if he really made the statements attributed to him, then he owes an apology to American Jews who support Israel against the imperialistic forces of Russian neo-Stalinism and militaristic Arabic "national socialism." More important, Mr. Donaldson owes an apology to the Black peoples wh o so recently have seen Biafra destroyed by the Muslim, semi-feudal regime of Nigeria which was well supplied with Russian mig's (flown by Egyptian pilots).

I salute those who honestly work to aid the "Third World." I support the rights of Afro-Americans and I oppose the Vietnam War. Here at UMass, I join the demand that full credit be given for the Black Studies Program. I do these things because I think they are in the best interests of the American people.

Meanwhile, Israel struggles to preserve its hard-won existence. Anyone - Right, Center or Left - who tries to "liberate" Israel from the Israelis will be defeated severely. Most Jews are tired of being used as a convenient scapegoat for the ills of the world. It will be better for the Arabic peoples if they turn their attention to the big oil companies, the juntas of colonels and the merchants of war weapons who exploit these countries and distract the energy and resources needed for health, education, birth-control programs and other realistic needs.

The Black Repertory Theater of UMass will present CEREMONIES, in Bowker Auditorium starting tonight at 8:30.

The Play is written by Lonne Elder III director of the Playwrights Directors Division of the Negro Ensemble in New York. Mr. Elder will view Friday night's performance.

CEREMONIES

The play attempts to find a solution to being Black in a society condoning racism. It goes beyond that, however, into personal life and existence within society. The action of the play takes place in a barber shop living quarters. The quarters clearly show that too many people have been living in too small space for too many years.

The Director for Ceremonies is Esther Terry, a Ph.D. candidate in the department of English.

Anthony Pendleton and Danny Scarborough rehearse scene with Nate Sims for CEREMONIES.

Bounce for Beats' Raises Funds

The Brothers of Sigma Alpha Mu introduced their Boune "Bounce for Beats" drive outside the Little Hatch in Southwest yesterday afternoon. The program is to raise money for the Heart Fund.

A 24-hour outdoor rock festival will highlight this year's "Bounce for Beats" Heart Fund Charity Drive to be held this weekend in Hadley and Amherst. Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity is sponsoring "Bounce for Beats" as its annual service project.

Sixteen bands from the East Coast, including Fat, Flight, Prog, Quarry, Factory, Steel Snappers, Cin, Rail, Stone River, and Brecknridge, have donated their time to play Friday night through Saturday afternoon for the Heart Fund Drive.

The official opening of the Drive will be Friday at 6 p.m. at the Hadley Shopping Center. Opening ceremonies with representing dignitaries from the town of Hadley and the Heart Fund will attend.

At 11 p.m., "Bounce for Beats" will move from the shopping center to the athletic fields near Alumni Stadium. Sixteen bands will provide entertainment through the night and continue until 6 p.m. Saturday. A food shop will be open throughout the music marathon.

SAM asks that everyone "pray for unrain" so that the festival can present super sounds to a large audience and that the Heart Fund Charity Drive be a success. In case of rain, curtailed festivities will be held at the shopping center and the little Hatch.

Sponsors Clarify Development Walk

A 26-mile walk to raise money for a domestic and a foreign self-help project, will occur on May 3, two weeks from Sunday. The walk's sponsors would like to clarify what the walk is, its goals, etc. and ask for assistance from the people at UMass.

The Walk For Development is part of a nationwide group called Young World Development, which is the youth arm of the American Freedom From Hunger Foundation. Walks similar to the one scheduled for Amherst have occurred in 70 other cities and towns throughout the country.

More than 200,000 people have participated and over $1.5 million dollars have been raised for the self-help projects. This spring there will be somewhere in the neighborhood of 150 walks throughout the country. The only walk scheduled for western Massachusetts is here in Amherst.

Last year in Quincy, Mass. a walk was held and over 2000 walkers raised $27,000. The Foundation stipulates that 42.5% of the money goes to a domestic self-help project.

The 42.5% which goes to a foreign self-help project went to a Liberian Agricultural Training Center. The remaining 15% returns to the Foundation to promote future walks.

If you want to walk, come by the table in the Union and pick up a sponsor card. If you can't walk but would still like to help, we need people at the various checkpoints along the way to stamp the cards of the walkers; we need people with cars to go along the route of the walk and pick up and return home walkers who can't go on; we need trained medical people to treat the thousands of blisters; we need food to keep the walkers going.

The actual projects to be funded are currently undecided, but a group of the leaders of the townspeople of Amherst have volunteered to help select projects. If you would like to help or have any questions, call Moe Rodenstein at 546-5133.

If you would like to stamp the cards at the checkpoints or have an available car, call Sue Rosen at 546-5275. If you can help out with bandaging the blisters or would like to donate food (preferably oranges and apples), call Renee Daniels at 546-2219.

"... a sound not unlike that of the early Grateful Dead, a band's band of unparalleled quality ... Groups without laurels tend to work hard to get them, and ROXY is doing just that ... Rackmen Wracked, 8-1, Play NH (h), Tufts (a)

CAMBRIDGE - Wednesday, April 15 was a lousy day for the U-Mass tennis team as it got wiped out by MIT 8-1, dipping its record to 1-2 with two upcoming encounters against New Hampshire at home on Saturday at 2 p.m. and away versus Tufts Monday at 2 p.m.

Every Redman player lost his singles match and only one of the three doubles teams could gain a win. The unit of Jim Bornheim and Gus Penon defeated the MIT tandem of Perkins and Withers and did so in three sets, 7-9, 9-7, and 6-4.

The rest of the match is a different story as, in singles competition, Penon was beaten by McKinley, 6-2 and 6-1, Alan Goldberg was dropped by Weiss, 6-2 and 6-2, Mike Katz was clipped by Baron, 7-5, 4-6 and 7-5, Steve Gervickas lost to Cross, 6-2 and 6-3, Jon Bloom bowed to Smith, 7-5 and 6-0, and Bornheim was topped by Withers, 2-6, 6-4 and 6-2.

In doubles play, the Redmen lost the first two matches, slipping behind the Tufts team 8-0, not to be saved until the last match with the victory by Bornheim and Penon.

In the initial doubles contest, Goldberg and Bloom fell in two sets to McKinley-Weiss, 6-3 and 8-6. The Katz-Gervickas duo also met defeat in two sets, 6-4 and 6-1.

According to head coach Steve Kosakowski, "The only bright thing about the match was the number three doubles play of Bornheim and Penon." That match, incidently, ended up being played in the dark at 7 p.m. with yellow balls.

Kosakowski was very disappointed with the showing of the Redmen because he felt UMass was definitely not playing out of its class. MIT's courts are made of clay, on which type courts a couple of U-Mass players had no experience. Kosakowski disregarded any great effect the clay courts might have had on the Redmen when he said, "We have no excuses for losing that one."

The tennis coach hinted of a changed starting lineup for the tilt versus UNH. The Wildcats have the number one singles player in the Yankee Conference in the person of Bill Goodwin. He is a senior and has earned that title the past two seasons.

As for Tufts, UMass' opponent on Monday, not a great deal of trouble is anticipated and after the three-day weekend dust has settled.

Hoopsters Pick 'All-Opponent

UMass' basketball team selected two seniors and three juniors to its 1969 - 70 all-opponent team. Rhode Island placed two players, senior forward John Fultz and senior center Claude English. Gary Brell, 6'6 forward from Marquette, stellar - BC guard Jim O'Brien and speedy guard Steve Bilsky of Penn round out the first team. The last three are all juniors. The second team comprised Corky Calhoun (F-Penn), Bob Morse (F-Penn), Ric Cobb (C-Marq), Jeff Sewell (G-Marq)

Golf Swings vs. Vt., NH

After winning their first two matches, the UMass golf team returns today for its first match of the season on its own course, The Orchards Golf Course. The opposition will be provided by Vermont at 1:30 p.m. and it will be the first Conference match of the year for the golfers.

On Monday, the squad travels to Portsmouth, N.H. to play UNH. Coach Dick Page plans to make a few changes against the Wildcat team by playing both Mike Minkos and Erik Filsinger. "I want to see if they will help at all," Page explained.

Crew Faces Toughies LaSalle and WPI

LaSalle and Worcester Polytech will provide stiff opposition for the crew club Saturday in a home race on the Connecticut River. Races will begin at 1 p.m. As a sidelight Amherst College will host Marist College at the same time.

UMass, riding high after an opening day sweep of Wesleyan, will be severely tested by both the Philadelphia (LaSalle) and Worcester outfits.

LaSalle has always been tough, having won the Dad Vail Championships more than any other school. Coach George Hines will bring three well-drilled, experienced crews to Amherst.

Open water to row on year round greatly advantages the LaSalle boats. Worcester Tech presents a different picture, having to contend with the late ice breakings on Lake Quinnsigamond. However, Dick Olsen has seven returning members from last year's Vail semi-finalists who came within two seconds of UMass. This group is hungry to best the Redmen and will be tough.

On the UMass side of the ledger the picture is always changing. Coach Mike Faherty will go with the same varsity boats. The three sophomores, Kevin O'Brien, Bob Weimar and Jack Appel, performed well under fire last week and another big job is expected from this group as well as from the veterans. A back injury to stroke Appel has the boat concerned.

The junior varsity boat has to be shuffled in an effort to get more speed. Scott Cline has been moved to number four with big freshman Al Flanders being inserted into the number six seat. Soph Bob Jayes will handle the coxswain responsibilities.

Frosh coach Larry Dean has reshuffled his boatings for Saturday. No definite seatings are available yet. The second frosh will entertain their counterparts from Amherst and Marist in a special second frosh race.

Coach Faherty is optimistic about the club's chances: "We're moving pretty well. These teams are much stronger than the Wesleyan crews last week. We will need big efforts in all contests."

Redman Nine Hosts Vermont in Weekend Series

Catamounts Pose Serious Challenge to UMass' YC Crown

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Vermont's Catamounts arrived Thursday morning at UMass to prepare for an important weekend baseball series with the Redmen. The first game is Friday at 3 p.m., while the second game is on Saturday at 1 p.m.

Under second-year coach Doug Holmquist, the Catamounts appear to be the most serious challenger to take away the Redmen's Yankee Conference crown. Only 7-9 in 1968, Vermont improved to 13-9 last year and is currently supporting a 5-2 record.

Despite its impressive beginning Holmquist is a bit apprehensive about the weekend series. The team has not played since March 30 and most of its practice time since then has been conducted in Gardner-Collins Cage, because the campus has been beseiged by bad weather.

Prior to the Catamounts' southern trip, Holmquist felt hitting, or rather lack of it, would be his team's biggest problem. Surprisingly the team batted .289, despite the cold weather.

Leading the staff are juniors George Smith and Dave Zehnacker, and senior Steve Yanagi. Smith picked up three wins (no losses) and compiled an impressive 1.15 ERA on the southern trip. Zehnacker, the Hoyt Wilhelm of the Vermont staff with his dancing knuckler has a 1-1 record. His knuckler hasn't been dancing much this spring considering the fact that he has a 5.54 ERA.

Yanagi, a converted infielder, has a blazing fastball and didn't allow a run in the 16 innings he worked down South. Probable starters for the Catamounts will be Smith and Zehnacker with Yanagi being held for relief work.

The Redmen will probably counter with Don Anderson and lefty Lou Colabello. UMass bats, held in check by Tufts, exploded Wednesday against AIC, as they bombed the Yellow Jackets, 12-3. Hitting stars were Hosea Kelly, Steve Rogers and Ray Ellerbrook.

Despite their surprising offensive power, the real strength of the Catamounts lies with their pitching. During their southern trip, Vermont limited the opposition to 27 runs and a stingy .170 batting average.

Lacrosse Team Chases 17th in a Row at Home vs. Tufts

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Asst Sports Editor

Off and running again after trouncing Middlebury, 17-3, on Wednesday, the UMass lacrosse team will attempt to continue its winning ways Saturday when it plays host to Tufts at 2 p.m.

Winners af 16 in a row and 21 of their last 22, the stickers were quite impressive in their opening game win. All-American Tom Malone, who holds the school scoring record with 88 points, had nine points against the Panthers with five goals and four assists.

Also deserving credit in the sticker's romp were sophomore attackmen Paul Ritch and Bob Waters who were trying to take the place of All-American Kevin O'Connor and other high scorers from last year's squad. Ritch contributed four goals and an assist and Waters hit for two goals and an assist as the Redmen controlled the game most of the way.

Holding a team as good as Middlebury to only three tallies means that both goalie Bruce Crawford, playing in his first varsity contest, and the defense did their jobs well.

As far as Tufts is concerned, UMass should not take the Jumbos too lightly. Although they may not make many scores themselves, Tufts is especially strong defensively this season. Goalie John Heck, though only a sophomore, is highly regarded and could make things difficult for the high scoring Redmen.

Heck gets ample help from defensemen John Chiungos and co-captain John Beatley. Both are experienced players and could give Malone and Co. a tough afternoon.

However, although they may limit their opponents scoring, the Jumbos have problems of their own putting the ball in the net. Coach Joe Lauletta is counting sophomore attackmen John Bate, Scott Griswald, and Brandon Reid for his offense along with a few sophomore midfield middies. Jim Eacott, the other co-captain will start as one of the middies and Lauletta hopes that the senior can spur the offense from this position.

Whether or not he can do this remains to be seen. In their most recent action, the Jumbos were dumped by the powerful Lord Jeffs of Amherst on Wednesday.

Coach Dick Garber will probably go with the same lineup that worked so well against Middlebury. That would mean that Malone, Ritch, and Waters would play attack. The first midfield would be comprised of John Gannon, Bob LaChance, and Lou Marinacci.

The second midfield will probably be Dana Stone, Tim Bosworth and Larry Diamond. Dale Bassuchas, Paul Schacter and Phil Sheridan make up the third line.

Bob Florin, who had a goal and an assist in the season's opener, also should see a great deal of action.

Tracksters Face New England's Best at B.C. Relays

By EARLE BARROLL
Sports Day Editor

Boston College is the destination of the UMass track team where it will be competing tomorrow in the annual Boston College Relays, which brings together the top track teams in New England, in a meet spiced by the variety of events and the excellence of top notch competition.

In a meet of this sort tean depth is the key to success in the final point standings. Each event is a combined effort of the performers in that particular event. For example, in the shot put, as in the other field events there are three entries from each team. The combined efforts of the three are totaled and the winner is determined from their combined score. The running events are all four man relay teams.

Coach O'Brien plans to use this meet as an opportunity for some team members to compete in events they've never competed in to gain experience needed for the remainder of the track schedule.

In the weight events Eddie Arcaro, Dave Baker, Bruce Bursey, and Jim Barr will be dividing the chores in the discus and hammer throw relays. Arcaro will also see action in the open shot put.

Cal Carpenter and Eddie Shaughnessey, who is coming off a victory last week at NU will be competing in the high jump along with another jumper to be decided on tomorrow.

Dave Canterbury, Jim Graves, and Shaughnessey will be long jumping in the meet tomorrow. Coach O'Brien feels that this team has a good chance of placing high up in the standings.

The final field event relay will see Dave Robertson, Rocco Pettito, and Baker combining efforts in the javelin.

The 440 yard relay team will be comprised of hurdlers Gerry Spellman and Graves, long jumper Canterbury and sprinter Dave Marble who will be performing according to coach O'Brien at about 60 percent health. Normally Walter Mayo and Ron Harris would be running in this event with Graves and Marble, but they have been hampered by injuries.

The distance medley relay team will have Ron Wayne leading off with a half mile, to be followed by Jack Olsen with a quarter mile leg, Larry Paulson with a three-quarter mile leg, and Bruce Blackburn anchoring the team with a mile run.

The two outstanding Redman relay teams that will compete tomorrow are the mile and two mile tandems. The mile team features Spellman, Bill Donaldson, Al Mangan, and Dave Evans. Mangan will come back to lead off the two mile team. Wayne will run the second leg, Arnie Morse the third, and Evans will anchor this team.

Spellman will be getting a shot at the best 440 yard intermediate hurdlers in N.E. when he competes in that event in a special invitational race. This will make three events that he will compete in tomorrow.

In an open 3000 meter steeplechase Tom Derderian, Rich Tashjian, Don Dunsky, and Dick Bell will represent the Redmen against some of the top steeplechasers in New England.

Northeastern and Connecticut, two familiar schools to UMass track buffs, are the favorite teams, with the Redmen not far behind.

MARATHON MEMOS - Monday is Patriots Day and for many that means a day of rest. But for juniors Derderian, Joel Fox, Tashjian and Dave Eiben and freshmen Tom Jasmin and Bob Sullivan, Monday is Boston Marathon day. These six men have been training for a long time for this 26 mile 385 yard run and each is aiming towards a personal best. They are all veterans of this event as each one has competed before in the run from Hopkinton to Boston.

The mighty Connecticut flows down through Vermont's lushness until it reaches the placid little town of Brattleboro. There the concerned citizenry have erected a temple devoted to the purification of the crystalline waters of this majestic and forceful waterway. In its own little way, this is a good thing, as can be seen in this picture taken outside the Brattleboro Water Pollution Plant. Photo by Pat Lempart.

Earth Day Descends Tomorrow

Americans are preparing for Earth Day rallies, clean-ups, teach-ins and traffic bans, amid warnings that the problems of pollution must not be forgotten after Wednesday's demonstrations are over.

Originally proposed by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., Earth Day has drawn support from ecologists, educators, politicians, students and ordinary citizens.

Some environmental activists however, are concerned people will forget that the dirty environment is a continuing problem.

"We're hoping to survive April 22, Earth Day, and we're praying for April 23," said Gary Soucie, executive director of Friends of Earth in New York.

Dr. Kenneth E. F. Watt, professor of zoology at the University of California, told students at Swathmore College in Pennsylvania, "The history of movements like this is not very promising. We had great movements on civil rights and the Vietnamese war. The problems are still with us, but the movments have died away."

He added, however, that "about five years from now it will become increasingly clear. . .that what we ecologists are saying now is true, and then the political pressure for change will become inexorable."

Many colleges are sponsoring teach-ins, both for students and community residents.

"We hope that each participant, supplied with some of the facts about environmental problems in his own back yard, will commit himself to a program of action," said Frank Renshaw, chairman of a teach-in sponsored by five Cincinnati colleges.

Ohio University in Athens has scheduled speeches by 21 scientists and ecologists, an antipollution parade and a clean-up of the campus and the surrounding area.

Marches and rallies were held in Cleveland Monday and a group of students from the Cooper School of Art strung banners over the main routes into town saying, "Welcome to the 5th dirtiest city."

Students and employees at DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind., are being asked to walk to classes Wednesday to dramatize the pollution caused by auto fumes. An ecology class is sponsoring a bus tour to show participants good and bad spots in the community.

Ball State University students are building a tower of throwaway cans at the Muncie, Ind., campus and plan a folk festival around it Wednesday night.

Traffic bans will mark Earth Day in New York City and Philadelphia.

In New York, Fifth Avenue will be closed for 45 blocks from noon to 2 p.m. and sections of 14th Street will be closed from noon to midnight. There will be rallies, marches and demonstrations of electric cars, and many merchants plan outdoor displays.

Philadelphia is closing part of Chestnut Street, a main east-west thoroughfare, Tuesday from noon to 2 p.m. and will ban traffic Wednesday from West River Drive a commuting route from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

San Francisco is conducting a Save-the-Bay campaign to cut pollution in the area. "The bay is a body of water to be cherished," said campaign sponsors, " a soothing contrast to the clanging bustle of urban life."

In Virginia, Gov. Linwood Holton signed Monday a proclamation declaring this Environmental Awareness Week and urging efforts "to develop in our citizenry and in public bodies an awareness of the dangers these problems pose to the quality of human life."

CEQ Schedule Of Events

The Coalition for Environmental Quality has arranged the following schedule of events to celebrate Earth Day. Earth Day, which will be held nation-wide tomorrow is an attempt to get people to stop and look at what kind of a mess the world is in. Demonstrations of all sorts are being held to dramatize the plight of the earth. Pollution has gotten to the point where the very existence of man on this planet cannot continue unless immediate measures are taken to clean up the mess. The CEQ is presenting these events as part of this movement.

Bruce Hoadley, Wood Technologist. Joseph Larson, Wildlife Bilogist, James McCann, Fisheries Biologist and Carlo Valone, Graduate student.

The panel is designed to provide an opportunity to address questions to a cross section of resource specialists concerning the impact of manipulating the land and water for human wants. What will be the effect of our national forest policy? What are the effects of strip-mining? Can the earth survivie this devastating attack by contamination of our natural resources? These and many more questions will be answered in the course of this presentation. Everyone is welcome.

Dorm Opening Threatened

By DAVID WILLIAMS
Tuesday Issue Editor

A strike by the carpenters and laborers working on the new Northeast dorms may affect the opening of the dorms in September if the strike is not resolved within three weeks. This was reported last night by Mr. Bruce Cochrane, assistant to the Dean of Students.

Presently, there are three dorms under construction in Northeast but only two of them would be ready in September if the strike were to end soon. Cochrane said that as far as plans for opening the third dorm go, "They have been flung out the window."

The opening of these dorms is vital to the University. Fifteen hundred more students must be accommodated next semester and the possibility that the opening of school will be pushed back to the middle of September is being considered. However, Cochrane insists that the chances of this occurring are very remote.

The contractor for the job, D. O'Connell and Sons, have a September first committment for having the dorms ready and Cochrane says, "We have all confidence in him (O'Connell) that he will get the job done."

If the dorms are not ready then students may be housed in lounge areas in other dorms or possibly in the soon to be opened Campus Center. O'Connell has sent all his men out on a two week vacation which ends to day and it is hoped that the Federal mediator in the case can help the unions and O'Connell to reach an agreement in the very near future.

O'Connell has a number of projects going on campus including the Campus Center, the Graduate Research Center and the new Library. Cochrane was all praise for O'Connell, saying "If anyone can do it, O'Connell can. . .he has never failed us."

The new Northeast dorms may not be open when school begins next year. Unless of course the carpenters and laborers come to an agreement with the contractor. Shown is one of the dorms as it looked a month ago, slightly bent out of shape by Pat's fish-eye. (MDC photo by Pat Lempart)

Baha'is Explore Human Reality

In the face of world-wide societal collapse, the continued progress toward world policy is being undertaken by Baha'i around the world. This process of universal fermentation is essentially two-fold. On the one hand we note a disruptive force wherein civilization refuses to answer the expectation of a New Age. And, on the other hand, we note an integrative force, the Baha'i Faith, which unfolds a system which can be a pattern for fermenting universality and the oneness of mankind, nations, and hearts everywhere.

A three-day exploration into the human reality will be sponsored by the Baha'i Association of the University of Massachusetts. Between 11:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. there will be daily programs including films, discussion groups, and music. These marathon sessions will be held in the Colonial Room of the Student Union and will be highlighted by feature speakers on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights.

This evening, Dr. Daniel C. Jordan, photo at right, currently Professor of Education and Director of the Center for the Study of Aesthetics at the University of Mass., will convey the message of the Baha'i Faith as it applies to human behavior and the process "On Becoming Your True Self". Dr. Jordan was born in Nebraska, is now married with two children, and is vice-chairman of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States. He was former of the Institute for Human Research at Indiana State School of Education, holds several degrees in music and psychology, served in the military (1956-58), and has lectured and traveled extensively throughout the world.

Moreover, Dr. Jordan's experience as a Baha'i and as an educator will be offered to the public this Tuesday evening April 21st in the Commonwealth Room of the Union, and his topic shall be "The Inestimable Value of You".

On Friday evening there will be campus-wide firesides - an opportunity for ALL at open discussion and inquiry into the tenents of the Baha'i Faith. Locations are as follows: Webster House - 7th floor, 8:00 p.m.; Knowlton House-Main lobby lounge, 8:00 p.m.; Van Meter 8:00 p.m.; Washington Tower, 8:00 p.m.

The Baha'i Faith is not only an approaching possibility but a necessary outcome in crushing forces now operating in the world. The Oneness of mankind is the cornerstone of Baha'u'llah's all-embracing dominion and the Baha'i community sincerely hopes you will come, share with us, and help us erect a New Race of Men.

UMass Passes Million Mark

The University of Massachusetts has now passed the $1 million a year mark in research grants dealing with problems of the environment.

Long before environmental quality became a priority public issue, the University had begun research in three major areas - water pollution and supply, the effect of pesticides on the ecology and environmental planning. Today UMass researchers are working in these areas and others under more than two dozen grants from federal, state and other sources.

Studies began three years ago at UMass, for example, on an environmental problem that few people even today are aware of - eutrophication, or over-enrichment of lakes and ponds by plant nutrients that come from man's wastes. These nutrients feed massive plant growth that can choke a body of water.

Under direction of the UMass Water Resources Research Center, four UMass teams supported by four federal grants are tackling eutrophication. Dr. Warren Litsky, Commonwealth Professor of microbiology, is studying ways in which controlled intervention into the microbial process of a body of water might arrest the growth of the algae that trigger the plant growth chain.

A chemical solution to the eutrophication problem is being sought by UMass chemist O.T. Zajicek, heading a team concerned with practical ways of utilizing special ion-exchange resins to remove excessive plant nutrients. In another approach, botanists under Professor Robert B. Livingston are studying how rooted aquatic plants trap nutrient materials. The fourth team is headed by environmental engineering Professor Tsuan H. Feng and seeks ways to eliminate the bottom deposits that are a major eutrophication factor.

Research on water supply and pollution is going on at UMass laboratories under a dozen other grants. Many of them are management and planning projects aimed at finding optimum procedures for use of water supplies and wetlands. Government Professor ...ving Howards, for example, is studying the role that political decision-makers and others play in water resource management. Working on a planning model for public management of fresh water wetlands is a group headed by Joseph S. Larson of the forestry and wildlife management department.

Resource planner Carl A. Carlozzi is directing three simultaneous studies. One deals with the changes that have affected urban rivers, the second with the ecology and esthetics of wetlands associated with interstate highways and the third is seeking a planning model for small watersheds subject to multiple demands. John Schaake of the civil engineering department is concentrating on planning for capacity expansion of water distribution networks.

In the area of clean water engineering, environmental engineer Donald D. Adrian heads two projects, one a planning study for optimum waste management treatment systems and the other seeking new ways to deal with the waste solids produced by water treatment processes.

One of four water quality projects headed by Dr. Tsuan H. Feng head of the UMass environmental engineering program, is a study of the reverse osmosis membrane process and its possible application to large-scale water treatment. Another UMass engineer, George R. Higgins, is doing a long-range study on conditions that affect the yield of water reservoirs.

In the pesticide area, microbiologist Haim B. Gunner is studying how the residues of certain pesticides affect the microbial ecology of soil. In another project, he heads a study of the microbial breakdown of organic pollutants of industrial origin. Directing a study of the effect of pesticide residues on larval marine fish is Charles F. Cole of the forestry and wildlife department.

The University also has a long-standing research project going on ocean beach erosion, directed by geologist Miles O. Hayes; and an air pollution study under W. Leigh Short of the chemical engineering department researching a new method of removing pollutants from stack gases.

Plans are now under consideration at the Amherst campus to gather all environmental research study and service functions under a broadly-based interdisciplinary center to deal with all phases of man and his environment.

Recruitment for the Red Cross Campus Blood Drive will occur the week of April 21st-24th, and April 27th and 28th in the Student Union lobby. Pledges may be made by people between the ages of 18 and 65 who weigh 110 lbs and over. Those who donate blood will become members of the Red Cross Insurance program, under which they are eligible for free blood for themselves and their immediate families for the duration of one year.

The drive, sponsored by Gamma Sigma Sigma, Alpha Phi Omega and the University Women (in co-operation with Hampshire County Public Health), will be held May 5th, 6th and 7th. Come pledge to give blood. . .it is urgently needed!

The Nation and The World

NIXON TO SPEAK ON TROOP CUTS

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) - Reporting on the Vietnam war for the first time this year, President Nixon briefs the nation Monday night on plans to gradually cut U. S. forces in the war zone below the 400,000 level.

Nixon asked major television and radio networks for 10 to 15 minutes of air time at 9 p.m. EST.

Because of fast moving developments in Southeast Asia since the chief executive last made a similar address Dec. 15, it was expected he would touch on the fluid situations in Laos and Cambodia as well as Vietnam.

As for further troop withdrawals, Nixon was believed ready to call for the return of about 50,000 additional men in the months just ahead.

Pentagon sources in Washington said Nixon was expected to order the withdrawal of 50,000 more troops in the next four months.

At present there are 429,000 uniformed Americans in South Vietnam, or, 5,000 fewer than would be permitted under the most recent authorized ceiling. Some 115,000 men have been withdrawn since the gradual pullout began last June.

Soviet Arms On Increase-Laird

NEW YORK (AP) - Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird declared Monday that the United States can go only so far toward fostering an arms limitation pact with Russia in view of the Soviet Union's "increased weapon deployments."

"We are literally at the edge of prudent risk," Laird said, in again rejecting agruments that this nation should unilaterally hold up the impending deployment of multiple independently targetable reentry vehicles - MIRVs- and the Safeguard ABM missile system.

"If the Soviet strategic offensive buildup continues, the risk to our nation will become too great to sustain without major offsetting actions," Laird said at the 70th annual meeting of The Associated Press, which each year marks the opening of Newspaper Week in New York.

In his speech, Laird sought to reinforce previously expressed opinion that deployment of MIRV and ABM missiles will give the Nixon administration time to pursue the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks - SALT - with Russia without initiating new nuclear weapons systems.

Laird expressed hope for the success of the SALT meeting at Vienna, and said of the problem of weapons buildup:

"The place to resolve these issues is at the conference table with the Soviets. Let us try to find out at the conference table the meaning of the Soviet Union's increased weapon deployments and let us conduct these important negotiations with full recognition of these continuing Soviet deployments."

Critics have contended MIRV and the ABM system will only heat up the arms race. To this, Laird replied that these weapons are essential if the United States is to preserve a nuclear force capable of deterring Russian attack - the ABM by protecting land-based U.S. missiles and bombers from surprise attack, and MIRV by assuring that land-based and submarine launched missiles can overwhelm Soviet defenses.

Laird defined the U. S. aim as a posture of effective deterrence and added: "We obviously could recognize as legitimate a Soviet desire for a comparable deterrent to protect its interests."

But the Pentagon chieftain said that for the past five years Russian "has engaged in a major effort to change the balance of power."

"A clear strategic superiority on the part of the Soviet Union would affect our interests and our obligations throughout the world," Laird continued. "The United States has virtually been in neutral gear in the deployment of strategic offensive forces, while the Soviet Union has moved into high gear in both deployment and development of strategic nuclear weapons.

In the period since 1965, Laird said Russia had increased its long-range nuclear weapon launchers from 500 to about 1,700 and virtually quadrupled the total nuclear megaton power of its strategic forces.

In contrast, the secretary claimed the United States has not added to its 1,710 long-range nuclear missile launchers during that period.

NEW YORK (AP) - A six-year-old English Spaniel named Penny shared a $100,000 grand prize in the New York State lottery Monday.

"I think we'll just put the money in the kitty," said Penny's owner, Mrs. Harry Wentworth of Albany, who held the other half of the ticket. "When we need some, we'll use it."

Mrs. Wentworth, a supervisor in a meat-packing plant, said, "I always buy two lottery tickets every month: one for my husband and another one for Penny and myself for goodluck."

The State Tax Department said it would make out the winning check to "Marge and Penny Wentworth." A spokesman said it would be up to the bank to decide on cashing procedures and up to the Internal Revenue Service how to tax the dog for her part of the winnings.

Carswell Will Run For Senate

MIAMI (AP) - Judge G. Harrold Carswell announced Monday he will run for the U. S. Senate, which two weeks ago rejected his nomination as an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

Florida Lt. Gov. Ray Osborne made the announcement at a news conference attended by Carswell and top party leaders.

Carswell said he had just resigned from the U. S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals to seek the seat being vacated by retiring U. S. Sen. Spessard Holland, a Democrat.

If you think you're getting a great shave with a razor blade, feel your face.

A razor blade can give you a good, close shave on the easy parts of your face.

Like your cheeks. Because your cheeks are almost flat, like a razor blade.

But what about the hard-to-shave parts of your face?

Feel your neck

Feel how your beard grows down on part of your neck? And up on another part? (Some beards even grow sideways.)

To give you a close, comfortable shave on your neck, we designed the Norelco Tripleheader with 18 self-sharpening rotary blades that shave in every direction.

Feel your chin

The Norelco Tripleheader has 3 Microgroove™ shaving heads that float to follow the curves of your chin.

The heads go in where your chin goes in, and out where your chin goes out. To give you a really close shave, without irritating your skin. (In independent tests, the Tripleheader shaved as close or closer than a stainless steel blade in 2 out of 3 shaves.)

Feel your upper lip

The hard thing about shaving your upper lip with a razor blade is shaving close enough.

Again, the unique Norelco design lets you maneuver around your nose and mouth, to shave your beard in every direction.

Feel your sideburns

The biggest problem with shaving sideburns is to get them straight, and even on both sides.

The Norelco Tripleheader has a pop-up trimmer that lets you see exactly what you're trimming. So it's a lot harder to make a mistake.

Now, run your hand over your whole face.

If your beard feels uneven, maybe you should be shaving with a Norelco Tripleheader.

It comes in two models. The Cord Model Tripleheader (with easy flip-top cleaning). And the new Rechargeable Tripleheader (the shaver that gives you up to twice as many shaves per charge as any other rechargeable). Either one will give your face a whole new feel.

Conscription Corner

A weekly column of draft questions and answers from The Valley Peace Center.

QUESTION: My father says that people have been protesting against war and the draft from time immemorial. I say that there are many more protests now and that my generation is the first to take a really firm stand on these matters. Who's right?

ANSWER: Your father. All thru history there have been those opposed to warfare and to forcible military conscription. Our country has never had a draft in peace time until the last two decades, during the so-called Cold War against Communism. It is only recently that Congress and the American people have tolerated peace-time conscription. Many of today's citizens are now in the United States because their grandfathers and great grandfathers left Europe to avoid compulsory military service. The major religions have in the past been opposed to warfare, narrow nationalism, and conscription. The great words "Thou shalt not kill" and "Blessed are the peacemakers" are ancient moral directives which transcend Draft Board directives.

QUESTION: If I think I have been wrongly classified by my local board, what are my rights of appeal?

ANSWER: Every time you are classified by your local board, whether it is your first classification or a later one, you have at least two rights: a Personal Appearance before your board and an appeal to the State Appeal Board. In addition, if you have a medical condition which might entitle you to a I-Y deferment, the local board must grant your request for an interview with its Medical Advisor (one is required for each local board; you can have this interview transferred if traveling to your board's Medical Advisor would be a hardship). The Medical Advisor considers all evidence submitted to him (you should have copies of all documents, physician's letters, medical reports, etc.) and makes a recommendation to the board. If he considers you unfit for military service, the local board can reclassify you I-Y or IV-F directly, without requiring you to report for an armed forces physical examination. You are also entitled to an interview with the local board's Government Appeal Agent who is supposed to be "equally diligent in protecting the interests of the Government and the rights of the registrant in all matters." In actual practice, the Appeal Agents cannot be counted on for much help, but occasionally Appeal Agents (who are usually lawyers serving without pay) know enough about recent court cases to help with legal technicalities and can recommend that your classification be reopened or brought to the State Appeal Board if an error has been made by the local board.

After being classified or reclassified you have 30 days to request a Personal Appearance. No special form is necessary; just write a letter saying "I request a personal appearance," although it is helpful to say why you think your present classification is wrong, what you are asking for, and what evidence there is to support your claim. The 30-day limit is important because Selective Service Regulations discourage local boards from granting late requests. You should discuss your Personal Appearance with a draft counselor in advance of the hearing in order to prepare your case. You should also take a witness (even though he will probably be refused admission). The Personal Appearance can be a trying experience unless you are well prepared. At this time you are not allowed a lawyer to defend you, but some legal authorities consider this a violation of due process.

If you are still not granted the classification you believe you deserve, you have 30 days following the Personal Appearance to appeal (30 days after the board mails you a new classification card) to the State Appeal Board. The Appeal Agent and the State Director of Selective Service also have this power if you notify them, and your employer may also appeal if you have requested an occupational deferment (II-A). You may submit new evidence in support of your claim, but you cannot appear in person before the State Appeal Board; it considers only the written information it receives from you, the local board, your doctor, your minister, your employer, your college, etc.

If the State Appeal Board reaches a unanimous decision you have no further right to appeal. But even then you can approach the State Director of Selective Service or the National Director for his intervention. The few registrants who receive a split vote at the State level have the right to a Presidential appeal, for which you must apply in writing within 30 days.

Many people who are opposed to military service, perhaps most people, are unaware of their rights and fail to take advantage of them. One way to put pressure on the System is to use it completely, to make it work as it ought to work, to exercise all your rights before you submit.

YOUTH-NARC Needs Volunteers

The Hampshire County Association for Retarded Children is looking for any and all young people who are interested in working with retarded children. To this end there will be a meeting Wednesday, April 22, of YOUTH – Narc, Youth Organized and United to Help - National Association for Retarded Children. The meeting will be held at the Unitarian Church, Main Street, Northampton, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The purpose of the meeting is to acquaint all those area young folk with this common interest and aim with one another and to organize them as Hampshire County Youth-Narc, a chapter of the National and State Youth Association for the Retarded.

Mrs. Margaret Lax, Youth-Narc Advisor, will show slides of young people working with the retarded and Massachusetts Youth-Narc president Bob Stanton will be present.

All area young people already working in a program for the retarded are very welcome to come without further involvement in programs.

Mary Lyon Clams Up

Here is good news for those who are tired of too much noise in their dorm: Mary Lyon is forming a quiet corridor. The corridor should have a cordial atmosphere where residents should experience mutual consideration and respect. For this purpose, members will meet early next semester to agree on quiet hours, open house policy, and other matters. We hope that working together we can create a comfortable, friendly living experience for all of us.

Since room choosing will be coming soon, those interested in living on the corridor or more information should contact Jane Cochran in room 214, Mary Lyon House this week.

And A Power Plant Highlight The Weekend

By anyone's standards, this was a successful weekend for anyone who had anything to do. Southwest Weekend provided a backdrop for just about any kind of event you might have been interested in. SAM held a "Bounce for Beats" outside the Little Hatch which furnished live music and lively basketballs which were bounced by the brothers to collect money for the Heart Fund. Friday night found the Glass Onion in the Union and a mini-Woodstock on the field across from Southwest. Saturday dawned on a field full of weary but happy rock fans. During the day the crowd grew and at one point contained, in the words of a rather straight-looking by-stander, "Enough freaks to last this place a million years." Gracie and the Airplane landed in the Cage Saturday night and thrilled two full houses with a fantastic show. On a more serious note, concerned people gathered in Vernon, Vermont to protest the construction of a nuclear powe plant which threatens life in the Valley. The music continued through until Sunday, the day of THE PICNIC. One guy was grooving so well he actually became the music. and tore all his clothes off (almost). He later confessed, "I like wine." It wasn't hard to tell. Pancakes by the thousands were practically inhaled during the pancake eating contest, after which the stomachs of four of the contestants were reported to have slipped to somewhere near their ankles. For Earth Day

If a hundred years ago someone said that the water and air of the earth would be polluted by man, that person would have been thought to be a lunatic. Yet, today that statement brings the response: "So what else is new?" Tomorrow, hopefully, will be a step in bringing our environment back to where it was in 1870.

However, accomplishing this goal is going to be a tedious and possibly impossible task. Many of the natural cycles of our planet have been tampered with and are in danger of being beyond repair. There are also the catastrophic and doomsday theories, which many knowledgeable scientists believe in. Among them it is predicted that there will be temperature inversion in at least one major city within the next ten or fifteen years and the 2020 theory. According to it, most of the planktum, which produces a major portion of our oxygen, will be destroyed during the next 50 years, because of our use of the wonderous panacea for insects- DDT. The chemical winds up in the ground and eventually winds up in our rivers and streams which lead it to the oceans. Of course, we will wait until it is too late to do something, like finding a substitute for planktum and deploy it around the globe. It might be too late to save the planktum already.

When I was back home in New York over Spring break, a cabbie complained to me that on April the 22nd, Fifth Avenue and 14th Street would be closed to cars because of a ridiculous holiday called Earth Day; last week one of my profs thought that we were joking about there being an Earth Day. When we finally convinced him, he dismissed the day as a joke. Maybe it will turn out to be a joke, but if it does it will be a sick one and not a funny one, because there is nothing humorous about man destroying his environment and himself.

Sunbathing is fun, but what happens when there is too much pollution for the sun to get through? Spending a few hundred dollars for anti-pollution devices is a burden, but what happens when they are no longer necessary because it is too late? The purpose of Earth Day is to bring everybody's attention to the seriousness of the problem and the possible consequences of it if no major action is taken and taken swiftly.

If Earth Day brings to majority of our population the nature of the calamity threatening us perhaps action will be taken in Washington. Then, if our leaders act, maybe those in Moscow and around the rest of the globe will too. The future Earth Days will be good natured jokes.

Change It Or Lose It

"The wave of riots by young people in cities," said a recent article in the 'Economist.' "which began in American ghettos in 1964 and reached a climax in the universities of western Europe in 1968, served at least one purpose. It placed the new generation's demands on the agenda."

Has President Nixon really comprehended the issues concerning young Americans? Below are several quotations which have appeared in recent publications.

ITEM: Wall St. Journal, Oct., 3, 1969:: "NIXONITES PONDER ways to cool student unrest. Suggestions made at a White House meeting this week: Encouraging more and earlier specialization in technical, professional fields where students from college to technical or vocational training. But the talk is merely talk so far."

ITEM: "It may be," continued the Economist, "that 1968 will turn out to have been our century's 1848. It could have been the year in which a powerful revolutionary fright set in motion the process of self-examination which eventually deflected the urge for a general blow up." (Jan. 31, 1970)

ITEM: New York Times, Oct. 26, 1969: VICE PRESIDENT SPIRO T. AGNEW, EXPLAINING WHY HE FORBADE HIS DAUGHTER TO MARCH IN SUPPORT OF THE VIETNAM MORATORIUM: "She was unhappy for a day, but she got over it. Parental-type power must be exercised. Some parents have forgotten how."

ITEM: "The history of the United States, since 1945, like that of any other democracy with an active foreign policy, has followed a predictable cycle of outward-looking ebullience followed, when the ebullience runs into trouble, by a period of inward-looking retrenchment. Mr. Eisenhower saw his presidency as, in one sense, a period of rest and recuperation after the Koren war. Mr. Nixon, who learned his lessons under Mr. Eisenhower, intends to give them another breather now." Economist, Feb. 21, 1970.

ITEM: Wall St. Journal, Nov., 1969: "CONGRESS DOVES squirm, caught for now between Nixon and antiwar militants. . .

"Most Congressmen who backed the Oct. 15 Moratorium shy away from next week's march on Washington. Democratic Reps. Burton of California, Ryan of New York are among the few taking part; New Yorker Lowenstein supports the protests - with obvious misgivings about trouble. New York Sen. Goodell, a GOP dove, will be out of town during most of all of the demonstrations. One liberal admits being 'scared to death' of violence.

"Justice Dept. men fear militant protestors may spark disturbances in D.C. Negro neighborhoods. That's way officials aim to keep the Washington demonstrations away from slum areas."

"Young people do seek a comprehensive view of life, i.e., a philosophy, they do seek meaning, purpose, ideals - and most of them take what they can get. It is in their teens and early twenties that most people seek philosophical answers and set their premises, for good or evil, for the rest of their lives. Some never reach that stage; some never give up the quest; but the majority are open to the voice of philosophy for a few brief years. These last are the permanent, if not innocent, victims of modern philosophy.

"They are not independent thinkers nor intellectual originators; they are unable to answer or withstand the flood of modern sophistries. So some of them give up after one or two unintelligible courses, convinced that thinking is a waste of time - and turn into lethargic cynics or stultifying Babbitts by the time they reach twenty-five. Others accept what they hear; they accept it blindly and literally; these are today's activists." (Page 250)

One of the first orders of business which Franklin Delano Roosevelt faced as he assumed the office of President in 1933 was a march on Washington of the Bonus Expeditionary Force.

". . .Instead of the hostility of police and Army, Roosevelt offered the veterans an Army camp, three meals a day, endless supplies of coffee and a large convention tent where the leaders could orate to their hearts' content. The Navy band played for the veterans; Army doctors ministered to their ills; dentists pulled their teeth; and President conferred with their leaders, and as a climax, Mrs. Roosevelt and Louis Howe drove out one rainy spring day in a blue convertible. While Howe dozed in the car, Mrs. Roosevelt walked through the ankle-deep mud and led the vets in singing 'There's A Long, Long trail A-Winding'. 'Hoover sent the Army,' said one veteran, 'Roosevelt sent his wife.'"

On Inhaling A Sewer

Automobiles, industrial and domestic smokestacks and incinerators are the instruments of the rape of the air we breathe.

A recent United State Senate report stated that the automobile accounts for around 60% of the national air pollution total and is as high as 85% of the total in some cities. The primary components of vehicular air pollution are carbon monoxide, oxides of nitrogen, lead, unburned and partially burned hydrocarbons, and oxidents. All told, motor vehicles dump more than 90 million tons of pollutants into the air annually. For every 1,000 gallons of gasoline used by an automobile, pollutants are emitted in the following amounts: 3,000 pounds of carbon monoxide, 200-400 pounds of hydrocarbons, and 50-100 pounds of nitrogen oxides.

Sufficient concentrations of these pollutants present definite health hazards. Carbon monoxide combines chemically with hemoglobin in blood and interferes with the blood's capacity to deliver life sustaining oxygen to the tissues. Most of the lead in our air comes from the burning of leaded "anti-knock" gasolines. Sufficient amounts of lead in the bloodstream interfere with the nervous and enzyme systems and can cause death. Researchers fear that a continual rise in concentrations of lead in the atmosphere may be such that lead intake by the body will exceed the rate that it is able to dispel the substance. Nitrogen oxides do not occur very often in nature and their introduction into the atmosphere can have an upsetting ecological effect. For instance, they get into water bodies and destroy algae, and they upset soil biosystems also.

A rising source of pollution in major cities is jet aircraft. Increased power, but especially the increase in traffic are the reasons. Los Angeles International Airport handled 90 flights a day in 1959, today it handles nearly 1,000 flights per day. Thus, jet aircraft exhausts, similar in nature to automobile exhausts, are becoming a significant source of pollution.

Industrial smokestacks are another serious problem. Sulfer compounds contribute to emphysema and respiratory illnesses and have direct economic effects in addition to the personal misery they cause. Sulfer in the air damages crops and corrodes buildings. Industry vents 12 million tons of sulfer into the air annually. This sulfer would be worth an estimated 1/2 billion dollars on the chemical market. This wastefulness continues while there was a 60% price increase for sulfer in the past five years. This situation is justified by arguing that if is still economically cheaper to extract sulfer from the earth than to recover the products of combustion and prevent the slow poisoning of nearby residents.

So all told around 200 million tons of pollutants find their way into the air annually. Mother Nature has ways of cleaning the atmosphere but she is being overworked and the future looks bleak. Current trends show increasing population which can be linked to higher fuel consumption and therefor increased concentrations of pollutants. Fuel consumption is rising 4% annually while the number of automobiles is increasing at a rate of 8%. It is clear that man-operated controls must be increased if we are to conquer this problem which may yet have urban dwellers wearing masks. Even more frightening is the Japanese practice of supplying traffic policemen with bottled oxygen for a whiff when grogginess threatens from the extreme concentration of dangerous gasses which build up at intersections.

Regardless of where we plan to live, the effects of our technology follow us. Lately even the big sky country of Montana has been polluted badly enough for citizens groups to become alarmed into protest action, and the legendary clear air of Arizona is often besmirched with the aerial sewage from processing plants, so much so, that as staunch a conservative as Barry Goldwater has made public statements indicating a desire for governmental regulation and enforcement against this rape of a priceless natural resource.

It goes without saying, of course, that cities create the most foul of our airsheads. Graduating from the University we may be moving to areas of high paying jobs only to find in some decades that we have moved, literally, into a death trap of sewage from our waters, and air. Northern New Jersey, for example, is almost perpetually enveloped in a cloud of foul air. It's almost like being hit with a wet diaper on some days, to step out of an air-conditioned executive suite into the "common air" which not everyone can afford to "condition" after its use by large industrial plants, automobiles, and dumps.

Think of this when you are offered a job in a highly industrialized area of the country. You may die years sooner or be incompacitated for your affluence. Think of this also when you are tempted by that El Dorado, or Continental, or 300 XL; you may be living more dangerously than you think, or than the advertising would lead you to believe.

Remember that all protoplasm is but a mixture of air, water, and the more solid substances of our world--foul them and you foul yourself--subtly, it's true, it isn't immediately obvious, but protoplasm is enexortably entwined in the biosphere of this planet, you cannot insulate yourself with wealth, power, or status from your biological identity.

Elters - Sheehan Presidential Race

It is with some hesitation that I draft a column on the Elters-Sheehan presidential race, for assessing in print the qualifications of contestants for office often leaves bruised feelings, and in this instance may generate charges of personal allegiances and self-interest. But I have devoted the larger part of my undergraduate career to the Senate, having served two terms, having been a close advisor to a subsequent administration, and having this past year devoted myself to reporting the Senate. My columns, appearing sporadically, have sought to address themselves to major issues of Senate policy: open house, the Washington peace march subsidization, the filling of the chancellorship, and the powers to be accorded to a University Senate. I am compelled, by my position and my past, to speak on who shall lead the Senate in a year certain to see fundamental change in University governance, certain to require of the Senate leadership skill in negotiation, vigorous leadership, and articulate persuasion if the student body is to attain its full and deserved measure of influence over policy.

There are a number of indications which, if properly read, ought to clearly indicate the degree to which a Sheehan presidency is nearly universally viewed with extreme apprehension: the personal sacrifices which some have been willing to make to forestall that occurance; the polyglot and spectrum-wide nature of Elters' support; and the undeclared (and for obvious reasons undeclarable) support of Elters by nearly all of the candidates for lesser office.

Academic Affairs Chairman Mark Smith, whose precipitous withdrawal from the race last week catapulted Elters into the contest, is a striking example of the aforementioned personal sacrifice. Here is a person who, as his withdrawal statement made quite clear, was repelled by the all-encompassing commitment which the Presidency would require of him; who was above all temperamentally unsuited to the demands of the office: he was able only by a supreme effort to visualize himself executing the often contentious duties of President. Yet he was willing to assume the burden as he said "under present circumstances", i.e. the Sheehan candidacy. Senator Smith in the end concluded that the Presidency would transform him into something that he was not, and did not wish to be, and he therefore withdrew.

Further in the matter of Vice President Elters declaring for re-election, the motivating factor was the fear of a defeated Sheehan sweeping into the Vice Presidency on a sympathy vote: to prevent this, Elters was willing to postpone his post-graduate career for a year. Needless to say, he is even more willing, if that is possible to make that sacrifice with the Presidency in the balance.

The nearly unanimous support which the Elters candidacy has received from current officers and committee chairmen, past chairmen and candidates for office, and current candidates for lesser office is not attributable, as has been charged, to the clandestine machinations of a power clique: the group plainly lacks the attributes of a clique, having neither unity of ideology not personal allegiance, encompassing radical and reactionary, defenders and detractors of the Olken presidency. Indeed, the only common denominator appears to be experience (with both the Senate and Senator Sheehan): Elters supporters comprise everyone who has advanced to a position of any prominence in the Senate. And I need hardly point out that it takes only modest talent and minimal effort to advance within the Senate.

Let me hasten to point out that I have not always been, as I am now, so unfavorably disposed to Senator Sheehan. Two summers ago, when he was planning his election to the Senate, I served him as an advisor of sorts, briefing him on the structure, traditions, and membership of the Senate. Throughout the subsequent Silverman presidency (68-9), I repeatedly defeaded Senator Sheehan's talents to the President, who had no use for him whatsoever. In the late Spring of 69, I vigorously opposed the intent of newly-elected President Balboni to remove Senator Sheehan from the Activities Committee chairmanship. I repeatedly and mistakenly argued to Senator Sheehan's detractors (who were legion) that, given the time and opportunity, he would develop his potential, mellow with experience, express himself with greater clarity and less verbal obfuscation. But by the Fall of 69, I had come to realize, through watching him perform on the Senate floor and in the Faculty Senate Student Affairs Committee, that his verbal obfuscation was but a sumptom of a pervasive meutal murkiness, that he had in fact reached if not exceeded the limits of his potential; that he was in sum altogether incapable of perceptive analysis, persuasive articulation, and any semblance of vision. I therefore at that time concurred with President Balboni's decision not to reappoint him either to his chairmanship or his position on Student Affairs.

It is by no means solely a negative reaction to Senator Sheehan which motivates my support for Elters; I without hesitation supported him four months ago in the special Vice-President election, though his opponent, Senator Albert (who is now supporting Elters) was and is a good friend. I believed then that Elters would insofar as a Vice-President could provide the Olken administration with visible and aggressive leadership. My belief has been justified. I believe that those who attended the Ballroom rent hike meetings, and who warmly responded to Elters' message, will affirm my belief: they heard him go beyond the issue of the moment to sharply challenge the underlying faults: "the whole philosophy of a Board of Trustees"; the advisory role to which students have been relegated; an administration which makes rather than simply implements policies. And they heard him call for the creation of a University Senate to direct rather than advise the administration, as "the only way we are going to humanize this institution."

I support the Elters candidacy because I believe him capable of providing the kind of articulate, vigorous and insightful leadership which the student body desperately needs in this year of transition from student advice to student power.

Abe Lincoln And Nadrock Of The North Are Alive In Southwest

Several days ago the University Master Planning Board voted unanimously not to allow the building of a "log cabin" (they must have flipped out when reading that) on the main walkway in Southwest. This had been proposed by miscellaneous crazies (Free U. and COOP Group - Amherst Wreenchworks) who doubtlessly had not been in touch with reality for quite a while. "Reality" - from the point of view of Master Planning - is that Southwest is an award winning architectural/landscaped utopia. Building a cabin would be an attempt at sophisticated littering and a fire hazard to the concrete around it.

Well, although it must be a dream, rumor has it that work on a "log cabin" is continuing. No doubt it is a lie, but these wierdoo's apparently would like to run a store/center for students. The idea that students would want to work for each other (and give flowers away) is incredible and Mental Health has been called to investigate.

Let It Be

It Is Important To Know Who Is Moving The Flag Up Or Dow

It's been said that if for instance we could settle all the economic and socia l demands of the Black Panther Party tomorrow - they would die from the air in five years anyway.

Social change cannot be separated from a change in our basic attitude toward our environment. So I wish to take this opportunity to "whisper words of wisdom" to the politicians and other finks who are supporting the systematic destriction of the Planet:

Dignity is a value implicit in the Vietnam moratorium. But is it so difficult to accept the reply of a student number as a name where here at the university it is indeed just as significant as one's family name? And then, is it somehow important to know who is moving a flag up or down? Here is part of a letter which appeared in the Boston Globe April 16, 1970 from Charles B. White, who is serving in Germany with the U.S. Air Force:

"There was a time when the flag of the United States was respected around the world as well as at home, as a symbol of justice for all men, and individual liberty. It seems that the people of the United States have decided that it is easier to honor a piece of cloth than the ideals for which it is supposedly a symbol.

As a symbol of America the flag represents nightsticks and bleeding heads in Chicago, napalm and massacres in Vietnam, and all the great silent majority supports by its silence. Full prisons will not bring honor to the flag, but only still greater shame and contempt.

The time has come to forget the symbols and to resurrect the forgotten ideals that the symbols once represented. If we do this the flag will receive respect, and more important, deserve respect. If we fail, the years ahead will see more than flags burning."

Campus Comment

To the editor:

As I roamed considerably around the cage during the 8:30 Jefferson Airplane concert, I spent nearly a half-hour directly behind the electronics control panel, occasionally talking with some of the Airplane technical people. Superimposed on what I considered to be a really fine film-strobe light backdrop was a small, intense, red dot directed from the electronics area on the floor of the Cage that traced designs on the screen. The trouble is that this was a laser beam that can be extremely detrimental to the eyesight of a human being. The source was a Helium-Neon laser that operates in the red region of the spectrum. Upon questioning those running it, I found it to be operating at a power level of I milliwatt. This is a low power level, low enough so that the laser, which at higher powers can punch through steel, would not cause injury to the body. However, if this beam were directed directly into a person's eye for ten to fifteen seconds, permanent damage to the retina could result. It is an enticing light because of its purity - a very "one color" red, and given that the people running it were drinking beer, and the grass that was easily detectable by odor from the floor, coupled with the emotional reinforcement of the Airplanes music, it is not inconceivable that someone might have stared into it. The source was at such a level that I saw it striking the back of someone's head. So, what if he or you didn't know about lasers, and were stoned, and turned to stare at this captivating light. And what do you do, put in anti-laser clauses along with the obscenity clauses now being put into many contracts (case in point- the Airplane lost 1000 dollars in the midwest recently for violating the obscenity clause: source - ROLLING STONE); I hardly think so. The obscenity clause itself is probably a mistake, but I wonder how long we will be tolerant of stimulations to our bodies and minds, whether through drugs or lights, without more serious questioning as to their make-up. My feeling as I leave Amherst is that more and more people our age yield to their emotions and run scared from any logic seen inside.

On Saturday night a student was pelted with rocks and shot to death by 500 Santa Barbara student radicals. The student was emerging from a bank after he had extinguished a fire-bomb thrown by one of the radicals. How much longer must ma kind feed on the bitter fruit of violence? Will the Nazi gas ovens, American napalm, and radical bombs never leave the true pacifists to live in peace and harmony with their brother? Does anyone really believe that radical bullets are more blessed in the eyes of God? I once thought that my generation had gained a better understanding and deeper love for their fellow human beings. I don't know who started the joke about our greater love and understanding, but next time you see it in print don't sit back all smug and proud, cut it out and send it to the parents and girlfriend of that dead student. I'm sure they'll get a real good laugh out of it. But don't think about the dead brother and the article yourself because all you'll get out of it is a real big ache in the pit of your stomach.

I would first like to sympathize with the person who had one of his car wheels stolen in "A" lot, but I happen to have outdone him. I had the privilege of having two wheels stolen from my car in "E" lot by some degenerates who evidently think they need them more than I do. Let me add that they were thoughtful enough to leave the car flat on the ground and not on blocks.

I ask the question common to many other weary souls, why don't the campus police stop handing out tickets and start watching our cars? It is high time we stopped these people who have nothing better to do than making life just a little more inconvenient for everybody.

My only wish is that they get not one, but two blowouts at 90 miles per hour.

About a week ago, I went to dinner at Hampshire Dining Commons. While I was eating my dessert of strawberries, I discovered a worm floating in the juice. Sensing that this was not normal, I recovered my wits and immediately ran to one of the dining commons employees. I pointed out to her, very disgustedly, that there was a worm in my strawberries. Expecting some satisfaction, I got instead, "So what, it's dead anyways."

Is this what we are to expect of dining commons food? Is this their reply to the ptomaine poisoning scare? What I am objecting to is not only the worm, but the entire attitude of the dining commons personnel. The moral of the story is: Stick with the jello.

Gracie Blows Cage Roof Off

The Southwest Weekend Concert Saturday night was one of the most successful musical productions the campus has seen this year. Both shows were packed yet the concerts began with a minimum of delay and equipment complications. The only immediately noticeable problem was that someone had neglected to put down the canvas covering on the Cage's dirt floor, causing a mild dust storm while the audience was being let in. However, as compensation, refreshments were sold (a new and successfu l idea for Cage concerts) and this seemed to pacify the audience until the concert started.

The entertainment began with Flight, a local group, playing a set of fast-paced songs designed to build up audience enthusiasm and expectancy. Flight is a five-man group, bass, two guitars, organ, and drums, with a tight full sound, good harmony, and a fine lead singer that makes them presently one of the most popular groups in the area and also shows the Bold's influence somewhere in their background. The sings, such as "Some of my best friends are yours" and "Down Country Home", were all original compositions and showed a degree of aesthetic accomplishment both in writing and arrangement as well as in presentatio n that will not keep this group local for long.

When the Jefferson Airplane arrived on stage unannounced, the audience erupted with applause. After a few minutes of tuning up, while Gracie Slick spoke to a few people in the front row, the Airplane broke into their first song, "Volunteers (Got a Revolution)" as the audience roared its approval.

Instrumentally, the Airplane is a small but powerful group. Most of the music is generated by the magic guitar of Jorma Kaukonen and accented by Jack Cassidy on bass, perhaps the wildest bass player in the business, and all is backed up by Spenser Dryden as drummer. As for singing, Grace Slick still remains as the queen of rock singers. There is a power and yet a delicateness about the way this woman sings and her solo rendition of "White Rabbit" testified to the fact that her talent today is in every way as rich and as fresh as when the Airplane first became known.

Most of the singing, however, seems to be done by Marty Balin, whose voice works in perfectly with Gracie's and oftentimes is mistaken for hers. The third contributor to the group's singing, who also supplements the instrumeatal aspect by playing rhythm guitar and is said by Gracie to be "the most serious" is Paul Kantner.

Together, these six are and have been since the very first days of the hard-rock movement a dynamic and unbeatable musical combination. The songs played, such as "Somebody to Love", "Good Shepherd," "Plastic-Fantastic Lover," and "Wooden Ships," were diverse enough to display every facet of the group's various abilities and the light show which accompanies them wherever they play was the most beautiful and successful one that I, personally, have ever seen. The final piece performed before the encore was, once again, "Volunteers" and this song, along with Gracie's advice at the end to recognize the Revolution would lead one to think that there was a definite message included with the entertainment.

Gracie Slick and her friends invaded Curry Hicks Cage Saturday and proceeded, with cool abandon and great skill, to blow the minds and eardrums of the two capacity crowds. The music was great, the singing better, and the light show was a thing of beauty. The show, which also featured Flight, was rated as one of the best on campus so far this year. Black Repertory Theatre Comes Alive

By ANNETTE TOWNLEY

The Black Repertory Theatre presented CEREMONIES IN DARK OLD MEN on Friday and Saturday night and Sunday afternoon in Bowker Auditorium. The Black Repertory Theatre was created as part of the Black Studies Department for the purpose of bringing alive the art of Black playwrights and enabling the Black student to participate in this reflection of their history and culture. The play was written by Lonne Elder III and directed by Esther Terry.

The entire play is situated in a combined home and barbership on 126th Street in contemporary Harlem. Living within these four walls are Mr. Russell B. Parker played by Nathaniel Sims, and his three children--Adele, played by Rose Marie Sims, Theopolis, played by Danny Scarborough and Bobby played by Anthony Pendleton.

Blue Haven, played by Monte Jackson, arrives on the scene offering freedom from the economic control of "The Man" as well as Adele. He is in charge of the "Harlem DeColonization Association," which fights "Mr. You-Know-Who". Blue Haven claims that the purpose of the organization is "to capture the imagination of the people." However, it is soon realized that he is exploiting his own people under the guise of liberating them from colonization. As for everyone else in the play, except for perhaps Jenkins, self-interest is the motivating life source. The plan is to set up a bootlegging business with the barbershop as a front. Theo sees it as "the" way out and Mr. Parker is convinced despite his doubts.

Superficially the business liberates everyone BUT Theo, who was killed. It was Jenkins' insight that prophesized the day Parker wins would be the worst day of his life. The bold Theo has become humbled by the depressing reality of the situation. Mr. Parker still lives in a dream and dances to an old life, Adele is broken and Bobby is dead. In the final analysis it doesn't matter whether you fight, scream, kick, or climb, for death is the only escape.

The production was excellently executed under the direction of Esther Terry. The acting, which was fine throughout the entire play seemed to intensify as the play progressed. Each character made us feel his personal frustration and despair. At the same time, there was a strong bond between them that cannot be repressed or forgotten. The three outstanding performances were by Rose Marie Sims, who eminated the fight for survival, Nathaniel Sims, who could almost trap us in his dream, and Danny Scarborough, who despite his transformation in character, never lost his vitality.

The Black Repertory Theatre, part of the Black Studies Department, presented an original play by Lonne Elder III last Saturday and Sunday at Bowker Auditorium. The Theatre brings alive the work of Black playwrights and enables Black students to participate in the reflection of their culture. Starring in the play were Nathaniel Sims, Rose Marie Sims, Danny Scarborough, and Anthony Pendleton.

Fine Arts

Mr. Parker lacks a job and spends his spare time playing checkers with his friend, Mr. William Jenkins, played by Mitch Williams. As the play progresses, we come to learn that the game of checkers that these two men engage in is their ceremony of life. The father is a dreamer and a one time vaudeville man who realizes the futility of working for "The Man" -- it won't get him anywhere. The daughter works hard, believing she can climb her way out of the ghetto. The two sons refuse to work for the White colonizer and would rather fight, kick, and scratch their way out. Yet, even between these two brothers there is a difference in perspective on life. Bobby shoplifts, thus dealing with the reality of his situation. Theo's head is filled with high hopes and he attempts to paint. Yet, his personality at the beginning of the play is an arrogant one born out of desparation. He appears as the dominant member of his household despite Adele's financial control. The difficult task of dominating women is essential in proving one's manhood as defined by American society. Mr. Parker works sixteen hours a day to make the corn whiskey. Mr. Parker is spending his money trying to rediscover life, Bobby is looting and wearing nice clothes, and Adele is living it up every night. Jenkins, the first one to want out of the business, is also the last one to get in. Always in touch with the reality of the situation he never voices any high hopes. Eventually Theo gets disgusted and wants out. Adele comes home beaten up by her boyfriend. Mr. Parker is rejected by the woman he falls in love with. And Bobby is out looting.

In the final scene Mr. Parker comes home to play his last game of checkers with Mr. Jenkins. For the first time he wins, but even his winning is a losing for just a few minutes before his son Bobby

A Breakfast Story

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

The tough, crusty product of amber waves of grain; the once living slice of bread; product of Franklin Dining Commons' crack and efficient toaster; this anomaly of the true spirit of Breakfasts past and present is, like the in-humane University, under-going change.

"They ought to butter the toast at this Commons!" complained one patron of Franklin Commons as he threw his slice of newly hardened toast at his plate; breaking the plate and leaving an indelible mark on the resilient formica tables.

"The world needs buttered, warm toast . . . the kind that doesn't break your teeth even after dunking for five minutes," remarked another student, holding his teeth in one hand and a piece of "hardly dented at all" toast in the other.

Tension was building quickly in that corner of the Copper Kettle. Violence seemed inevitable as student after student threw their toast to the floor (causing thousands of dollars worth of damage, incidentally) and leaped from their vinyl chairs screaming "Where is the suggestion box."

One quick thinking student rose quietly and called the irate students to order.

"We must be organized," bellowed the square-shouldered leader of men. "Let's write a suggestion," continued this man amongst men, after the angry roar of the growing crowd began to subside.

A small group of long haired radicals gathered to write the suggestion. It said things like "We suggest that Franklin Dining Commons butter its toast... like Worcester Commons does." Two people emerged from the group and marched to the main office of Mister Bongiovanni. The crowd dispersed men comforting the women who worried about the fate of those "Two Men."

Mr. Bongiovanni, Chief Cook and Bottlewasher and hearer of "I forgot my meal ticket" for thousands, received the "Two Men" bravely.

He asked "What can I do for you?"

The brave duo handed the suggestion to him. There was a brief, dramatic pause as Mister Bongiovanni read the scribbled suggestion, written on a dining common's napkin.

Bongiovanni hesitated for a moment consulted the chief chef and replied, "It sounds like a good idea."

The two embattled students breathed a sign of relief. Thanked Mister Bongiovanni and quietly returned to the dining area.

Bongiovanni called to us as we were leaving the office, "Hey . . . keep watching the toast!"

It seems that in this world, where the little man is often forgotten, toast can be changed. Whether "buttered toast" becomes a reality or not at Franklin, we can all learn a lesson from this breakfast story; no man is less than toast.

Referendum Problems Discussed

Problems arising from the May 7 referendum were discussed at a meeting of the steering committee of the April 10-11 Committee last Thursday evening at Professor Arthur Kinney's apartment in Southwest.

The questions of grade reform, academic year reorganization, war complicity, faculty, requirements, and University decentralization were selected as representative of the "most critically debated issues" on campus for the referendum. It was emphasized that the referendum would not be a legislative vote on the issues, but rather, an "expression of priorities". The number of questions will be limited so that the University community can be educated as to the pros and cons of each issue.

The ballot will be distributed to all members of the University community - faculty, grad students, administrators, undergrads and the professional and non-professional staffs. Voting will take place on May 7, in the dormitories, the Student Union, and by mail.

It was also learned that the Clearinghouse for Student-Initiated Change had video-taped events of April 10 - 11, and the tape will be available to educational institutions throughout the nation by September.

Botswana, Swaziland and Ethiopia will be the destinations of the majority of this year's graduates of the UMass Peace Corps Intern Program.

Most of the 20 seniors are in the College of Agriculture. After their graduation in May, they will join the Peace Corps with jobs relating to agricultural development in Africa, primarily in the three countries named.

Each intern in the program takes a normal load of courses during his last semester, and in addition spends some two hours a week meeting with the group, learing about the culture, history, and economy of Africa.

The training sessions are run by the College of Agriculture's Center for International Agricultural Studies. This is the program's second year. The center also directs the UMass-AID program in Malawi, Central Africa, and the International Training Program for foreign agriculturalists.

The interns are: Brian Aldrich of South Harwich; Lee Alton of Dudley; Joan Bennett of Baldwinsville, N.Y.; Robert Burns of Boston; Frances Curtis of North Attleboro; Richard Daoust and William Donaldson of Lunenburg; Kirby Gilmore of Acushnet; Raymond Hall of Littleton; Joanne Hannula of West Newbury; John Hannula of Gardner; John Jerszyk of Fitchburg; Richard Kimball of Ashby; Wayne Lilyestron of Spencer; Marion McNeil of Roslindale; Michael O'Meara of Orono, Maine; John O'Neill of Sherborn; Robert Peters of Hopedale; Sandra Swenson of Sherborn and Robert Waltermire of Bernardston.

Mr. H. J. Littlefield, Jr., will be the guest at the regular Tuesday noon meet-the-administration coffee hour held today, April 21, from noon until 2 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

As director of planning for UMass/Amherst, Mr. Littlefield bears the primary responsibility for the planning and construction of all buildings on the campus. Students concerned about future University housing, both on and off the campus, are particularly invited to attend. Coffee is served.

Two new Chevelles at two new lower prices.

Chevelle 4-Door Sedan

than our previous lowest priced 4-door.

Chevelle Sport Coupe

than our previous lowest priced hardtop.
Now it's America's lowest priced mid-size hardtop.

We took America's best selling mid-size car. Then, added two new lower priced models, including a Sport Coupe that's priced less than any other mid-size hardtop you can buy.

Still, they both have Chevelle's smart new grille for 1970. And Chevelle's newly styled Body by Fisher. And Chevelle's Full Coil suspension with custom fitted springs at each wheel. And Chevelle's wide-stance chassis design, side-guard beams in the doors, cargo-guard luggage compartment, bias belted ply tires.

Lower priced they are, by as much as $148. But lower priced looking and feeling they aren't.

Which will get us no love notes from the competition. But maybe it will from you.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

CHEVROLET

*Based on manufacturer's suggested retail prices, including federal excise tax and suggested dealer new car preparation charges.

Esposito Makes Chicago Choke ON "Bad Playoff Player" Label

CHICAGO (AP) - Phil Esposito was tagged with a "bad playoff player" reputation when he was with Chicago a couple years ago, but now he is making the Black Hawks choke on it.

In seven Stanely Cup playoff games thus far against New York and Chicago, the Boston Bruin star has rammed in nine goals, including two hat tricks.

He scored a triple-goal hat trick Sunday as the Bruins smashed the Hawks 6-3 in the first game of the East Division final. He will try to continue the pace in the second game of the series in Chicago Stadium Tuesday night.

It's not only Phil against his brother, Chicago goalie Tony Esposito, but also Phil against the couraged. "We rowed well but not well enough to win. LaSalle is a fine crew. We know what went wrong and this young crew will improve. They're tough boatmen."

The varsity final was merely a tuneup for next week's Trinity competition. UMass' big eight (6'2-195-pound average) bolted off the line and established a one half length on Worcester after only 25 strokes with La Salle further back.

From this point onward the sweat-shirted boat powered into a touch floodcurrent and head wind at 33 strokes per minute, outmuscling Worcester while LaSalle was surprisingly never in contention. Osswain Chris Jedrey pushed his men across in 7:31 while Worcester Poly surprised LaSalle in 7:44 to 7:51.

Faherty was pleased with the effort but immediately was concerned about next week's match with Trinity.

Hawks' general manager, Tommy Ivan, and coach, Billy Reay.

Phil was traded to Boston in 1967, the season the Black Hawks finished first in the National Hockey League but lost in the initial playoff round to Toronto.

Phil was criticized for his work in that playoff round, just as he was last season when the favorec Bruins were eliminated by Montreal.

"Reay and Ivan were the ones who said I don't play well in playoffs," said Esposito without rancor. "But I have no grudges against them. I wasn't their style of player. I wasn't a run-around bang-'em type.

"The reason I was traded, they said, was because of the playoffs. But I just wasn't getting the ice time I needed. I was No. 3 center behind two who were better - Stan Mikita and Billy Hay. And on the power play they had Bobby Hull, Chico Maki and then Lou Angotti.

"When I got to Boston I asked two things: Don't bug me about my weight and let me play. If I play lousy, well, all right, but let me play. They did."

Phil said that because of the competitive situation between him and his brother, Tony, during the playoffs, he would not visit Tony's home or even phone him.

"I haven't talked to Tony in two weeks - and that was when I called him after the Black Hawks won first place," said Phil. "Tony is the type of guy who figures hockey is hockey and business is business. I respect him for this feeling. So I'll leave him alone."

Orioles Drown Sox, 3-2 In Rain-Shortened Game

BOSTON (AP) - Boog Powell drove in two runs with a 400-foot single and his second homer of the season Monday as the Baltimore Orioles edged the Boston Red Sox in a Patriots' Day morning game called by rain after six innings.

Powell's wrong field homer into the left field screen came off Boston starter Ray Culp in the sixth inning and snapped a 2-2 tie. The Red Sox went out in their half, and with Baltimore batting in the seventh the rain which had been falling throughout the game started coming down harder.

Umpire Jerry Neudecker called time, then after an hour wait called the game.

The Orioles took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Mark Belanger tripled and scored as Frank Robinson grounded out.

The Red Sox tied it in the second when Rico Petrocelli drew a walk, one of seven issued by Baltimore starter Jim Palmer, and came around on singles by Tony Conigliaro and Luis Alvarado.

The Red Sox moved ahead 2-1 in the third as Carl Yastrzemski walked, reached third on a pair of wild pitches by Palmer, and scored on a n infield single by Conigliaro. But Baltimore tied it in the fourth on Frank Robinson's double and Powell's long single off the centerfield wall.

Redmen Down UVM Twice, Stickers Blast Tufts

Bernardo Wins Opener With Two-Run HR, 10-8

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Jack Bernardo supplied the necessary punch and pitching Friday in leading UMass to a 10-8 victory over the University of Vermont at Varsity Field in the first of a two-game series.

Bernardo's homer off reliever Steve Yanagi over the 375-foot mark in left center with Jim Saracino on board in the bottom of the fourth broke a 4-4 tie and put the Redmen ahead to stay. He also pitched five innings of relief, spacing ten hits for only four runs in notching the win.

UMass staked starter Lou Colabello to a three-run lead in the first inning. Brian Martin drove in two of them off UVM starter Dave Zehnacker with a double, scoring Hosea Kelly and Ray Ellerbrook. Following an infield single by Steve Rogers which pushed Martin to third, Tom Semino produced the third run on a sacrifice fly to left field.

The Catamounts struck back with one in the second and two in the third to tie the game. All the runs came on extra base hits. Tom Sivert doubled in Don Robinson in the second while twin brother Dennis Robinson tripled in Zehnacker and George Minarsky in the third.

UMass regained the lead in its half of the third as Rogers singled in Ellerbrook only to have the Catamounts knot the score once again in the fourth.

Phil Natowich led off with a triple up the alley in left and then, after Colabello struck out the next two batters, Minarsky reached on an infield hit. Natowich scored several pitches later as an away, Minarsky advancing to third.

Bernardo replaced Colabello after the latter reached a 3-1 count on the next batter, Denny Robinson. Bernardo threw ball four but retired the side by fanning Jim Rapoport.

Then came Bernardo's homer and UMass went on to gradually extend its lead, adding one in the fifth, two in the seventh and one in the eighth.

Although he surrendered one run in the seventh, Bernardo didn't really run out of gas until the ninth when he was touched for three runs on five hits and finally left with two outs. Tall Tom Austin came in to retire the side.

REDMAN RANTINGS - The Catamounts out hit UMass, 15 to 12... Kelly and Semino collaborated on a fine play on Sivert's double, Kelly relaying to Semino at third as Sivert got greedy and attempted to stretch it into a triple . . . crime does not pay.

Malone , Ritch Star As Garbermen Romp, 14-3

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

In a near duplication of its opening win over Middlebury, the UMass lacrosse team defeated Tufts, 14-3, on Saturday afternoon for its second win of the season and seventeenth straight over a three year period.

The slow-starting Redmen fell behind for the second straight game but an eight goal second period was enough to seal the victory. Once again, Tom Malone led the Redmen in victory with help from fellow attackmen Paul Ritch and Steve Herschoff. Malone had eight points on two goals and six assists while Ritch had four goals and Herschoff had two of each. As in the first game, eight differnt Redmen scored goals in a well-balanced attack.

The game opened with sloppy play on the part of both teams. John Roberge put the Jumbos in front when he took a John Bate pass from behind the net and deposited it past Bruce Crawford into the net. Tufts' goalie John Heck stopped Malone on a couple of bids before the UMass co-captain could tie the game near the end of the first period. The unassisted goal by Malone ignited the Redman spark and the rout was on.

Midfielder John Gannon put the Redmen in front with his first goal of the year in the opening minute of the second period. Gannon, who won every faceoff he was involved in, had just missed moments earlier on a pass from Malone, but the two tried the play again with successful results. Another unassisted goal by Malone made the score 3-1 only twenty seconds later. Lou Marinacci upped the Redman lead to three by converting a Herschoff pass. Malone made a great play to set up Ritch for the fifth UMass goal. Malone was covered by two Tufts defenders and faked both of them out and found Ritch open in front of the net. Tufts' Carl Tominaso scored the second goal for the Jumbos on a fifty foot pass which Crawford tried to catch but he misjudged it and the ball bounced into the net.

Phil Sheridan made the score 6-2 when he took a Bob Waters pass and fired it between the goalies legs. Herschoff scored the seventh Redman goal with an assist to Malone and Larry Diamond scored two straight to make the halftime score 9-2. Diamond's goals were both on passes from behind the net, the first from Malone and the second from Herschoff, and Diamond did a nice job of converting.

Unlike Middlebury, Tufts refused to give up hope in the second half. The Jumbos played an aggressive game but their aggressiveness could not compensat e for their lack of skill. Ritch scored three goals in a row in the second period to give him the hat trick plus one. Malone got assists on two of the goals and Marinacci on the other. Tufts' scored its third goal during this span on another gift by the Redmen. Crawford tried to scoop up a low pass from one of his defensemen, but the ball bounced away into the stick of Vin Sollitto who put the ball into the empty net.

Marinacci scored a pretty goal right at the end of the third period to give the Redmen a 13-3 lead. The only scoring in the last period was done by the Redmen as Steve Herschoff netted his second goal of the day.

Anderson Five-Hitter Wins Second

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Don Anderson turned in the strongest UMass pitching performance of the year Saturday, giving up only five hits in a complete game effort as the Redmen defeated Vermont 4-3, at windy, dusty Varsity Field. The victory brings UMass' record to a stellar 9-4 and 2-1 in Yankee Conference, while the Catamounts fall to 5-4 and 0-2 in the Conference.

UMass left fielder Paul Sulzicki drove in Steve Rogers with the winning run in the eighth to break a 3-3 tie with a clutch double to right center. The game had been tied since the third as Anderson and UVM's George Smith, who also went the route, although he surrendered 11 hits, linked up in quite a pitching duel.

If not for the first inning, when the Redmen defense collapsed, Sulzicki's heroics would have been unnecessary. The Catamounts scored all their runs as UMass committee three errors.

George Minarsky led off with a single to right field. Denny Robinson then bunted down the third base line whereupon Tom Semino threw the ball into center field in an attempt to get the force at second. Although his throw was not perfect, there was no one to cover the bag anyway.

After Robinson stole second, Don Robinson doubled to right, driving home Minarsky. Anderson didn't help his cause any two batters later, with men on first and second, as his low throw to second, after fielding Phil Natowich's grounder, thwarted a double play attempt.

Semino then made his second error of the game on Jim Raboport's grounder allowing Don Robinson to score. Neil Hermann drove Tom Sivert in with the final Catamount run on a fielder's choice. Needless to say, all the runs were unearned.

The Redmen struck back for two runs in the second as shortstop Jim Saracino tripled, scoring Semino who had singled sharply to left and Sulzicki, who had reached on an error by Catamount first baseman Sivret.

Ray Ellerbrook scored the tying run in the third. Ellerbrook reached on an error, stole second base and scampered home on Brian Martin's two strike single to center field.

Anderson was immense throughout, striking out seven and walking only two. He had the Catamounts hitting into the ground all day and never faced more than four batters in any one inning after the first.

Smith, for his part, threw mostly strikes but didn't seem to have much on the ball as the Redmen smacked out 11 hits and hit several solid smashes right at UVM fielders. UMass had several other good scoring opportunities but couldn't cash in.

DIAMOND DUST - Minarsky skates center on the Catamount hockey squad and is one of their mainstays . . . He is probably one of the quickest men down the line that UMass will face this year . . . Anderson appeared to be trying to psyche out enemy base runners with his pick off move to first . . .

Varsity Eight, No. 1 Frosh Down Lasalle, WPI In Regatta

Concluding another big home regatta for the crew club, the UMass varsity eight-man shell crushed crews from LaSalle and Worcester Polytech. The UMass JV boat pushed LaSalle to the heights before taking second place in a four-boat race while coach Larry Dean's big freshman #1 came from behind to overtake a more experienced LaSalle frosh.

The Redman second frosh opened the day's events with a losing effort against Marist College of Poughkeepsie, N.Y. The high-stroking parochials had the home seconds by a length until about 500 yards to go. At this point UMass, moving on Marist stroking 30 strokes per minute, upped its beat to 33 and fell apart.

The failure to coordinate the effort contributed greatly to the downfall. The home boat floundered in losing by three lengths.

The UMass first frosh, however, got things on the right track by sprinting past a cocky LaSalle and outclassing Worcester. LaSalle held a length lead on UMass for three-fourths of the race, with Worcester Poly hopelessly confused in the wind and current.

The Little Redmen sprinted in from 400 yards and caught a fatigued LaSalle easily. The well-disciplined home forces, low stroking at 30 throughout the race, embarrassed LaSalle at the finish as UMass won by more than a length in 7:55:2. Worcester trailed by ten lengths.

Frosh mentor Dean had mixed emotions after the race. He was especially pleased with the first frosh's victory, but concerned about the lackluster performance of the seconds. He noted that more racing experience would condition the boats to react better. The freshmen are now 2-0.

The junior varsity contest provided the crowd of 300 with the race of the day. UMass and a tough LaSalle boat locked horns in a great battle, while Worcester Polytech and the American International varsity a guest participant, waged their own duel in the big boat's wake.

UMass' revamped junior alignment jumped into an early ten-foot lead. However, when the home forces dropped to 32 strokes per minute at the 500-yard mark LaSalle, pumping at 35, opened a length lead.

This remained the situation with UMass gradually cutting into the visitors' lead coming into the sprint. At this point the Redmen, ripping to 34-35, began "trucking" on the Philadelphians.

UMass closed to one-half length with 150 yards to go and was threatening to overtake the leader until the entire starboard crabbed out (blades caught in the water). LaSalle's cagey veterans exploited the opportunity and opened the lead again. That is the way it ended.

UMass admittedly lost its starch after the misfortune. La Salle was clocked in 8:03, UMass at 8:09, Worcester and AIC were a minute back. Varsity coach Mike Faherty was not dis-

Ralph Abernathy Will Speak In Curry Hicks Cage Tonight

Dr. Ralph Abernathy will deliver the second of this year's Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Lectures at UMass tonight at 8 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage.

Dr. Abernathy succeeded the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as president of The Southern Christian Leadership Conference. In addition to his SCLC duties, Dr. Abernathy is pastor of the West Hunter Street Baptist Church in Atlanta, Ga., where he has been since 1961.

RALPH ABERNATHY. . .

Dr. Abernathy rose to national prominence when he and other young black leaders, including Martin Luther King Jr., led the famous Montgomery, Alabama bus boycott of 1955-56. Dr. Abernathy has since been jailed many times for his non-violent protest activities.

During the Montgomery campaign, Dr. Abernathy helped to found the Montgomery Improvement Association, the direct forerunner of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. He still serves as the president emeritus of M.I.A.

The church Dr. Abernathy pastors is a member of the American Baptist Convention. He also served two years in Demopolis, Ala., and ten years as pastor of the First Baptist Church in Montgomery.

Dr. Abernathy has served as an educator at his alma mater, Alabama State College at Montgomery where he was personnel counselor and an instructor in the social science department after graduate study. He has received numerous citations, honors, and awards.

The first of the King Lectures was given April 14 by Dr. Kenneth B. Clark.

Baha'i Marathon Presents Speaker on 'True Religion'

The Amherst Baha'i Faith marathon pulls into the second stretch of Proclamation Week by presenting Mrs. Nancy Jordan, a Northampton Baha'i, who will speak on "The Unity of Mankind - The Purpose of True Religion." The session will be held at 8 p.m. today in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

Mrs. Jordan, born in Belfast, Ireland, has lived in Heidelburg and has traveled throughout Iran, Turkey, Iceland, and Europe.

In 1967 Mrs. Jordan was the official representative of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States to the Intercontinental Conference in Kampala, Uganda, and she has served on the first National Spiritual Assembly in Luxembourg where she lived for two years. She traveled on a Pilgrimage to the World Baha'i Center in Haifa, Israel in 1969. In addition, Nancy Jordan has lectured and traveled in Europe.

After coming to the U.S. in 1958, she developed a keen interest in U.S. civil rights issues and was present in Atlanta and Washington at the Poor Peoples' March. These more salient features of Mrs. Jordan's life experiences are further complemented by her vocation as mother of two children and wife of Dr. Daniel C. Jordan, Professor at the School of Education at UMass. Furthermore, there is much which Mrs. Jordan can offer us with regard to living the baha'i life because of the ever-widening perspectives which she possesses.

The Amherst Baha'i Community extends its welcome to everyone as it presents another pioneer in the field of perpetuating the oneness of God and Unity of Mankind.

Tomorrow's featured speaker will be Glenford Mitchell and there will be firesides on Friday evening throughout the campus community.

During this Baha'i Proclamation Week, there will be a booth set up in the Student Union to which anyone may come and speak with the Baha'is. They are providing a chance at meaningful exchange in the teachings of the Baha'i Faith. Pamphlets and other information will be on hand.

Teach-Ins, Seminars Mark Earth Day in New England

(AP) - "Earth Day" - a national outcry against pollution - is to be marked in New England Wednesday by teach-ins, demonstrations and seminars involving most colleges and universities in the six-state region.

The plans range from efforts to tie up traffic at the rush hour to campaigns that would ban the non returnable container.

Many of the northeast's state legislators, governors, congressmen and U.S. senators are taking part in panels and making speeches.

Wednesday's anti-pollution activities have drawn support from many quarters, from radicals who say they will demonstrate, to conservative politicians who ignored recent anti-war observations but entered the fight against pollution wholeheartedly.

In Boston, "Earth Day" observances were kicked off Tuesday by Sen. Gaylor Nelson, D-Wis., who was the first to propose the environmental teach-ins that are scheduled at some 2,000 colleges and 10,000 high schools.

Seniors

Each year the University News Bureau sends the pictures and names of all seniors who will graduate to their hometown newspapers. The pictures are attached to the news cards filled out at the beginning of first semester. If you expect to graduate in June and have not filled out a news card, please fill one out in the News Bureau, Room 345, Whitmore Hall.

This year newspapers will receive the names and pictures of all seniors as prospective graduates. If you know you will not graduate this May, and would not like your name and picture sent, please call 545-0444 by April 30 and we will remove your name from the list.

Earth Day Protests Pollution

Today, proclaimed nationwide as Earth Day will be observed at UMass with films and displays in the Student Union Ballroom as well as with seminars and a lecture by Dr. Ralph Abernathy. An open house and demonstrations will be held in Ashfield (see story below). from 1 - 8 p.m. An Ecological Teach-Out will be held in Engineering East

Among other events scheduled today are a forestry resources policy seminar at 1:25 p.m. in 331 Holdsworth and "A Personal Viewpoint on the Environmental Crisis", a talk by Carl Carlozzi at 3:30 p.m. in 203 Holdsworth. Dr. Carlozzi is a UMass resource planning specialist.

The day will be concluded with a lecture by Dr. Ralph Abernathy, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, at 8 p.m. in the Cage.

Today is Earth Day. Protests across the country will focus on improving polluted scenes such as the above.

Ecological Teach-out Today

An "Ecological Teach-out" will be held today at 1 p.m. at Robert Mallary's Conway-Ashfield Acreage. Planned topics for discussion are the ecological crisis, the possible role of art and the artist in confronting this crisis, and the so-called "earth works" and "ecological art."

Plans include the creation of a large "stretch" sculpture (like a cat's cradle) of elastic cord to demonstrate graphically and on a large scale, the ecological interconnectedness of all things as total systems.

Participants will help in erecting and activating the sculpture which will be dismantled and taken away at the end of the day. There will be no gaping holes to trigger a possible erosion chain or will glass be strewn about to injure wild animals to demonstrate the ecological responsibility not the irresponsibility of the artist.

Bringing sandwiches and drinks are acceptable but observance of an ecological principle of taking away your own rubbish is requested.

Participants are to meet at the white Sugar House at the intersection of North Poland Road and Route 116 between Ashfield and Conway at 12:30. The acreage itself is located about two miles south of the intersection behind the Albert Fuller housetrailer.

Ceremony to Feature Tree Planting Ritual

Tomorrow there will be a ritual tree planting ceremony by the pond. Participators will meet in front of the Student Union at noon.

Bob Zelman, who organized the ceremony gave the following statement about the purpose behind the planting. "We must regain our sense of the holy. At some point in history as we got more 'civilized' we began to worship the work of our own hands rather than the work of God. So-called 'primitive' tribes understand that machines are not holy, but the natural wonders of the Earth are. As long as we continue to praise and grovel before our technology, we will continue the systematic destruction of our planet.

"In an attempt to return to the basic sense of wonder we are born with, a young tree will be planted. Campus religious leaders from the Newman Center, the United Christian Foundation and Hillel, and the Universal Life Church, will be there to speak and to bless the ceremony. I will read prayers from the American Indians.

"I hope that everyone who plays an instrument will bring it to join us in joyous song. Percussion instruments are especially needed so that we can have a ritual dance."

CEQ To Sponsor Awareness Walk

The Coalition for Environment Quality will sponsor a walk of awareness from Amherst to Northampton on Saturday, April 25th. All interested persons are asked to meet on the Amherst Town Common at 9:00 a.m. on the 25th for the start of the seven mile walk. The walk will follow Route 9 from Amherst, through Hadley, to be terminated at the Northampton Environment Fair to be held in Pulaski Park, Northampton.

Those participating are asked to bring an empty bag as they will pick up trash from the roadside. Grass seeds (to be supplied), and flower seeds (not supplied), will be planted. Future developments and their effects upon the roadside will be dramatized.

Bottle, Can Collections Run 'til Sat.

A collection drive for soda bottles and cans is being held until Saturday at which time the bottles will be taken to Northampton, via the Environment Walk and will be deposited on the lawn of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. in Northampton.

There are 9 official collection containers: two in front of the Student Union, two around the mall area of Hampden Dining Commons No. 7 in South West, one in the middle of the North East Quad, one in front of Brooks, one near the circle in Orchard Hill, and two at the Amherst Common. These containers will have signs on them signifying that they are the official ones.

Douglas Promised Full, Fair Trial

WASHINGTON (AP) - A full and fair investigation of impeachment charges brought against Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas was promised Tuesday by Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., of the House Judiciary Committee.

Celler said a special five-member committee will get to the task as soon as possible and will try to conclude it within 60 days.

"This will be no whitewash and it will be no witch hunt," said the committee's ranking Republican, Rep. William M. McCulloch of Ohio. Celler, McCulloch, and Reps. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., Byron G. Rogers, D-Colo., and Edward Hutchinson, R-Mich., will conduct the inquiry.

The Judiciary Committee is stepping into a controversy touched off by House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, who accused Douglas in a House speech last week of a wide variety of misconduct and said he should be impeached.

Ford's speech was followed by the introduction of a resolution calling for the creation of a special committee to investigate the charges. The resolution, whose sponsors feel the Judiciary Committee might not be vigorous enough in its investigation, now has 110 sponsors, mostly Republicans and Southern Democrats.

Despite the pledges of Celler and McCulloch to conduct a full and impartial inquiry, Ford said he still favors going ahead with the select committee's investigation even if it means two inquiries would be going on at the same time.

Celler said no details for conducting the investigation have been worked out yet. He said he expects Douglas will be invited to appear before the committee.

To remove a judge, the House must adopt a bill of impeachment by a majority vote and the Senate then must convict by a two-thirds majority. No Supreme Court justice has been removed by impeachment although a few lower-court judges have.

Viet Army Not Battle Tested

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some senior military officers, dissenting from President Nixon's confident view, say the South Vietnamese Army has yet to be tested in a major way on the battle field - and may not be ready for such a test.

These officers, interviewed after Nixon's report to the nation Monday night, said the critical testing stage for the South Vietnamese Army is expected through the next six months.

"The moment of truth is approaching," said one general who believes the South Vietnamese forces still are spotty in performance after more than a year of intensified training and equipping under the administration's Vietnamization program.

"Some of their divisions are not the greatest," he said.

What worries U.S. officers is that American combat units will be so reduced in coming months that the U.S. command will have too few ground resources to shore up the South Vietnamese if they crack under a concerted North Vietnamese drive.

This concern was underscored when the Joint Chief of Staff recommended a 60-day delay in any further troop withdrawals. Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, U.S. commander in Vietnam, also urged a delay.

But Nixon went ahead with his new troop pullout announcement - and surprised many officers and Pentagon civilian officials by committing the United States to withdraw an additional 150,000 men by next Spring.

This would bring total withdrawals to 265,000, nearly half the number there at the peak of the build-up.

As surprising as these figures were to the military officers was the highly confident tone of Nixon's assessments.

These officers acknowledge there has bee n substantial progress toward meeting equipment and training goals, and in the all-important pacification efforts.

But they contend the quality of the retrained South Vietnamese troops has been tested only on a limited scale.

Police Bust Panther Rally Arrest Thirty

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) - Thirty young persons were arrested Tuesday following a demonstration in support of Black Panther chairman Bobby G. Seale, awaiting trial here on murder and kidnap charges in connection with the death of a New York City Panther.

The demonstration came only hours before a scheduled vote on a student strike in support of the Panthers at Yale University. Two groups representing all 8,700 students at the school called for a mass meeting Tuesday night for the vote.

About 150 persons gathered at the courthouse early in the morning and were urged by a local Black Panther leader to disperse.

VISTA Workers Lose Draft Deferments

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Office of Economic Opportunity changed a five-year old policy Tuesday saying it will no longer support draft deferments for VISTA volunteers.

Donald Rumsfeld, OEO director, said that such deferments shift the burden of the draft to others.

"Frequently it's the poor, whom this office is supposed to serve," he said at a news conference.

In the past, OEO policy has been to support deferment for VISTA Volunteers In Service to America personnel and maintain a neutral position regarding deferments for OEO employees. Its new instructions say: "OEO is opposed to the granting of occupational deferments for service in Office of Economic Opportunity Programs . . . OEO will therefore recommend to the Selective Service System that requests for occupational deferments based on service in OEO programs not be approved."

Rumsfeld said it is difficult to say how the new policy will affect recruiting for the VISTA program, which sends volunteers to help the poor in this country.

He said there is no question but that OEO will have to improve and strengthen its recruitment, adding "I think we can do that without the crutch of a deferment."

VISTA now has about 5,200 volunteers, with about 61 per cent, or 3,200, of them male. Rumsfeld said that probably three fourths of the males have draft deferments.

May Be Winds on Mars Says UMass Geologist

Are there winds on the planet Mars?

Seeking answers to this question is a University of Massachusetts geologist who has spent years studying the effects of winds on the surface of the earth.

Geology Professor H.T.U. Smith will study Mariner photos of Mars for evidence of wind action and related phenomena under a $5000 grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"This project springs from the hypothesis that yellow clouds, observed astronomically on Mars from time to time, are due to wind-blown dust," Dr. Smith explained.

There are some doubts about this so-called eolian dust hypothesis, he added, that can only be assessed at this time by searching the Mariner photos for certain tell-tale signs which to the trained eye indicate the action of winds.

"These might take the form of dust storms of smaller size than can be observed astronomically or dunes or drifts of eolian sand," the UMass geologist explained.

He will be working with NASA photos from the Mariner 6 and 7 spacecraft, which approached Mars in August of 1969 and sent back 200 television pictures.

The basis of comparison will be serial photos of the earth's surface showing dust storms and other effects of wind action. Photographs from earth-orbiting satellites, probably comparable in resolving power to the Mariner photos, indicate that large-scale eolian phenomena are recognizable, according to Dr. Smith.

Precisionettes Second In National Competition

The UMass co-ed drill team placed second out of the ten women's teams invited to the National Championship Competition in Washington, D.C. This is the third consecutive year the Precisionettes have won the second place trophy. Eastern Tennessee State University placed first for the second consecutive year. The Precisionettes' score was 826 out of a possible 1,000 points.

In Boston, the weekend previous, the Precisionettes placed second in the Annual Beanpot Invitational Drill Meet at the Boston Armory, which determines the championship of the Northeast region. Their score was 1241 out of a possible 1360 points. Seton Hall of New Jersey placed first with 1255 points. There is one competition remaining this season, the 12th Regimental Drill Meet in Boston which determines the championship of New England. The Precisionettes have held this title for three consecutive years and hope to maintain it.

The girls on the team invent their entire routine themselves, and although the football routines include some elements of trick drill, they are not competition routines.

Three years ago, when the Precisionettes entered competition in earnest, their style of marching and their trick steps were something new and seemed strange to many who were used to conventional drill. This style, however, has become the rule rather than the exception, and many teams, both men's and women's, have incorporated parts of this style into their own routines.

The Precisionettes, the UMass co-ed drill team, took second place in National competition in Washington, D.C.

Contrary to public opinion, the environmental issue is not a popular spur of the moment issue even though politicians use and abuse it. Environment is here and now, it exists as long as you breathe. It is everything outside of your own flesh and bones. The only way to loose it would be to loose all of your senses. Some have tried it.

Becoming aware of your environment is like listening to Simon & Garfunkle's album, BRIDGE OVER TROUBLED WATER. There are infinite levels and a strong perpetual beat. Becoming aware of your environment is comprehending the parts and the whole at the same time. To some it is religion; to others it is everything. It is everything.

What I am trying to say is that there will be a lot going on on April 22 and on April 20, April 21, April 23, April 24, April 25 and the rest of the semester. It means nothing if you do not take part in everything and forget everything. If you do not reach a personal realization of the importance of the meaningfulness of your surroundings and their precarious state; the effort is for nothing.

* Are you ready to give up the ideal of buying that new super gasmobile?
* Are you ready to stop cluttering the countryside with non-returnable cans of bud and hot dog wrappers?
* Are you ready to give up the ideal of having 13 kids?
* Are you ready to cut down on the use of electric appliances?
* Are you ready to give up using 20 gallons of water for your bubble bath or three hour shower?
* Are you ready to support the SOAP commandos in their fight against the use of high phosphate and nitrate detergents? Will you use Trend, Cold Water All and Ivory instead of Tide, Bold, Axion, etc.
* Are you ready to stop using colored tissue paper and toilet paper?
* Are you ready to support C.E.Q. by giving your time for research and action work?
* If you are not ready for these kinds of decisions, do not bother to come to the teach-in.

It is not for stalwart believers in the Great American Way, the Great American Society or the Affluent Society. It is for believers of the fact that we have turned into the EFFLUENT SOCIETY. May the stench be upon me for washing your brain with bio-degradable euphorisms, but the time is yours.

Here lies the means by which we can throw the monkey wrench into the works and come out smelling like soap suds. No one can question our goals and there lies our weakness. Our only strength lies in the hope that everyone will make a personal commitment to become aware and think about tomorrow rather than to become aroused and forget what happened yesterday as you step out of your fuel-injected Superbird, light your 5 inch cigarette, throw the match over your shoulder and stumble off into the smog . . .

Draft Trip

The Draft can be ended in 1971. Show your Congressmen your opposition to the Draft. Come to Washington with other Massachusetts young people to speak directly with:

Senator Stennis, Chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Senator Kennedy, presently opposed to Draft Repeal and other Massachusetts Representatives.

The Draft gives the President virtually unchecked personal power to escalate an overseas action into a war . . . like Vietnam . . . like Laos.

The President's own Gates Commission recommended an end to the draft by 1971. This report has been ignored. The Senate Armed Services Committee will hold "hearings" on the Draft beginning in May. At least 36 groups have asked to give testimony. None have been given permission so far. Defense Secretary Laird spoke out against Draft Repeal three times in the week after the Gates Commission Report. He and Pentagon spokesmen will be heard during the Draft hearings. Draft age people need to be heard, too. Not just on the streets of Washington, but in the Congress also. Come to Washington on April 26 - 27. Contact Valley Peace Center, Wed. - Fri., 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., 253-3683.

Love

BASIC PROBLEM: Dissatisfaction
BASIC ANSWER: You
BASIC SOLUTION: Meditation and positive thought

In a general sense I have the way to answer the world's problems. Yet each person in his own way can contribute his part of the answer. I believe that each person should meditate (look within himself) and do what he feels to be the most positive action in each situation. I'm concerned with you and I, here and now, only this present situation. I want to project my real feelings to everyone I meet all the time. I will accept everyone. I'd like everyone to accept me. This is called brotherhood. It's a feeling - a feeling of love and togetherness. Saturday night, April 25th, we'll be having a service in the ballroom. Please come and feel our love, then start loving others.

ART BUCHWALD

In the beginning God created Man, which according to all the latest birth control statistics was a big mistake.

And Man said, "Let there be light," and there was light, and Man called this light "fire," and at first it was used to warm him and let him cook his food and protect him from the wild animals. But Man discovered fire could be used to burn down a forest or burn someone else's hut or tree house or a witch at the stake or soft coal or oil, which made the air turn dark gray and black. And this made Man start to cough and his eyes to run and his sinuses to hurt. And Man finally said, "God, what are you doing to me?"

And after God made the rivers and lakes and streams and oceans, Man dumped all the refuse from the earth into the waters and it killed the fish and the plants and even the oxygen, and the waters turned muddy and brown and smelled, and no one could drink from them or bathe in them, or even sail in them. And finally Man shook his fist at the heavens and said, "For God's sake, knock it off."

And Man created the wheel, and this was good because Man no longer had to walk through the forests or up and down the mountains or to school. And then Man created the engine which turned the wheels, and Man no longer had to depend on animals to pull him on the roads and paths. And Man called this new creature "automobile," and it changed the face of the earth, for Man was forced to cut down the trees and flowers and pour concrete on the land to accomodate the automobile, and drill into the earth and the sea to fuel it, and sometimes the ocean turned black and the air turned brown, and as the automobile multiplied there was less space to park it, and it was unable to move any faster than a horse, and Man behind the wheel screamed, "Good God, am I ever going to get home?"

And Man created the plastic bag and the tin and aluminum can and the cellophane wrapper and the paper plate and the disposable bottle, and this was good because Man could then take his automobile and buy his food all in one place and he could save that which was good to eat in the refrigerator and throw away that which had no further use. And pretty soon the earth was covered with plastic bags and aluminum cans and paper plates and disposable bottles, and there was nowhere left to sit down or to walk. And Man shook his head and cried, "Look at all this God-awful litter."

And Man learned to split the atom and then he took what he learned and he put it in a bomb to defend himself from other men, and he set off the bomb to see if it would work, and it did. And Man was very pleased with himself because he was safe from other men and this was good. But other men learned to split the atom, too, and they put it in their bombs and so Man had to make bigger bombs, and the other men had to make bigger bombs, and the explosions put radioactive material in the air which got into Man's food and water and made that which was nourishing inedible and that which would quench thirst undrinkable. And again Man became very frightened and said, "God help us all."

But by this time God had had it and He sent down word to His loyal servant, Ralph Nader: "Now, Ralph, the first thing I want you to do is build an ark and then . . ."

End One Chapter and Begin Another

The Cause is dead. Long live the Cause.

It was made dramatically clear on the network news show the other night when they ran the two film clips right after each other. First Sam Brown, organizer of the Vietnam Moratorium Committee, was shown cleaning out his office and explaining that support for Moratoria was dying and that he was closing the National MOBE office in Washington.

Then, after a second's pause, the announcer in his deep and dramatic voice narrated a film clip of college students preparing for Earth Day.

The Vietnam Portest, its crisp October hope and its dramatic November dedication, has petered out. It is as the man on television said: "They (MOBE organizers) know that the excitement over their movement is over and that the President's continuing minor troop withdrawals are enough to satisfy most Americans and to end the sense of urgency behind their protest."

End one chapter and begin another.

The issue is now the environment, and the people involved are committed. They want to save this planet from the increasing abuse to which it has been subjected. They state with accuracy the dangers to man and his survival if air and water pollution and the abuse of natural resources and other hazards to the environment are not dealt with immediately.

The national magazines, TIME, LIFE, LOOK and NEWSWEEK have all had their special editions and the politicians have again found an issue on which to campaign, an issue from which that can develop the inexpensive and dedicated campaign help which once aided the War candidates.

Environment is the issue, and it deserves to be an issue; it is a legitimate concern, and it should receive the action now demanded.

But what of the war, the issue the environment has replaced? It still continues. There are fewer troops in Vietnam but the war is widening into all of Southeast Asia. People - Americans, Vietnamese, Caucasians, Asians, Blacks - still die.

War protest is no longer the urgent call headed by America's protest establishment, the educated young middle class whites. They have now turned from the war, just as they turned earlier from civil rights and the poor. They have picked up the environment as their urgent, all consuming issue.

They retain an awareness that one of their pet concerns still exists - Bobby Seale is in court and they will take time out from their environment teach-ins to mourn over his fate. But they will do this only because black is still beautiful and it is still fashionable to be concerned for the black man.

The other cause, the war, they will drop just as they dropped the earlier causes before the moratorium.

And the politicians, in this election year, will speak on pollution, will lecture on the environment and will even observe filthy rivers and rat-infested dumps. They will urge car manufacturers to speed up the development of anti-pollution devices. They will even propose legislation.

And, in a year or two, as the white middle class protest establishment moves from the environment to yet another issue in the great development and fulfillment of their collective conscience, the politicians will drop ecology, just as they have dropped civil rights, the poor and the war.

The environment is in danger, and people are right to be concerned about it. But there are other things about which they should also be concerned, things which, they should realize, their prior commitments left only briefly exposed to the public and dramatically far from being remedied.

Remember the three civil rights workers killed in Mississippi? Remember the poor peoples march? Remember Kennedy and McCarthy and Nixon and the draft? The black man is still a nigger, the poor man is still non-existant and the war still rages.

If the protest establishment treats the environment as it has treated these other issues, it will accomplish nothing, and in a year or two the only people concerned with ecology will be the handful who worried about the environment before this latest concern surfaced.

The issue, like the others before it, will be dead. Forgotten. All that will remain will be the protest establishment itself and the next in its seemingly endless series of causes. The Cause is dead. Long live the Cause.

Candidates' Forum

To the class of 1971:

As a candidate for president of the Class of 1971, I have several thoughts which I feel should be expressed:

I believe that the senior class president should be a spokesman for his class. In addition to organizing the traditional class social affairs the president also has an obligation to serve the University. The University now has active student spokesmen on the Board of Trustees, in the Student Senate, in class government, and in various campus organizations. The president of the Class of 1971 should add his name to this list.

I believe I am qualified to serve as this type of leader. I have been active in class government, as program chairman of the Distinguished Visitors Program, and presently as legislative intern in the State House in Boston. My active role in University activities qualifies me for this position and demonstrates, I hope, my responsibility to students.

I thank all those who gave me overwhelming support in the primary. I hope my experience and my desire to offer active leadership to the class will convince many other juniors to vote for me for President of the Class of '71.

NORM PATCH
Candidate for President
The Class of 1971

To the class of 1971:

This past year as your class president I have co-ordinated Winter Carnival which proved to be the most successful weekend ever held at the University. From this weekend the class profitted more than $3,500. Last year's class budget was a deficit of $4,000, but because Winter Carnival was so successful the budget for next year is $13,000. Since this is a considerable sum a way has been formulated to reduce the class tax by $2.00 per student and hopefully the tax will be further lowered if the September concert is a success.

I have begun to organize plans for the September concert and have attended Commencement Task Force meetings (the setting up of the final Senior weekend prior to graduation). As my opponent is presently enrolled at U. Mass. Boston on an internship, it is hard for me to foresee that he would be able to co-ordinate these events successfully without being at Amherst in the spring.

Next year is an important year and as Seniors we should look to other activities besides the social events that the classes normally sponsor. I want to set up an orientation service for graduating seniors where they will be introduced to specific professions of interest through honoraria. Also I would like the Seniors to take an active part in community projects as the class did at Thanksgiving by donating money to those on welfare in the Amherst area, which has not been done before. Ideas have been formulated for honoraria and the Martin Luther King Jr. Lecture Series which is sponsored in co-ordination with D.V.P.

This year the class has been very successful and faces next year with a lot of potential to make the senior year even more successful. I feel that my above qualifications and ideas have proven me worthy for the office of President of the Class of '71.

JOE PICCOLO
President, 1971

TO The Class of 1971

The posters say "Write In and Place an "X" after HAROLD KOLTIN for President of the Class of '71." "Pub Entertainer and Summer Resort Social Director and MC" are among the qualifications listed. Right now, the major function of class government is a social one, as it has been since I began serving on the Class Executive Council as a freshman in '67.

My goals: to expand the function of class government into the areas of academic reform, relevance of the educational system here, and the relation of the Class and University to society, i.e., political affairs, etc. Not ignoring the social function, I would also like to see the members of the class have more of a voice in the entertainment that comes up here. And I envision using the Campus Center facilities in the capacity of a weekend night club for the seniors of next year.

Please WRITE IN AND PLACE AN "X" AFTER HAROLD KOLTIN FOR PRESIDENT OF THE CLASS OF '71.

HAROLD KOLTIN

To the class of 71:

I would like to announce my candidacy for the office of Vice-President.

Class government in the past has involved too narrow a field. It is my wish to expand it in as many directions as possible. Realizing that our class has only one year left, it is very important that experiences we have be shared with the younger classes coming up. These classes can work and build on our experiences for the betterment of the University. Theirs will be the classes that will blow up that narrow field and begin to assume more responsibility than glass government has in the past.

What experiences am I talking about?

I have served on the Homecoming committee as a sophomore and was the first junior ever elected as chairman. We of that committee ('69) ran the most financially successful weekend. Because of its success, student funds were not used to provide payment. The weekend was supported solely on ticket sales. This weekend had a $54,000 budget that had a net profit of $9,000.

I have served on the Athletic and Convocation Center Committee. This committee set into motion plans for a multi-million dollar center that will replace the Curry Hicks Cage with an approximately a 15,000 seat capacity center. This Center will also provide a hockey rink and other multi-services ranging from media services to an indoor track.

I served on my dorm judiciary as a freshman. This experience exposed me to the judicial system on our campus.

I am presently a member of the Distinguished Visitors Program, Metawampee Selection Committee, and on the photography staff of the Index. I have also served on the class Executive Council for the past three years.

My experiences here at the University have been diverse. I feel that these experiences are not something to talk about, but rather, something to build on. I can build on these experiences. What will be built is BETTER CLASS GOVERNMENT.

Sincerely,
JERRY BURKE

To the class of 1971:

For three years I have been deeply involved with class government. I ran for the office of Secretary of the class first semester Freshman year and lost by a terrific margin. But class government means a great deal to me and second semester - due to this devotion I was appointed secretary. I still feel as strongly as I have in the past that class government can be much more than it is. I have been fighting for it to fulfill its obligations to the class and to the University and I will continue to do so if re-elected.

As a class officer at the present time I have been able to see how things have been done. . .the mistakes as well as the efficiently run activities. I feel that it would be to the advantage of the Class of 1971 to re-elect Bonnie Jackson as vice-president. I will not list the many other qualifications that I have gathered during the years because I feel that the important qualification is my past experience in doing what I am asking you to continue to let me do. . .I would appreciate your vote for me as vice-president of the Class of 1971.

BONNIE JACKSON
Candidate for re-election as Vice-president, 1971

To the class of 1971:

My name is Kathy King, and I am a candidate for the office of Treasurer of the Class of 1971. During the past year, I have taken the initiative to attend our Junior Class Executive Council and Budget Meetings, even though I am not officially a member. I have transferred here with class government experience and enthusiasm, as seen in my past, present, and future qualifications.

1. WHO'S WHO AMONG STUDENTS IN AMERICAN JUNIOR COLLEGES
2. JR. COLLEGE STUDENT SENATE, LITERARY GUILD, AND YEARBOOK STAFF
3. FUTURE SENIOR COUNSELOR
4. PAST SEC. OF RECREATION CLUB AND MEMBER OF OUTING CLUB
5. BUDGET MEETINGS
6. EXECUTIVE COUNCIL MEETINGS
7. DORM EXECUTIVE MEETINGS
8. ACTIVE IN APRIL 10-11 DAY OF CONCERN

I feel that as your treasurer, I can improve the relationships between class officers, which is so desperately needed for a successful Senior Class.

Does a Treasurer who is indecisive strike you as being effective as a class officer? The present Treasurer made a budget of $2,495 for Miss University, and at the last Budget Committee Meeting, he suggested eliminating this same Miss University program altogether. In other words, he voted against his own budget! Yet he said in a letter to Juniors, "I believe that class governments are primarily social." Miss University is not only a program which is the third step to Miss America but also, it is a chance for scholarships.

As Treasurer, I know that I can be more responsible in issues concerning our budget and the interests of our entire class. Our budget for next year, a staggering $74,650 MUST be handled with a great deal of responsibility.

If elected, I will work to the best of my ability to further class government co-operation and make our Senior Class one of the best.

In closing, I would appreciate your vote very much on Thursday.

Thank you.

Sincerely yours,
KATHY KING

To The Class of 1972:

The Student Union Governing Board is one of the most ignored elective offices on this campus.

I am running for S.U.G. Board in order to try to alleviate this problem. Next year, each undergraduate student at UMass will pay a $45 fee to finance the operation of the new Campus Center. Unless we have a strong student governing board to oversee the expenditure of student funds, the new Campus Center, which is already oriented towards conventions, will slip even further away from student control. THIS MUST BE AVOIDED. This is your campus center, and it is up to you to make sure that you, as students, run the building through an effective S.U.G. Board. In this difficult period of transition, I feel that my experience in all fields of student government will benefit the student body, and provide necessary student leadership. Many people talk about student power. This is the chance for each sophomore to do his share in making student power a reality. Vote experience and leadership. Vote Rocky Hodgson for S.U.G. Board.

ROCKY HODGSON

To the class of 1971:

I believe that class governments are primarily social, not legislative in nature, and therefore should offer social programs that are appealing to broad numbers of the class which it serves. The purpose of class governments should be not only to supplement existing worthwhile programs and services but also to create useful and necessary programs that are not found elsewhere at UMass.

When I became treasurer one year ago, our cash balance was approximately $4,500.00. Our present balance is somewhat over $15,650.00 and was the year-end balance is expected to be slightly over $13,000, a total increase of approximately $18,000.00 in a period of one year. This increase was in part, I feel, due to judicious and careful spending policies which I helped to initate and maintain.

This year's Senior Class budget is $58,047.00 with seniors paying a class tax of $11.00 in their senior year. Because our class is financially sound, I found it possible to draw up a budget for next year that would enable the Class of 1971 to sponsor $74,650.00 of activities and, at the same time reduce the class tax effectively $3.00 per person. In this budget, I have proposed a Speakers Program to supplement or strengthen the present Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Lecture Series that is co-sponsored by the Senior Class and the Distinghished Visitors Program.

In addition to serving as your treasurer, I have served on the Student Government Association and Budgets Committees of the Student Senate and on the University of Massachusetts Ring Committees during this year. The treasurer of the class is responsible for all financial transactions and every dollar of class money. I know, and am experienced in making financial transactions and sound economic policies and practices. I am sincere in stating that I am willing and capable and qualified to serve in the capacity as your treasurer for an additional year.

Finally, I believe that by examining the records of this year, one will have the reasons and desire to re-elect Jim Bouin as Treasurer of the Class of 1971.

JIM BOUIN
Candidate for re-election

As the current president of the Class of 1973, I would like to make it known that I will be running as a write-in candidate for next year. I would thus appreciate it if all those who support me for next year would write my name on the ballot.

I have tried to accomplish a great many things this year. Some were brought about, others were never realized. Some of these things were an invitation to the Governor to speak at UMass., a trustees coffee hour, a theft insurance plan, and a concert in the stadium. There were many reasons why these things weren't accomplished, but the main thing has come out of what I did do and didn't in experience. I now know the ins and outs, and no matter who the person is, you have to know how the machinery works before you can operate it. If you re-elect me, I'll know how to put my programs into effect right away, and I have a definite program for next year.

The program which I plan to initiate next year is to take the odd $40,000 budget and made a dent not only on this campus but in the state. There will be one major concert in September which we will co-sponsor with the seniors. There will also be a speakers program and smaller concerts such as the Lazy Days folk week coming up. These programs, though, do not take up a large part of the budget. I plan to use the rest as a lobbying force in the state. We will lobby for change in a law which the class will choose. Right now I have three proposals: birth control, abortion, and legalization of grass. . .what I wish to do is pick one of these or a substitute and have films produced (on campus at low cost), literature printed and speakers brought in.

We may not be able to change the law we choose to attack, but at least we can educate people and start the ball rolling. The vote will soon be given to eighteen-year-olds and the campus can become a real political force. The existence of the three laws cited is a travesty of justice. I do not want to convince anyone to commit any of the "crimes" listed, only to let others be free. A person may be against abortions for religious reasons, that's fine, but their beliefs should not be imposed on others. We can do something which no university has done yet in terms of changing a law. I've given you a definite program, and I hope that if you wish to discuss it you'll call me.

Thank you,
NELSON SIGELMAN

To the class of 1972

I am a candidate for President of the class of '72. I have worked for two years as executive council member and Public Relations chairman, and have become increasingly disenchanted with its operations.

The biggest factor that led to our government's collapse was the failure of the class officers to utilize the Executive Council and its committees (such as the finance Committee). Operation of the class was left in the hands of the four class officers, with the Executive Council's only job to give token approval to ideas that either the class officers introduced or had sanctioned. If this class is to pick itself up, the prerequisite must be a more effective operation and participation of the council and its committees.

I believe that this class is much more than a name to put as sponsor to some concert. As representatives of 1/5 of this university, I see class government as an instrument for as much social and educational reform as we can accomplish. At least we have an obligation to try.

If elected I can only promise to do my best to make the class of '72 work for you and this university.

JULIE IERARDI

To the class of '72:

My name is Mary Ann Lisee and I am a write-in candidate for the office of Vice President of the Class of '72. The reasons why I am running are obvious. Our class is suffering from an acute case of communications breakdown. The class officers have failed to communicate with the Executive Council and as a result the entire class has gone uninformed. For example, the newsletter sent to all the class members is pure propaganda and in no way sufficiently advises the class as to the activities of its representatives. As Vice President I feel my major job would be to transmit information from the class government to the class itself and vice versa. Class government should represent the class and it cannot do this unless it knows the thoughts of the rest of the class. I would also like to have the entire class take a more active part in the University community. The class's job is not just to run concerts but to run the University.

Our class needs organization, and if elected, I will work to make this class more representative and acknowledged on this campus.

Sincerely,
MARY ANN LISEE
Candidate: Vice Pres. '72

MDC Special: The Coed Dorm Proposals

"Not to Destroy, But to Fulfill"

The Whys . . .

By DON GLICKSTEIN
Editorial Staff

Imagine yourself with hundreds of other human beings.

Think of what it would be like if you and everyone of those humar beings had but a few square yards of concrete suspended in space to call your own, to work on, to sleep on, to live on.

Now, picture yourself standing on your square yards of concrete and separated from your neighbor by an invisible wall. You can stick your hand though it and touch your neighbor, but you cannot feel him. You speak, but he does not listen. You look to see what's wrong, but you cannot see.

You fear others, and others fear you, for it is known that men act only for their own pleasure.

You rob and deceive others, for you never have enough to satiate your need for pleasure.

You destroy your own possessions, for they are not worth valuing.

From your view, you sometimes see people who have the courage to trust each other. But there are never more than two or three, and you are never company to them.

There are times when you remember what it was like when you first moved to your city. It was difficult, more difficult than now.

Such a city exists.

More than 5400 people are crowded onto less than half of a square mile. The only plants that grow in the Southwest Residential College are those surrounding baseball diamonds, parking lots, and stadiums. There are sycamore trees that grow out of the cement, and there are potted palm trees.

Many of the people live sandwiched in 22-story towers. They have no need to know anyone who does not live on their floor. The rest of the people live in 4 or 5 story buildings. A person does not visit another building or another floor without serious intent. It just isn't done.

There are many, many lonely human beings in the Southwest Residential College.

Doors are kept locked. Too many people have been robbed of too much.

Building damages at the Southwest Residential College cost almost $3000 every month. What you don't care about, you don't save.

A freshman quickly learns what is "fun" and what is "survival". "Fun" is getting drunk and smashing lights. "Fun" is shouting down a speaker whom you don't agree with. "Survival" is speeding on mescaline during finals. "Survival" is watching out for number 1.

There have been small groups of people at the Southwest Residential College and other areas on campus who think that living means something more.

Some of these people feel that closer human relationships might be the something more.

Some of these people are trying to build coeducational dormitory communities.

The Board of Trustees has proved in the past that they care about the lives of students. I hope that these men and women will continue to care.

(Ed. note: The following petition will be submitted to the Board of Trustees by the coed dorms.)

We, the following faculty, administrators, and professional staff of the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, urge the Board of Trustees to approve the "Greenough Plan" for coeducational dormitories as recommended by Chancellor Tippo.

We also urge that the alternating room plans of Greenough House, Project 10 (Moore and Pierpont Houses), Butterfield House, Lewis House, George Washington Lower and Middle Houses, and Wheeler House be given the upmost consideration as housing options for residents of the University.

. . . The Ways

The following dorms have submitted proposals for co-educational living options:

Greenough -- 3 floors of alternating rooms, male and female; Greenough will continue with its special courses, speakers, and community projects.

Project 10 (Moore House) -- options of all male corridors, all female corridors, alternating rooms, quiet corridors, and normal ones. Moore House is open to anyone interested in pursuing a plan o independent study, supervised by an advisor. The study could be for a semester or a year, and could involve any number of alternatives, including research, reading lists, travel off-campus, traditional courses, and work-stidy.

Project 10 (Pierpont House) -- options like those in Moore House. Pierpont House is open to freshmen and sophomores. More than 2 dozen courses held in the dorm are geared to flexibility, informality, and individual needs. Project 10 feels that it is vital that the first two years of college be years of exploration with security, and freedom with responsibility.

Prince House -- choice of alternate corridors and floors. Prince House will be an international house, consisting of one-third foreign students, one-third graduate students, and one third undergraduates. It will offer special international oriented courses and educational experiences.

Orchard Hill (Webster and Dickinson Houses) -- alternating corridors and floors. As part of the Orchard Hill Residential College, Webster and Dickinson Houses will benefit from more than a dozen Hill courses. Spaces for 100 freshmen will be available for those who wish the coeducational community.

Cance House -- 2 corridors all female, 7 corridors all male. The Cance Living Venture will continue to expand with its already instituted honors colloquia.

George Washington Lower House -- 1 all male floor, 1 all female floor, 4 floors of alternating rooms. Washington Lower will begin school one week earlier than the main campus for a special orientation. In addition to sections of regular campus courses, seminars in Residential Living and Human Sexuality will be offered.

George Washington Middle House -- 1 or 2 floors of alternating rooms, 4 or 5 floors of all male. Washington Middle will have a seminar on Community. It will also have 2 "facilitators-in-residence" for advice, projects, and counseling.

Butterfield House -- 2 floors of all male, 2 floors of alternating rooms. Butterfield like most of the other coed dorms, will have its own special courses. It will also have its own eating facilities and a town meeting government.

Dwight House -- 2 floors all male, 2 floors all female. Dwight House will continue to develop courses that will make the Quad a true residential college and living-learning environment.

Lewis House -- alternating rooms, all female corridors. Lewis House, already helping the Belchertown State Hospital, will be able to have guest speakers staying in the dorm, a library, an arts and crafts room, and possibly, faculty fellows.

Wheeler House -- 3 floors alternating rooms, 2 floors all male. Wheeler has been using most of its cultural enrichment fund money to build its library. Classes are difficult to have in the dorm because of lack of space.

Gorman House -- 1 floor all giris, 4 floors all men. Gorman is developing a distinguished visitors-type program which will feature sports and movement.

Brookmill House and Baker House are also planning coeducational dormitory proposals.

The Ends

By JOHN W. TIERNEY
Residence Director, Greenough

Today the University is no longer a small rather friendly gathering of people calmly pursuing an "Education." The concentrations of people here in residential living units are rapidly turning this place into a city of major proportions. A growing fear is that in our rapid expansion we will bring along with us all the assorted illnesses of a mass society. We are at an important juncture in the history of the University. We have the unique opportunity to examine our massness and say we will experiment with alternative models of living and learning. And perhaps we can return to the Commonwealth an important critique of living in a mass society.

When any group grows larger and larger, the individual becomes increasingly more invisible. Invisibility or individual alienation helps to perpetrate loneliness, acts of individual violence, and a general sense of powerlessness. With a small interested group, I believe it is possible for people to identify with each other, to interact with each other, and to share openly with each other their feelings and experiences so that they may grow to see each other as a complex of intellect and emotion, striving for affection, recognition, and a place in the world to feel a part of. In sum, a community-centered project has as one of its primary concerns, individual visibility.

Let's look at this word "community" some more. A community is a group that has individual visibility, and a sense of mutually held concerns. It is a group where each member knows and cares for each other. A community was a small town where everyone knew each other, where everyone depended on each other to some extent. These small towns grew and people became more independent. The interdependencies that necessitated interaction, renewed relationships, and kept people linked with others dissappeared. Thus the actual community has become merely a geographical one. There are a lot of other factors that give rise to the growth of actual community, but I think the germane ones to further discussion are a sense of interdependence and, continuous contacts.

Thus, in order to foster a sense of community, it is important to have: 1. a sense of interdependence; 2. a system for continuous contact; and 3. all peoples and opinions represented. A community where everyone has basically the same beliefs and opinions would be sterile and awfully boring. A community of people with widely differing perspectives, experiences, and opinions is bound to be an energetically dynamic group. A sense of interdependence is necessary if we are to create the kinds of interaction that will renew and sustain relationships. Within a community the shared work experience where individuals' skills are pooled is one way to start a sense of interdependence. Continuous contact means free and easy visibility. If in the course of a day I repeatedly cross the paths of the same people, I am more likely to get to know them, than others I see on a less frequent basis. Thus we have to look at the physical constructs within our living units that will allow for continuous indelliberate contacts between people.

The variables a community builder has to work with are fragile and elusive creatures. You have to be continuously aware of what pressures the physical construct of your particular building exacts on its inhabitants. And you have to be able to manipulate all the variables in order to bring this thing called community into focus for your particular living environment. Imagine the chemist undertaking an experiment knowing the variables, having a sense of what his goal is, but not being able to control the variables because someone else would not permit him. So I here suggest quite strongly that all the variables and options for design models of these community centered coed residences be placed in the hands of those people directly in contact with these projects.

I think offering the varied options of different life styles among the various residential units of the University will add to a badly needed pluralism that does not exist today. I also believe that the quality of life style and pluralism available in this way will offer a reference point from which a student can comfortably pursue his particular niche in the grove academy. And I feel comfortable when a person who recognizes a viable, important idea picks up that idea, and carries it forward, not because it may or may not be politically expedient, but because of an internal integrity and a commitment to academic freedom.

Film Portrays Polish Jew's Life

THE LAST CHAPTER, an eloquent and widely acclaimed film dealing with the thousandyear history and way of life of Poland's Jews, and its abrupt and horrible end in the Nazi era, will be shown on campus on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, April 22 and 23, at 8:00 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

Hillel and the Student Union Movie Committee are sponsoring the Wednesday showing and the American Jewish Community the Thursday showing. Both showings are open to the public free of charge.

The movie, which is essentially documentary, is made up of stills, film clips and old movie clips, put together with a highly literate script, quietly and poignantly narrated by Theodore Bikel, and with a moving musical score by Vladmir Heintz.

The bitter history of the Jews of Poland set against the background of their culture and contributions to that country over a period of a thousand years makes for an unforgettable film.

Theodore Bikel will narrate film on the Jews in Poland.

DVP Seeks Lecturer Suggestions

The Distinguished Visitors Program is planning its 1970-71 lecture series, and would like suggestions from members of the University community.

Any student or faculty member who would like to see a particular speaker brought to the campus is urged to write a note to DVP, and mail it to RSO 3ox 803, Student Union, or bring his suggestion to the RSO office.

The DVP committee wants to invite the speakers the community would like to hear.

Please help.

All of us hate to see empty cans and bottles lousing up what's left of a beautiful country.

It's too bad packaging technology today isn't as exotic and convenient as the gimmicks and gadgets on the TV thrill shows; like you, we'd like nothing better than for every empty can and bottle to self-destruct. Someday, soon, things will be different, though... because we and a lot of other concerned people are all working on the problem in earnest.

Meantime, there is a foolproof way to keep cans and bottles from cluttering up the countryside, and you can do your part:

Please don't throw them there in the first place.

Frosh Stickmen Split on Weekend

By STEVE MOSHER
Staff Reporter

A single week's more practice was all the freshman lacrosse team needed as the Little Redmen destroyed the Wesleyan frosh 18-0 last Saturday and then played a typically sound Harvard club in a Patriot's Day rainstorm to an 11-4 loss.

Leaving the memory of their loss to Brown behind them, the freshmen probed and tested the Wesleyan team for the first ten minutes of the Saturday contest before unloading their assault on the opponent's goal.

At 11:31 Fred Michels scored the winning goal from Ed Haugavik but their teammates were to add 17 more markers in the rout. The first period scoring closed when Graig Mussleman scored unassisted at 13:48.

Nothing Wesleyan could do went right in the rest of the game, as UMass controlled the contest from the middle of the second period until the final whistle. The Redmen kept coming at Wesleyan with all their fire power and it paid off with four fast goals in the last four minutes before half time intermission.

Joe Deriso potted an unassisted goal at 10:49. Then with just a minute and a half left the stickmen exploded for three quick goals by Fred Michels from Ed Haugavik, Graig Musselman from Michels, and Dwight Bloomquist from Joe Deriso.

Holding the territorial advantage proved to be the little Redmen's biggest asset in that first half as they took 23 shots on net to just four for the Wesleyan frosh. Goalie Rob Plasance was not severely tested in the periods as his saves were on long shots.

Under the leadership of Vin Sbano, Kevin Bush, and Michels the stickmen scored eight times in the third period to turn the game into a rout. Sbano scored two unassisted goals to make the score 8-0.

Bush scored three of the next five goals assisted by Sbano, Sheehan, and Michels. Michels scored from Sbano, and assisted on Joe Deriso's second goal of the game. And Dwight Bloomquist added the 14th goal with just one second left in the period on an unassisted play.

Lasting out the final fifteen minutes and preventing the Redmen from reaching 20 goals was just about all Wesleyan hoped to do and they almost didn't do that.

Bloomquist, John McClosky, and Sheehan all got unassisted goals in the first five minutes. And Michels ended the scoring at 7:53 on a goal from Haugavik.

For the game, the Redmen took 41 shots and only a great performance by the Wesleyan goalie kept the score from reaching astronomical figures. Rob Plasance had to make just four more saves for a game total of eight in posting his shutout.

Frosh Netmen to Open Today, Prospects Bright

By JIM BROWN
Staff Reporter

Coach Steve Kosakowski is prepared for the first freshman tennis meet of the season today at Mt. Hermon with probably two of the best prospects he has had in quite a while, since present senior captain Mike Katz and junior Alan Goldberg.

Playing in the number one and number two spots will be Steve Ferber and Dave Bellware respectively. Both were finalists in the tennis intramurals last fall. Ferber, from Port Washington, N.Y., has earned the number one spot because he has been able to beat Bellware (from Metuchon, N.J.) in practice sets. Time will tell if he can keep that position.

Filling in for the top six places will be Bruce Kaplan, Malcolm Tronic (Spain), Anthony Ng (pronounced "ing", from Brookline) and Mark Ehrlich (from Springfield).

Other players will be (in no particular order) Phil Smith (Duxbury), Fred Banks (Shrewsbury),

LEO is said to be susceptible to flattery, but LIBRA runs a close second. Both LEO and LIBRA appreciate luxury and the beautiful things in life. Both signs harmonize — a LEO sets along excellently with a LIBRAN.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Fiscal responsibility is a necessity. The bills come marching in — so do obligations. Take care of what is immediate. Don't compound money errors. There is no need for action based on panic.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): You may want to initiate new policies. But you should also be aware of monetary responsibilities. It might be best to re-examine position. Finish a project which enhances your prestige.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Some basic issues will be changed. But the process is slow. Display of temper, impatience on your part would not be constructive. Be creative rather than argumentative.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): A friend may require guidance. Be cooperative, but don't get involved in other people's emotional problems. You must first be true to yourself. Residual benefits for others will follow.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Safety, security measures should receive top priority. You are tempted to throw caution to winds. Overcome this. Applies especially to loose wires, other hazards in the home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Avoid needless journey. Be sure you know where you want to go — and why. Check facts, figures. Some restrictions, delays are for your own good. Don't be in too much of a hurry. Avoid writing in anger.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Give full rein to intellectual curiosity. Ask questions — answers will be obtained. Finances, personal possessions require attention. Not wise to delegate duties — be there in person.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Relationships with those close to you undergo test. Be especially considerate of feelings of family members. Make adjustment, concession which results in more harmonious home atmosphere.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Work behind the scenes for cause dear to you. Help those who are in need of understanding. The more you give now, the more you ultimately receive. Be discreet; keep a secret.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Some friends may seem to lack sense of humor. Be patient: don't force issues. Obtain hint from SAGITTARIUS message. One who confides problem deserves respect. Refuse to cast first stone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You have a right to express yourself. Those who press you may be less than generous. Get rid of burden not rightly your own. Be compassionate, but don't give up personal freedom.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Answers you need can be found by checking correspondence, visiting library — and reading. Revere your own individuality. Don't permit anyone to rob you of it. Includes some well-meaning relatives.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY greater freedom of action is indicated next month. The short time remaining to prepare, to become aware of what you really need. You are basically independent, very seldom part of the crowd.

Red Hot Stickmen at Harvard Today

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Assistant Sports Editor

Going after its third straight win of the young season, the UMass lacrosse team travels to Cambridge this afternoon for an encounter with Harvard. The contest is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m.

Coming off a mediocre 6-8 season, Harvard Coach Bruce Munro feels that "our starting team will be strong, stronger than last year's, but our overall depth will be a question mark."

Munro was obviously referring to the attack position as the entire starting attack unit from last year is returning. Leading the way is All-Ivy Johnance, the Crimson's leading scorer last season with29 goals and 27 assists for 56 points. Also starting at attack will be veterans Phil Zuckerman and Cle Landolt.

However, Harvard does seem to lack depth at this position. Munro is hopeful that he will get some scoring power from sophomores Caleb Warren, top frosh scorer last season with 33 points, Steve Leahy, and Paul Brown. Munro sums up the attack position this way, "Attack should be better, but definitely no worse than last season."

Midfield, however, is a different story. Depth is definitely not a problem for Coach Munro. "We have plenty of spark but putting the lines together, marching skills and individual abilities, is the problem." Captain Bruce Regan heads the cast of returnees. The All-Ivy middy finished third on the team in scoring last year and can do everything. Munro would not hesitate to use Regan at attack if needed.

Other veterans are Rick Frisbie, probably the best center-draw on the team, and Bob Johnson. Johnson is talented in setting up scoring plays and picking up loose balls.

Adding to the depth are juniors Ted Rumsey, Charlie Scott, Bob Hayes, and Chris Doyle, and sophomores Dave Crawford, who looked impressive in pre-season Leif Rosenberger, and Jim Miller.

Depth seems to be the main problem as far as defense is concerned. Due to the loss by graduation of All-Ivy defenseman Mike Aanais and Pete Barber, who decided not to play, Coach Munro finds himself with some glaring holes to be filled.

Munro feels that with veterans Bob McDowell, Bill Bennett and Don Gogel, the Crimson should have three solid starters. Jim Giancola, John Kettle, Bob Barber, and Roger Martindell are the leading candidates for the all-important fourth spot.

Adding to Harvard's defensive problems is the fact that last year's starting goalie, Kirby Wilcox, was injured midway through the season and will not be back this year. The probable starting goalie today will be John Cosentino although he has been bothered by injuries. He is the only experienced goalie on the team and should be be unable to play, Coach Munro would have to choose between sophomores John Bowers and Leigh Smith.

Coming into today's game, Harvard has won three of its last four contests. Although the Crimson was defeated by Cornell in its last outing, 13-6, it had previously defeated Penn. 7-5, MIT 23-6 and Adelphi 14-1

UMass Coach Dick Garber will probably go with the same lineup that has done so well so far. That would mean that Bruce Crawford, who has allowed only six goals in two games, will again be in the nets. Garber's attackmen, who lead an offense which is averaging over fifteen goals

Derderian Paces UMass At Boston Marathon

Through the wind and rain of April 20th., seven runners splashed their way to personal records and top performances in Monday's Hopkinton to Boston Marathon.

The times this year were extremely fast, as indicated by winner Ron Hill's 2 hour 10 minute 30 second record which was 3:19 below the previous mark.

Leading the UMass contingent for the second straight year was Tom Derderian, who sped over the undulating 26 mile 385 yard course in 2:29.57, an average of 5:40 a mile. His time was good enough for 31st place; the 15th American finisher in the International field. Last year Derderian placed 85th with a time of 2.49.

Freshman Tom Jasmin and Bob Sullivan ran the famous Boston course for the first time and turned in top times of 2:44 and 2:48, respectively. A third freshman, Steve Ware, covered the distance in 2:50. 12, two seconds in front of another UMass runner, Rich Tashjian. Tashjian cut 12 minutes from his last year's time but only improved eight places 174 to 166. Last year Tashjian's time would have placed him 91st.

Dave Eiben was the only Redman marathoner who missed his pre-race goal and didn't improve on last year. He ran a fast 3:05 but because of severe tightening of his muscles, was a minute slower than last year. Joel Fox in his second Boston run, improved the most of the UMass entrants by cutting 32 minutes from his previous best in finishing in 3:12. Fox placed in the mid 300's rounding out the Redmen starters in a field of 1,011.

This year's times were incredibly fast, partly due to the heavy rain, although the low temperature didn't aid the runners. The top 100 finishers were in by 2:43.30. with 365th place being filled over an hour faster than it was just two years ago.

Trackmen Seventh at BC Relays

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

For the second straight Saturday the UMass track team travelled to the cold and windy eastern section of the state to compete in a track meet. This past Saturday the occasion was the Boston College Relays in which the Redmen finished seventh in a field of 22 of the best track teams in New England.

All times and distances in this meet were well below par due to the natural elements of mother nature and the man-made elements of the meet officials. All the events were way behind schedule and this caused much discomfort to the competitors as they had to fight the elements for a much longer time than expected.

Although the Redmen did not come away with any first place laurels, there were still many noteworthy performances by the team members who competed.

Gerry Spellman led an outstanding team performance by the UMass hurdlers, by taking a second in the 440 yard intermediate hurdles in the time of 54.7 seconds in this invitational race. Jim Graves showed signs of returning to his indoor form with his best time of the season, 59.5 seconds. Two freshmen also placed well in this race as Billy Clark and Bob Landry ran times of 59.9 and 61.0 seconds respectively.

The two mile relay team of Al Mangan, Ron Wayne, Arnie Morse, and Dave Evans took second place behind Holy Cross, in a well run race by the Redmen.

Cal Carpenter, Eddie Shaughnessey, and Graves combined efforts for a fifth place finish in the long jump. Also combining for a fifth place performance was the javelin team of Dana Robertson, Rocco Pettito, and Dave Baker. Robertson's throw was good enough for sixth place in the individual standings. His distance was 178'11" into a strong wind.

Cal Carpenter continued his fine high-jumping by taking a fifth place in the individual competition with a jump of 6'2".

Tom Derderian and freshman Tom Jasmin warmed up for their Monday marathon efforts by competing in the steeplechase, with Derderian taking a sixth in the varsity field and Jasmin coming in third among the freshmen.

Golf Team Wins Three

Last Friday, the UMass Golf team played host to Vermont, and came out on top 6 to 1. Medalist for UMass was captain Ed Puzas with a 75, while Mike Minkos and Dave Salter also shot 75, and Rich Aherne a 77.

Monday, the Redmen met New Hampshire and Bowdoin at Portsmouth Country Club in New Hampshire, and again won big. They beat New Hampshire 4 to 3 and Bowdoin 6 to 1.

Playing conditions for the New Hampshire-Bowdoin match were far from ideal. Wind and rain hampered play, but temporary tees and several temporary greens made course play shorter than usual. John Kul (69), and Ed Puzas (70) turned in excellent rounds despite the poor weather conditions.

This week, the Redmen will meet Boston College and Holy Cross at Boston College Thursday, and play at Rhode Island Friday. These matches will really determine the strength of this year's squad. UMass has not defeated Rhode Island in Yankee Conference Championship

Bruins Sock Hawks, 4-1, Teams Journey to Bos.

CHICAGO (AP) – The Boston Bruins, led by Bobby Orr, outmuscled the Chicago Black Hawks 4-1, last night to take a two-game advantage in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup playoff series.

The triumph gave Boston a 2-0 edge and put Chicago in the unfavorable position of having to win at least one of the next two games in Boston Thursday night and Sunday afternoon to stay alive.

Orr, the National Hockey League's leading scorer during the regular season, put Boston ahead 1-0 at 5:08 of the first period with a shot up the slot past Black Hawk goalie Tony Esposito.

Goals by John McKenzie at 10:32 and Don Marcotte at 13:09 gave the Bruins an insurmountable 3-0 lead after two periods of play.

Brilliant offensive execution and fantastic defensive play by Orr and Boston's Smith boys, Dallas and Rick, kept the Hawks on their heels.

The Black Hawks finally got on the board at 2:18 of the third period on a goal by defenseman Bill White. However, this was offset at 5:02 when Phil Esposito took the puck away from Dennis Hull and scored an unassisted goal.

Elters Defeats Sheehan For Senate Presidency

By ROBERT NORTHSHIELD
Staff Reporter

Vice President Glenn Elters, a late entrant into the Student Senate presidential race, swept to a 49-25 victory over Senator Stafford Sheehan last night at the weekly Senate meeting in a packed Student Union Council chambers.

In other contests, Pat Beharry, present secretary of the Senate was elected Vice-President defeating Senators Bill Brickhouse and John Hogan, while Rick Verrochi was elected treasurer over Bob Waters.

Elters who decided to run for the office only a week ago, due to the withdrawal from the Senate of Mark Smith, succeeds Cynthia J. Olken officially next Wednesday as Senate president and Board of Trustees member.

Senator Sheehan, in his address before voting, stressed the lack of communication between the Student Senate and the student body at large. He also commented that, to the majority of students, "The Senate is a joke."

Sheehan pledged that he would concern himself with informing students about the campus and that "We in the senate must try to build confidence in ourselves as a body." He also said that the main area where the Senate must work is academics.

Elters, who spoke second, emphasized the importance of the creation of a University Senate combining all three present Senates (student, faculty and graduate) and that the University Senate would be the beginning of a new era for the University.

Elters reiterated time and again that students should gain equal freedom to gain student rights. He also stressed the importance for the Senate to direct its attention to academic matters.

The two-to-one margin for Elters ends a year that saw the Senator win a special election for the vice-presidency and then after Senator Smith's withdrawal a week ago, a seven day campaign to become president.

Miss Beharry's campaign stressed her experience in student government and her administrative abilities. Brickhouse emphasized the need for the vice-president to help make the transition to a University Senate easier, while Hogan, a dark-horse candidate who entered just this week, due to the withdrawal from candidacy of Senator Leo Clark, stressed the need for the vice-president to communicate with committees.

The election took two ballots. The first saw all candidates lacking a majority, Beharry having 35 votes, Brickhouse 22, and Hogan 16, with two abstentions. Miss Beharry gained a majority and the victory on the second ballot with 38 votes. Brickhouse remained at 22 while Hogan had 15.

Verrochi had the easiest race of the evening soundly defeating Waters, 42-13, with five other votes scattered and five other abstentions.

The new officers will be sworn in next week.

In the only other action, the Senate voted to postpone for three weeks action that would make the secretary's position appointive rather than elective by the senate body. The work of the secretary would be done by 1 or 2 people appointed by the president.

Abernathy Scores Seale Trial During King Memorial Lecture

By BRIAN WHITE
Staff Reporter

Rev. Ralph Abernathy spoke yesterday at the Cage to an enthusiastic capacity audience, in the second annual Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Lecture.

Reading from a statement he had made to the press in New York Monday morning, he demanded justice in the trial of the Connecticut Black Panthers who have been charged with the murder of a police informer.

He had gone to Connecticut, he said, because "Southern style justice has come to New Haven." He endorsed the rally now being planned to protest the treatment the Panthers have so far received, calling the proceedings "no more or less than a legal lynching."

While deploring present trends towards racism and oppression, Rev. Abernathy expressed a commitment to America. "Africa is the home of my ancestors and we're proud of it," he said, but "America is our home."

He emphasized the extreme seriousness of the current trend toward oppression. As Rome under Nero was doomed for its injustices, so America is dooming herself by allowing its power to concentrate into the hands of a few men. By allowing racism, poverty, and war to persist, our society is bringing about its own end.

As a minister, Rev. Abernathy affirmed the value of nonviolence, although he did not deny the possibility of self-defence. Violence, he stated, is often a resort of the less capable; he mentioned several instances in which he himself had effectively employed "soul power."

His prepared speech was a call to action. The American system need not be evil, but in action it very often is. Ample opportunity exists for reform and for positive action; the main thing holding the country back from greatness is not its institutions, but the apathy prevailing among those who should direct it.

This lack of interest has similarly enervated organized religion: "Christianity as it is today has failed. It has failed not because it was tried and found difficult but because it was found difficult and not tried."

"Greenough Plan" OK'd But Alt. Rooms Nixed

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

The Board of Trustees yesterday passed a resolution which could pave the way for up to twelve dorms to go Co-ed next fall, using alternate floor organization (Greenough plan.)

But the Trustees defeated a move to allow the dorms to choose between the Greenough plan and alternate room organization. They also defeated a motion which would have allowed one dorm to have alternate room housing of males and females as an experiment while the other dorms used the Greenough plan.

Chancellor Oswald Tippo will make the final decision as to what dorms go Co-ed, but barring any unforseen developments, most people involved in the establishment of Co-ed housing say that all 12 dorms with Co-ed plans for next semester should receive final approval from the Chancellor.

The marathon two hour debate on the Co-ed question was punctuated by several students and staff members arguing that students should not have to be "shackeled" by the Greenough plan, and should be allowed to devise whatever Co-ed housing organization they felt was most suited to their dorms.

Both Tippo and Dean of Students William F. Field argued strongly for the Greenough plan, and expressed confidence in the manner in which Greenough residents have responded to the challenges of Co-ed living this year.

Board Fixes Dorm Rents At Whitmore Meeting

By MARK SILVERMAN
Managing Editor

The Board of Trustees gave final approval to the W.E. B. DuBois Afro-American Studies Department and finalized the dormitory rent increase for next year at their meeting in Whitmore yesterday.

The rent hike, based on recommendations from the President's Committee on rent, includes a $100 raise for residents of traditional dorms and a $110 increase for residents of Southwest and Orchard Hill.

Specifically, traditional dorm rooms will cost $500 a year, residential college rooms $580 and the new project 12 dorms, if they open on time, $650 a year, beginning next fall.

The rent committee was formed after the student outcry over the proposed hike earlier this semester, and included students, faculty, and administrators.

The Administration's major reason for the rent increase, according to spokesmen, are the retroactive salary increases granted all state employees last fall, rising construction costs, inflated bond interest rates and increased maintenance costs.

Administration officials said yesterday that they have requested additional federal and state loan funds to insure that "no students will be forced to leave school because of the additional costs."

In a related matter, the Trustees also voted to institute a student housing deposit, $100 for Freshmen and $50 for all other students. Trustees say that this system will insure fuller dorm occupancy rates next year, and thereby lower school costs. Students will receive the deposit back when they leave the University.

In granting final approval to the Afro - American Studies Department, the Trustees were unanimous in praising the planning committee for formulating "a plan, a structure which should insure the University of having one of the finest black studies programs in the nation."

They singled out faculty member Micheal Thelwell for "his exceptional and devoted work."

The Department is designed to offer an undergraduate major in Afro-American studies, and courses in black humanities for non-majors. Disciplines involved will include African languages, literature, history, antropology, political science, economics, psychology, arts and fine arts.

Commenting on the department, Trustee Frederick S. Troy of Boston said, "This is a mature program, combining the needs of traditional academic programs with the needs of our black students."

He added that he hoped the Department "will soon branch out and involve itself in the black community at large," and said that future exchange programs between the balck studies department here and those at other schools

TRUSTEE CROWLEY of Boston spoke against the Board's intention to allow 12 new dorms to go Co-Ed next year. He also supported the move to block alternate-room co-ed organization.

Whitmore Bombs

A bomb scare early yesterday afternoon cleared the Whitmore Administration building for over an hour. A University spokesman said the call came in around 11:45, saying that a bomb was in the building that would go off at 12:19.

The building was cleared, as a search was made. The building was back in normal operation after about an hour, though.

One Whitmore secretary was quoted as saying, "These things always ruin my lunch hour."

Government Drops Draft Charges Against Coffin

BOSTON (AP) - The government dropped draft conspiracy charges in federal court Wednesday against the Rev. William Sloane Coffin, chaplain of Yale University, and author Mitchell Goodman of Temple, Maine.

Judge W. Arthur Garrity in U.S. District Court agreed to drop the charges on a move by U.S. Attorney Herbert Travers.

The action filed by Travers said, "The government has carefully evaluated the physical evidence remaining and the testimony available and concluded that the evidence and testimony together with the elimination of Dr. Benjamin Spock and Michael Ferber as defendants does not warrant the retrial of Coffin and Goodman."

The four were convicted in June 1968, on charges of conspiracy to counsel draft evasion after a long jury trial. A fifth defendant - Marcus Raskin, codirector of the Institute of Political Studies at Washington, D.C. - was acquitted.

However, the U.S. Court of Appeals threw out the conviction and ordered directed verdicts of acquittal for Spock, noted baby doctor and author, and Ferber, a graduate student at Harvard University.

The appeals court had ordered new trials for Coffin and Goodman.

The case grew out of activities of the four in demonstrations opposing the Vietnam war.

NerveGasOpposed

SEATTLE (AP) - Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and the American Civil Liberties Union joined the fight Wednesday against plans to ship 548 railway cars of nerve gas from Bangor, Wash., to Hermiston, Ore.

Both used Earth Day as the occasion to try to block the shipments on environmental grounds. They contended requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 had not been met.

Jackson wrote President Nixon. The ACLU filed suit in U.S. District Court here in behalf of Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman, acting as a private citizen, and three other plaintiffs.

Navy Steams to Trinidad As "Disorders" Grow

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) - Six U.S. Navy vessels converged on Trinidad Wednesday with orders to move in if needed to evacuate American citizens from this island nation torn by disorders stemming from the arrest of Black Power movement leaders.

The move was announced as officials in Washington disclosed that the United States is flying small arms and ammunition which have been urgently requested by the Trinidad government. A State Department press officer said Trinidad had asked to buy the arms.

This information followed an unconfirmed report that rebel elements in Trinidad's army had seized the armory at the main base outside Port of Spain and controlled the weapons.

Trinidad police who have been trying to keep rampaging crowds in check are armed only with old single-shot Enfield rifles from Britain.

The 17,000-ton helicopter carrier Guadalcanal, flagship of the U.S. Navy's Caribbean force, and three amphibious vessels, the Speigel Grove, Suffolk County and Vermillion weighed anchor off Puerto Rico Wednesday morning and began the run of nearly 600 miles to Trinidad as shooting continued in Port of Spain for the second straight day.

The pentagon also disclosed that the guided missile cruiser Biddle and the LST Terrebone Parish had departed from unknown positions in the Caribbean and headed toward Trinidad.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told newsmen in Washington that the Navy craft were to stand by to be ready if needed to evacuate Americans.

"We have no intention of involving ourselves in the internal affairs of Trinidad," Ziegler said.

The crisis was touched off by the arrest of 14 leaders of the Black Power movement after Williams persuaded Gov.Gen. Sir Arthur McShine to declare a state of emergency.

Conscription Corner

There are many who favor repealing the draft, but are wary of the alternative of a voluntary professional army. This skepticism of the feasibility and favorability of a volunteer military is due to myths and misconceptions now associated with a volunteer professional army. The following article will attempt to dispell a few of the prevalent misconceptions now offered as objections for repealing the draft.

The fear that a volunteer army would be incapable of maintaining a large enough force is ungrounded. Over ninety percent of all commissioned offiers and all the high ranking non-commissioned officers are volunteers. These men are known as career men for whom the army is a profession regardless of the draft. Of the 3.5 million men now in uniform only 21 per cent are draftees. According to Senator Hatfield's estimate, about 20 per cent of enlistees are considered reluctant volunteers--men who under pressure of draft, enlisted to insure more favorable positions in the military. Thus, almost up to sixty per cent of the present armed forces are genuine volunteers. This number would easily increase when better eages and benefits are provided with a professional army.

Another myth that is frequently raised as an objection to repealing the draft is the fear that a professional army would be susceptible to coup d'etats. In fact, it is the officer corps that engineers and instituties military takeovers, and these men are invariably volunteers. The lack of freedom and civil liberties now evident due to the conscript army increases the likelihood of a coup. It should be noted that in countries which have a conscript armies, such as in Spain, Portugal and Greece, coups have taken place.

The myth that a volunteer army would be predominantly a Black army is also erroneous. Critics of a volunteer army argue that due to the increased economic opportunities offered by a professional army it would be swarmped by black youths. In fact there are 2.5 times as many whites classified as "poor" by the government as blacks. By simple arithmetic there would be 2.5 whites for every black youth in the army if economic incentive is the only relevant factor in enlistment.

These are just a few of the misconceptions concerning the viable alternative of a volunteer professional that would replace our conscription army.

Construction Hang-up Rattles Room Choosing

We have become concerned with possible delays in the completion of the 1970 dorms due to the present prolonged strike.

A review meeting of representatives of the Building Authority, the General Contractor, and this office has been scheduled for Tuesday, April 28, 1970, to review the situation as it now stands.

We are aware that some students might become anxious about their housing plans for the Fall Semester. Therefore, we urge those students who feel this way to make tentative plans with their present head of residence for living accommodations in their present dorm for this Fall, pending the outcome of our Tuesday meeting.

If, by then, it has been determined that these new dorms will not be available to us, then you can simply solidify plans to live this Fall where you are living at present. If, however, we find that these dorms will be available, we can resume our room-choosing activities and prepare to occupy the new dorms in September.

We will make every effort to keep students who have expressed an interest in these dorms informed as to changes in the situation.

Mass Media Continue Fight Against Ecology Problems

The increasing threat of pollution has touched various elements of the mass-media. Major magazines have devoted entire issues to the problems of ecology.

Television networks are now continuing the fight to make people aware of the future. An increasing number of public service announcements are devoted to the message that pollution is destroying life.

A recent issue of TV GUIDE, noted that no less than six television programs dealing with man and his environment.

The 2 hour movie, "A Clear and Present Danger", highlighted the connection between smog and emphysema, while illustrating the politics involved in trying to "do something about it."

A talk-show titled "Opinionated Man," featured Alice Taylor Day, author of "Too Many Americans." She discussed over-population which she called "people pollution," with Peter A. Jordan, professor of wildlife ecology at Yale.

Three recent network NewsSpecials included a survey of San Francisco's fight against pollution which dramatized three projects: to redevelop a habitable city, to reclaim San Francisco Bay and its tributaries, and the improvement of mass-transit systems.

A second Special featured David Dominik, commissioner of the Federal Water Pollution Administration; Dennis Hayes, coordinator of Environment Near Death; and New York Times newsmen Walter Sullivan and Gladwin Hill, discussing the question: How can government, industry and the individual help curb environmental pollution?

The third Special, "Fight for Life," illustrates the Eskimo's struggle for survival in a hostile environment.

Even the television drama series are getting into the act. "It takes a Thief" devoted a show to pollution and ecology around the world, and attempts by scientists to correct the world situation.

Bottle, Can Collections Continue.

A collection drive for soda bottles and cans is being held until Saturday at which time the bottles will be taken to Northampton, via the Environment Walk and will be deposited on the lawn of the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. in Northampton.

There are 9 official collection containers: two in front of the Student Union, two around the mall area of Hampden Dining Commons No. 7 in South West, one in the middle of the North East Quad, one in front of Brooks, one near the circle in Orchard Hill, and two at the Amherst Common. These containers will have signs on them signifying that they are the official ones.

Millions of cars are buried annually in auto graveyards such as this one. An answer to this type of pollution may be finding a use for scrap metal from such wasting vehicles.

Clarence Roy to Lecture On Environmental Ills

The Coalition For Environmental Quality is sponsoring a lecture by Dr. Clarence Roy of Royal Industrial Research Company this Thursday evening at 7:30 in the East Engineering Auditorium. Dr. Roy has had fifteen years of experience and accomplishment in planning directing, and conducting research and development activities in organic, inorganic and physical chemistry. His specific areas of achievement include metal complexing and extracting agents, corrosion inhibitors, air pollution, desalination, and water waste treatment. He invented the RASAR Process, a new and advanced process for the economical removal or recovery of metals from water. He has over fifty patents in the areas of chemical processing, metal complexing agents, water pollution control and deoxidizing of metals.

After Dr. Roy's presentation, people in the audience will be encouraged to express their opinions concerning his approach. This will be followed by an ecological scream-out which means people will be asked to criticize what is happening in the ecology movement. Is it a cop-out? Has it become a tool of the Radical Left?

Connecticut River Residents Find Clean Water is Scarce

With at least two polluters for every mile of the Connecticut River, Massachusetts residents along its banks don't have much chance to get clean water anymore.

Along the 54 miles of river flowing through the Commonwealth, an estimated 35 industries and 26 municipalities contribute raw sewage and chemicals to the slowly moving stream.

The results have been mass fish kills from the cyanides spawned primarily from the metal plating industries; the velocity of the river has been slowed by the increase of chemicals both from the industries and from the disintegration of other wastes; and many parts of the river have become unusable for recreational or drinking purposes.

Consulting engineers like John H. Bebiker, vice president of the firm of Curran Associates, Northampton say that the greatest contrivutors to water pollution in this region, aside from municipal sewage, are the metal plating industries. William Doubleday, director of the Department of Natural Resources Water Pollution Control Western Regional Office in Amherst, has said that of 104 manufacturing concerns polluting the river (from Vermont through Connecticut) the majority are the paper mills, followed closely by the metal plating industries. Other contributors, in lesser quantities, would include dumps (nitrogen and phosphorus compounds in excess), oil deliberately or accidentally discharged by oil venders and gas station attendants, industrial cooling from the electric power industry (causing waste heat pollution) and more recently, the use of salting streets for snow and ice removal during the winter. Only seven companies, according to Doubleday, have implemented water treatment facilities.

Though many industries and municipalities have worked out implementation schedules for the construction of facilities, construction in most cases won't be completed until at least the end of 1970 according to the implementation schedule published by the Division of Water Pollution Control. Others won't complete facilities until as late as 1974. Thus the pollution continues, rendering parts of the river useless for other then industrial purposes. According to Thomas C. McMahon, Director of the Division of Water Pollution Control in the Department of Natural Resources, at least seven companies and municipalities along the Connecticut are seriously behind schedule in their construction of facilities and more will get behind as time goes by.

Of 129 municipalities along the total length of the Connecticut River (from Vermont to Connecticut), 79 are still guilty of failing to treat sewage pollution, according to Doubleday. Some have no sewage treatment plants at all. Others have them but either refuse to use them or they use them improperly. There are also some areas along the river where sewage is dumped directly into the river from homes and factories. The dumps of 15 municipalities (of 33 a year ago) are still guilty of contravention of standards (dumps must remain 60 feet from streams), though these towns continue to work towards cleaning them up.

Doubleday says that in the last six to nine months (1969-beginning of 1970) there have been 85 cases in which legal action has been threatened. According to him 81 of these are still sitting in the State Attorney General's office pending action (the 85th is Sunderland). Doubleday attributes much of the inaction to "politics" and the fact that this is an election year.

The dumps of some municipalities are subject to the growing problems of increasing pollution as they are located too close to streams. Cleanup campaigns have been started in 15 local communities while another 18 have been corrected.

Tree Planting Ritual At Campus Pond Today

Today a ritual tree planting ceremony will be held by the Campus Pond. Participants will meet in front of the Student Union at noon.

Bob Zelman, organizer of the ceremony gave the following statement about the purpose behind the planting. "We must regain our sense of the holy. At some point in history as we got more 'civilized' we began to worship the work of our own hands rather than the work of God. So-called 'primitive' tribes understand that machines are not holy, but the natural wonders of the Earth are. As long as we continue to praise and grovel before our technology, we will continue the systematic destruction of our planet.

"In an attempt to return to the basic sense of wonder we are born with, a young tree will be planted. Campus religious leaders from the Newman Center, the United Christian Foundation and Hillel, and the Universal Life Church, will be there to speak and to bless the ceremony. I will read prayers from the American Indians.

"I hope that everyone who plays an instrument will bring it to join us in joyous song. Percussion instruments are especially needed so that we can have a ritual dance."

PART THREE:

The Leotard Mardi Gras

When last Herman was around, he was being clutched by none other than GORGONZOLA the big cheese -- 50-story giant mouse with the tail of a lizard and flames coming out of his mouth...But since then, Gorgonzola took him to his cave where it was very dingy and full of shit and human skulls. The big cheese broke down when he got back to the cave and cried like a cobra whose egg yolks had gone rancid... What's the matter? asked Henry overcome with sympathy...Are you sort?

The monster asked the man to bear with him as he uncovered the foundation of his grief -- Someone had been buying up the cemeteries in God-society and opened up picnic grounds there over the dead bodies and the haunting souls that lay betwixt within. "No respect for any of my victims!" howled the big cheese. "No respect at all! You've got to do something...at once. I can't police the world much longer...my feet are getting rough and tired."

Why don't you stop stepping on people and terrorizing the neighborhood? said Henry..."Mind your own fuckin business!" cursed the big cheese as he grabbed for the little man like a cyclops with an inflated eagle eye. Henry ran to and fro but he still was stuck in the cave amid the empty skulls and smelly shit. In the far corner, sobbing away in quietude was a pregnant girl with a meat cleaver threatening to cut the pope's balls off, and just generally in a depressed assortment of circumstantial evidence -- like she had a kid that was on a bum trip...he was trapped on a gondola in the middle of her esophagus... The big cheese tossed her out on her ass and told her to come back in the morning...he said he's better keep his eye on her, and maybe it would be a good idea to put a few bodyguards around the pope. Henry meanwhile, managed to light a match and set fire to the end of the tail. The mouse smelled something burning...and his 50 stories felt the tail searing and smoking...and pretty soon he's have enough sausage smoked just well enough to open up a delicatessin but he was screaming wolf now, and Henry he ran out the entrance with only one thought in his head: Get a fire truck and go back to the cave. And so he made it down to the fire station where guys were just sleeping and swatting flies...and he grabbed a hose and just kept on running down the street as it was unwinding...and he sprayed the Kian burn-in and he swiped an old lady with a sudden squirt...his spirit did not slacken. Somewhere out yonder was a yelping giant mouse with a flaming tail...and he would soon explode if he didn't receive help and with his explosion the whole world would go too because as usual, he ate a whole bunch of radioactive matter and he was playing power politics.

Henry got back to the cave after picking up a psychiatrist on the way to diagnose Gongonzola's personal problems and cemetery hangups...and immediately he explained to the slowly smouldering beast that everything was going to be okay but all the ungrateful beast could utter was "give the blind man a joint"...sure sure said the shrink... this monster wants to placate the blindman with tricks!

Gongonzola's tail was watered and he agreed to live the life of a hermit and water wildflowers as an act of gratitude for saving his tail which has been reduced to isolated bulishit.

TUNE IN AGAIN...when Society for Democratic Students merges with the United Kians of America.

"...A divine spark lives in everything and being, but each such spark is enclosed by an isolating shell. Only man can liberate it and rejoin it with the Origin; by holding holy converse with the thing and using it in a holy manner... The task of man, every man...is to affirm for God's sake the word and himself and by this very means to transform both."

"Those of us who present religion as separate from "everyday" living, reflect...the distinctions of a culture which will identify six days with the secular in life and only the seventh with religion. In many primitive societies, religion is rarely absent from the details of everyday living and the ceremonials represent a formalization and intensification of an everpresent attitude."

DOROTHY LEE

(From "Freedom and Culture")

A sense of the holy, is missing in our modern technological society. Today, here on campus, there will be an attempt to revitalize this feeling.

There will be a ritual tree planting ceremony by the pond. We will plant a large crab apple tree to celebrate the holy act of planting, rejoice over the goodness of the soil and dance in praise of the awe-producing process of natural growth.

Instead of praising and protecting the holiness of Nature from all harm, we are using our technology to systematically destroy the Planet. Thus religious leaders from the campus will be present to speak about the worshipping the natural wonders of God's world, rather than the machines of man's world. They will also offer prayers and blessings from the Judaeo-Christian tradition.

There will be Rabbi Kowal from Hillel, Father Quigley from theNewman Center and Rev. Johnson from the United Christian Foundation. A minister from the Universal Life Church should also be present. I will offer prayers taken from the American Indians.

There will be a ritual dance after the planting. This will be to actualize the forces of life and growth within us all.

MEET OUTSIDE BY THE FRONT OF THE STUDENT UNION AT NOON TODAY. CELEBRATE LIFE!

Forget It!

Nixon's address to the nation last Monday night was at best a disappointment and at worst a deception, the latter being the most probable case here.

The fact that Nixon had decided to withdraw an additional 150,000 troops seemed in light of the immediate statement laudable. But upon the statement's completion it was brought out that same would in fact be withdrawn over a much extended 12 month period, all of the previous delusions were hereby dissolved. Nixon had succeeded in deluding the majority of Americans who want "real" progress in numbers in troop withdrawals not cunningly deceptive "mathematical games," and he had succeeded in pacifying his pentagon generals who are more and more figuring significantly in the running of this country.

This obvious playing on the intelligence of the American people must seemingly be the last and most severe break that Nixon has made with his constituents yet. He has seemingly run the gamet of options left open to him in effecting this break. He has rebuked the American people for their pleas to put an end to this unholy war. He has ignored the American people prefering to watch a football game rather than to listen to 1/2 a million of his pleading people in his own backyard. And now, the latter attempts having failed, he has tried to delude the American people by playing "mathematical games" with flesh and blood. It causes one to wonder at the faith that Nixon must have in our educational system!

This move of Nixon's to deception is rather obvious in this recent example, but there are yet others where he has been equally deceptive via his recently adopted policy so eloquently stumbled upon by Daniel P. Moynihan of "benign neglect." Here, by digging through all the silence, one can really be successful at uncovering the magots eating away at the guts of the Nixon system. (Please excuse my seeming lack of taste here, but when speaking of Mr. Nixon and his policies I find it exceedingly difficult to be tasteful possibly because of Nixon's own lack of same).

Here we find the rapidly decaying structure of race relations in this country eating away at the very fibre of every day human existence. Ignore it, for it will disappear, says Mr. Richard M. Hodini. It is here that we find Nixon's policy as carried by his Attorney General and former law partner (you know, the one with the wife who walks around with a wooden cross and nails trying to find Senators and very liberal communists to crucify) of crime suppression rather than crime correction or what is called getting at the roots of the problem. Bury it with repression and tyranny and it will disappear, says Mr. Richard M. Hitler. And here too we find the Nixon policy of laissez faire economics which is fastly blowing up our economy like a balloon to be burst at some critical point via the hot air of inflation. Ignore it, for there shall come a day when all shall be righted via neglect, says Mr. Richard M. Christ.

I think it only fair that come next election, we pay Mr. Richard M. Nixon the same attention that he has paid us and our desires!

The Beginning

The University and State Communications Council is sponsoring Legislator's Day on Friday, May 8th. The aim of this program is to better the communications between the Massachusetts Legislature and the student body, the faculty and administration of the University in Amherst.

Since the legislators are responsible for the University's budget, which, in turn, places a financial limit on what can and cannot be done to improve the quality of education at UMass, it seems that an on-the-spot examination of the University would be the most effective means of communication.

The number of legislators who come to UMass on May 8th will have a lot to do with the success of this program. But it works both ways. If more students and faculty members become involved, more information and genuine problems will be exchanged.

Someone not intimately involved with University life cannot get an accurate picture of the problems encountered with a school of this size. If a legislator is shown the construction sites, the high rise dormitories, and the newer buildings on campus, he is seeing only a small part of the structure and nothing of the people who attempt to make the University an educational experience. To know UMass you have to eat in the dining commons, tour Central Area, and, most of all, attend classes.

The problem of Central Area will perhaps speak for itself, the problems of education need a voice, and that voice should be the students and faculty.

One way of making Legislator's Day more informative is for faculty members and students to invite specific Legislative Committee men to spend an hour or so in the classroom. If a professor from the School of Business Administration or the Government Department were to invite a legislator on the Ways and Means Committee to attend one of their classes, more relevant information could be exchanged than if the legislator had simply toured the campus.

Already one faculty member in the Journalism Department has invited a Massachusetts Senator to sit in on a class and participate in a discussion on freedom of the press.

More of this type of initiative is needed if Legislator's Day is to be any kind of success.

So plan to invite a legislator for May 8th. Here are just a few of the Legislative Committees in the Massachusetts House and Senate: Education, Ways and Means, Public Health, Natural Resources, Highways, and Government: Counties and Municipalities. And here are just a few of the schools, colleges or departments who might invite someone from one of the committees: education department, school of business administration, public health, nursing, recreation, law, engineering, political science.

In placing your vote today for class president, may I respectfully request your consideration of my desire to achieve this position. At a time when change is inevitable on this campus, we must seek the type of people who will strive to "sensitize" the office of president of the class of '73. In other words, it is important that a class officer recognize, probe, discuss and act upon those situations which will affect his constituency as well as satisfying the norm of our socially-oriented office. It is not for the president of a class to rule out the social aspect of the class but it is also his duty to take on those areas of rent, academic affairs, etc. in the interest of his constituency.

Although it has not been recognized as a formal platform, I do have programs which I would sincerely like to see instituted here at the university. It is my opinion that it is the duty of a class president to be interested first and foremost with his constituency and the problems which face them here and now. You are electing a president to serve you in Amherst as an active participant in the policymaking here at the University. Concerning my own views as to how funds should be allocated in the next year, I would like to see more student funding for coed living ventures which would greatly facilitate the strength of these programs. It would also be to our advantage to set up a drop-in center which could operate in conjunction with University Health Services concerning the problems of drug abuse, abortions, birth control as well as facilitating a "rap" line in conjunction with this sort of program. As far as social events, we would hope to continue along the same lines as previous classes - with one exception: that is, that we should decentralize social events on a rotating basis. This program would prevent the handful of people who bother to go to dances at the union and would allow for more variety in socially-oriented programs. Finally, we should "sensitize" this office as much as we possibly can in order to promote worthwhile programs which will affect as some time while we are here or upon graduation. However, it is imperative that we compromise some of our own principles to seek these ends. As the GE worker stated on April 15, "Your attitude and the way you present yourself just turns us off." It is time to give up some of our high and mighty ideals so that we may achieve something concrete. The tax bill will affect all of our Massachusetts residents and so I should think that projecting ourselves into this type of endeavor would greatly facilitate our cause.

Therefore, I hope that you will seriously consider some of these programs as well as any other you feel you could incorporate into this type of program. Most important, though, please do come down and vote. It is certainly much more gratifying to have merely participated in an election in which a fair percentage of the class voted rather than to have won and know that you are not truly representative of your class. I do hope that you will seriously consider the program which I have offered and look to yourselves for ways in which you may compliment this effort to realize change.

Respectfully yours,
DAVID "J" POISSON

Members of the Class of '73:

To function properly a group needs unity. A group as large as 3600 is quite difficult to unify. Moreover, what I see as a problem in this class is not so much a lack of unity, but a lack of interest. I am presently a member of the Exec. Council, and the students who really had an interest in this class went to meetings and participated in our class activities. At the most, there were 30 or so of these students, and 30 out of 3600 certainly shows a lack of interest. I feel that much of this disinterest is due to the fact that many of the students are uninformed. Sending out newsletters would keep this class better-informed. I would like to include in these newsletters a Treasurer's report, so you will know where and on what your money is being spent.

I would also like to see more class activities that are worthwhile, that will attract the interest of the majority of this class, and that will prove beneficial not only to us as a class, but to others as well.

I hope you will consider me a worthy candidate. If I am elected Treasurer, I will do my best to dissolve this apathy and to promote more unity in the class.

Thank you.

Dear Editor:

I am running for re-election for the office of Secretary of the Class of 1971. I feel that my term this year has been successful and I have proven myself worthy of the office.

During the course of the year, I have worked with my other class officers to organize and to run a tremendously successful Winter Carni weekend which was a complete sell-out and has been surpassed by no other weekend in the history of the University.

I will not continue to list here the activities I have helped to successfully complete this year, except to say that I feel this experience has provided me with an excellent background to serve as Secretary of the Class of 1971 next year.

I have been attending Commencement Task Force Meetings this year along with senior class officers to gain some knowledge of how commencement plans are made. I have also been in the process of obtaining approval from the Executive Councils and making plans along with the other officers for a Senior-Sophomore Week-End in the fall. Preliminary plans have also been made for a Senior Speakers Program of unprecedented magnitude next year.

I shall conclude by saying I feel my background and my knowledge of class government qualifies me as the most capable candidate for Secretary of the Class of 1971.

Sincerely,
JOAN MCCOURT

To the Class of '72:

My name is Ed Dempsey and I am running as a write-in candidate for the office of vice-president. I have served actively on the Exec. Council for two years, I worked on SENDOFF and am presently a member of the President's Council, Finance Committee, and Public Relations Committee. I also was a contributor to the Spring Newsletter which served to remind our class members that active participation by all is needed to make our class successful. I feel it is time the officers get together and work as one to further the class.

I feel I have the qualifications and the enthusiasm necessary to work as a class officer. VOTE EXPERIENCE . . . Write-in Ed Dempsey for Vice-President.

Sincerely,
ED DEMPSEY
Candidate for V.P. '72

To the Class of '72:

My name is Margie Davis, and I am a write-in candidate for President of our class. Our class, as most of you know, has a very large deficit in our budget. This was caused by a severe lack of communications between the class officers and the other 3000 sophomores. Something has to be done to fill this gap, and it must be done now. Since none of the former officers is rerunning for election, it is then up to a new group of students, those of us who are interested enough to be running, to try to patch up the holes made this year. Can we do it? Only time will be able to supply the answer to that question.

I have been active in campus organizations for the past two years; at the present time I am a member of the Exec. Council, chairman of its Public Relations Committee, Editor of the Sophomore Newsletter, and Secretary of the Program Council. These are my qualifications. Beyond these, all I can promise is a sincere devotion to the Class, my time, energy, skills, and ideas - the ways and means towards the unification of the Class of '72.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
MARGIE DAVIS

Armenia and . . . Justice

To the Editor:

In these turbulent times, when such issues as Vietnam, Middle East, and others confront world justice and peace, the observance of April 24 as "memorial day" for the premeditated extermination of one and a half million Armenians by the Turkish government in 1915, to most deems to be forgetful or irrelevant to our existing problems. And, although this might be so, it, however, depicts the true deficiencies of justice and peace in their remaining immune to the influential maneuverings of the stronger powers.

On this date, when the world's first genocide of modern times was begun, when we Armenians commemorate and mourn the unrelenting deaths that awaited our fathers, we also mourn for those nations who by placing their political expediencies ahead of the justices of some people, failed to respond to the moral demands of civilization. The denial of justice to one nation is a violation affecting all mankind. The unpunished sin of the horrors inflicted upon the Armenians by the Turks very well paved Nazi Germany's "determined" solution to its minorities. On August 22, 1939, Adolph Hitler, to his army commander in Obersalzburg decreeing the murder of Jewish and Slavic people, said, "Who still talks nowadays of the extermination of the Armenians?" The pertinence of international harmony is rooted not in the ignoring of crimes.

Today, after 55 years, Turkey unrepentant of its tyrrany, still retains the ancestral homeland of the Armenians (drawn by President Wilson of the U.S. in 1919) as part of its own national territory. She is guilty for the innocent lives of hundreds of thousands of Armenians, as well as for the ignoble destruction or confiscation of Armenian property, among them churches, schools, etc. and etc.

No Nurenburg has ever been held for the Turks. Yet, when a nation like Turkey at the UN hearings in 1965 condemns genocide and upholds the rights of minorities and proclaims self-determination as an absolute right of man we can't but be enraged.

Have the circumstances of time-situations vied the maturity of justice?

A Fable

By TULI KUPFERBERG

There was once an atom bomb who wanted to be a bullet.

"Why," said his fellow atom bombs, "when you can be a great A-bomb, do you want to be a little bullet?"

"I miss," said the bomb, "the personal touch."

Her Own Thing

To the editor:

In accordance with environment week activities, I wish to suggest that students recognize the need for sign control and be prepared to remove any signs posted in unauthorized places around campus. Sign control is recommended by many who wish to improve the quality of the environment by reducing "visual pollution." This need is publicly proclaimed in the exhibit currently located in the corridor of the Student Union. Therefore, I for one intend to do my thing, and I will remove any signs plastered on buildings, trees, fences, etc., as they are interfering with my esthetic appreciation of the environment.

As for those who consider such action to be oppression of their individuality, I can say only that I am sorry we cannot all "do our own thing" and live together without conflict simultaneously. I suggest that you confine your signs to bulletin boards, or request more if those available are inadequate. For those who are more persistent, and who are trying the paste approach, I shall retaliate with the sponge attack. And for those extreme individuals who resort to chalk, ink, or paint, I suggest that they be apprehended in the act and confined to campus lavatories with a set of water-soluable finger paints for use in the ultimate expression of their "individuality".

Today's slogan for Ecology Week is:

A Classic Bummer World

To the editor:

Heard Walter Cronkite todaq, talking of the Pope and 10,000 people praying for Apollo 13; Billy Graham telling us prayer was instrumental in Apollo's safe return. A vigil in Grand Central Station will symbolize America's humanitarian feelings for the unfortunate three in space.

So hearing this I said "Wow! Isn't it nice - with a "Gay" wave of my arm - that so many care about their fellow humans."

Headline of the Daily News, "BRUNETTE STABBED TO DEATH". Underneath in lower case letters "6,000 die in earthquake".

"One young girl, Denise Hogan, protested as police dragged her from the restaurant. 'I'm not a student activist. I'm just trying to survive in this world.' She was bleeding from the nose, mouth and a large gash on the tempie. A policeman had beaten her with a club."

Yes it certainly is nice to know how concerned America is for humans, in comparison to astronauts. Murder in Vietnam continues, while the American conscience worries of just three men - whose only possible human achievement is living, for landing on the moon will do little for our tired planet.

Smith Satire Hits Generation Gap

"Heavy!" - an original rock musical - is currently playing at Smith College's Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre.

The student production is a colorful and sharply satirical commentary on the gap between parents and children, using a parody of today's "get rich quick" quiz shows as the vehicle.

Performances will be at 8:30 p.m. through Saturday, with a 2 p.m. Sunday matinee. The studio theatre, in the college's new Center for the Performing Arts, seats 150. For reservations, call 584-2700, Ext. 840. The box office is open from 8:30 to 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

A five-man rock band, BLOODSTONE, will perform. The musicians are area residents who have been performing in the Five College area for the past year. The group has a "mongrel sound" - a blend of blues, jazz, classical and hard rock.

The director of "HEAVY!" is Amherst College student Jon Alper. He was the assistant director of last year's Amherst College production, "Dream Engine." The production has since gone to New York for a fall Broadway opening.

Alper's intention is to present the audience with impressions of the ways that youths and parents see each other. In the TV quiz show to be staged, a father and son compete against each other.

The set for the production is purposely gaudy replica of a TV quiz show. In glossy red, blue and yellow there are a huge three-quarter round playing space, a podium, and an oversized playing board. Flashing lights, bells, and buzzers bring to mind Beat the Clock and Let's Make a Deal.

Real television equipment, including boom mikes, cameras and two monitors for the audience, is used in the production. A television crew directs the audience with applause signs and clap meters. The familiar slumps and fanfares of the TV quiz show organist will also be heard.

Amherst College and University of Massachusetts are in the cast of 30 performers. The production is an honor thesis for Smith senior Patricia Rioux of East Hartford, Conn.

Guests to Participate In Symphony Concert

In a concert Sunday, April 26th at 3:00 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, the University Wind Ensemble will present Raphael Edgar, baritone, well-known operatic singer from Washington, D.C. Mr. Edgar will appear as soloist in THAT TIME MAY CEASE AND MIDNIGHT NEVER COME composed by Philip Bezanson for baritone soloist, winds, brass and percussion. Mr. Bezanson, who has been Head of the University of Massachusetts Department of Music since 1964, composed the work while he was on a Guggenheim Fellowship in 1968. The first performance was by the Harvard-Radcliffe Orchestra in 1969, with Raphael Edgar as soloist. The text upon which the work is based is the "Last Soliloquy" from DR. FAUSTUS, by Christopher Marlow.

Also on this concert, John Jenkins will conduct the University Symphony Band in the first performance of SINFONIA III: LITURGIES, by Paul Cooper, Chairman of the Department of Composition and Theory and Composer in Residence at the College-Conservatory of Music of the University of Cincinnati. The work is one of a series of three commissioned for the band by the University Fine Arts Council. The performance Sunday will climax a weekend visit by Dr. Cooper to the campus to meet students and discuss his work.

Dr. William C. Venman, Assistant Dean of Administration, has been invited to appear as guest conductor on the concert. Dr. Venman is a former conductor, and has been instrumental in encouraging and assisting the growth in stature and quality of the University of Massachusetts Bands.

The program will include SYMPHONIC SONGS, by Robert Russell Bennett; "Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral", from LOHENGRIN, by Richard Wagner, the ATHLETIC FESTIVAL MARCH, by Serge Prokofieff, and NOBLES OF THE MYSTIC SHRINE by John Philip Sousa.

There is no admission charge.

Afro-Am Patrolman to Speak For Community Relations

Renault Robinson, president and a founder of the Afro-American Patrolmen's League of Chicago, will speak at the University of Massachusetts Sunday, April 26, as part of a continuing community relations program sponsored by the Town of Amherst and the University.

The talk, "The Black Policeman's Role in Today's Struggle," will be at 1:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium, open to the public without charge. Representatives of police departments from this area have been invited to the talk and to participate in workshops afterwards.

The Afro-American Patrolmen's League received the 1969 Civil Liberties Award of the American Civil Liberties Union's Illinois Division for its "outstanding contribution to the cause of due process in police-community relations in its courageous opposition to such police practices as "stop and frisk," unwarranted arrest, and physical and verbal abuse of citizens in the black community."

The organization was founded by Robinson and other black police officers in the Chicago department who found it impossible to work within the framework of existing police organizations. The Chicago department has a larger number of black officers than any in the country.

Some of the league's objectives are to improve member's performance as police officers so that they may exercise their authority with compassion and understanding in order to be of positive benefit to the black community, to help bring about improvements of the quality of life in black neighborhoods, to support all efforts devoted to establishing respect for black manhood, black womanhood and black pride within the law, and to dedicate themselves to the proposition that law enforcement may be practiced by black police officers with compassion, understanding and efficiency.

The talk is part of a cooperative effort by the town and the University to better police-community relations in the area, particularly the racial climate.

At a luncheon, Lawrence A. Johnson, assistant dean of the UMass School of Business Administration, will speak on "Confidence: a Needed Ingredient in Communication". Karl Murphy, ABCA president, will also speak.

Shaw, Communications and Public Information specialist at Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory, on "The Rocky Road: Earning Acceptance as a Writer in Industry".

A summary of the conference by the moderators and a talk by ABCA vice-president William A. Damerst will close the afternoon. The conference will end with an 8 p.m. social hour at the Lord Jeffery Inn. Members of the Society of Technical Writers and Publishers are invited to attend the conference.

Frosh Nine Earn Weekend Split

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

Earning a split in its two weekend games, the freshman baseball team scored a 4-3 win over Amherst Saturday in 11 innings to offset a 1-0 loss to UConn Friday afternoon.

The only run scored in the U-Conn game was unearned. In the first inning Brian Herosian reached second base on an error by UMass shortstop Rick Manchetta. Then on an attempted pickoff play, pitcher Ed Kurr threw the ball into centerfield allowing Herosian to come all the way home.

From then on it was a scoreless ball game. The game became strictly a pitcher's duel. Kurr went all the way for the Little Redmen and was magnificent as he gave up only three hits in suffering the loss.

UMass collected four hits in the game with second baseman Dan Kelly and first baseman Dan Esposito getting two singles apiece.

In Saturday's game at Amherst, UMass southpaw Tom White gained his third victory of the season with a solid performance in relief. He came on in the sixth inning with the score 3-3 and worked the rest of the way allowing no hits and striking out 11.

Gary Pohner started for the Little Redmen and went four innings before being lifted for a pinch hitter. Dick Russell then came on to pitch the fifth, and from then on White mesmerized the Amherst batters until his team was able to pick up a run in the eleventh.

Rightfielder Rick Scarpignato had four hits in six at bats for UMass as he led the hitting attack. He also scored a run, stole three bases, and made an unbelievable catch in the tenth inning on a ball that probably would have gone for a triple had it raced by him.

Centerfielder Earl Manley had two hits for the Little Redmen, who had ten safeties in all during the game.

FROSH FACTS - Coach Tony Williams had words of praise for his infield's defensive work in both games despite the costly error Friday. . .He particularly singled out the defensive work of third baseman Mark Palau who made some great plays in both games.

John Kul, a member of the Redman varsity golf team, scored the first hole in one of his golf career on Saturday, when he aced the 168 yd. 17th hole at the Mt. Holyoke Golf Course using a six iron. Three other members of the Redmen squad who were playing with Kul, Ed Puzas, Erik Filsinger, and Dick Barger, witnessed the spectacular shot.

Frosh Baseball Fall to Amherst

By DAN KAMAL
Staff reporter

The freshman baseball team dropped a 3-1 decision at home yesterday against Amherst College.

Amherst pitcher Don Douglas was in complete control all the way as he surrendered only five hits and was in serious trouble only twice during the whole game. Although he walked six men, Douglas was sharp with his control when he had to be as he registered nine strikeouts and kept the UMass batters off balance with a good fastball and curve.

Ed Kurr started for UMass and was touched for three tainted runs in the five innings he worked. Amherst scored their first run in the second inning on a walk and an error. They added two more in the fifth on a walk, two infield hits, another costly error.

UMass had a good chance to score in the fourth inning with men on second and third with two out, but Ken Strart, although he hit the ball well, hit it right at the shortstop who made the play at first to end the inning. The Little Redmen finally got on the scoreboard in the sixth inning when Allen singled and came around on a triple by Hank Fydel.

From that point until the last of the ninth, neither team was able to mount a serious threat as Amhert's Douglas and UMass' Dan Esposito, who relieved Kurr in the sixth, pitched well.

Then in the last of the ninth, UMass threatened to pull the game out as Rick Scarpignato singled and Earl Manley and Fred Kielbash both drew walks. However, Douglas settled down and escaped the inning untouched to seal the vistory for Amherst.

Little Redmen Shorts. . .This was the second straight tough loss for Ed Kurr who has pitched well both times out for UMass but has had little hitting support behind him....Dan Esposito who has looked great at the plate for the frosh, made his debut as a pitcher yesterday, a very successful one, as he displayed a blazing fastball, and although his control was off, he was still able to pitch four scoreless innings. . .Amherst's third run came on a disputed play on which the baserunner was awarded two bases and subsequently scored from second base on a throwing error. The umpire claimed he had already had possession of third base when the error was made. . .

BOSTON (AP) - Carl Yastrzemski's single with two out in the seventh inning snapped a tie and lifted the Boston Red Sox to a 3-2 victory over Baltimore Wednesday, sending the Oriole ace Dave McNally to his first defeat of the season after three straight triumphs.

Reggis Smith started the winning rally with a single to center after the first two men went out, then stole second and raced home on Yastrzemski's line smash to right to break a 2-2 tie. Reliever Vincenio Romo, checked the Orioles from the seventh to pick up his first victory of the campaign.

Racketeers Squash UNH

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

A familiar occurance to Yankee Conference tennis fans happened this past Saturday on the University of New Hampshire courts. The occurance was another YC victory chalked up by the defending tennis champs from UMass. The score was 8-1, and it gave a fair indication as to the chances of another championship for the Redman racketeers.

An outstanding team performance was the story of this victory, as the Wildcats were only able to muster one victory, that coming in an exciting three set singles match between Bill Gould of UNH and UMass' Gus Penon.

If the outstanding individual performances had to be cited it went to captain Mike Katz, who defeated the defending YC champion, Bill Goodwin, in straight sets, 6-4, 11-9.

Number two singles player, Alan Goldberg also won in straight sets, as did number four five, and six players, Steve Gervickas, Jim Bornheim, and Jon Bloom.

The doubles competition was all UMass as Goldberg and Bloom combined for a straight set victory as did the combinations of Katz and Gervickas, and Penon and Bornheim.

This was the first Yankee Conference encounter for the team and Coach Steve Kosakowski pointed to the matches that the team had prior to Saturday's with M.I.T. and Holy Cross as good preparation for the YC schedule. The competition in each of these matches was excellent and the players were able to sharpen up their games, with the final results of the UNH match indicating this to be so.

On this Saturday the team travels to Boston College for a 2 p.m. match with the Eagles.

Harvard Breaks Stickmen's 2 Year Win Streak

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Assistant Sports Editor

A wise old man once said that all good things must come to an end and this prophecy proved true for the lacrosse team yesterday as its 17-game winning streak fell to the Crimson of Harvard in a game played in Cambridge yesterday, 12-6. The defeat dropped the Redmen to 2-1 and lifted Harvard's record to 4-2.

The Crimson stickers dominated play from the outset as they seemed better able to adapt to the sloppy field than their adversaries. UMass could not mount any sort of attack in the opening minutes as Redman players kept falling every time they tried to cut.

Major credit for the Harvard win must go to defenseman Don Gogel who shadowed UMass All-American attackman Tom Malone all afternoon. The Crimson junior's effectiveness shows through in the scoring column as he held Malone to no goals and only one assist, although Malone did score a goal when Gogel was off for a penalty.

Pacing the Crimson offense was All-Ivy attackman John Ince who parked behind the UMass net and fed his cutting teammates for three goals and netted one himself. Cle Landolt, Harvard's leading scorer this season, had a hat trick scoring three times in the second quarter.

Captain Bruce Regan opened the scoring from his midfield position with only 1:52 gone in the game as he took an Ince pass and deposited it past Redman goalie Bruce Crawford. UMass could get nothing going at all offensively as play was consistently in the Redman end. Only stellar defensive work by Al Ruggiano, co-captain Bill Devore, and Joe Smith, as well as Crawford, kept the Crimson from running up the score early.

Steve Herschoff finally put the Redmen on the scoreboard as he circled around the net to surprise Harvard goalie John Cosentino at 13:52 of the opening period.

It was one of the few shots that UMass could get against Cosentino in the early going. The low scoring period ended with the game tied, 1-1.

Harvard pulled away in the second quarter. Once again Regan started things off with an unassisted tally and Landolt followed with a pair to give the Crimson a 3-1 bulge. Before UMass could recover, Phil Zuckerman took another pass from Ince and put it by Crawford at 10:00 while Ruggiano was serving a two minute double slashing penalty.

Before the quarter ended, Landolt struct again. This time it was a fluke goal as Crawford stopped a shot by middy Bob Hayes, but the rebound shot by Landolt bounced around the net as the UMass goalie couldn't control it and knocked it in. But a goal is a goal and this one put the dejected Redmen behind 6-1, at the half.

The third quarter started much like the first as Harvard dominated play. And as in the first, the Crimson opened the scoring as Paul Bloom got an unassisted goal at 2:17. But trailing by six goals, the Redman offense started to jell.

With Leif Rosenberger off for a penalty, sophomore Paul Ritch took a pass from Lou Marinacci and scored at the 4:27 mark. The goal seemed to inspire the stickers as they controlled play for the first time in the game. Phil Sheridan came back less than a minute later as he worked a pick and roll with Bob Waters and hit the upper right hand corner of the net. This made the score 7-3 and things were looking brighter for UMass.

The Redmen kept fighting and closed the game some more as Marinacci connected on a 30 footer as he caught Cosentino unaware. The goal came at the 6:47 mark and it appeared that there was plenty of time left for the Redmen.

But Harvard had other ideas. Regan set up Caleb Warren in the slot ten feet out and the sophomore attackman wasted no time in scoring to put his team ahead, 8-4. Ince added another about a minute before the period ended and the Redmen once again trailed by five, 9-4.

Whatever hope UMass had left was dealt a severe blow as Bloom scored again with 2:17 gone in the final stanza as Ince passed in front to him and he took it and shot all in one motion.

At this point UMass was going all out despite the insurmountable deficit, and a frustrated Malone finally scored from Sheridan at 9:03. A minute later Malone found John Gannon open and Gannon scored to make it 10-6 with five minutes remaining.

Harvard all but wrapped up the contest a few minutes later when Rosenberger shot through a screen past Crawford. Hayes closed out the scoring at 14:32 making the final score, 12-6.

It was the stickers first loss in two years. The Harvard defense, which was expected to have problems with the high-scoring Redmen, did a fine job. Cosentino was especially impressive as he had 12 saves for the afternoon to six for Crawford, a few on the spectacular side.

The next game for the Redmen is Saturday as they have an away game with Wesleyan.

Redmen Chase Fourth Straight at URI

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Today at 3 p.m. in Kingston, R.I. the UMass baseball team will seek its fourth straight win, against Yankee Conference rival Rhode Island, as the Redmen bring their 9-4 overall and 2-1 Yan-Con record into the tilt.

After a lackluster performance in a 5-1 April 13 loss to Tufts, UMass responded with a 12-3 shelling of AIC on the 15th and a weekend sweep of Conference foe Vermont, 10-8 and 4-3, this past Friday and Saturday to establish the three-game win streak.

The present upward sweep has brought the Redmen from a mediocre 6-4 mark to a fine 9-4 slate, and a solid 2-1 in Y-C action. UMass holds second place in the league behind 2-0 Maine and 1-0 Connecticut. The latter's victory came at the expense of UMass, 2-0.

The Redmen's opponent, URI owns a .500 record, having split a double-header with Brown nine days ago for a 1-1 overall mark. The Rams, who are under the new coachingship of John Norris, are expected to start pitcher Brian Sheehey.

Sheehey, a 5'11, 181-pound sophomore, hurled a 3-0 no-hitter against Brown. Another RI flinger of note is junior Garry Caffrey, a 6'3, 195 lefthander. Rhody is captained by catcher Skip Eickhoff, a right-handed hitter.

Among Ram lettermen are included the names of junior outfielder-third baseman Rich Crocker, senior pitcher Paul Fortin (who once hurled a one-hitter in American Legion ball, that hit a triple by Dave Sullivan), senior pitcher-first baseman Glenn Gariepy, junior second baseman Dave Nacci, junior first baseman Rich Potvin and senior shortstop John Sheehan.

Starting on the mound for UMass will be junior righty Don Anderson, who owns a 2-0 record. The rest of the Redman starting lineup will see Chuck Newell behind the plate, Ray Ellerbrook at first, Rosea Kelley at second, Tom Semino at third, Jim Saracino at short, Bob William or Paul Sulzicki in left field, Steve Rogers in center and Brian Martin in right.

This 14th contest of the season for the Redmen will bring them just beyond the midpoint of their 27-game spring schedule. When asked to comment on what this squad has accomplished over the first half of the year, and on what one can look forward to from the Redmen the rest of the way, coach Dick Bergquist had several things to point out.

CAPT. SKIP EICKHOFF

His reaction to an estimate of the first half was, "We've proven we have some hitting." And he continued, "We've had more consistent hitting over the last three games, which may be an indication of things to come."

Bergquist examined the performances of his players individually. First he took a look at the pitching staff. He has been pleased by the performances of Anderson and Jack Bernardo (2-1). He looks for a return to strength of Lou Colabello, who got off to a fast 3-0 start before dropping two quickies, to UConn and Tufts. The head mentor also singled out Bob Fichera (2-0) and Rich Rappoli (0-1), who "Both have good potential" and looks for significant contributions the rest of the way from them.

As for the rest of the squad, Bergquist first talked about Martin. "I think that the brightest spot on the team has been Brian Martin", who is referred to by the coach as "a good, complete ballplayer."

Martin sports a .442 batting average on 23 hits in 52 trips to the plate and has hit safely in every game. A better-than-aveage fielder (no errors so far), the 5'10, 160-pounder has a lot of mound experience, prompting Bergquist to assert, "I wouldn't hesitate to use him at pitcher."

The coach went quickly on, though, to assess the efforts of Rogers and Newell, who "have been bright spots as far as offensive punch goes," the platooning leftfielders William and Sulzicki, who "have responded pretty well", and second baseman Kelley, who "has been doing a good job for us in both the field and at the bat."

As for veterans Ellerbrook and Semino (hitting .214 and .174 respectively), Bergquist states, "I look for an improvement in their performances. They are proven ballplayers."

And so, with three good wins behing them and with the hitting rounding into shape, along with the fine pitching, the Redmen will be at Kingston with very definite ideas of a tenth victory and a 3-1 Yankee Conference standing.

DIAMOND DUST - UMass' overall batting average is .309 . . . Anderson, with six hits in eight trips to the plate, is batting a solid .750 . . . Included among his hits are two triples . . . UM's opponents are batting at a .217 clip . . . The Redman pitching staff has an earned run average of 2.45, as compared to its opponents 4.86 ERA.

Tippo Reveals Plan to Restructure UMass

By ROBERT WORTHSHIELD
Staff Reporter

Chancellor Oswald Tippo has made public his plan for reorganizing the UMass-Amherst administration, a plan which, if approved by the Board of Trustees in June, would change dramatically the structure and responsibility of all major administrative departments on campus.

Tippo has scheduled an open hearing on the plan for the University community on May 5th in the Colonial Lounge at noon, and has asked that all written comments on the proposal be submitted to his office before May 9th.

In a statement distributed yesterday, the Chancellor defended his plan by calling it a means "to improve administration by dividing responsibility to allow greater delegation of authority."

He stressed that the new scheme will "systematize and extend some of the mechanisms for participation of the faculty, students and staff in the decision-making process."

The plan operates under the overall direction of the Chancellor, the chief administrative officer on the campus. Under the Chancellor, the administration is divided into five departments: academic, student, development, financial and supporting services.

Each of these five departments will be headed by a Principal Administrative Officer (PAO), who will be responsible to the Chancellor.

Under each PAO, the several administrative departments will be divided into separate divisions, with separate heads, all responsible to the department's overall PAO.

For example, the PAO for Student Affairs will have under him the Dean of Students and his office which includes student affairs on and off campus and student activities, as well as the admissions and records office.

In this way, Tippo's plan stresses, the Dean of Students office will be relieved of its responsibility for admissions and will be able to concentrate on student affairs activities. The Dean of Students will communicate officially with the Chancellor through the Student Affairs PAO.

Similar divisions of responsibility in the other four major administrative departments are provided for, with each PAO assuming overall responsibility for his department.

Using the Student Affairs example again, Dean Field will still have complete responsibility for all student affairs except for admissions and records, but will now report to his PAO (Assistant to the Chancellor, Dr. Randolph W. Bromery) instead of the Chancellor directly.

Here's how the new departments will look under the Chancellor's plan.

In academics, the PAO will have approximately the same responsibilities as the Provost currently, minus student affairs and facilities planning. This, Tippo says, will lighten the PAO's responsibilities and will allow him and his staff to concentrate on the following areas: the schools and colleges, the library system, the graduate school, and special academic programs.

Tippo also says that the Academic Affairs PAO must have the number of decisions he must make personally reduced, and to accomplish this, the former Provost recommends three things.

1. Give more authority to academic deans.
2. Standardize all administrative policies so that there will be "fewer exceptional cases which must be decided by higher authorities."
3. Broaden inter-departmental communication so that the PAO will not have to be consulted on many routine matters.

The academic department will also have a separate division of continuing education under this plan, with its director responsible to the academic PAO.

In the student department, the major new feature under Tippo's organization will be Dean Field's having responsibility only for student affairs and student activities. The records office will be a separate division under this plan, with its head reporting to the students PAO.

Another sub-division in this department will be campus security, which has just recently been moved from the Treasurer's office to student affairs.

Tippo foresees the development of a separate Graduate Student Affairs Office in this general department, with that area's head reporting to the department PAO.

The department labeled development is essentially a conglomerate of several divisions, several of which were formerly administered by the Secretary's office.

Chancellor Tippo

Included here are campus relations, and a separate system for Amherst public relations, Tippo maintains, will be developed to work closely with the University's system-wide PR office in Boston next year. The director of Amherst public relations will report to the system-wide communications director in Boston.

The Alumni Association and Alumni Affairs will be in the development division, but there will continue to be a separate board of directors for alumni affairs.

A new office under development is a designed to coordinate fund-raising efforts for sources other than state government.

This division will provide a general liaison service for all foundations and the federal government. This office will be responsible to the development PAO

All the old concerns of the treasurer's office except for campus security will be handled by the new department of Financial Affairs, and all sub-divisions in this department will report to the financial PAO just as they formerly reported to the treasurer.

The fifth and last major administrative department is supporting operations, and this includes all non-academic services designed to support the University's functioning. Most of these services were previously managed through the treasurer's office. These operations will be controlled by supporting services PAO.

Also included in this group will be the management of self-liquidating organizations on campus, such as the Campus Center and the Student Union, residence halls, university apartments and the dining commons.

There is a proposal in the Tippo plan to have representative committees, such as the President's rent committee, administer several of these areas, with the ultimate task of representing the organizations before the Chancellor left to the supporting services PAO.

The Chancellor himself will have, according to this plan, a series of councils with students and faculty representation, to advise him in the areas of budget, priorities, and planning. He will also have an "Emergency Council" of students, faculty and administrators to advise him on possible actions in the event of any campus "emergencies."

Student and Faculty councils will also be established to advise each department PAO on matters within each department.

Foreign Students Stage International Bazaar

A full schedule of events has been planned for this Friday and Saturday as an International Fair to be put on by foreign students on the campus. Memorial Hall will be the site of many of the events, most of which will be free of charge. Events are open to all in gratitude for the warm hospitality extended to these students by the Amherst community.

On both Friday and Saturday there will be an International Bazaar running in Memorial Hall from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Groups of international students will have booths displaying artifacts, dresses, crafts, books, and food from their own countries; a rtists at work will also be present. Articles on display and the artwork will be available for purchase. There will also be a fortune teller present for anyone daring to look into his future, and music from the four continents will be played to add to the international atmosphere.

Anyone wishing to hear a genuine Yogi speak on the topic of immmortality should plan to attend a talk by Indian Sri Chinmoy. He is a "realised Soul of the highest magnitude" now on an extensive lecture tour. Sri Chinmoy's approach to life is one of love, devotion, and surrender, a path through the heart. Widely recognized for his unique spiritual achievements, he will be speaking on the second floor of Memorial Hall at 1:30 p.m.

Friday night at 8:00, the Indian association will present the award-winning "Ganchan Dinga" at Mahar Auditorium.

Saturday night the international talent show and ball will open at 8:00 in the Hall. Folk dances from Greece, the Phillippines, India and Persia and Chinese boxing will be performed. There will be a soul band, the Tornadoes, playing to keep everyone dancing until 1 a.m. A liquor stand will be set up selling drinks to people over 21 years of age. For this occasion, the International Club requests a dollar donation. Tickets for Saturday evening will be available for purchase and reservations may be made at the Foreigh Student Advisor's Office, Mrs. Russell, 545-2842. A limited number of tickets are available.

SUG Board Raises Fee

In its meeting last night, the Student Union Governing Board (SUG) reversed a decision made earlier this year on the SUG Board fee increase for next year. The original vote had called for a $15 increase for the year for both undergraduate and graduate students. They would be paying $7.50 more per semester, an increase from $30 to $45 a year.

Last evening it was voted that the increase will not go into effect for graduate students at least during the fall semester. This means that the increase for undergraduates will be $9 per semester. Undergraduates will be paying $48 a year for the fee.

Supporters of the motion not to increase the fee for graduate students contended that undergraduates use a greater proportion of the fee collected than graduates do. They said that money-making areas of the Student Union and Campus Center such as the Hatch and bookstore will be open to both grads and undergrads, but that the non-profit areas that lose money that are funded by the fee are hardly used by graduates. These areas would be meeting rooms and student activities, mainly. Those opposed to cutting the graduate fee increase maintained that the funds are readily available for graduate activities but that the grads simply fail to use them.

Linsky Speech Notes Public Dissatisfaction

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Addressing a small crowd of about 35 students last night, State Representative Martin Linsky stated that there exists among the citizens of Massachusetts and this nation a "pervasive feeling of disillusionment" with politics and government.

Linsky, appearing a s a guest of the University of Massachusetts College Republican Club, spoke in the Colonial Lounge on the subject of "The New Republicanism."

The Republican legislator from the 13th Norfolk District is presently seeking his party's nomination for Lt. Governor and recently received the public endorsement of Gov. Francis Sargent.

Rep. Linsky stated that not just Blacks or the young, but rather all concerned citizens in general are "getting increasingly discouraged with politics." And the nature of this dissatisfaction, according to the speaker, is (1) people feel they have lost control and cannot reach their government and are thus "frustrated" and (2) there has been a "lack of performance" and the government "not doing what it said it would do."

Concerning the second point of the lack of performance on government's part, the Republican guest speaker said that it is a "gap between promises and reality" that really upsets people. He mentioned specifically the issues of crime and environmental pollution. Everyone favors doing something about them, yet, somehow "nothing happens," he added.

Linsky asserted that most politicians can basically be classified as being either (1) those who promise and don't deliver, and (2) those who promise nothing in the first place because they pretend the problems don't exist.

He did add, here, however, that in the 1968 political race two candidates seemed not to have lost touch with the people, Eugene McCarthy and George Wallace. Both men seemed to be talking to people who believed "their government has gotten away from them."

According to Rep. Linsky the solution to the problems is for public officials to bring back a "relationship of candor, trust and openness between politicians and people." He believes the Republican party can do this by living up to its essential principal which is "saying what you mean and standing up for what you say!"

Linsky thus sees in 1970 a "unique opportunity to put it all together" for the Republicans and win in Massachusetts. "I am excited about it and look forward to it," Linsky said of the upcoming political battles.

In a question and answer period which followed his speech Linsky was asked his opinion of President Nixon and Vice-President Agnew. He said of the Chief Executive that "though he was not my first choice for the nomination, I am excited about some of the things he is doing. Linsky believes Mr. Agnew has not been consistent with President Nixon's policy of bringing the nation together and has been appealing rather to the public's emotions.

Of the current New Haven, Conn. trial of Bobby Seale and other members of the Black Panther Party, Linsky said he did not know enough about the issue to comment, but that there is substantial cause to be concerned about individual rights of the Panthers.

Speaking finally about the problems between politicians and young people today Mr. Linsky said there has been a failure on the part of the politicians to "work hard enough to make distinctions" between radicals bent only on destruction of the political system and those others with constructive aims (such as ending the war in Vietnam). "We have't met this challenge so far. We haven't dealt with the issues. If we don't solve this problem soon, however, we will drive the whole generation out of the system!" he concluded.

Tree Planted At Campus Pond

A tree was planted by the pond today, "in an attempt to return to the basic sense of wonder everyone is born with. Bob Zelman, the ceremony organizer, read prayers from the American Indians, along with campus religious leaders from the Newman Center, the United Christian Foundation and Hillel, and the Universal Life Church.

The planting of the tree was an act against the worship of technology and the consequent destruction of Earth. Everyone who played an instrument brought it along for the "ritual dance and joyous song" of the ceremony. (MDC photo by Pat Lempart)

US Arms Cambodia Through Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) - With full U.S. support, South Vietnam has secretly delivered about 1,500 automatic rifles to Cambodia in an apparent effort to buy time for President Nixon's delayed decision on Cambodia's request for U.S. military assistance.

The action was announced by the White House and State Department Thursday only after a report published by the New York Times disclosed an assurance had been given to the government of Cambodia last Friday that it would receive a supply of captured Soviet-designed AK47 rifles.

Indications were that the United States instigated the South Vietnamese delivery of the weapons to avoid taking direct action itself pending determination by Nixon of how to deal with the dilemma in which Cambodia's appeal for help placed him.

He is under pressure from the military, notably the Army, to provide urgently substantial assistance to the regime of Premier Lon Nol. He is under pressure from some congressional leaders not to become more deeply involved in Southeast Asia at a time when he is withdrawing troops from Vietnam.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler made the first official disclosure of the secret weapons arrangement among the United States, South Vietnam and Cambodia. He said several thousand AK47s were involved and that deliveries had been made by South Vietnam "with our knowledge and approval." He brushed aside a question whether the deliveries were made by U.S. planes.

At the State Department, press officer Robert J. McCloskey later said that the weapons were flown into Cambodia by South Vietnamese planes.

Some officials privately indicated that a declaration of U.S. "knowledge and approval" was a considerable understatement. There is a general impression that Washington initiated the transfer.

Diplomatic sources say the number of rifles delivered within the last day or so totaled around 1,500 with 3,000 or 4,000 more to go. McCloskey said ammunition for those captured weapons is being supplied.

Nixon met Wednesday with the National Security Council, his top foreign policy aides. Another council meeting originally set for Thursday morning was rescheduled for Friday afternoon without explanation. There has been no official word on the subject of the council's sessions.

Fighting, though reportedly not on a large scale, has been going on for weeks between the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces on Cambodia's border with South Vietnam and the inexperienced 37,000-man Cambodian army.

Nixon Seeks End to Draft; Abolishes Job Deferments

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon abolished future occupational and fatherhood deferments from the draft starting Thursday; asked Congress for authority to abolish future student deferments; and urged an eventual end to the draft itself.

Nixon issued an executive order permitting men who now hold or have applied for occupational, agricultural or fatherhood deferments to keep or obtain them. But the order bars the granting of such deferments in the future to men who were not qualified for them before Thursday.

The President also sent a message to Congress seeking authority to impose a similar ban, under similar conditions, on deferments for students above the high school level.

The message strongly endorsed the unanimous conclusion of a commission headed by former Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates favoring a transition to an all-volunteer army.

Nixon said that in addition to the 6 per cent pay raise recently voted by Congress, he will propose another 20 per cent pay increase for enlisted men with less than two years of service, to take effect next Jan. 1.

His fiscal 1972 budget, he added, will contain a $2 billion request for added pay and other benefits for the military.

Nixon directed the secretary of defense to step up enlistment and re-enlistment programs and to see that the armed forces pay more attention to the "individual needs, aspirations and capabilities" of their personnel.

Spokesmen at a White House briefing declined to estimate when an all-volunteer army could be achieved or how big it would be.

But Nixon's message said that the draft "cannot be ended all at once" and that it would probably be necessary for Congress to extend authority for the draft beyond the present expiration date of July 1, 1971. A spokesman said an extension of at least two years would be needed.

Chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., said he does not plan to have his House Armed Services Committee consider any draft legislation this year.

Army Mutineers Control Armory

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) —Army mutineers claimed control of the armory at Trinidad's military headquarters Thursday, but loyal troops ringed the base and sealed off the insurgents.

A spokesman for the rebels said in a telephone interview that his group held some army officers hostage. He declined to say how many mutineers were holed up in the base, six miles from Port of Spain, or how many hostages they held.

Six U. S. warships, dispatched from Puerto Rico and other Caribbean points when the trouble erupted Tuesday, lay just outside territorial waters of Trinidad and Tobago, prepared to evacute American residents and tourists if necessary. Two British frigates also lay off this former crown colony ready to evacute British nationals.

But the government appeared to have gained the upper hand in the crisis touched off by the arrest of about a score of leaders of the nation's Black Power movement.

Originally 200 to 300 members of the army were reported to have mutinied, but the number dwindled to about 50. The present strength of the insurgent movement is not certain.

Seizure of army headquarters was apparently intended as a rebel bargaining lever.

BC Classes May Resume

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) - Classes at Boston College will resume if negotiations over a planned tuition increase succeed before the end of the semester, a college spokesman said Thursday.

Classes at the school were officially suspended Wednesday night. The vote by the Academic Senate to do so came in the midst of a student boycott of classes in protest of the increase.

A student referendum Tuesday rejected a compromise increase offered by the university of $240. The original plan was a $500 hike.

Also approved by the Senate, which is chaired by the Rev. Seavey Joyce, college president, was a motion that four faculty members join the negotiations being conducted by students and administrators.

Arthur Clarke Speaks Monday in Ballroom

Arthur C. Clarke, inventor of author of the book and film "2001: A Space Odyssey," appears at S.U. Ballroom on April 27 1970 at 8:15 to speak before the University community.

Born in England in 1917, Arthur C. Clarke is a man of truly diversified and remarkable achievements. An authority on space travel, he is the winner of the Franklin Institute's Gold Medal (1963) for having originated the communications satellite in a technical paper published in 1945.

In 1962, he was awarded the $2,800 UNESCO Kalinga Prize for science writing. In 1965, he won two Aviation / Space Writers Association awards for his LIFE article on the history and future of communications satellites. In 1969 he shared an Oscar nomination with Stanley Kubrick for the screenplay of "2001: A Space Odyssey."

Arthur C. Clarke

A top-ranking science writer and "a master of science fiction" (The New Yorker), Mr. Clarke is the author of 40 books, both non-fiction and fiction, 10 million copies of which have been printed in some 30 languages. The latest (1968) is the Book-of-the-Month Club selection, "The Promise of Space." He is now writing the preface and epilogue to the astronaut's own book of the Apollo mission.

In addition to "2001: A Space Odyssey," which was inspired by one of his short stories "The Sentinel," Mr. Clark wrote, with the editors of LIFE, "Man and Space" (1964).

His non-fiction works began to be published in the early 1950's and revised editions have appeared with regularity. The titles of these books include: "Interplanetary Flight," "The Exploration of Space," "Going Into Space," "The Making of a Moon," "The Challenge of the Spaceship," "The Challenge of the Sea," "Profiles of the Future," and "Voices from the Sky."

Mr. Clarke's science fiction has been spectacularly successful and has gone into many editions. The titles of these books are: "Islands in the Sky," "Prelude to Space," "Against the Fall of Night," "The Sands of Mars," "Childhood's End," "Expedition to Earth," "Earthlight," "Reach for Tomorrow," "The City and the Stars," "Tale s from the White Hart," "The Deep Range," "The Other Side of the Sky," "A Fall of Moondust," "Tales of Ten Worlds," "Dolphin Island," and "Glide Path."

Several omnibus collections of his fiction have appeared: "Across the Sea of Stars," "From the Ocean, From the Stars," and "Prelude to Mars."

The mysteries of the sea, however, fascinate Clarke as much as those of outer space. Since the early 1950's he has been exploring the deeps of Australia and Ceylon with his partner in skin diving, Mike Wilson, a film producer and underwater photographer. An underwater expedition by Clarke and Wilson to the Great Barrier Reef of Australia in 1954 and 1955 was chronicled by Clarke in "The Coast of Coral," with photographs by Wilson. Underwater adventure around Ceylon was the subject of "The Reefs of Taprobane."

His interest in the sea was also reflected in "Voice Across the Sea." With Mike Wilson he wrote "The Treasure of the Great Reef" about the successful expedition undertaken in 1963 by Clarke, Wilson and others in search of a sunken ship in the Great Basses Reef of Ceylon.

His interest in the sea was also reflected in "Voice Across the Sea." With Mike Wilson he wrote "The Treasure of the Great Reef" about the successful expedition undertaken in 1963 by Clarke, Wilson and others in search of a sunken ship in the Great Basses Reef of Ceylon, where they discovered a ton of silver coins.

Other collaborations between Clarke and Mike Wilson were the juvenile non-fiction books "The First Five Fathoms," "Boy Beneath the Sea," "Indian Ocean Adventure", and "Indian Ocean Treasure."

Arthur Clark's articles have been published widely, including such periodicals as Reader's Digest, Holiday, Playboy, Look and The New York Times Magazine.

School of Ed Presents Workshops

A one-day workshop in non-western studies will be held Saturday, April 25, from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the School of Education.

The workshop has been organized by the Center for International Education and is designed especially to help teachers and prospective teachers introduce a non-western dimension into the classroom. New materials in the field will be shown and discussion will center around techniques and strategies for introducing non-western studies in teaching. Although the workshop is oriented around the needs of teachers, other interested persons are also welcome.

A $5 registration fee which includes the cost of lunch and handout materials will be charged. Further information is available from Dr. George Urch, School of Education, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Massachusetts 01002.

Student Travel ID's Available at Whitmore

All full-time students at the University (or at other accredited colleges or universities) who plan to be in Europe in the coming year can purchase International Student Identity Cards from the Office of International Programs, 229 Whitmore.

For $1.00, a card holder is enabled to use low-cost student intro-European travel and to have discount prices on admission to theatres, chateaux, museums, and student hostels and restaurants. For example, holders can fly from London to Paris for only $11.50 or from Brussels to Bombay or to Nairobi for only $150. These cards are valid for one year from January 1, 1970.

The International Programs Office also has information on the International Student Employment Service sponsored by the Council on International Educational Exchange. This service enables students to work in Ireland, England, Australia, or New Zealand.

A one-day orientation in the host country is provided as well as the necessary work papers. Students are responsible for finding their own jobs but are given advice and information on how to do this. The fee is $25.00.

It is not too late to apply for programs of overseas study during the summer of 1970 or the academic year 1970-71. There are still a few places in the University's Bologna Program which is offered June 18 to August 30. Interested students should contact Professor Quint in the History Department.

May 15 is the deadline for application to spend a year at the University of Tunis in a program of the Experiment in International Living. Open to students who are upper division or graduate level and who speak fluent French, this program offers an 18 day orientation program, round-trip travel to Tunisia, one month home stay with a Tunisian family, and two semesters at the University of Tunis for study of Arabic language and North African area studies (including board, room, and tuition) for only $1000.00.

Students studying to be teachers of social studies, French, or Spanish may apply to participate in fall 1970 or spring 1971 programs in Nice, France and Colombia, in Rennes and Paris, France, and in Seville, Spain, respectively.

A cumulative grade average of 2.75 overall is required. Total costs vary from $1,400 in the Paris program to $1,750 in the Rennes program excluding certain administrative fees. Deadline for applying is May 10.

Among the many other overseas study programs on which the Office of International Programs has information are: summer study in Britain in urban sociology, in Brazil in marketing, in Taiwan in Chinese culture, in British Honduras in tropical ecology, in Europe in art History, and in England in physical education.

Symphony Band in First Performance

In a concert April 26 in Bowker Auditorium the University Symphony Band will give the first performance of Paul Cooper's SINFONIA III: LITURGIES. Composed in 1969 on a commission from the UMass Fine Arts Council, the work is the third in a series of compositions commissioned by the Council for the University Symphony Band and Wind Ensemble.

The piece is in seven sections which are played without pause. It is unusual in that individual players are allowed to improvise at certain points by playing ad. lib. various ostinato patterns.

Also included on the program is THAT TIME MAY CEASE AND MIDNIGHT NEVER COME. The piece, written by Dr. Philip Bezanson, head of the music department at UMass, is based on the Faust story, with the text taken from Christopher Marlow's poem. Raphael Edgar, a distinguished bariton e soloist from the Washington, D. C. area, will appear as guest soloist in the piece.

Prokofieff's ATHLETIC FESTIVAL MARCH and NOBLES OF THE MYSTIC SHRINE by John Philip Sousa, will also be performed. The concert will conclude with richard Wagner's majestically beautiful "Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral" from LOHENGRIN.

Where's the Fire?

To The Editor:

He presented the picture of the greatest faith and strength possible. He is a beautiful man, he is Ralph Abernathy.

Rev. Abernathy talked a great deal about the extensive role youth must play in making America a strong and viable nation again, but I wondered where all his hopes were coming from. As he called for all the Vietnam troops to come home now, for a stop to the wave of repression that is taking place in this country, for an end to the Nixon - Agnew -Mitchell - Thurmond era, thousands of students clapped loudly -- for what? To express their common beliefs and sympathy? As we sat back and enjoyed the lecture, were we considering in all honesty the statements presented? Of what significance is it to agree intellectually with the Black Panther struggle and the need to end the war in Vietnam now. Accept the challenge of Ralph Abernathy to join the struggle. Become actively committed to the historic struggle of Martin Luther King and to the contemporary sturggle of all blacks, of all people struggling for a new value system from which we can give equal life to all people. As Rev. Abernathy's poet friend said to him, the worst crime is that the good men were so good they were good for nothing and they committed the worst sin of all, the sin of silence.

Ralph Abernathy sees a revolution upon us. He hopes it will be a non-violent one, for violence to him is immoral and impractical. But violence will continue to grow, until all of you are willing to admit to yourself the fact that there is a sickness rampant in the United States and it is in you and in me. For your own survival you must fight this sickness. There is no easy road and you no longer have the choice of being a spectator at the greatest show of all time because you are not safe anymore. There is no place to run to, no place to hide. "The blacks have started a fire burning that no water can put out. That fire is burning in Ralph David Abernathy." And I hope it is burning in you.

—Campus Comment— Tax Protest-Tradition

To The Editor:

Students who want to "do something" about the war in Vietnam have an ideal opportunity readily available to them: refuse to pay the telephone tax. All across the country there are groups of tax refusers -- in Chicago, Albuquerque, San Francisco, New York, Boston, New Orleans, and several dozen other centers -- people are not paying the tax on telephone calls.

Even though this is not a big tax, non-payment is significant. It is the one tax specifically collected for warfare and thus nonpayment demonstrates to the government that you are opposed to our Vietnam policy; it poses a real collection problem for the Internal Revenue Service; and it is easy to do.

Many thousands of your fellow citizens (including 50 or more in Amherst) deduct the tax when they pay their monthly telephone bill and include a note saying whey they refuse to pay. Eventually the Internal Revenue Service sends an agent to collect the unpaid tax, so at least there is some chance for direct communication with the bureaucracy in Washington. The point can be made.

Students may bear in mind Thoreau's words: "If a thousand men were not to pay their tax bill this year, that would not be a violent and bloody measure as it would be to pay them and enable the State to commit violence and shed innocent blood." Tax refusal is in the American tradition, dating back to the Boston Tea Party, a signal of citizen opposition to immoral governmental policies.

The method is simple. Substract the federal tax from your phone bill, write a brief note explaining your action, and pay the rest. Power to the people.

Yours truly,
DEAN A. ALLEN

Mayor's Response to Diversion

Dear Sirs:

Since my visit to the University of Massachusetts, I have been looking into the question of the diversion of the Connecticut River to replenish the Quabbin Reservoir. The purpose of that diversion would be to assure a continuing supply of clean water for the Massachusetts cities and towns that depend on the Quabbin for their water supply.

At the present time, Massachusetts is faced with a shortage of presently available clean water in the eastern part of the state; while the Connecticut Valley, if we include the Connecticut River above Greenfield, is fortunate enough to have a surplus. Every spring, for a period of forty-five days or so, melting shows and April rains cause untold billions of gallons of water to flow down the Connecticut River to the sea, used by no one. Certainly it is fair to point out that consistent with an obligation not to abuse our environment is an equally solemn obligation not to waste or dissipate our resources.

At the same time, there are serious questions raised by the proposal now being considered, which would divert a portion of the spring runoff from the Connecticut River into the Quabbin through a pumped storage hydroelectric facility at Northfield Mountain.

First, we must assure that the proposed diversion will not create an ecological imbalance in the Quabbin.

Second, we must assure that the communities in the Connecticut River drainage basin, especially those not served by the Quabbin, will have an adequate supply of water in the future.

To solve the second problem, I would insist that the downstream communities, through appropriate governing bodies, shall at all times possess the right, as long as it is reasonably exercised, to veto the actual diversion in the event such diversion would be injurious to the full and normal flow of the river.

The people of the Valley are entitled to this protection, and should not be powerless to stop unwarranted or harmful diversion of a resource which rightfully belongs to them. Nor should they be expected to rely solely on the integrity of promises given by public officials today when the conflict may not arise for twenty years more.

The problem of ecology is more difficult to resolve. A draft report by the Corps of engineers leaves serious doubt in my mind about the effect that a Connecticut River diversion would have on the Quabbin'

"Problems could also arise because of an ecological imbalance caused by the introduction of fish or fish eggs, nutrients and algae to the reservoir via the diversions...Fish (especially hardy, pollutant resistant ones) introduced into the Connecticut River could take hold in the Quabbin and develop into a real problem. Screening and chlorination might take care of these problems; however, not enough information is known as to exactly what can be expected."

Until this crucial question of ecological balance is answered, I believe that it would be irresponsible for me -- or any other public official -- to make a final judgement on the proposed diversion. While we await additional information, I would stress that any course of action finally adopted must bear in mind our responsibility not only to safeguard our present supply of clean water, but the ecological balance of future generations.

Sincerely,
KEVIN H. WHITE
Mayor

To Dance is to Love Again

To The Editor:

We had a really fine joyous tree planting yesterday by the pond. The speeches were so different from the usual rhetoric intoned at political meetings, whether they be traditional or radical. The speakers gave moving personal testaments to the holiness of God's world - the world of Nature. With that attitude, our environment WILL BE transformed.

We played music. Out of nowhere congo drums, kazoos, a banjo and a tissue-paper-and-comb appeared. But because tissue paper would have disintegrated in the falling rain, a ten dollar bill was used instead. It was the best use I've seen money put to in a long time.

But most importantly we all danced. A hundred people formed a big circle and danced around the newly planted tree to the beat of congo drums. Ring-around-the-rosy is such a gas. As Arlo Guthrie sings "Touch Your Nose and Blow your Toes, doin' the ring around the Rosy Rag."

Tom Robbins said: " THE PLACE OF THE DANCE IS WITHIN THE HEART. TO DANCE IS TO LOVE AGAIN.

So dance. Dance everyday. Dance in class. Dance in bed. Dance in the church. Dance in the streets. Dance in the rain! Dance beneath a diamond sky with one hand waving free.

Dance and if you should ever be arrested for dancing, dance in the paddy wagon. Dance in your jail cell and dance in court. Maybe the judge will dance with you.

We need more of these celebrations of life. On sunny (or rainy) days bring your musical instruments and yourselves to the pond and play and dance! This campus can become a Festival of Life if YOU make it happen.

This column is to announce, that when the crab apple tree which we all planted blossoms next month, we will be ou there to celebrate the sacredness of natural growth. Come and support your local tree!

I want to quote a song by Sydney Carter called "Lord of the Dance."

I danced in the morning when the world was begun.
and I danced in the moon
and the stars and the sun.
I came down from heaven and I danced on the earth in Bethlehem
I had my birth.

Dance then wherever you may be
I am the Lord of the dande, said he.
And I'll lead you all
Wherever you may be
I'll lead you all in the dace
In the dance, said he.

They buried my body
and they thought I'd gone,
But I am the Dance and I still go on.
Dance then!

They cut me down and I leaped high.
I am the life
that'll never, never die.
I'll live in you
if you'll live in me.
"I am the Lord of the dance," said he.
Dance then! "..."

To The Editor:

EARTH DAY .....APRIL 22, 1970!

Did it ring a bell in the ears of ANY UMass activists? We eagerly scanned the campus for any signs of the so-called "Earth Day" involvement. Not only did we not find much activity, we didn't find much interest. At that point, it became discouraging to know that high school students could have more concern than a large percentage of a University campus, even though we, as high school students, couldn't have as much influence to get ecological problems discussed and to get people involved.

The schedules say that yesterday was the only day for environmental-abuse prevention, but at least the Hampshire EARTH DAY Headquarters could be OPEN, if not operating.

According to the CEQ slogan of the day, "Earth: Love it or Leave it", there should be a vast majority of UMass students leaving it soon. Or if there are those who do care, if only they would show themselves, the disappointment would not be so great.

The War is Not Over

To The Editor:

The war in Southeast Asia is not over. For that reason alone the Anti-War movement cannot die.

The University Mobilization Committee, the group formed a little over three weeks ago on this campus responsible for the activities of April 15th, did not cease to exist on April 16th. At both rallies in the Stadium and on the Amherst Commons, the beginning of a strong local anti-war movement was called for. The 15th was a beginning, not an end. Those who are running this country have made such a beginning imperative. We must work in a number of different areas to make a significant impact to aid in an evaluation and reshaping of this country's government and its policies.

This is not the place to discuss what can be done. The right place is at the next open meeting of the University Mobilization Committee, Tuesday, April 28th., in the Student Union Council Chambers at 8:30 p.m. The UMC is applying for a budget from the Student Senate and has both immediate and long range plans. Let us not forget that people are still dying by American hands throughout Southeast Asia, and Americans are dying because of the commands of our leaders. We must stop those commands. As long as there is a war, there will be an anti-war movement. If you want to do something about the anti-war movement, come Tuesday night; join the Mobilization Committee as we take the beginning and make it a dynamic force for responsible and viable change.

The only pure revolution in the end is technology. Yet, that is the same as the revolution in consciousness. One thing, just buttons, light bulbs, needles and thread. The other, totally internal, spiritual, personal, emotional - al (do all those words end in al or is that just individual). It is in the fusion of that and endless other dichotomies that the road to revolution lies. The movie CINERAMA 2001 is a Revolution breakthrough. Not that other movies do not have things to say, but 2001 has things to feel in it. It's fascinating how all the human emotions, joy, sadness, love, anxiety, jealousy, hatred, on and on, come through so clearly in a film that on the surface seems to deal primarily with machines and the mastery of them. I mean, where the flesh that we have been conditioned to see as dealing with the emotional side of man? Where is the blood? Where is the pain? No, 2001 takes us beyond all that earthly stuff and truly gives us a glimpse of the future.

The future, where is that? Someone rips a ticket in half, guides you to a plush chair, the light dims and soon, soon you are out there. In fact, at times way out there, 2001 beyond, near the speed of light, you realize the Future is: Broadway, flashing lights, sotty air, cars crunching from brakes that need lubrication, a beggar asks for a nickel and you realize the Future is NOW! 2001 is the apex of technological communication this civilization has reached. Of course, one might say a flower contains all one needs to know.

Correction on Election

To the editor:

The Free and Responsible Press strikes again! The coverage given the issues and the candidates in the recent Student Senate elections was extremely poor. For many students the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is their only source of information concerning their student government and its leaders. Considering that the Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a regulated monopoly, to be operated in the best interest of the public served, it should provide the student body with clear and concise coverage of issues and events that concern the students.

In the past weeks, other than the letter to the editor by John Dubois, there was no mention of the issues or the candidates in the election for Student Senate Officers. As for the coverage of the election itself the same poor coverage was again manifest. Concerning, in specific, the election of Student Senate Treasurer the coverage was wanting and what little there was was erroneous. It seemed perfectly obvious to everyone in the Council Chambers, except apparently Collegian reporter Northshield that Senator Waters withdrew his name from consideration as a candidate for Treasurer, and the thirteen votes he did receive were as a result of Senators who wrote in his name as a symbolic gesture. I for one find it hard to comprehend how a person who is not seeking an office can be "soundly defeated.

Dining Commons Comments

To the editor:

During the last few months, I have been looking into the meals at the dining commons, hoping to find material to press for reform. The major problems are quite evident for anyone who eats regularly at the dining commons. I have contacted the governor's office, where it was referred to the Deputy Commissioner for Central Services, who is now studying the dining commons.

If you have any information or complaints, you can put it to good use by writing it down and forwarding it to:

Mr. Albert H. Zabriskie

Linguistics

To the editor:

The account of the meeting of the Board of Trustees in Thursday's Collegian was incomplete in one small but important respect. The Board also approved a proposal for the University to offer M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in Linguistics. In September this program will have a full-time faculty of six. I am grateful for this opportunity to set the record straight.

Jesus Christ

Thru the editor:

To Mr. Bromley. We would like toosuggest that before he indulges in his polemics he should check his understanding of history. We can understand his connecting the repression in our nation's courts with Adolph Hitler and the point of comparing the Moynihan "benign neglect" policy with Houdini. But no matter how hard we try, we cannot dig that last pearl comparing an attitude of "all shall be righted via neglect" with the person of Jesus Christ. As Ralph Abernathy pointed out, Jesus walked a difficult road that hasn't been tried. He applied the words of Isaiah the prophet to Himself: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He anointed me to preach good news to the poor, to proclaim release to the captives, and recover y of sight to the blind, to set free those who are downtrodden, to proclaim the favorable year of the Lord."

Jesus was always concerned with people's needs, wherever he found them. As the Son of God, he was also equipped to meet man's most basic need, the spiritual need for love, acceptance, and forgiveness for the sins of neglect, greed, pride, and hate that have gotten us into the interpersonal and ecological mess we're in. He also came to deliver us from the fear-hate syndrome that causes us to fight discouraging and deceptive words with hateful, dehumanizing and equally deceptive words of our own. Jesus promised the power of His Spirit to overcome evil with Good.

Is there a Paulist in the crowd?

Believe it or not, a campus protest group is not an unlikely place to find a Paulist.

Why? Because Paulists are the mediators of our time . . . standing between God and man . . . understanding, helping, loving . . . trying to bring together the extremes of the world we live in and the Church.

Wherever he is . . . as a college chaplain, working in a ghetto or helping in a parish . . . the Paulist is serving.

Tippo Agrees to Pollution Research

Chancellor Oswald Tippo of UMass/Amherst, and Mr. John R. Elwood, supervising sanitary engineer of the State Division of Water Pollution Control announced Wednesday that the University has signed a $290,300 agreement with the Division of Water Pollution Control for research and demonstration projects in three key areas of water pollution abatement.

The areas are removal of phosphates and other nutrients from waste water by chemical methods, study of pollution of lakes by watercraft exhausts and suppression of nutrient recycles from bottom deposits in lakes.

The research will be carried out over a three-year period by the UMass department of civil engineering. Dr. T. H. Feng of the department's environmental engineering program will coordinate the effort.

The nutrient removal project will study modifications through the addition of chemicals to the primary wastewater treatment process. Results are expected in two main areas--removal of such algal nutrients as phosphates and nitrates and increased removal of biological oxygen demand in wastewater.

"The project will be essentially a pilot plant study at the Town of Amherst sewage treatment plant, conveniently located near the U-Mass Amherst campus," Dr. Feng explained. The research plant will have a capacity of about 10,000 gallons per day and will consist of facilities for pumping, chemical feed and mixing, flocculation, sedimentation and aeration.

"Duplicate systems will be constructed so that one may be used as a control and all units will be trailer-mounted so the plant can be moved to other sewage treatment plants for demonstration studies," according to Dr. Feng. He and Dr. Francis A. DiGiano will head the study.

CEQ in Action

Free Tribal-Spirit-Lifting

The Coalition For Environmental Quality is sponsoring a celebration of environment Spirits in the Student Union Ballroom from 9:30 to 12 midnight this evening. It is designed to re-acquaint earth people, not only with nature, but with fellow human beings.

On the program will be a play, a slide show, tribal dancing, and a rock-band. All good earth people are asked to contribute by bringing along balloons, musical instruments, and happiness.

It is a rare occasion when people can relate to each other these days. Plastic buildings, put up in a plastic environment are not coducive to freeing oneself from the oppressive nature of our surroundings. Let's at least spend this night creating life as it should be with a little free expression and creativity. Free Admission for free thinking people!

The Universal Life Church will also provide the necessary spiritual uplift to the whole proceedings by bestowing its blessings on the Assembly gathered there.

Discussing Ecology Problems

As part of environment week the Coalition For Environmental Quality is sponsoring a number of discussions in S.B.A. at 7 p.m. Friday evening to be followed by a celebration in the Student Union at 9:30.

The 7 p.m. discussions will occur as follows: Capitalism and Ecology - Can the Profit System Cure the Environment? Room 105; Population Control: Genocide or Necessity? Room 106; National Priorities: Vietnam or Dorchester County - Death or Life? Room 198; Chemical - Biological Warfare: Does our Government have any Morality? Room 109; Engineering and Technology - Do environment problems have a technical solution? Room 110; The religious perspective: Is it a hindrance to a quality Environment? Room 111; The Education Process: Has it created Environmental awareness - Room 112.

These discussions will be completely unstructured and are designed to promote individual awareness and individual participation. Please come to the discussions and express your ideas and feelings.

Soap Commandos Urge Clean-up of Waterways

UMass students and faculty protested the sale of phosphate soaps in front of Louis' Food Market as each demonstrator bought a box of soap to clear the pollutants off the store shelves. The Student Organization Against Pollution commandos warned the public to "stop buying pollutants; stop selling pollutants!" (Photo by Warren Morss)

A peaceful demonstration by the Soap Commandos, students and faculty of the University of Massachusetts, seeking Amherst community support, looked toward Amherst community-generated cessation of purchases of phosphated laundry detergents, and the cessation of the selling of phosphated laundry detergents.

Phosphated laundry soaps cause eutrophication of lakes and rivers - they cause an excessive growth of algae, which in turn causes the death of water plants and fish, and, ultimately, the death of the oxygen given off by the lakes and rivers. According- to a release from Congressman Henry S. Reuss (D.-Wisc), all laundry soaps contain more than 1% phosphates EXCEPT the following: BLUE LUSTRE, BORATEEM, IVORY SNOW, LUX, LUX FLAKES and VEL.

The students and faculty passed out informational leaflets to the Amherst community asking them not to purchase or to use environmental pollutants. Some members of the community have signed petitions asking that the phosphated soaps not be sold in Amherst. These petitions were presented today to Louis' Market.

Each of the students and faculty have purchased with their own money a box of polluted laundry soap, and piled the soaps in front of Louis' Market to attract Amherst community attention to one environmental pollutant. The Soap Commandos are aware that the phosphates in the soap they have purchased will make their way through ground water systems to the Connecticut River and to the ocean, regardless of the means they choose to destroy the soap.

This was a completely non-violent demonstration - not against Louis' Market or against Mr. Wally Vincent - but it was a demonstration against environmental pollutants, against their sale in the Amherst community, and against their use in the Amherst community.

President Nixon has asked that the makers of phosphated soaps discontinue their manufacture. Representative Henry S. Reuss has a bill in Congress, pending now since June 1969, forbidding the manufacture or importation of phosphated laundry soaps.

Church to Ordain Ministers at Pond

Universal Life Church will ordain new ministers in ceremonies by the local ministry. Each minister received a card and certificate from the mother church in Modesto, California. Ministers can perform all acts of the establishment clergy in most states. The only credo of the national church is "Do whatever you believe is right."

The local parish will have an ordination service and meeting this Sunday at the Campus Pond at 1:00 p.m. Ministers and non-ministers can help plan the parish's program and church functions. The parish needs to fill out incorporation papers for Massachusetts, plan Water Morning on the Campus Pond, deal with political repression.

The Universal Life Church provided $1100 to secure freedom for Eric Walgren from the Hampshire County Jail. Most of the money was contributed by other ministers. $180 of this money, collected at the Moratorium Wednesday and at the Jefferson Airplane concert, will go towards a permanent bail fund for the defense of the community, $58, collected at the Airplane show, will be sent to the Panther 21. The Church, wearing its colors of white and gold (peace and prosperity for all men), plan to be present at all major events to continue collecting for the community defense fund and for the Panthers.

Redman Ruggers Split Two-Game Series with Amherst

UMass' rugby club split a two-game contest with Amherst College rugby club as Amherst's 'A' team eeked out a 3-0 win over the Redmen, while the UMass 'B' team subdued Amherst 8-3, in a spirited contest, both tilts played on Tuesday.

The 'A' game, played in a downpour late Tuesday afternoon, began as a spirited contest immediately upon the kickoff. UMass' Steve Encarnacao blocked (with his knee of course) an Amherst punt. A UMass player recovered the ball within five yards of the goal line, but knocked the ball forward, giving Amherst possession.

The UMass forwards played another excellent game as they maintained constant pressure on the Amherst club. In the sloppy weather the most effective tactic was to kick the ball downfield, rush the receiver and work for a break. Conditions were too bad to mount an effective running attack.

This tactic was used by Amherst to score its only try. After a fumble in the UMass backfield, an Amherst player kicked the ball through. A ruck was eventually formed on the five-yard line and the Amherst backs swept wide into the endzone. The kick failed and the score at halftime was 3-0.

UMass came back strongly, dominating the game, especially the rough time-outs. Two tries by UMass were called back. A penalty situation within Amherst's ten-yard line led Jim Keating, to rush toward goal, the forwards rucked around Keating, each pealing off and maintaining possession. Vilkites crossed over to score, but referee Chamberlayne denied the score, calling a penalty on the Redmen.

Not long after, on play initiated from a scrum, Sam Davidson took a pass at the Amherst 25-yard line and rambled in for a score, only to have it called back again.. a forward pass was the infraction.

UMass continued its pressure, but scrappy defensive play by Amherst denied the Redmen the score. The Amherst fullback, Dale Touhy pressured all afternoon by the hard rush of the UMass back line, simply refused to crack and continually made clutch kicks, one which came just as a UMass player tackled him deep in Amherst territory.

The 'B' game was a different story for the Redmen. The UMass 'B's', smaller and less experienced than the 'A's', played a scrappy game using wet-weather tactics. Jack Hamilton scored after Paquette blocked a kick. The kick failed. The score was 3-0.

Later, Steve Wyeth, the UMass outside center, broke in from 25 yards out. Duffielo converted and the score was 8-0. Amherst eventually scored late in the contest, UMass scored again, but the try was denied, the claim being the ball was not properly touched down. The final stayed at 8-3. The outstanding UMass player was Schiff, who covered the field with his kicks and runs.

Two weeks ago, UMass dropped another squeaker, to Tufts, 5-0. This was another hard-played game where UMass had several tried denied. The team, however, has demonstrated continued improvement.

Six Trackmen Compete at Penn Relays

By EARLE BARROLL
Sports Day Editor

Historical Franklin Field in Philadelphia supplies the setting tomorrow for the Penn Relays in which six members of the UMass track team will be competing. This meet is "the" meet in the east during the collegiate outdoor track season and many outstanding performances are expected.

Due to injuries sustained by a team Coach O'Brien is only entering two relay teams plus an individual hurdle performance by Jerry Spellman.

The first team to take the track will be the sprint medley relay tandem of Spellman, Jim Graves, Al Mangan, and Dave Evans. If everything goes as expected they will qualify for tomorrow's final in today's trials. O'Brien is pointing to a school record run by these four in the final.

The other relay quartet will be comprised of Arnie Morse, Bill Donaldson, Mangan, and Evans. These runners will be combining efforts over a distance of two miles.

Spellman, who has rounded himself into excellent racing condition, will be going after the school record of 53.7 seconds in the 440 intermediate hurdles. He ra this same event in 54.7 seconds at the B.C. Relays last Saturday under bad wather conditions and if the weather is good tomorrow the record seems to be within his grasp.

Injuries to Walter Mayo and Dave Marble have resulted in no 440 or 880 relay teams for the meet. Last year, these runners ran on both teams which came in third in the meet in both races. O'Brien was looking forward to improved performances by these two teams, but injuries have kept these teams from making the trip to Philadelphia.

Distance star Ron Wayne was scheduled to run in the open two mile tomorrow but he also injured himself this week, straining his knee.

O'Brien is hoping that this rest period for the rest of the team will be a healing period also for his key performers.

Tuesday is the big dual meet with UConn, and ifMayo, Marble, and Wayne are not ready they won't compete as O'Brien does not want to risk further injury to these performers.

This spring season has seen injuries haunting the team and the Coach is looking for complete recovery of all the injuries for the Yankee Conference and New England Championships at the end of the season.

Rhode Island Squeezes by Redmen, 2-1, in Mound Duel

KINGSTON, R.I. - UMass' three game baseball winning streak was abbreviated by Rhode Island, 2-1, here yesterday as Redman starting pitcher, Don Anderson, and URI hurler Brian Sheekey locked themselves up in an excellent pitchers' duel.

In dipping its record to 9-5 overall and 2-2 in Yankee Conference play, UMass could only witness a great three-hit hurling performance by Anderson as the Redmen were foiled on offense partly by Sheekey's two-hit performance and partly because of their own misgivings.

UMass' junior righty, who is now 2-1, turned in the finest Redman mound job of the season, striking out ten Rams and walking five. He was riding a no-hitter through four and two-thirds innings.

In the win-loss column, Anderson's fine effort was in vain. Three times, Redman scoring threats were miffed, to make for a frustrating afternoon. In the very first inning, the visitors' Hosea Kelley reached first base via a Rhody error. However, Kelley was quickly picked off first when a foul pop-up by Ray Ellerbrook was unexpectedly caught on the fly.

Kelley got back on base in the fourth frame, this time by darting a single to left, the first UMass hit off Sheekey. In fact, the sophomore second baseman made it to second on a throwing error by the leftfielder.

Ellerbrook was next at the plate and he walked, setting up a bunting situation for the next batter, Brian Martin. Martin's bunt never touched the ground, however, as Sheekey picked it off at his shoe-tops and wound around to double up Kelley at second. The inning ended sourly with Steve Rogers popping out.

In the seventh inning, a third Redman scoring threat fissled. Tom Semino, with one out, walked and stole second. Chuck Newell sacrificed him along to third. A walk to Jim Saracino followed, to put runners on first and third. UMass then tried a double steal, with the Ram catcher relaying the baseball to the second baseman, who returned it in time to just catch Semino at the plate for the third out.

URI tallied its only earned run off Anderson with one down in the home half of the seventh and it came on a homerun by Ram captain and catcher Skip Eickhoff, a crack over the left field fence.

Rhody picked up the clincher in the last of the ninth. There was one out when Bruce Clarke, who had been K'd three previous times, bounded to shortstop Saracino, who threw wildly to first, permitting Clarke to advance to second.

Anderson struck out the next batter, but Eickhoff worked him for a walk. John Sheehan was next to the plate and he hit a bouncing ball down the third base line, a dribbler that struck the base itself and deflected over the head of third-sacker Semino. Needless to say, Clarke scrambled home with the winning run.

DIAMOND DUST - The Redmen were the first to score, in the sixth...Ellerbrook singled in that run after walks to Anderson and Kelley had put runners on first and second...A strikeout and fly out by the next two hitters, Martin and Rogers, prevented further scoring...Anderson's performance has to be rated a notch better than Sheekey's, for the former was in control all the way, while the Rhody flinger was shaky in spots, giving up seven walks...Martin's season-long hitting streak of 13 games was snapped...From the third inning on, the contest was played in a steady drizzle...In a freshman encounter, the Little Redmen shut out the Ram frosh, 6-0, behind the one-hit pitching of Tom White...White K'd ten opponents and walked only two.

Baseballers Back Home, Put 2-2 Yan-Con Against UNH Sat.

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Redman baseball invades Varsity Field tomorrow for a 2 p.m. tangle with the Wildcats of New Hampshire.

This shapes up as an important contest for the Redmen who cannot afford to lose any more Yankee Conference games. Presently, UMass stands 2-2 in the Conference. A loss to a Conference opponent such as UNH could be crucial to UMass hopes for retaining its Conference crown as well as participating in the College World Series in Omaha.

The Wildcats presently stand 0-2 in Conference, both losses coming at the hands of Maine. With only fair pitching and mediocre hitting, UNH should not be mistaken for the New England equivalent of the Baltimore Orioles or the New York Mets, if you will.

Dave Sullivan is the spark plug of the present unit at catcher. He batted a rousing .121 last spring when the Wildcats sported a 7-14 record.

Pete Reil gets the nod at first base where he batted .182. Jack Kenney at second base and Bob Hodsdon at short form the keystone combo. Kenney swatted .257 last year while Hodsdon was just behind him at .254. Tom Tellier, .226, will go at third.

Bob Weston is the sole returnee to the outfield. His .286 average made him the leading hitter on the squad. The other two starters will come from a triumvirate of highly rated sophomores. They are Frank Tricomi who hit .450 last spring, Jim Sousane who hit .444 and Dave Hall who hit .300.

The mound staff features three experienced hurlers in Jim Thomits, Buddy Walsh who started last year when UNH visited Amherst, and Dick Masson. These three combined to hurl over 100 innings last year.

Last year, Thomits was 0-2, Walsh 1-5 and Masson 0-1. These three have respectable earned run averages indicating that a lackluster supporting cast is probably responsible for their losing records.

Probable starter for UMass will be Lou Colabello who has not seen action since last Saturday when Vermont gave him a rough time. Things may be a little easier this week.

Crew Team Competes in Kerr Cup

This Saturday in Philadelphia, the UMass crew club competes in the fifth annual Kerr Cup Regatta. Last year the Redmen finished second overall in this race with the winner, Georgetown, eventually winning the National College Division championships.

This year's regatta also has big-league significance as UMass will tangle with Trinity for top New England College Division honors. Drexel College, the host, and George Washington University will challenge in what might become a two-boat regatta. Ithaca College and St. John's University (N.Y.) are also entered, but will find the competition too fast.

Coach Mike Faherty's club has been priming for this encounter with Trinity. The Hartford boys are defending N.E. champs, runnersup last year at the English Henley and winners of the American henley.

The word out of Bliss Boathouse has this year's crop of veterans well ahead of last year's crews.

UMass freshman coach Larry Dean has made wholesale changes in his boats due to schedule irregularities. Bill Moran, a 6'2, 195-pound, number five man, has moved into the first eight as has 6', 180 Clay Morin in the bow.

The freshmen will face a rugged, experienced group from Trinity, and the defending champion, Drexel. Experience may be a factor in this race as all of Trinity's boat and most of Drexel's rowed in high school.

UMass' varsity and junior varsity boat alignments have been shuffled considerably due to the freak injury to Kevin O'Brien. O'Brien, a sophomore number four man in the varsity boat, has been hospitalized since Wednesday and is a doubtful participant on Saturday.

Jack Fadden, a 6'2, 205-pound soph, has moved to varsity number six, with senior Doug MacLean moving back to O'Brien's number four seat. The boat has moved fairly well with this combination, but the timing and balance has been rough.

The JV boat has felt the force of the varsity shifting. Steve Malone, a three-year veteran at starboard, has switched into the stroke seat for the second eight. Doug Thompson, a 205-pound second freshman, has been inserted in the number four seat. The coxswain designation is not known at this time.

Faherty is naturally concerned about the effects that these changes will have. At this late a date in crew, changes are only risked by losers. On the eve of the big Trinity affair, these shifts become more significant.

Faherty, however, remains optimistic. "The crews are moving along pretty well. We have enough depth to cover ourselves. As for the JV's, they have a spirit of their own, so I'm confident. This club always works and rows to win.

Bruins Take 3-0 Lead

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Bruins charged from behind with three second period goals, including a pair on power-plays by veteran Johnnie Bucyk and went on to a 5-2 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Thursday night for a commanding 3-0 lead in their Stanley Cup semifinal series.

The Bruins, who set a National Hockey League record with 81 power-play goals in 76 games this season, capitalized twice while Chicago defenseman Keith Magnuson was in the penalty box in the second period.

The three-goal outburst enabled the Bruins to overcome a 2-1 Chicago lead and move to within one victory of sweeping the best-of-seven series. Boston can move into the Stanley Cup finals for the first time in 12 years by winning the fourth game Sunday afternoon.

New Win Streak is Goal Of Redmen Stickers

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

For the first time in over two-year, the UMass lacrosse team will try to get back on the winning trail when it travels to Middletown, Conn. tomorrow for a 2:00 p.m. game with Wesleyan.

The Redmen are coming off a 12-6 loss to Harvard on Wednesday breaking their 17 game winning spreak and dropping their season record to 2-1. Despite the high number of goals allowed, the UMass defense did a creditable job considering the Crimson controlled the ball for a large part of the game.

Coach Dick Garber is expected to stick with the same lineup for tomorrow's game. Tom Malone, Paul Ritch and Bob Waters will be at the attack, Bill DeVore, Joe Smith and Al Ruggiano at defense and Jack Gannon, Bob Lachance and Lou Marrinacci at midfield. Other middies expected to see action are Phil Sheridan, Larry Diamond, Bob Florin, Dana Stone and Tim Bosworth.

Wesleyan is coming off a 3-8 season last year including an 18-3 loss to the Redmen. Third year coach Gene Reilly has 12 returning lettermen and the best sophomore crop in his three years coming up and this could mean trouble for the Redmen.

Reilly is counting on a strong team effort to make up for the loss of All-American Stu Blackburn due to graduation. Co-captain Dave Savage leads the defense and will be aided by Nick Lapham and John Burns. The other co-captain, Doug Maynard anchors the midfield along with seniors Mark Simpson and Bob Woods and junior Pete Siegle and Alex Tucci.

Pete Owens returns this year to lead the Cardinal attack. He led the team in scoring last season with 22 points. Other attackers are Bob Mekeel, John Billock and Steve Shay. Junior Jim Nevins will be in the nets for the Cards.

Dr. Arthur C. Clarke, co-author of the book and film "2001: A Space Odyssey" will speak at the University of Massachusetts Monday, April 27, at 8:15 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Dr. Clarke's talk on "Life in the Year 2001" is being sponsored by the UMass Distinguished Visitor's Program and is open to the public without charge.

A noted authority on space travel, Dr. Clarke has won several awards for his articles, including two Aviation/Space Writers Association awards for his Life magazine articles on the history and future of communications satellites. He has also won the UNESCO Kalinga Prize for his science writing.

Dr. Clarke received the Franklin Institute's Godl Medal in 1963 for having originated the communications satellite in a technical paper he wrote in 1945.

In addition to magazine articles Dr. Clarke has written 40 books, ranging from non-fiction to science fiction. "The Promise of Space" was a 1968 Book-of-the-Month-Club selection. He is the author of the epilogue to the astronaut's own book of the Apollo 11 mission, "First on the Moon."

Space is not Dr. Clarke's only interest. With his skindiving partner Mike Wilson, a film producer and underwater photographer, he has explored the waters of Australia and Ceylon. They have written several books about their undersea expeditions, which included a search for a sunken ship in the Great Basses Reef of Ceylon, where they discovered a ton of silver coins.

Arthur Clarke's articles have been published widely, including such periodicals as Reader's Digest, Holiday, Playboy, Look and the New York Times Magazine.

A graduate of King's College, London, with First Class Honors in Physics and Mathematics, he is past chairman of the British Interplanetary Society and a member of the Academy of Astronautics, The Royal Astronomical Society, and many other scientific organizations.

USCC Outlines Program Of Legislators' Day

Because few Legislators regularly visit this campus and many have never been here at all, USCC, sponsor of the program, hopes to show them in one day as much about University life as is possible so that they will have a greater propensity towards financing our needs in the future and so to evoke a pride in them for the Commonwealth's largest educational institue.

In order to accomplish this purpose, the day's activities will be based on personal contact between the Legislator and students from his constituency. The students meet the problems and the benefits daily, so they are best able to communicate the realities of the University.

The schedule will be fluid enough so that the Legislator can see what interests him most, but will also include various formal seminars based on student and faculty research or social and campus problems and progress.

The seminars will be scheduled so that each Legislator will be able to be at two. Tentatively the following will be discussed: Student Activism; Urban Studies; Pollution Problems; CCEBS Problem; Education Dept. Reform; Admissions Policies; Engineering Innovations; Public Health Research and Curriculum Reform.

Student will give their Legislators informal tours of the campus (buildings, classes, and dorms) during the day. The officials will be eating at the Dining Commons with the students in the evening.

Any students interested in inviting their representatives for Legislator's Day should write to them personally. A meeting will be held Tuesday night in the Student Union Ballroom for those interested in this program.

Student Leader Night Awards Club Officers

The traditional STUDENT LEADER NIGHT will be held this Wednesday night, April 29th at 8:00 in the Student Union Ballroom. This night will focus on the student leaders in the various organizations on campus and will cite their activities of the past year. Awards of recognition will be presented to the officers of such groups as Adelphia, Mortar Board, Maroon Keys, Scrolls, Revelers and the Patriots.

In past years only eight to ten organizations have been involved in the program. The revised format for this year, however, will include the acknowledging of approximately twenty groups' accomplishments.

Gerald Scanlon, Assistant Dean of Students, will make the WHO'S WHO Presentations.

As the highlight of the Student Leaders' Night program, Chancellor Oswald Tippo will present the Distinguished Senior Awards to individuals who have been selected for recognition of their continued and distinguished service to the University community.

The appointed nominations committee wishes to solicit nominations from the University community in an effort to consider every eligible member of the Class of 1970. The committee has been asked to recommend students on the basis of their accomplishments in the areas of academic achievement, student activities, University committees, athletics, and community service projects but are not necessarily to be limited by these considerations.

Written nominations of any individual who appears to have made outstanding contributions in any of these suggested areas, a combination of these areas, or addition significant contributions to the University community are requested to be submitted to Miss Kathleen Shea, Student Activities Office, Student Union by 5:00 p.m. on Friday, April 24, 1970.

Lack of Information Spurs Co-ed DormMeeting at Lewis

In an attempt to better the communication and education of students, administrators and Board of Trustee members on all issues of co-ed proposals, there will be an open meeting for representatives of all dorms considering deviating from the Greenough Plan on Wednesday night April 29, 1970 at 9 p.m. in Lewis Lounge.

Various members of the administration and Board of Trustees will be invited to attend also.

There is an appalling lack of information and adequate communication on this very complex issue. We must begin to educate each other. Please bring with you any information or suggestions you think helpful.

Robert C. Wood Tops Candidate List for UMass Pres.

By MARK SILVERMAN
Managing Editor

Informed sources close to the Board of Trustees Presidential selection committee predict that Robert C. Wood will be named President of the University sometime early in May, the Daily Collegian learned over the weekend.

And one Trustee has said that the appointment will be made at the Board's special meeting next week.

Wood is currently head of the joint Harvard-MIT Center for Urban Affairs, Chairman of the MIT department of political science, Chairman of Board of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority and formerly served as Under-Secretary of State during the Johnson Administration.

Wood was on campus to meet with members of the selection committee and representatives from the student body and the faculty two weeks ago, and University officials at that time would officially say only that Wood "was near the top of the list of the persons being considered for the job."

However, one student member of the selection committee said last week that Wood was the only person being seriously considered at this time, and, that with the end of the year rapidly approaching, no other candidates have met personally with the selection committee.

All three Boston newspapers have run stories claiming that Wood is the prime candidate for the Presidency, and one of them quoted Wood as saying that he would "consider accepting the position if it were offered."

The Trustee committee has asked a group of students to submit a written account of their impressions of Wood, and one member of this student group said Saturday that they had given Wood their "not totally enthusiastic" approval.

He said that while Wood was qualified to handle the administrative tasks of the Presidency and that he had excellent experience in major organization management, the students were "not all that impressed by Wood's ability to communicate on a one to one basis."

The student said that Wood, when interviewed by the student group two weeks ago, was vague in answering most questions and "did not come across too forcefully."

But the student said that Wood's experience as an Under Secretary of State, a job in which he spent much of his time lobbying for fund appropriations, was a perfect qualification for the UMass Presidency.

Under the new system-wide reorganization of the University administration, the President will be located in Boston, and will be primarily concerned with long-range planning for all three campuses and with lobbying with the State legislature.

"Wood has excellent qualifications for doing this," the student spokesman said.

Two top Whitmore administrators, neither of whom have played a part in the selection process, also believe that Wood will be appointed shortly.

"Things leak out of Trustee committees rather easily," one said Friday, "and it's been no secret for the past two weeks that Wood is the only person really being considered for the Presidency at this time."

The other administrator, a man who predicted Oswald Tippo's appointment as Chancellor in September, said, "The Trustees are pressured by time into naming a man before the end of the school year, and they feel that Wood is qualified for the job. The fact that they aren't really looking any further at any other candidates makes me believe that they have some assurance that Wood will take the post."

The Trustees have a special Board meeting scheduled for next week and the guessing, both in and out of Whitmore, is that the appointment will be made at that meeting.

"That meeting," one Trustee said last week, "is the best possible time for announcing a new President."

Southwest Log Cabin Proposal Rejected by Planning Committee

By TOM DERDERIAN
Staff Reporter

The log cabin being built in Southwest is illegal. The students who are involved with the project could not get permission to build from University officials. Meeting with Mr. Lambert of landscaping planning and to discuss the matter, Lambert was reported by one of the students to be in agreement with the idea of a student run store in Southwest but against the idea of that store being a log cabin in the middle of the complex. A proposal was mailed to the master planning committee which replied that it "unanimously rejected" the idea. The students then unloaded logs and began building regardless.

The plan is the result of a botany course and a psychology course. Students of Jerry Jenkin's Botany 101 course are studying as part of their program subsistance survival relying only on hand tools and nature. They are building the cabin to learn how to use the hand tools.

Dr. Appley's Psychology students found through a study of Southwest that one of the things the students wanted was a nearby store. Since Southwest itself is a city it should supply some of the services a city does. The psych students are also watching the reactions of residents of Southwest seeing construction in the middle of their frisbee play ground.

The 30 or so students of the classes meet every day in the project-10 apartment at 8:00 a.m. to begi n their day's work.

Universal Life Church Plans Mass Baptism at Campus Pond

The Universal Life Church will hold a mass baptism in the Campus Pond on Wednesday as part of Water Afternoon. The merry reverends will also sponsor various boating events.

The Great Homemade Boat Race will start with several grand explosions at 1:00 p.m., rain or shine at parking lot 3 and finish at the dam. Entry is open to everyone who will make a homemade boat or raft. Handicaps for sleek-looking crafts; the Church flag will fly on the losing ship. Anyone have a canoe? Please bring your canoe so we can have a water joust. The Church will provide padded lances. All sailors are invited to helm free boats as pirates or "in the name of the queen."

We will launch a Universal Life Toy Boat Armada which ever way the wind is blowing. People are encouraged to make boats although the church will have some boats for everyone to play with. No prize will be given for the most unusual boat.

The Koolade Stand, located at the willow tree, will set you back 2¢ a glass, freewill offerings also accepted.

Those wishing the baptismal rites come in bizarre wading garments (and tennis shoes to avoid the risk of broken glass). Bring towels and warming-up clothes. The Floating Balloon Peace Symbol Alter will be donated by Ministry of Religious Paraphernalia.

Tentative Room Choosing Urged for Northeast Applicants

We have become concerned with possible delays in the completion of the 1970 dorms due to the present prolonged strike.

A review meeting of representatives of the Building Authority, the General Contractor, and this office has been scheduled for Tuesday, April 28, 1970, to review the situation as it now stands.

We are aware that some students might become anxious about their housing plans for the Fall Semester. Therefore, we urge those students who feel this way to make tentative plans with their present head of residence for living accommodations in their present dorm for this Fall, pending the outcome of our Tuesday meeting. If, by then, it has been determined that these new dorms will not be available to us, then you can simply solidify plans to live this Fall where you are living at present. If, however, we find that these dorms will be available, we can resume our room-choosing activities and prepare to occupy the new dorms in September.

We will make every effort to keep students who have expressed an interest in these dorms informed as to changes in the situation.

800 Enjoy Lewis House Variety Show

Lewis Dormitory and friends Saturday night presented a Variety Show before 800 retarded individuals at the Belchertown State School. One of the first projects of a future co-ed community, Lewis and friends found a great need for community service at Belchertown where the environment is sterile and institutionalized.

The variety show featured a jug band, the Musigals, Ed Kindness and Doc, group singing, and skits.

Lewis and friends urge other campus groups to share a party, a movie, or a learning experience with one dorm at Belchertown or the entire institution. As one Lewis resident remarked after visiting Belchertown, "It takes so little to brighten their lives."

Any group which would like more information on presenting a program at Belchertown may call Liz at 6-5459, Jane at 6-5473 or the Volunteer Office at Belchertown.

Four Recommendations Made in Educational Study

The Massachusetts Advisory Council on Education, April 22 released a study on compensatory education in the Commonwealth. The $50,500 study, recently completed by Dr. Daniel Jordan and Kathryn H. Spiess of the University of Massachusetts School of Education, is based primarily on data gathered from over 450 compensatory education projects financed by Title 1, Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. Since its inception, Title I has provided around a billion dollars annually for the education of disadvantaged youngsters throughout the United States. During fiscal year 1970-71, the Commonwealth is slated to receive $20 million in Title I funds.

The first major expression of concern for disadvantaged children appeared in the Willis-Harrington Commission report of 1965 which recommended a variety of compensatory services for the State. Based on the recommendations of that commission, the legislature subsequently passed a law allocating funds for such programs. However, insufficient funds coupled with inadequate administrative provisions caused the effort to be short-lived. No state funds were made available after 1967, with the burden being shifted by Massachusetts to the Federal Government, Title I program.

The Jordan-Spiess study contains 48 recommendations for improving compensatory services for the State's 135,000 disadvantaged students, 35,000 of whom are not now receiving any compensatory assistance. The summary of their report, entitled BLUEPRINT FOR ACTION, breaks down the high priority recommendations into "Four Critical Courses of Action."

IMPROVING PLANNING AND EVALUATION

According to one U. S. Office of Education criterion, a successful compensatory education program should enable the disadvantaged to learn at a rate ABOVE THE NORM to enable him to match the regular student. The study found no instance where Title I Program evaluation in Massachusetts was sound enough to determine whether or not the compensator / services being provided were meeting that criterion. Furthermore, evaluations were not adequate enough to identify which parts of the programs were producing significant results and which ones were not. This means that no data were available for making decisions about program modification during the replanning of the project for the subsequent year. In short, without sound evaluations there was no way to determine whether or not funds are being wisely spent and whether or not the intent of the legislation was being carried out. The report recommends that the Title I Office of the State Department of Education add two or more professionally qualified evaluators to its staff; that sound evaluation designs be considered a required part of the proposal for funds and that no project be funded if it does not have an adequate evaluation design. Finally, that wider use be made of university consultants be local districts for assistance in planning and evaluation.

CLARIFYING OBJECTIVES AND PRIORITIES

Since the purpose of evaluation is to determine how well objectives are being met, it is essential to have objectives stated clearly in behavioral terms. The report indicates that all too frequently Title 1 program objectives were not explicit, not in behavioral terms and at times were not germane to the basic needs of disadvantaged children. In some cases, objectives were formulated to tell teachers what to do (i.e., provide remedial reading services) rather than in terms of expected changes in the performance capabilities of the children being served. Furthermore, the study team recommended that DEVELOPING COMPETENT LEARNERS be made a mandatory objective of all Title I projects. How to learn is itself a behavioral process; yet, it is rarely taught in school and is recommended for Title I activities.

DEVELOPING MODEL COMPENSATORY EDUCATION PROGRAMS

One of the unique features of the report is the presentation of a model compensatory education program developed by Dr. Jordan for the American National Institutes for Social Advancement. The ANISA model focuses on the development of learning competence by using a procedure of ongoing diagnosis to determine student strengths and weaknesses and providing the experiences required to foster the kinds of growth needed to guarantee competence in learning as it may pertain to any number of areas such as psycho-motor abilities, perceptual acuity, cognitive capacities, affective and volitional competence. The study found that there is a widespread tendency to cast compensatory education into a remedial mold or put it in the form of general enrichment activities, neither of which alone can compensate for inadequate preparation for school. Both remedial work and enrichment activities have their place, but if they do not concentrate on developing competence in learning, they are likely to have very little permanent or even short term effects. It is for this reason that a new model has been recommended.

PROVIDING ADEQUATELY TRAINED MANPOWER

According to a 1967 Yeshiva University report to the Civil Rights Commission, only 3% of the 15,000 teachers graduating in 1966 from the ten major institutions which certify teachers in the United States had received any orientation in teaching disadvantaged children. Yet, it is estimated that 20-30% of the children in the nation's schools require compensatory assistance. The study team found a similar lack of teachers especially prepared for working with disadvantaged children in the Commonwealth. They recommended that in order to meet the critical Manpower shortage in compensatory education, that the State Department of Education, in collaboration with selected institutions of higher learning and the public school system, give top priority to the establishment of model training programs, both pre-service and in-service.

It is clear from the report that there is no way to escape the conclusion that strong leadership in the State Department of Education is absolutely essential to the successful implementation of the 48 recommendations contained in the report, and that without implementation of these recommendations there is little hope of providing equal educational opportunities for the State's disadvantaged children.

All Elementary Education Majors interested in Internship or Student Teaching for the Spring of 1971 must attend an important meeting May4, 1970 at 4 p.m. in Mark's Meadow Auditorium.

Prof. Randolph Bromery, recently named special assistant to the Chancellor for student affairs, will be the featured guest tomorrow (Tuesday, April 28) at the regular Tuesday administration coffee hour in the Colonial Lounge from noon until 2 p.m.

As a first step in administrative reorganization, the responsibility for all campus police and security operations were recently transferred from the Treasurer to Mr. Bromery.

All members of the University community are invited to attend this open session and to talk with Mr. Bromery . Coffee is served.

Draft Lottery May Be Revised

The new head of the Selective Service System is torn between capsules and computers for the next draft lottery.

Draft director Curtis Tarr, who took over from Lietenant General Lewis Hershey, has been reading statistical reports until he sees numbers in his sleep.

Capsules were used in the last lottery held in December. But many statisticians complained that the way the lottery was handled was something less than random, and as a result not a fair way to deal with young men to be drafted. The complaints came from more than purists.

Tarr decided he better look into the situation. He has in hand reports from statisticians on how to make the lottery truly random so that all will have an equal chance of being drafted or avoiding the draft.

All the statistical experts agreed that the most expert way of handling it would be to base the lottery on a statistical table of numbers.

It would then be a simple matter to program the table into a computer which could spew out the numbers to decide the order of draft for the young men of America.

Director Tarr found two things wrong with that: One . . . the statisticians couldn't agree on a single table. One group favored one type of table as the most random; another pushed a different statistical table of probabilities. So there Tarr was caught in the middle of an argument among experts.

Two . . . Tarr saw something based solely on a statistical table or by the operations of a computer as entirely too cold and routine for something so vital to the nation and so important to its young. This second consideration seemed to be very important to Tarr.

He feels that the nation not only must have total confidence in the fairness of the lottery, but that there must be physical signs of it. He has a hunch the young would resent being matched with their draft dates through a computer.

Tarr insists that the next draft lottery, which will be held toward the end of this year, should be as random as it is possible to make it, and still give the nation open signs of its fairness.

He hopes to make a decision on how to conduct the lottery before he is called to testify before Congress on President Nixon's proposed draft overhaul.

The lottery will increase in importance if Congress goes along with President Nixon's proposed reforms. The President has recommended that Congress end the system of local draft board quotas and base each month's call on lottery numbers alone.

The proposed new system would eliminate the confusion which results when one draft board drops to a certain lottery number and a nearby local board uses a different lottery number in order to meet local quotas.

Tarr believes that the final decision may be to use something which will combine the best of the two - capsules and computers.

Seniors

Each year the University News Bureau sends the pictures and names of all seniors who will graduate to their hometown newspapers. The pictures are attached to the news cards filled out at the beginning of first semester. If you expect to graduate in June and have not filled out a news card, please fill one out in the News Bureau, Room 345, Whitmore Hall.

This year newspapers will receive the names and pictures of all seniors as prospective graduates. If you know you will not graduate this May, and would not like your name and picture sent, please call 545-0444 by April 30 and we will remove your name from the list.

Precisionettes to Hold Spring Tryouts

The Women's drill team will be holding tryouts for next year's team this coming week in Boyden Gymnasium. The session will start Monday, April 27, at 8:30 p.m. All undergraduate women are welcome to attend.

This year the Precisionettes are offering non-marching as well as marching positions. The non-marching staff will co-ordinate fund-raising and service projects, while the marching team will concentrate on football, parade, and competition trick drill routines. Anyone who wishes to work in both capacities may do so.

The team is also planning to expand its scope of competitions and plans to work on possibilities for competitions in Pennsylvania, Connecticut, New Jersey, Boston, and Washington, D.C.

If you, as a UMass coed, are interested in joining a working, spirited, progressive team for the enjoyment and the fun of it, be at Boyden Gym on Monday night.

If anyone has questions or would like more information, please feel free to contact one of the team members or call Linda Wisniowski at 6-7246 or Jeanne Mele at 6-7235.

Two Different People

I once called Oswald Tippo my friend. I had never met him personally, but I had listened to him speak, and he had made sense. I had seen him with students, and I had respected him.

When Oswald Tippo recommended to the Trustee's Student Affairs Committee the "Greenough Plan" - alternating floors in coed dorms, parental permission, and no freshmen - I believed that he was making a good political move, trying to get as much granted by the Trustees as he thought possible.

But Oswald Tippo did not approve of the Olken amendment - allowing dorms to have alternating rooms.

And Oswald Tippo did not approve of the Abrams amendment - allowing one dorm, Greenough, to have alternating rooms.

Oswald Tippo "reminded" the Board of Trustees hat the Olken and Abrams amendments were not ecommended by the Student Affairs Committee.

The Abrams amendment was defeated by two votes.

Oswald Tippo and the Board of Trustees have refused to recognize the complexity and uniqueness of each dorm area. They have preferred to take time from the running of a multi-million dollar, state-wide University system in order to debate the merits of what the life styles of students should be. It has resulted in a set of "guidelines" - a set of guidelines that cannot possibly apply to Orchard Hill and Southwest.

Oswald Tippo has refused to consider freshmen as human beings. Freshmen, according to Oswald Tippo, should not be allowed to live in coeducational dormitory communities. Rather, they must live in 22-story segregated towers, without a truly adequate counselor system, with core requirements that turn more freshmen off education than on it. Freshmen, according to Oswald Tippo, must be lonely human beings.

"Trust must be earned", said Oswald Tippo when he became Chancellor. For a while, it seemed that Oswald Tippo wanted students to be worthy of trust, and he wanted himself to be worthy of the students' trust. He proposed a University Senate. He proposed University reorganization. He aided the University Self-Evaluation, April 10.

But I would remind Dr. Tippo that trust must be earned. Trust must be earned not by abstract reorganizations, but by concrete actions, not by imposing a personal morality on thousands, but by respecting the sincere, peaceful intentions of people trying to live a better life.

Trust must be earned, Dr. Tippo. I invite you to respond.

I saw her last Thursday.

While his mother was shopping, Cindy Olken was showing her head of residence's little boy Ayal, to the students and workers milling around the offices in the Coolidge Tower Lobby. As Cindy walked around with Ayal, people halted their own world, smiled, and for one moment in their lives, forgot themselves.

Perhaps never again in her life will Cindy know the pressure and publicity, the work, the glory and the ecstasy that she has known for the last six months. But when she is old, and her own children have grown up, when her children look at the world they live in and ask Cindy, "Why is the world the way it is? Why didn't you do something to save it?", Cindy will be able to answer them.

She will not say that she was the first student Trustee, that she prepresented her constituency well, that she was a President in her time, that she was respected; Cindy Olken will say, "I gav e a little happiness, to some people, on a Thursday afternoon, in 1970."

Thank you , Cindy. Thank you very, very much.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Trust Must Be Earned, Campus Police

Have you ever been arrested? Have you ever spent the night in jail? Have you ever gone to court for anything more serious than a traffic violation? If you answered "yes" to these three questions, there is probably no point in you reading further. You are probably already a revolutionary to some degree, and have heard this all before. If you are one of the few "unlucky" people who could honestly answer "no" to at least two of these questions, (just ask yourself no one else will ever know) this essay is for you. A night in jail is more valuable in an educational way, than a year at an y college or university in the world. Read on!

On the night of April 15, Moratorium Day around the country, three University of Massachusetts students were arrested on campus for disturbing the peace. Who cares, you say. Ask yourself the three questions again. If you answered "yes", probably you care, or at least empathize. If you answered "no", there are two possibilities. (1) You can sympathize with a fellow oppressed human being, and perhaps care on that level, or (2) You can continue living with your eyes closed, your minds closed, and your hearts closed, and accept the oppression you are too blind to acknowledge. Does that sound slightly bitter? Does that sound a little harsh and condemning? You bet your ass it does! You are guilty by ommission! Does it sound untrue? . . . I don't know why I'm asking you all these questions, I know you don't like to think. Ignorance is bliss. The only absolute. From Adam and Eve, to the drop-out communes around the world, to every student, faculty member, and administrator on this campus and every campus across the nation and throughout the world.

There was a reason for the initial three questions, or perhaps several reasons. Here, they serve two purposes; one is to make you read this (which you are obviously now doing), and the other is to put your mind to work, to make you think, to relieve you of the chains that hamper your thoughts night and day, telling you: "It's easier not to care, it's safer not to get involved." . . . Climb out from beneath your pile of beer cans, your pounds of make-up that promise to make you look "natural". Take a good look in the mirror, or are you afraid to see the collar and chain around your neck, reminding you that sex is evil, that the war in Vietnam will soon be over, that the black is constitutionally the equal of the white, that the newspapers and televisions report objectively, that AmeriKa is the best country in the world.

Look in the mirror if you can, and ask yourself if this is what the Puritans left Europe to establish; a new tyranny with a reincarnation of the same George III they tried so painstakingly to escape? Is this the AmeriKa that promised to separate the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of the government, to serve a participatory democracy. Participatory democracy! Have you ever talked to a duly-elected representative of the people, of you? I bet you've never even seen one except on television, "the great inquisitor". AmeriKa, how long will your eyes stay closed? How long will you lie dead, putting aside the immediate pleasure for the long-term gain? There will never be a long-term gain, the trial will never come!

Yes, last Wednesday night, three students were arrested for "disturbing the peace" in the "quiet, sedate, scenic, Southwest Complex. Where the early morning echoes of firecrackers remind one constantly of the bullets that killed John and Robert Kennedy, Dr. Martin Luther King, Malcolm X, Fred Hampton, the bomb that killed three civil rights workers in Birmingham, and countless others who coincidentally went out on a limb to better the lots of all oppressed people. They were patriots of the highest rank, they sought to lighten the burden of all you who do not care! And you forget them quickly, don't you? Ecology is the new cause, to save the world for who? Richard Nixon, Attorney General Mitchell, Melvin Laird , and innumerable others who condone the deaths of innocent people all over the world, to benefit their own vested interests, and promise defense protection at a price much higher in terms of money and personal sacrifice than the Mafia could ever receive.

Disturbing the peace, with a few drums, bottles, spoons or anything people could get their hands on, just to be able to relate to another human being through a media far more sophisticated than the language we have perverted through lies, and turned into oral diarrhea. One person was arrested for playing an acoustic guitar, in the middle of a field, a field not more than one hundred yards away from the site of an all-night marathon Heart-Fund benefit, which advertised nineteen hours of continuous music with no less than five-thousand watts of police could no longer contend with the barrage of complaint calls, so they stopped the concert until nine the next morning! There were no arrests! At least three times, the brothers of Sigma Alpha Mu were asked to turn the volume down until somewhat after three-thirty a.m. they were told to close down for the night.

Two nights earlier, as I said, not a hundred yards away, three students, (of whom, if you haven't guessed yet, I am one) were picked arbitrarily out of a crowd of twenty, at 12 midnight, and arrested without a single warning or order to disperse. There is AmeriKan justice. These three students were brought before Northampton District Court, on Friday, April 24, after having spent four hours, between 12:15 a.m. and 4:15 a.m. on the night of arrest, in Amherst jail cells, (which, by the way, have no blankets, no toilet seats, no toilet paper, and a steel cot, which adjusts to the temperature outside, causing nausea, cramps, and other unsanitary conditions, to those not used to the latest in criminal psychology) and then being forced to walk the 1-1/4 miles back to campus in 20 degree weather without outer garments at four-thirty in the morning.

When this cas e came before the Honorable Judge Ryan (previously regarded as "the hanging Judge" of Western Mass.) the circumstances were too absurd for even him to accept. The case was dismissed, and a court fee of fifteen dollars EACH was imposed on the three "not-guilty" defendants. This fee ran the individual total costs up to twenty-two dollars each (including the seven dollar each bond fee, there was no bail, to line the pockets of the bail commissioner, who doubles as clerk of court during the day and took only 3-1/2 hours to travel from Northampton to Amherst to release us on personal recognizance) or a grand total of sixty-six dollars for a case in which we were found "not guilty". Being students with no previous record, we were dealt with "justly" on this occasion (if you're accustomed to throwing ten dollar bills down the toilet). We did not have a lawyer, primarily because we could not afford the "reasonable" two-hundred dollar fee for this case.

If you are getting bored with these details, I apologize humbly, but take one last look in the mirror, and ask yourself the original three questions again. Then look in your wallet and ask yourself if you have the eighty-eight dollars usually necessary to be found not-guilty for a railroad arrest. (Sixty-six dollars each for a lawyer.) Then look again, and think, this is the bare minimum (we were lucky) I have to pay if the police make a mistake and I am arrested. One last introspective look. "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people . . ." "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness . . ." "AmeriKa is the best country in the world, isn't that sad!"

WASHINGTON - There's this fellow at the National Press Club bar and he's always briefing me on what is going on in Southeast Asia.

"Did you hear that President Nixon is going to pull 150,000 more Americans out of Vietnam?"

"That's good," I said.

"Well it's not exactly good," the fellow replied, "because he didn't indicate when he was going to do it. He did say it would be within the next year."

"That's not bad."

"It could be bad for the Democrats."

"How's that?"

"He might pull out 50 soldiers now and 149,950 just before the elections in November."

"I see," I said.

"No you don't. Although the President said he would pull out the 150,000 troops within the next year, he also said he would be influenced by what happened in Cambodia and Laos."

"That's good," I said.

"It could be bad. If the war spreads into Cambodia and Laos, we might be obligated to stay out there."

"I should hope so. Hey, why are the Cambodians killing the Vietnamese civilians?"

"Because they hate them."

"But doesn't that make it very embarrassing for us, since Cambodia is asking for U.S. military aid?"

"It doesn't help."

"I would think if we gave Cambodia military aid and they used it to kill Vietnamese civilians, the South Vietnamese wouldn't be too happy about it."

"They aren't dancing in the streets of Saigon. But killing civilians is the price you have to pay for freedom in Southeast Asia."

"What can the Americans do to stop the Cambodians from killing the civilians?"

"The best thing we can do is bomb the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos."

"I was going to ask you about Laos. What the hell are we doing there?"

"We weren't doing ANYTHING until Sen. Symington's committee shot off their big mouths. Our story now is we're preventing the Viet Cong from using Laos to get the upper hand in Cambodia."

"That's good."

"The only trouble is that the Royal Laotian Army is not very well trained at the moment and so we have to use Meo Tribesmen as mercenaries."

"That's interesting. If the Meo tribesmen fight for Laos, won't the other Laotians be miffed?"

"Not if it helps South Vietnam."

"I almost forgot about South Vietnam."

"You see, things are much brighter now that the South Vietnamese can knock out the Communists' staging areas in Cambodia, which until recently were off limits to them."

"That's good."

"It's good only if Phom Penh doesn't fall."

"Phom Penh?"

"That's the capital of Cambodia."

"What's to prevent Phom Penh from falling?"

The man seemed disgusted with my ignorance. "Two Royal Army battalions from Thailand, stupid."

To The Editor:

On Friday morning my roommate and I were fixing my car under Cance House, on the sidewalk, because it was pouring out and we saw no reason to get soaked fixing it in F lot. Along comes officer badge number 90 to slap a ticket on the windshield for parking on the sidewalk. He did not even ask why we were there or give us a warning to move the car. Pow, he placed a $10 ticket on the car. Here is the piece de resistance. Do you know WHY we were there? We were fixing up the car so it could pass state inspection. It seems on Sept. 27 a state trooper slammed into the rear of my car and the case still has not been settled. Why has the case not been settled? Because the officer who was on the scene of the accident has not gotten around to filing an accident report, 7 months after the accident. If you want to give out tickets, officer #90, why don't you start at home and give the other officer one for negligence. Due to the fact that I have to fix my car for state inspection, I can't afford the $10 ticket. Why don't you pay it officer? If you had made out that accident report 7 months ago, I wouldn't have been parked illegally in the first place.

When I told officer #90 about the situation, do you know what he said? "There's not a helluva lot you can do." Thanks officer #90, this campus needs more people like you to turn the few law-abiding citizens left against the system.

Every member of the University Community will be able to (easily) invite their representative. Since the success of this day of communication depends on the turn-out of Reps., please take a few moments to stop by the USCC table. In this election year, it seems likely that an invitation signed by constituents will be quite attractive to our elected officials. Do stop by.

Stabbed

To The Editor:

We, the students of the University of Massachusetts have been stabbed in the back. Once again the administration has proven that it is unresponsive to the needs of the students. What kept the trustees from making a decision on Co-Ed Housing months ago? Why is it their decision comes at the end of the school year? Now long will the dollar sign on Beacon Hill dictate the way you live? How long will our administration continue to use strategy on us, to play games with us? How much longer does an administration that deals with students expect students not to deal with it?

HOW LONG?

The Yes Bill

At long last, there may be a definite improvement in fighting the continual land waste, abuse, and pollution, that is now going on. Finally something useful and of value may be done to help clean up Massachusetts and assure performance instead of mere talk.

Rep. H. James Shea Jr. (D.-Newton) has proposed a legislation to establish a Youth for Environmental Survival (YES) Corps. Revolving around Youth, this corps would "help in community organization, education, research and observation of environmental abuses and of the way these abuses are being handled by existing enforcement agencies." This proposed corps in its first year would be made up of a maximum of fifty people -- forty of whom would fall between the ages of 16 and 26. A hundred dollars a month at the most plus subsistence expenses would be their full time wages. Something must be done -- and quickly, and a hundred dollars is a small price to pay for what seems to be a pretty good answer to the ever present problem of pollution in our environment.

The younger generation has done some great jobs in groups such as the Peace Corps and Vista. Why not in this?

Rep. Shea has quoted, "If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the pollution." The YES Bill, if passed, may be a very large part of the answer.

Chamber Music Series Closes With Concert by Boston Players

The University of Massachusetts Chamber Music Series for the 1969-70 season will close Tuesday April 28, with a concert by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The Chamber Players was established by the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1964 so that it would offer concerts of chamber music to a broader public utilizing the variety and virtuosity of its principal players. The Chamber Players are more flexible than a single ensemble with a fixed number of performers as they take advantage of their special opportunity to draw upon any number of their ranks dependent upon the repertoire at hand.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players perform as many concerts as their busy orchestral careers will allow each season and in addition have toured the Soviet Union, Great Britain, and West Germany. Members of the Chamber Players include Boston Symphony concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, Jules Eskin, cello; Burton Fine, viola; Henry Portnoi, bass; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Cino Cioffi, clarinet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Sherman Walt, bassoon; James Stagliano, horn; Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; William Givson, trombone; Everett Firth, timpani; and Michael Tilson Thomas, piano.

Reserved tickets, $1 for UMass undergraduates; $2 for UMass graduate students, faculty, staff and other students and $3 for the general public, may be ordered through the University's Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, telephone 545-0202.

UMT Rehearses 'Becket" Season's Final Production

BECKET (or THE HONOR OF GOD) by Jean Anouilh, is in rehearsal by the University of Massachusetts Theatre. BECKET is the story of Thomas Becket, the carousing youth who became the Archbishop of Canterbury....and of the beloved friend-turned-enemy who decreed his death, King Henry II of England.

Directed by Assistant Professor Harry Mahnken, the large cast will be richly costumed for this drama of conflict between two towering antagonists. BECKET is a violent emotional drama that probes the changing relationship between two young men -- between two close friends bound together by similar pride of flesh and spirit who become deadly enemies as they prusue their separate destinies ....that of king.....and saint.

BECKET opens on Thursday, May 7, continuing through May 10 in nightly performances at 8:30 in Bartlett Theatre. The University Theatre Box Office will open on Wednesday, April 29. All seats reserved; telephone 545-2579.

Weed Conducts Band Concert

On Sunday, May 3, the University of Massachusetts Concert Band, under the direction of Larry Weed, will present a concert in Bowker Auditorium on the University campus at 3:00 p.m. The program offers a variety of compositions, moving from TRITTICO by the contemporary composer Vaclav Nelhybel to the Finale from Richard Strauss' DEATH AND TRANSFIGURATION. Little Redman Baseball Team Blanks URI, 6-0

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

Tom White pitched a masterful one-hitter last Thursday as the UMass freshman baseball team beat the Rhode Island freshman, 6-0, at Kingston, R.I.

White , who raised his record to four wins and no losses, was in complete control of the Rhody batters all the way. He displayed a blazing fast ball and a good curve and mixed his pitches will as he recorded ten stikeouts and walked only four.

The only hit off the southpaw frosh hurler came in the fourth inning when Rhody catcher Bill Maxey singled. The only other play that resembled a hit was a line drive to UMass second baseman Rick Scarpignato in the third inning.

FROSH FACTS: Manley went two for five and scored twice; Esposito had two hits, two RBI's and also scored a run; Mark Palau also had two hits and an RBI. . .Rhode Island had no runs, one hit and committed two errors; the UMass statistics were 6-8-2. . .Coach Tony Williams could not say enough about the job that White has done

Frosh '9' Splits with Springfield Copping, 3-2, Flopping, 8-3

By BRONA SIMON
Staff Reporter

Behind the solid clutch pitching of Dan Esposito, the UMass baseball freshmen salvaged one game of a doubleheader against Springfield College here Saturday, UMass squeezed by the visitors, 3-2, in the first game, but blew the second, 8-3.

Esposito's relief hurling was the highlight of the afternoon.

With the score tied 2-2 in the first game, Esposito came on in a tight situation on the sixth inning where two men were on and there was only one out. He loaded the bases with a walk, but came back strongly by striking out two men to end Springfield's scoring threat.

In the bottom of the sixth, the Little Redmen went ahead, 3-2, when Dick Scarpignato reached on a fielder's choice and crossed the plate on third baseman Mark Palau's triple.

Esposito had merely to hold off Springfield in the seventh and final inning to get deserved credit for the win.

The second game was all Springfield's. UMass starter and loser Jerry Pohner threw ineffectively as he gave up seven earned runs on seven hits in the first two innings. Esposito was called upon again to take the mound, and shut out the opposition for the last three innings.

Springfield's Bert Barker was the winning pitcher, riding on a good lead, and giving up only three runs to UMass.

Frosh coach Tony Williams had criticism and a little praise about the games.

"A lot of mental mistakes were made in the loss, but Esposito's pitching was surely a sterling effort."

The frosh face Dartmouth Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. on the obscure field near the sewerage plant beyond the intramural fields in front of Boyden.

Freshman Netmen Triumph

By JIM BROWN Staff Reporter

In impressive action against Mt. Hermon last week, the Little Redmen tennis team won its opening meet of the season, 5-4. It was a grueling battle throughout the meet, but the visiting Redmen earned the win in the decisive tie-breaking doubles match.

Both Steve Ferber, at number one singles, and Dave Bellware, at number two, won their matches. They looked quite the stars, as did Mark Ehrlich, playing number six. He could move up in the placings.

Bruce Kaplan (No. three), Malcolm Tronic (No. four) and Anthont Ng (No. five) lost their sets, putting Mt. Hermon ahead, 3-2. It was Ehrlich who tied it up, 3-3, in the last singles match.

In the doubles competition, Bellware and Ferber, at number one, beat their opponents soundly, 10-3. In a surprising loss, because they played well, Ehrlich and Ng lost, 10-5, in the number two doubles. At this time it was 4-4 overall.

The next and final match was to decide the whole meet. Kaplan and Tronic, in a good fight both ways, came up as victors, 10-8. Tronic looked extremely good in the win.

The Little Redman netmen are getting ready for Connecticut April 28, Springfield May 6 (both matches at 3 p.m.) and Deerfield Academy May 13 at 2:15 p.m. Amherst College, after hearing of UMass' win at Mt. Hermon, called up coach Steve Kosakowski to arrange a meet for Monday.

Lacrossemen Rebound, 12-7

UM Ends Losing Streak By Knocking Wesleyan

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Snapping its one-game losing streak, the UMass varsity lacrosse team downed an inspired Wesleyan team, 12-7, on Saturday afternoon. The win upped the Redman record to 3-1 while Wesleyan fell to 4-2.

The Cardinals were going into the game riding the crest of a four-game win streak after an opening loss to Yale and were undefeated in the New England Lacrosse League. UMass is also undefeated, since the lvies are not in the league (the Redmen's one loss was to Harvard, 12-6) and the game had a direct bearing on the league championship.

Once again, Tom Malone paced the Redmen attack with support from Paul Ritch and Bob Waters. Malone, who had five goals and one assist, broke the scoreless tie in the first period and Ritch followed moments later to lift the Redmen to a 2-0 lead. However, Wesleyan failed to be impressed and scored three straight goals to take a 3-2 lead midway in the second period. The Redmen were hampered by a rash of penalties in the game, 17 in all, and this helped in making the game close.

The Redmen rallied to take a 6-4 halftime lead on two more goals by Malone and one each by Ritch and Dana Stone. Goalie Bruce Crawford, who had 28 saves on the day, stopped 16 Cardinal shots in the first half and kept his teammates out of serious trouble.

Wesleyan opened the scoring in the third period to close the gap to one goal, but Malone scored his fourth of the day and Jack Gannon scored a goal to put the Redmen up, 8-5 at the end of three quarters.

More Redmen penalties and the expulsion of Redman defender Bill DeVore due to fighting, hurt UMass in the last period. Defenseman Al Ruggiano committed five fouls, a rarity in lacrosse, and as a result fouled out of the game. Fran Bositis and Jack Walsh replaced the two banished players for the remainder of the game.

Wesleyan still refused to quit and, spurred on by the big crowd, scored twice early in the period to narrow the lead to one. The score stayed at 8-7 until the ten-minute mark and then the Redmen put the game out of reach with four goals in the last five minutes. Malone put in his fifth and this was followed by scores by Larry Diamond, Phil Sheridan and Waters.

Malone's point total is now 25 with 13 goals and 12 assists. Ritch had an assist to go with his two goals while Waters finished the day with one score and two assists. Coach Dick Garber credited Crawford with keeping the Redmen in the game. The coach was also pleased with the way the team ran and hustled after its lackluster performance against Harvard. The Redmen return home to play Trinity on Tuesday.

Redman Baseball Team Slaps UNH, 7-4, for 10-5 Record

Bernardo Picks Up Win in Relief

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Jack Bernardo relieved Lou Colabello in the first inning Saturday with no outs and went on to scatter nine hits in garnering his third victory in four decisions as the Redman baseball team defeated New Hampshire, 7-4 at wind-swept Varsity Field.

UMass' record now stands at 10-5 overall and 3-2 in the Yankee Conference while New Hampshire's falls to 0-4, and 0-3 in the Conference.

Colabello was in trouble from the start as he walked the first three batters on 14 pitches. At this point, UMass Coach Dick Bergquist brought in Bernardo who retired the next three batters, although Pete Dresser scored on a fielder's choice.

The Redmen bounced back in their half of the first to take a 2-1 lead. Following consecutive singles by Hosea Kelly and Ray Ellerbrook, Kelly scored on a fielder's choice by Brian Martin. Martin then stole second but would have advanced anyway as UNH pitcher Jim Thomits walked the next two batters. Tom Semino's sacrifice fly to center scored Martin with the second marker.

The Wildcats, however, came back in the second to regain the lead with two runs in what has to be one of the wackiest innings ever played at UMass.

Frank Tricomi and Dave Sullivan led off with doubles and then Pete Riel, pinch hitting for Thomits, reached on an error to load the bases. Dresser followed with a walk to score Tricomi.

Then it happened. Brad Grey hit a sacrifice fly to Steve Rogers in center scoring Sullivan. Rogers threw in to Ellerbrook, who was standing on the mound, from where he relayed to third baseman Semino who tagged out Riel between second and third. Semino then attempted to throw out Dresser at second base but his throw went past Kelly and into right field where Brian Martin threw to Ellerbrook who finally nabbed Dresser in a rundown between second and third.

If you haven't been following this description very closely, it was an 8-3-5-9-3- triple play. Needless to say Bernardo threw a great triple play ball.

JACK BERNARDO
Snares UNH's Wildcats

This seemed to knock the spunk out of the Wildcats who would not score again until the ninth.

UMass went ahead to stay with two in the third off Buddy Walsh who replaced Thomits. Martin and Rogers reached on errors and scored on back-to-back singles by Bob Willman and Semino.

The Redmen made it 6-3 with two more in the fourth and 7-3 with a single tally in the fifth.

Martin singled up the middle with two outs and came around on Rogers' double to deep center. Willman then banged another double off the left field wall to score Rogers. Jim Saracino led off the fifth with his third triple of the year and scored three batters later on Ellerbrook's line single up the middle.

Bernardo settled down after the triple play to pitch runless ball until the ninth when he was touched for a single and a double and the fourth UNH run. He pitched well and walked only three as he succeeded in getting the ball over the plate.

UMass Shells Battle with Trinity Rivals for 2nd Places in Regatta

Philadelphia's fifth annual Kerr Cup Regatta turned into a two-school affair as the heavies from New England, Trinity and UMass, routed squads from Drexel College, St. John's, George Washington and newcomer Ithaca College.

Unfortunately though the Redmen came out on the short side of the score in each of the contests, freshman, junior varsity and varsity. The ridiculously close margins of victory made the losses even harder to take for UMass, which had hoped to upset the unbeaten Hartford boys.

The freshmen race saw Trinity and UMass jump into the early lead over the also rans, Trinity, at 38 strokes per minute, was able to hold off the low-stroking Redmen. With 500 yards to go the more experienced Trinity crew (all of its men rowed in prep school, some internationally) raised its beat to 41 strokes and put some water on coach Larry Dean's UMass eight.

The final margin was ten seconds with Drexel and St. John's nowhere in sight Personnel and alignment changes in the UMass boat are anticipated before next week, for the frosh now are 2-1.

The JV race was again all Trinity and UMass. Both boats, ideally rowing in adjacent lanes, broke into early leads. Trinity opened a half-length lead, rating 38 strokes per minute to the Redmen's 34.

UMass, rowing a personnel combination only for the second time stroked by junior Steve Malone, came back with a surge at the three quarters mark, and had Trinity by ten feet. Then Trinity jumped to 42 strokes per minute, again grabbed the lead, but UMass came back again.

The final 100 meters saw the opposition forge a ten-foot lead that it held onto. Trinity won by seven-tenths of a second. The time for the 2000 meters was 6:35.3 to 6:36.0 for UMass. Ithaca, Drexel and St. John's trailed.

The varsity finale was even more disheartening for UMass. Trinity, as expected, grabbed an early lead as confusion abounded at the starting line. At the 500-meter mark, UMass was one length down but closed the gap to one-fourth length with a power 20.

This margin was lengthened slightly as UMass, rowing 34 strokes per minute, experienced steering difficulty and, from the judge's observation tower, appeared to have moved over into the next lane, losing precious seconds in the process.

Trinity, rowing at 39 strokes per minute, held this three-fourths lead until the final 200 meters when UMass, moving at 36, closed the margin to a deck length or ten feet. Trinity in a trail surge at 43, held off the red jerseys by three seats.

The final times were 6:25.0 to 6:26.3 for UMass. The two eights, both averaging in excess of 190 pounds, walloped the rest of the field, including previously unbeaten Drexel, by four lengths.

Coach Mike Faherty offered no excuses for the close defeats. "Trinity is a fine crew. The responsibility for this showing rests with me. This situation will be rectified immediately."

In a schedule-makers dream, UMass and Trinity battle again next week as they both enter the Callow Cup as the number one and two seeds.

The Philadelphia trip was more of a nightmare than the results would indicate. On Friday number two oarsman Tom Mone failed to make transportation connections with the result being only a 15-minute varsity practice Friday night in Princeton, N.J.

Saturday night coach Faherty, transporting the teams' shells back from Philly, experienced problems with the club's trailer that necessitated welding. After an all-night search, a welder was found but the delay prevented the teams from practicing at the scheduled 5 p.m. time on Sunday.

Bruins Sweep Chicago in 4 Straight, 5-4

By beating the Chicago Black Hawks, 5-4, yesterday the Boston Bruins won the National Hockey League's Eastern Division post-season playoff title in four straight games.

Veteran winger John MacKenzie beat goalie Tony Esposito with just under two minutes remaining to give the Bruins the winning goal and a berth in the Stanley Cup finals.

Don Marcotte, John Bucyk, Fred Stanfield and Ken Hodge also scored for the Bruins. Chicago's goals were by Keith Magnuson, Bryan Cambell and two goals by Dennis Hull.

April 10-11 Outlines Referendum

May 8 Becomes "Legislatures Day"

Referendum Plans Announced

The April 10 - 11 Steering Committee announced plans today to tabulate its all campus referendum by computer. The referendum which is the first to include students, faculty and staff as a community in a voting population will be distributed on IBM card ballots.

Present plans call for all graduate and undergraduate students, except seniors, to receive the ballot as part of their pre-registration packet on May 6, Counseling Day. When students return their registration to Whitmore, members of the Steering Committee will be on hand to collect the ballots. Seniors will receive their ballots in the mail and should return them to ballot boxes in Whitmore, the Student Union lobby or Coolidge Lobby Student Office. Faculty and staff will receive their ballots in paycheck envelopes on May 8. The faculty should return ballots to departmental secretaries. Staff are asked to give their ballots to their immediate supervisors. Supervisors should call 5-2043 to arrange for collection. All balloting should be completed by 5:00 p.m. on May 12.

The fifteen items on the referendum (see box) developed out of discussion groups held on April 10 - 11. The Steering Committee has been working for the past two weeks to put some of the more controversial proposals in referendum form. The Committee views this referendum as a measure of sentiment on basic campus issues. The results will be used to guide and support campus change and reform. Other proposals growing out of discussions on April 10 - 11 are being handled by a proposals subcommittee which is examining methods for implementation.

Further explanation of referendum items will appear each day until the referendum in the COLLEGIAN. According to the Committee, these explanations will try to stress both sides of an issue. "Anyone with an 'ax to grind' should stimulate discussion by writing a letter to the editor." The Committee will also distribute a pamphlet explaining the referendum items to the whole community. WMUA will carry live discussions of the issues from 10:00 to 11:00 p.m. on April 28 and April 30 and discussions from 9:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. on May 5 and 6. Participants will answer telephone inquiries about the referendum. Any questions about the referendum can also be directed to the April 10 - 11 Information Center, 5-2043.

The subcommittee to deal with proposals not included in the referendum will hold a meeting on Wednesday, April 29 at 3:45 p.m. in Bartlett 470. Any members of the discussion groups that met on April 10 and 11 are invited to attend. Discussion group members are also urged to call 5-2789 with any suggestions concerning implementation of proposals.

At the present time the committee is working on several major proposals. A group concerning the freshman academic experience is organizing to move orientation to the first semester and keep freshmen as non-major until the second semester. This group is also working for improvement of freshmen courses.

An academic task force is considering the advisability of teacher training for beginning teachers, an analysis of faculty reward structure to account for faculty participation in student residential programs and a request for better counseling day services. The group has asked the Provost to request that faculty be available in their offices on Counseling Day to discuss fall semester courses.

Women's liberation representatives have contacted the subcommittee with proposals to (1) establish a birth control information center, (2) establish a day care center and (3) examine the hiring of women administrators and faculty.

According to the members of the subcommittee these proposals are only a few of a long list. People interested in implementation of proposals should call 5-2789.

Solons to Visit Campus May 8 "Legislature Day"

On Friday, May 8, the University and State Communications Council (USCC) will sponsor Legislators' Day. On that day, members of the Massachusetts State Legislature will be on campus for a series of informal discussions and meetings with members of the student body. The purpose of the program is to provide a meaningful opportunity for the Legislators to obtain a more accurate view of the University in its entirety, as well as, to provide the students with an understanding of the functions and responsibilities of the Legislature regarding UMass.

Starting with a morning tour of the campus, followed by a lunch in the student dining commons, and an afternoon discussion program, USCC hopes to offer members of the General Court a firsthand insight into many of the aspects of Student Life.

The success of Legislators' Day however, lied in the response from the student body. Individual students who are interested in being hosts to their representatives on May 8, have written to them, inviting them to attend the day's activities. These students will accompany the Legislators at a variety of events throughout the day. Many more students are needed however, as there are many members of the House and Senate who have not been invited by students.

Legislators' s Day preparations will be reviewed at a 7 p.m. meeting in the Council Chambers (Student Union) tonight. Twenty-five tentative acceptances have been received from members of the General Court, according to Bob Harrington, Legislator Coordinator for the University and State Communications Council (USCC). More elected participants are being sought through personal interviews on Beacon Hill, petitions and letters from constituents, and through memorandi from the House and Senate Leadership. Also, Governor Sargent is expected to issue a proclamation, declaring May 8 Legislator's Day at UMass, to stimulate further interest.

At tonight's meeting, the May 8 agenda and student involvement will be discussed. "ALL students wanting to participate in any way," Harrington explained, "should come to this meeting." He added that help is needed to take the Legislator's around the campus, answer questions, and help our guests keep to the schedule USCC has arranged.

Anyone wishing to contribute to this day's activities, and not able to make the 7 p.m. meeting, can get information by listening to WMUA at 9 p.m. A discussion about Legislator's Day will be aired.

Applications for the 1970-1971 Administrative Intern Program are now available at the Office of the Dean of Administration in Whitmore Administration Building. This program is open to all juniors in good academic standing who are interested in administration, advising or teaching at the higher education level. Participants in the program become working members of the staffs of a variety of administrative departments at the University.

While prospective interns are cautioned that a vital part of an administrator's duties is the routine work which must precede any decision, their assignments will be educationally oriented.

By the end of his senior year, the intern can expect to be knowledgeable of and sensitive to the process of administration as it is practiced here at the University. In addition, he will have gained a grasp of higher education administration on a statewide level.

The program consists of six weeks of summer work (July 13-August 21) in a selected administrative office at $85 per week; 15 hours of work per week at $2.27 per hour during the regular academic year, and two required 3 credit seminar courses, one each semester, in university administration.

Participation in the seminar will basically involve the presentation of one major paper per semester, with other presentations to be negotiated.

A meeting to discuss the program will be held on Friday, May 1, at 3:30 p.m. in Bartlett Hall, Room 61. All applicants are strongly urged to attend.

Any questions concerning the program should be directed to Mr. Steve Appell, Office of the Dean of Administration, Whitmore Administration Building, tel. number 545-2333.

Don't Bogart That Pill, Sister

A UMass study shows that 70 per cent of a random sample of low income women of reproductive age do not want any more children than they already have but 58 per cent of this group do not use any means of fertility control.

These and other findings have emerged from a recent UMass study in Springfield by H. Jean Thiebaux, assistant professor of public health , and William A. Darity, professor and head of the public health department. The research was supported by the Planned Parenthood League of Massachusetts and Public Health Service biomedical science funds.

According to Dr. Thiebaux, extensive analysis of attitudes and family objectives indicates that the women surveyed are not indifferent to their families' financial and emotional needs, nor do they express religious or moral convictions against the use of contraception.

"There is a widespread awareness of family planning methods, in the limited sense that these women have heard of some means to avoid becoming pregnant'," Dr. Thiebaux explained. The gap between this awareness and the use of health services for fertility control is wide, she added.

"To make the transition, the reticence of most medically indigent women in the face of health professionals can only be overcome if the professionals themselves initiate fertility control discussions," Dr. Thiebaix stated.

She recommends that since virtually every fertile woman has contact with physicians and nurses in her reproductive experiences, these contacts can provide an occasion for discussion of birth spacing and family size limitation.

The study results were presented in "A Study of Attitudes and Knowledge in a Low Income Population: An Assessment of Barriers to Family Planning," a paper given by Dr. Thiebaux at the recent annual meeting of the American Association of Planned Parenthood Physicians in Boston.

Rally to Star Panther, Chicago 8 Figure

By ROBERT NORTHSHIELD
Staff Reporter

A Cage rally in support of the Black Panthers tonight at 8 will feature a speech by Panther captain Doug Miranda. The ad-hoc UMass Panther Defense Committee will sponsor the rally (the University's) where John Brown Childs and a yet unidentified member of the Chicago 8 will also appear.

The main focus of the night's activities will be the weekend demonstrations in New Haven beginning Friday, the first day of the murder trial of Panther leader Bobby Seale. The New Haven demonstrations loom larger each day, with estimates of participants now ranging between 30,000 and 100,000.

Tonight's speakers will have more detailed outlines of the weekend's activities, but essentially activities will include a tea-in Friday at Yale University from noon to 4, followed by a rally on the New Haven Green, featuring Conspiracy 8 members David Dellinger and Abbie Hoffman, Carol Brighton, and Big Man, of the Black Panther newspaper. From 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. there will be a rock concert, including the group Santana.

Saturday morning and early afternoon will be occupied by workshops at Yale, followed by another 4 p.m. rally, with speakers including Bobby Seale's wife Artie, Chicago 8 principles Tom Hayden and John Froines and noted French poet Jean Genet. Another rock concert will follow.

Yale students have taken over their dorms to provide room for people coming to New Haven, and there is reportedly a plentiful supply of food also.

Tonight's rally, a spokesman said, is hoped to generate a sizeable contingent of the UMass community to attend the New Haven protests. Bus tickets are available at the Panther table in the Student Union, while car pools are also being set up. The UMass people are leaving at 9 a.m. Friday.

There have been constant references of violence impending in New Haven this weekend, in many newspapers but a UMass organizer said, "With much of the activity being focused at Yale, this can be a learning experience hopefully for many of the participants." However, he added, "it will be hard to stop any of those intending to bust things up or get busted themselves."

High Schoolers Will Visit Campus

High School juniors will have an opportunity to visit the Amherst campus of the University of Massachusetts May 2 and 9, for a first-hand look at the facilities offered at their state university.

The High School Guest Says' program has been designed to give students a brief but comprehensive exposure to the UMass campus. The day includes guided tours of the campus, an introduction to the University, a short talk about admissions requirements and an informal question period.

High School Guest Days allow high school juniors an opportunity to start planning early for their college careers by becoming familiar with the institution - its facilities, programs and requirements.

Students who wish to visit U-Mass on either Saturday should contact their guidance counselors to make arrangements to visit the campus, and to allow the counselors to make arrangements for registration.

Noted Doctor Takes Over Ed Course For A Day

Dr. Edith Wallace, a leading psychoanalyst and noted artist, will be speaking to two graduate courses in the School of Education this week.

On Tuesday, April 28, from 4 to 6, she will address the students in the "Aesthetic Experience and Creativity" and "Aesthetic Experience and Cognitive Growth" courses in room 228 of the School of Ed. The title of her talk will be 'Active Imagination and Creativity.'

In her private practice, Dr. Wallace is a Jungian analyst. She has studied medicine, psychology, and philosophy in Europe and received an M.D. and a Ph.D. degree, and she has taught languages, comparative literature and history of art in England, where she made her first Jungian contacts.

Along with three years residency in Mental Hospitals, she has studied one semester at the C. G. Jung Institute in Zurich, Switzerland, working directly with Dr. and Mrs. Jung.

Seniors

Each year the University News Bureau sends the pictures and names of all seniors who will graduate to their hometown newspapers. The pictures are attached to the news cards filled out at the beginning of first semester. If you expect to graduate in June and have not filled out a news card, please fill one out in the News Bureau, Room 345, Whitmore Hall.

This year newspapers will receive the names and pictures of all seniors as prospective graduates. If you know you will not graduate this May, and would not like your name and picture sent, please call 545-0444 by April 30 and we will remove your name from the list.

Clarke Outlines Life in 2001

By BRIAN WHITE

Dr. Arthur C. Clarke, co-author of "2001: A Space Odyssey," spoke last night on "The World of 2001."

Dr. Clarke noted that, while for most of our history the past has almost directly implied the future, our own future will be radically different from our past. By 2001 we may be living in a dead or irrevocably doomed civilization, or we may be ending the Dark Ages that have blighted all of our history to this point.

Beginning to explore possible futures, Dr. Clarke admitted that "technological forecasting is only 90% impossible." With this reservation, and barring contact with extraterrestrials or the rise of ultra-intelligent machines - "then all bets would be off" - Clarke presented an optimistic picture of our immediate future.

There has been a trend from the self-sufficient household to one in which the only manufacturing process is the preparation of food. Even this necessity may soon be eliminated: right now freezers have eliminated much home cooking, by allowing for the storage of pre-cooked meales, and in the near future dehydrated foods will take care of nearly all the care involved in home cooking.

The food processed will almost certainly not be meat: meat is a prohibitively inefficient form of food energy storage; even agriculture may be too wasteful a way to produce food. The progress of microbiological engineering may allow the processing of potential food sources such as petroleum.

The food resources of the oceans, which Dr. Clarke himself has written off, have been exaggerated. "The sea has been oversold": it cannot be expected to solve world problems, since it is now being tapped for most of its resources, and since techniques for ulitizing the rest will take a great deal of time. Man may have to look to another medium for the solution to world food problems, space.

"It is ironic that people are saying, 'Why are we spending money on space we could be spending here on Earth?' when space technology may be the only thing that can save life on Earth," Clarke observed.

Space technology, in dealing with constraints of limited resources of power and raw materials, is learning to use food and human waste products much more efficiently than is done today. Moreover, it may provide vital help from another direction.

Dr. Arthur C. Clarke spoke to a packed Ballroom last night on the world of 2001. He described life as he foresees it. Dr. Clarke is an eminent science-fiction writer and a widely recognized authority on space travel.

The communications revolution will have a far-reaching effect on our future. Communications may go very far towards meeting the social problems of India, which make America's seem "trivial" by comparison. Perhaps one person in ten of India's half-billion can read; there are very few telephones on the sub-continent; India has a half-million villages to coordinate. What India does have to work with is the transistor radio, and, together with the communications satellite, it may be used to communicate vital information, such as family planning information, and advances in agricultural techniques.

Similarly, the rise of a world communications network may help the world to deal coherently with its problems. If advances in communications and travel can help to deal with population pressure and ideological differences, the world may survive what may otherwise be its doom.

The importance of communications will extend not only to Man's bare survival, but to his continued existence. If Man is removed from immediate danger - and given the amount of leisure that seems likely in that event, education and entertainment will become priorities.

Dr. Clarke states that biological engineering will produce the next great revolution in technology. Just as one of Man's most important early achievements was his training animals to work for him - including the sheep dog, the war elephant, and the horse - his development and training of animals with amplified intelligence to do menial tasks will be highly significant.

Man will be removed from the location of his work by visual devices and telecontrolled "hands"; and he will presently be removed from nearly all work by advances in technology. Furthermore, he will have an unprecedented ability to educate and entertain himself.

The home communications console, Dr. Clarke suggested, will give Man the ability to receive an almost unlimited amount of information, and to store what he wants a record of. Broadcast "newspapers" will almost instantly relay information to the individual. These advances will give men a perspective from which Man's present position will seem as limited as that in the age before printed books were available.

We may finally emerge from the Dark Ages we have always been in, and come to the age of the truly educated man. (Dr. Clarke stated that he had met only two really educated men in his life, Olaf Stapledon and J.B.S. Haldane.)

This advance in education may make an almost entirely new species of us. "Man's greatest problem in the near future," Clarke said, "may be learning to continue schooling past the age of 120."

Dissenters Arrested in U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW (AP) - Mass arrests by Soviet secret police and trials reminiscent of the Stalin era were reported Monday by Russian dissidents. Some feared it was "the beginning of a wide-spread purge."

In the biggest single arrest, 160 Tartars were rounded up by KGB plain-clothesmen in Moscow during last week's Lenin centennial celebrations.

The Tartars had come to Moscow to demonstrate in front of the Lenin Library for the return of their Crimean homeland and restoration of the civil rights they lost in World War II.

Their arrests were reported in an underground news letter circulated by Moscow's small dissident community. It is known as "Samizadat" or a self-publishing manuscript, because each person who reads it types up several copies for friends.

The Samizadat said that 100 Tartars from Uzbekistan, Kirgizia and the northern Caucasus were arrested last Tuesday and another 60 were rounded up on Wednesday.

"Their demonstration never came off, and the whereabouts of the arrested is unknown," the manuscript reported. It added that "nearly all who had come to Moscow were arrested," indicating that some escaped the KGB net.

The bearers of the Samizadat also reported a number of trials and convictions across the country. All the legal proceedings occurred this month, and all were interrupted for two days last week so they would not mar the Lenin anniversary.

A university history teacher and three students who protested "the resurrection of Stalinism" were sentenced for periods of up to seven years in labor camps "of strict regime," meaning hard labor. The sentences followed a two-week trial in the Volga River city of Gorky, 270 miles east of Moscow.

The Moscow informants said history teacher V. Pavlankov and a student called Kapranov were sentenced to seven years each, a student Ponomarov got six years and a student Shultzov, five years.

In the Ukrainian city of Kharkov, a well-known dissident called Arkady Levin was sentenced to three years in a labor camp for signing appeals to the United Nations last year protesting alleged repression of Soviet intellectuals and the imprinsonment of Gen. Pyotr Grigorienko. He was the fourth of 15 signatories to be arrested and tried.

Grigorienko, a cashiered Red army general who was ordered confined to an insane asylum for his dissident activities, has disappeared from the psychiatric institute at Kazan where he was supposed to be held, the Samizadat reported. It said his wife feared for his life.

Kopechne Papers To Be Released

BOSTON (AP) - Chief Justice G. Joseph Tauro of the Massachusetts Superior Court announced Monday he will release the Mary Jo Kopechne inquest papers Wednesday.

Judge Tauro took jurisdiction of the case and assumed custody of the papers. He said he would lift an order impounding the papers while a federal court suit on their control was pending.

Tauro said, "The alleged property and contractual claims by which the stenographers have invoked the asserted jurisdiction of the federal courts have been resolved as a matter of state law by the highest court in this commonwealth."

The release of the papers now is "an internal administrative matter of the Superior Court," he added.

Tauro said he will distribute copies of the transcript and report to news agencies which deposited funds to cover the cost of duplication, and set 3 p.m. Wednesday as the time.

The state Supreme Court issued an order last week which said the release of the papers had been unduly delayed by the appeals of the court stenographer to the federal courts on his claim he alone had a right to make copies for the press and other parties.

"We fail to see any basis for the exercise of the jurisdiction by the federal courts in these matters," the Supreme Court order said.

Tauro said that as a public service his court will provide copies of the papers to interested parties at cost - $75 - and thereafter the originals will become public records.

Tauro made his announcement several hours after taking jurisdiction in the case, which he previous ly assigned to Justice Wilfred J. Paquet of his court. Paquet had issued the order impounding the papers pending outcome of the federal court suit.

The documents were immediately transferred by the clerk of Suffolk Superior Court, Edward V. Keating, to Justice Tauro's administrative assistant, Edward Kelly.

Miss Kopechne, a 28-year-old Washington, D. C., secretary, drowned last July 18 in the car of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D - Mass., after it overturned into a tidal pond on Chappaquiddick Island.

Kennedy did not report to police until about 10 hours after he said the accident occurred. He said he was driving the woman to the ferry, lost his way, and was able to escape from the car but could not save Miss Kopechne.

He later pleaded guilty to a charge of leaving the scene of an accident and was sentenced to two months in jail, suspended for a year.

Red China-U.S. Talks to Resume

WASHINGTON (AP) - Just after the successful launching of its first earth satellite last Saturday, Red China agreed to resumption of U.S.-Chinese talks at Warsaw on May 20, it was learned Monday.

In announcing the third round of 1970 talks on Asian problems Monday, the State Department continued its policy of refusing to discuss subject matter.

But privately official sources said the meeting offers an opportunity for consultations on restoring the neutrality of Laos and Cambodia.

The United States is awaiting a reply from Peking to an April 7 proposal by President Nixon for consultations on Laos aimed at ending the fighting in that country which borders mainland China, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Communist China has been invited also by Indonesian Foreign Minister Adam Malik to attend an Asian and Pacific meeting on the Cambodian crisis. The United States has endorsed the Indonesian proposal.

The launching of the Chinese satellite is viewed here as marking an important advance in the technological skill of Communist China and officials said is not a subject to be underrated.

QUESTION: Please explain Nixon's recent ruling on occupational deferments?
ANSWER: The President just a few days ago eliminated all new occupational, agricultural and fatherhood deferments. In order to spread draft vulnerability over a wider spectrum of American young men, there will be no further deferments in these categories as of April 23. Men already holding such deferments (such as teachers, engineers, Peace Corpsmen, firemen, policemen, farmers and others considered by local boards to be working in the nation's health, safety or interest) can continue to be deferred and may request renewals. This is an important change in the draft system which will affect a good many University students.

QUESTION: Do you think that student deferments will also be eliminated?
ANSWER: Yes, President Nixon has already asked Congress for authority to end all new II-S undergraduate deferments. Presumably students now holding II-S deferments will be allowed to keep them, but new requests will not be granted. If Congress agrees to this change, a large number of non-deferred men will enter the draft lists. And this will have the effect of making the lottery work the way it was intended to work: draft boards will have larger pools of I-A men to draw on and will therefore need to draft only those with low lottery numbers.

There is expected to be opposition to the drafting of college students, so we cannot be sure what Congress will do in this regard. There are strong pressures on Nixon to end the draft entirely, though the Pentagon favors keeping it. Readers of this column are advised to keep themselves informed of new developments, changes in deferment policies, etc.

QUESTION: I am considering applying for a C.O., but as a Jew, I support Israel and believe I would fight if I were an Israeli citizen. What can I say to my draft board if they ask me about my position on the Mid-East crisis and participation in war?
ANSWER: Tell them the question is irrelevant. You are an American, not an Israeli, and you are applying for C.O. under American laws. If you sincerely oppose participation in the only wars you are likely to be involved in -- those of the present-day American government -- you are eligible for Conscientious Objector classification. The wars of other countries, and of our own country's past history are none of the draft board's business.

Many Jews have applied for and received the C.O., basing their claims on the traditions and literature of Judaism. One precept which emerges from historic Jewish writings is this: when another human life is in the balance, a Jew must never give up his responsibility to decide for himself what is right. In other words, a Jew must never "simply follow orders" to kill other human beings.

For information and advice on the Jewish grounds for Conscientious Objection, write to the Jewish Peace Fellowship, Box 271, Nyack, N.Y. 10960, or telephone the local branch in Cambridge, (617) 492-4672, and ask to speak with Mr. James Kugel.

QUESTION: How are the lottery numbers running these days?
ANSWER: A very recent Selective Service bulletin states that registrants with lottery numbers 216 and above are not to be called for pre-induction physical examinations, and those men with numbers 216 to 366 who are under orders to report for physicals can have these orders cancelled if they so request in writing. This new bulletin suggests that, for the time being at least, men with higher numbers are not being drafted.

QUESTION: I heard recently on the radio that in Massachusetts 500 or so pending indictments for draft violations were going to be processed. What does this mean?
ANSWER: Indictments for refusing military service have been held up for quite some time in this area. One possible reason is that many involve Conscientious Objectors whose claims for C.O. were turned down by local boards but whose motives and beliefs are genuinely conscientious. After all, the very fact that they have refused induction and been willing to face prison makes a strong case for C.O. classification; their local boards have probably wrongly denied them the C.O.

Another possible reason that the government has delayed in prosecuting these men is the Sisson case. Judge Wyzanski of the U.S. District Court in Boston upheld the right to selective objection (to combat duty in Vietnam) on grounds of sincere moral (but not religious) beliefs.

The important issues raised in this case, U.S. v. John H. Sisson, are now before the U.S. Supreme Court. The brief submitted by the American Civil Liberties Union argues, "One who sincerely and conscientiously opposes a particular war as immoral may not be forced to kill, at least where that war has not been the subject of a congressional declaration of war, and does not endanger the homeland." The decision of the Supreme Court will have a critical bearing on many C.O. and draft refusal cases.

Taylor will Speak At Honors Day Banquet

The Honors Program Office has announced that Dr. Harold Taylor will be this year's Honors Day Banquet speaker. Dr. Taylor is a distinguished educator and author who served as president of Sarah Lawrence College from 1945 to 1959. Currently the chairman of the National Research Council on Peace Strategy, Dr. Taylor is the author of "On Education and Freedom" (1954), "Art and the Intellect" (1960), and "The World as Teacher" (1969). This last book which deals with teacher education, has been described by the New York Times as "imaginative, insistently radical, and brilliantly persuasive."

The Honors Day banquet is an annual occasion when the university seeks to recognize outstanding students. Among those to be honored are senior honors candidates members of such honor societies as Phi Kappa Phi, Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa, and winners of prizes. Tickets for the banquet are available from the Honors Program Office, E-23 Machmer Hall.

Walk to Fund ABC Program

A 26-mile walk will occur on Sunday, May 3 to raise money for foreign and domestic self-help projects, (including the ABC, A Better Chance, program). The sponsors of the walk would like to clarify what the walk is and its goals and ask for assistance from the people at UMass.

The Walk For Development is part of a nationwide group called Young World Development, which is the youth arm of the American Freedom From Hunger Foundation. Walks similar to the one scheduled for Amherst have been held in 70 other cities and towns throughout the country.

More than 200,000 people have participated and over $1.5 million dollars have been raised for the self-help projects. Of the approximately 150 walks throughout the country that will occur this spring, the only one scheduled for western Massachusetts is the walk here in Amherst.

The domestic project to be funded by the walk will be ABC, a program to help students who have the potential for college but who lack the socio-economic means to get into college. Since government funding for ABC is unavailable, $20,000 is needed to finance the program.

The choice of the projects to be funded is made by leaders of the people of Amherst who have volunteered their help. If you would like to help or have any questions, call Moe Rodenstein at 546-5133.

The foundation stipulates 42.5% of the money goes to a domestic project, 42.5% to a foreign project and the remaining 15% returns to the Foundation to promote future walks.

If you want to walk on Sunday, come by the table in the Union and pick up a sponsor card. If you can't walk but would still like to help, we need people at the various checkpoints along the way to stamp the cards of the walkers; we need people with cars to go along the route of the walk and pick up and return home walkers who can't go on; we need trained medical people to treat the thousands of blisters; and we need food to keep the walkers going.

If you would like to stamp the cards at the checkpoints or have an available car, call Sue Rosen at 546-5275. If you can help out with bandaging the blisters or would like to donate food (preferably oranges and apples), call Renee Daniels at 546-8219.

The 4-cylinder 914 model costs $3595.00* It has an electronically fuel-injected engine, goes 110 mph and does 0-60 in 13 seconds.

The 6-cylinder 914/6 model costs $5999.00* goes 125 mph and does 0-60 in 9.9 seconds.

Both come with a built-in roll bar, removable fiberglass roof, 5-speed stick or optional 4-speed Sportomatic, two trunks, and the kind of craftsmanship expected from Porsche.

So if you're thinking about a true, two-seat sports car, think about this:

When you don't get a back seat, you should at least get an engine in its place.

Prisoners

I have a proposal - to correct some of the present inequities of this American System, land that we love, etc. etc. But first let me make my position clear.

I support the right of the Vietnamese People to Self-determination, to freedom from foreign armed intrusion and economic control of their government (not only that, the Saigon regime is totally corrupt). I resent U.S. destruction of the Vietnamese LAND (defoliation, bombing), CULTURE (imperialist economy, exploitation), and PEOPLE (genocide, pacification). I am on the side of the Vietnamese people. I also side with U.S. soldiers FORCED to fight in such a war. I offer my greatest encouragement to those GIs with sufficient will and courage to resist their government. I sympathize with American prisoners of war in N. and S. Vietnam and their wives, lovers, relatives and friends in the United States. I would like to see the war end immediately and all U. S. troops withdrawn.

I support the right of Black Americans to self-determination - of their own lives and communities and I do condemn, to utter hell, the racist lopsided American system of "justice" that holds these people oppressed. I extend my love and pledge my efforts to the aid of these as well as my own people (those white and oppressed). I demand that all political prisoners in U.S. jails be released - including Black Panthers, draft resisters, women jailed as a result of sexist laws (prostitutes), blacks tried without a jury of their peers (constitutionally guaranteed), and demonstrators thrown in jail on all manner of trumped up charges and without fair trials.

I propose as a gesture of justice, alien though it may be America's power structure, that the government FREE (yes free - let out of prison) its political prisoners, in exchange for the U.S. prisoners of war that N. Vietnam holds. The proposal is not of my origin - it has been a standing offer by the Black Panther Party and the Hanoi government for a long time. Instead of taking up this offer, the government has chosen to permit publicizing the emotional journey of American wives and their children to the Hanoi Paris delegation. If the government were really concerned about its people, it would take any method to free them. But to free its political prisoners would mean it must admit it HAS political prisoners and this would disrupt the myth of justice and would require great changes in the government's structure.

This is but one small part of the oppressive contradictions that America and its ruling corporations persist in perpetuating upon its moral, media-and-God-fearing masses of peoples. But the contradictions must one day collapse the system, for it is only so long that justice (real) and truth can be held under. May 1, 2, and 3, New Haven, Connecticut. I hope to see you there.

Information

The pages of the Collegian in recent weeks have been filled with news of man's temious balance with his environment. Ecology and pollution have become matters of national concern. How lasting will be this concera?

A recent conversation with the people at the Odyssey book store in South hadley has led us to raise some questions. Discussing the best of recent literature, Mr. James Creane touched upon books of the movements. "Four to five months ago," he said, "books on the military establishment were selling. That's gone already. It took Congress years to begin to question the military budget and now interest has lapsed.

"Books on ecology," he said, "are selling well now. In three months they will be dead."

Three months from now happens to be in the middle of the summer.

Their thoughts turned to the issues which have caused books to be on the shelves. "the greatest question of our age," said Mr. Romeo Grenier, operator of the shop, "is the position of blacks in our society.

"The black-white confrontation will either create a revolution or it will make us see the light. Unless we begin to understand the black man's problems, no other problems which come along will make any difference."

Books on different approaches to education, he noted, are selling well. "Sidney Hook on the one hand saying hit them on the head and make them learn; Justice Douglas on the other saying let's change things and learn with them."

Below are suggestions for worthwhile reading:

THE POWER AND THE GLORY, Talese's study of the 'people who almost call the shots,' the editors and publishers of the New York Times.

900 DAYS, Harrison Salsbury's account of the siege of Stalingrad in which a million and a half people died.

DISOBEDIENCE & DEMOCRACY by Howard Zinn, whose premise is that a society which can must entertain the idea of its own destruction if it has the capacity to do something better.

MORNING, a play by Irving Horowitz which sets you up laughing at Amos 'n Andy and then slaps you across the face for laughing.

R. D. Laing's DIVIDED SELF, which mixes philosophy and the psychiatry of the schizoid.

LETTING GO and PORTNOY'S COMPLAINT by Philip Roth; 'the shock of the four-letter words will fade away, their value remain . . . (there is no such thing as obscenity, is there?)'.

THE FRENCH LIEUTENANT'S WOMAN by John Fowles, another good novel.

THE AMERICAN CHALLENGE by J-J Servan-Schreiber, a study of American domination of world markets; 'Servan-Schreiber has had more influence than all of Galbraith - people read Galbraith but Servan-Schreiber's impact has been greater.'

CULTURE AGAINST MAN by Jules Henry, a sociological study of modern society.

The Southern Strategy

WASHINGTON - The Republican Party, through its Southern strategy committee, has pulled off one of the most interesting political coups in modern history. They managed to make a practically unknown federal judge the leading candidate to win the senatorial race in Florida this year.

I can now reveal how they did it.

The Republicans were very worried about winning a senatorial seat in Florida in 1970. None of their candidates had any glamour or charisma and Florida has been written off to the Democrats.

But then someone in the White House (There is still some confusion as to who it was) remembered that there was a Supreme Court vacancy on the bench.

"Why don't we," he suggested, "use the vacancy as a means of building up someone to run for senator from Florida?"

"How?" one of the denser Republican Party officers asked.

"Let's put someone up for the Supreme Court from Florida who couldn't possibly be confirmed. Then after he is turned down, he'll announce he's running for the Senate. By this time he'll have become a household word."

An old-time political pro said, "Wait a minute. Suppose we find this guy, put him up for the court and the Senate confirms him? Then we'll have wasted a lot of time and money."

"Agreed," a southern strategy expert said. "The trick is to find someone for the court that the Senate wouldn't confirm in a million years."

The strategy committee agreed to find someone in Florida that the President could nominate for the court, at the same time one the Senate would turn down. After going over the records of every judge in Florida they finally concluded that federal Judge Harrold Carswell of Tallahassee was their man.

A quick check of the nation's law schools revealed the the majority of the deans were against him, which was encouraging as far as the Southern strategy committee was concerned. Judge Carswell would also be opposed by labor, liberal and black groups, a good sign - not only to keep him off the court, but also to be used later in the senatorial campaign.

At the next meeting of the Southern strategy committee everyone made his report. The White House man said, "The President wants to make it perfectly clear he's willing to go along with this strategy to get a Republican senator from Florida, but he doesn't want it to take too long because he does want a justice on the Supreme Court, and he can't afford to nominate too many straw men."

The committee assured the White House man that Carswell would be defeated in no time and then the President could get on with filling the seat.

But what the Southern strategy committee hadn't counted on was how close the Carswell vote would be. Many senators, who were not informed as to what the Republicans really wanted Carswell for, indicated they would vote for him for the court.

This scared the pants off the Republican strategists, as they didn't want to lose Carswell for the Senate election. They also had assured the President, Carswell could never make it for the court, which was the only reason President Nixon had nominated him.

In desperation they called up Bryce Harlow, the White House lobbyist, and said, "Bryce, you've got to help Carswell lose."

Realizing the implications of what was at stake, Harlow immediately started calling up senators saying Margaret Chase Smith was going to vote for Carswell. He had someone leak to her what he was doing, and predictably she voted against Carswell and saved the day for the Southern strategy.

It was one of the smoothest operations Washington ever saw. Now the big question: Can the Republicans defeat Judge Blackmun so he'll get to run against Hubert Humphrey in the Senate race in Minnesota?

COMMENT

Support May 1, 2, & 3

Three weeks ago, when Rennie Davis and Leonard Weinglass of the Chicago Eight were on campus to discuss the government's conspiracy to silence anti-war protest in the United States, they spent some time discussing how and why Bobby Seale was bound and gagged in Chicago, and why the seven of the Eight out on bail and their two lawyers were raising money to support the twenty-one Panthers jailed in New York and the nine Panthers, including Bobby Seale in jail in New Haven.

Two weeks ago, when Denise Levertov came to speak at the Moratorium, we heard a moving declaration that the Peace Movement in the United States could not be confined to one issue but that the oppression that the Black Panther Party was undergoing was part of the same war and that the defense of the Black Panther Party and its chairman, Bobby Seale, must be supported by all those seeking an end to the oppression of third world peoples by the government of the United States.

Last week, Ralph Abernathy prefaced his remarks in honor of Martin Luther King with a statement in support of the nine Panthers, including Bobby Seale, who are being held without bail in Connecticut, and a plea that all of those who could attend the teach-ins, workshops, and rallies being held in New Haven on May 1-2-3 to see what it means to bring southern style justice north.

Tonight at 8:00 in the Cage, Doug Miranda, the New Haven Area Captain of the Black Panther Party and one member of the Chicago Eight will be here to talk about Bobby Seale, the Black Panther Party, the racist system of law and order practiced inside the United States (Chicago, Connecticut, Birmingham, Berkeley, etc.) and the racist system of imperialism and war as practiced throughout the world and particularly in Vietnam by the same U.S. government.

You can't go to Vietnam, you have to rely on the second hand and usually doctored information for all that you know about Vietnam. New Haven is only a little over an hour's drive south of Amherst. If you are concerned about your society and state of your freedom within the framework of this nation, you must go to New Haven on May 1-2-3.

The Conspiracy is coming to New Haven: Dave Dellinger, Tom Hayden, Rennie Davis, John Froines, Lee Weiner, Jerry Rubin, Abbie Hoffman, Leonard Weinglass, William Kunstler and Bobby Seale who is still in chains.

Fro m his political exile in Algeria, Eldridge Cleaver asks if the white college students of the United States are as racist as the government and interested only in the freedom of the WHITE militants. If you oppose the war that is going on in Vietnam, come to New Haven on May First and learn about the war that is going on against third world people inside of the United States right now.

Break More Windows!?

While those of us who were conscious Sunday night at 2 a.m. thought the revolution had finally arrived, the rest of the Umies dreamed on, blissfully unaware that the biggest birthday party this side of the Monongehela was taking place all over Amherst.

It seems that a chap at Amherst College, who had a birthday Sunday, decided to take a few of his more intimate friends and go carousing. And when they discovered (as we all know) that the center of Amherst is not exactly the most congenial place for carousing at 2 a.m., they broke a few of those big plate glass windows at a local bank. This done, one of them obviously had the bright idea to invade Southwest. Have you ever been walking down the street and all of a sudden there is a car full of sodden teen-agers demanding to know "Where's the party?" Well friends, you missed it. Before that guy and his friends stopped recruiting for their ridiculous celebration, they had every night-owl on campus headed toward Orchard Hill. That's where they were headed the last time I saw them anyway.

I don't know what they did up there. I live at the bottom of the Hill and every once in a while someone came tumbling head-over heels down the Hill and they would get up and scramble up the Hill.

That's all we needed. I ran around trying to get some guys to go up the Hill with me but nobody would move. I don't blame them much though. Two in the morning is kind of late for making a lot of noise. But let's analyze the situation, Doctor. Granted a birthday calls for a good time. But at two in the morning? And breaking windows in a bank, of all places? The biggest thing I ever broke on my birthday was a red

Comment-No More Goldfish

Do you remember that beautifully clear day when while walking by the campus pond, you would watch the goldfish (millions of them!) glissening in the sunlight? Wasn't it a proud day--the people were beautiful, the sun warm, our spirits high?

But oh how tragic such days are--the bittersweet of modern life. The sun shone today, but hardly as brilliant. "Sun come out again! Like the day by the pond," It tried. I'm sure it did; but how false were the rays that penetrated.

I continued along the pond again hoping that the goldfish would brighten the day once more. Somehow it was different today--the water was cloudy. And struggling to sight a pisces, I beheld one----DEAD. I was hurt. I thought nature was against me. I pulled the fish out of the water, looking at it frantically for a puncture, a disease--anything that would point to a death within the realm of nature. Not a sign. Back into that muddy habitat did I throw it. And as I watched it floating on top, I thought of man and time, and now our earth. I was not proud. The day was shamed. For as artificially as those fish were placed in that pond so are we posing ourselves unnaturally in our own land. No beauty today. Even beauty is artificial. For man is a natural parasite, and therefore ugly.

Guest Editorial: The Empire is Crumbling.

Outside the country the Amerikan empire is dieing. Inside, the struggle is beginning. There are people who've always known this. There are people who must come to know, through involvement in isolated moments of the struggle, in which they come to feel the meaning of their lives. A student accepts another older human's or group of human's experiences as his own, and trapped in the vacuum learns for ideas other people's insights. In the end he gives up his meaning as a living human, until finally he becomes incapable of making independent decisions or even distinctions because of the necessary conflict which would arise in acting out his role as maintainence men to the system.

Students must struggle to free themselves of the uses to which the capitalistic university puts them. They must avoid becoming managers emulating power tripping aristocrats who have no conception of the suffering their roles and ideas inflict on billions of human lives.

In the struggle inside the country two separated groups have emerged: working class revolutionaries like the Black Panthers come from a class undisguishedly exploited. Their understanding of their lives remains unchanneled; they exist outside the myths of progress. Their human security will come through revolution. The student radical comes from a class no less exploited than the working class, except his enslavement is elaborately disguised. He has been channeled, and expresses himself through the myths and institutions of the managing classes. He maintains or will build his security through illusions like sentimental live, or -- among hosts of others --careerism. But the student radical is breaking with tradition, as recent actions in Santa Barbara, UPenn, Kansas State, and Amherst center prove. The conceptual breaks must be accompanied by more practice, more action. But the two separated movements cannot act separately, for apart they face annihilation.

Because of the isolation of urban and campus radicals, the Black Panther Party has slowly been killed off as a state tactic to stem the revolution without producing a reaction from white radicals, not even to the extent that white student radicals have realized the simple enormous emergency in the lives of their revolutionary brothers. White student radicals remain for the most part absorbed in the abstract analyses bourgeois education trains them for.

The Black Panther Party is in the vanguard of the domestic revolution. These people operate outside the myths and beliefs capitalism breeds and the capitalistic university calls objective knowledge or intelligence, or law, or culture.

Their position is more vulnerable because of the hideous system of racial separation, an absolutely essential part of the capitalistic process of alienating the peoples in a worker/slave culture. The Panthers have been singled out by the state as the revolutionary force safest to annihilate as a lesson to peoples in the movement. They are members of the most exploited classes whose lives and deaths have no more significance to the ruling classes than the ticks of a manager's watch. The Panther members are not the children of the manager classes, not sons and daughters of executives and professionals.

There is no space here to write of the roles of the police, the courts, and the politicians in the war between the rich and the poor. I simple say that once again their functions have coalesced and their reality as mechanisms of suppression are demonstrated. The killing outright of 30 Panther leaders is now replaced by legal killings. Nine men, arrested without warrants, held 11 months without bail, accused of a crime witnessed by one man with a public history as a police stooge, tried by a jury of the cronies of the New Haven sheriff, are about to die, are about to be killed legally.

The white student radical must at this point enter the struggle. On May 1,2,3 demonstrations will be held in New Haven. The Yale University Campus will unofficially house and foster the efforts of the people who come to participate in the struggle. Yale ironically, with its billions of dollars among the squalor and degraded conditions of New Haven, with its role as supplier of corporation presidents and judges and am - bassadors, has seen dissent actualized in that ten of the twelve colleges have voted to aid the Panthers in any way necessary for the demonstrations to succeed. The plush dormitory suites, intended as an environment for the children of aristocrats, will be opened instead to the people.

To realistically present the terms of the trial of the New Haven Nine, and the implications of the demonstrations, a rally will be held at 8:00 tonight in the cage. Speaking will be Doug Miranda, State of Connecticut Panther Party Captain. Speaking also will be one of The Chicago Conspiracy 8. And speaking also will be John Childs. They will fill in or clarify points I have only broached. They will make clear in ways written words cannot the feeling terms of the situation.

Plans have been made to hire buses for the trip to New Haven. Details are available at the Panther Defense Committee table in the Student Union.

People should bring sleeping bags. Hopefully many student will decide to stay for the duration of the trial. Come and commune with the people from throughout America who alone share your feelings about life. With them overcome your fears and your sense of isolation. Evaporate your belief you are isolated and alone. Bring home the struggle and unite with the people who thus far you have been isolated from. Interpolate the lessons, and come back to the Valley.

The police are already active in the pastoral valley in ways perhaps the isolated white student radical is unaware of. I leave you with an example of police tactics which eventually are to envelope all members of the movement. In Holyoke, during the trial connected with the bust of a commune, it was revealed that a state police agent had infiltrated the commune and for six months had helped assemble a collection of dossiers on anyone visiting or mentioned by members or visitors. Pictures were taken and from leads of names dossier afrer dossier was assembled containing bio - graphical information, descriptions of habits and hangups, and all to be used as informational power in roundups the police know will be necessary soon even in places remote from the centers of power in the culture.

Whether the white radical enters the struggle, he has been entered into it by the state. I ask along with others that people get together.

Come to the cage at 8:00, Spread the word. And come to New Haven May 1, 2, and 3.

Spring Weekend

James Taylor to Appear Sunday

JAMES TAYLOR

The music of James Taylor presents a most frustrating problem to those who are hung up in the taxonomy of popular music. Is his music mild blues? Or, does James Taylor sing a country form of rock?

However, such categories really don't matter. It's his music that counts. With the release of "Sweet Baby James", (his second album and his first for Warner Bros.), James Taylor creates his own field of music. The songs are subtle; they wash over the listener, lulling one into the relaxation of freedom before sneaking up from behind and attacking. The result is a total involvement which, while predestined, is emancipation.

That James Taylor can produce the same emotions in concert is proof of the versatility and universality of his music. Opening his show seated on a chair playing acoustic guitar, Taylor's music moves from the gently nostalgic "Sunshine, Sunshine," to the intensely exciting "Knockin' Round the Zoo." The effect of his performance is overwhelming only in the emphathetical sense, for the audience is always a part of the show.

Considering his music to be something that simply seems to have happened, Taylor feels that "people like to talk generally about roots, but I find it difficult. I am the product of a haphazard musical environment which, I suppose, makes me a folk artist. Green rock 'n' roll. Words about my lyrics are at best redundant."

Words about James Taylor are redundant, also, since it is impossible to capture him without sound. James Taylor will be captured with sound and music, however, when he appears by the pond Sunday afternoon May 2 at 1 p.m. in concert at the University of Massachusetts.

This is just one act of many that will be brought to the campus the weekend of May 2. Starting at 1 p.m. by the pond, free of charge, Saturday, there will be five folk singers/groups featured: Pat Sky, Seals and Crofts, Nancy Michaels, Jamie Brockett and Hedge and Donna. This is to be followed Saturday night with a concert featuring Tim Buckley and Nancy Michaels at 8:30 in the SU Ballroom, admission $1.50 at the box office and $1.75 at the door. This concert will not have the regularly set up chairs but rather the audience will sit on the floor.

Tennis Team Crushes BC, 9-0

"There were Eagle feathers all over the Heights!" commented tennis coach Steve Kosakowski as the Redman netmen crunched Boston College, 9-0, to up their record to 3-2 at Chestnut Hill on Saturday.

The racket-handlers are right back in action today away at 3 p.m. Kosakowski doesn't expect a close match, thinking positively that the Redmen would win. The netmen scrimmage against Amherst today and the coach commented, "If we do a good job against Amherst today (Monday) we should be able to take UConn."

To achieve this shutout, UMass completely overpowered the Eagles in all six singles matches and in each of the three doubles contests.

In singles competition, the Redmen sextet of Mike Katz, Alan Goldberg, Steve Gervickas, Jon Bloom, Jim Bornhein and Gus Penon upended its opponents in two sets with little difficulty.

Katz copped 6-4 and 6-3. Goldberg glided 6-3 and 6-2. Gervickas glowed 6-4 and 6-2. Bloom bloomed 6-1 and 6-2. Bornheim blazed 6-2 and 6-3. And Penon popped 7-5 and 9-7.

When it came to doubles, Goldberg and Bloom got together to cop the duo of Palich and Acker in the first set, 6-2, and the duo of Palich and Ryan in the second set, 8-6. Katz and Gervickas teamed up to top the Ryan-Foniri combo, 7-5, in the initial set and to top the Foniri-Schiller combo, 6-0, in the clinching set.

To finish off the whitewashing of the Eagles, Bornheim and Penon out - racketed the Schiller-Pare tandem, 6-0, in set number one and out-racketed the Acker-Pare tandem, 7-5, in set number two.

Coach Kosakowski had no further comment regarding this match because of the rediculous one - sidedness of the score. He was more interested in today's match against UConn.

Smith Lifts Sox, 4-3

BOSTON (AP) - Reggie Smith completed a perfect day at bat by leading off the eighth inning with a home run, lifting the Boston Red Sox to a 4-3 victory over the Oakland A's Monday.

Smith, who tripled and scored on a wild pitch for the first Boston run in the opening inning, connected on a 2-1 pitch by Oakland's Jim Hunter and sent a drive over the Boston bullpen into the bleachers in right center for his third homer.

The homer boosted veteran relief specialist Vincento Romo to the victory in his first start of the season. Romo had not surrendered a run in four relief appearances.

Smith's homer stole some of the thunder from the Oakland sluggers. Frank Fernadez, Don Mincher and Rick Monday each hit solo homers off Romo.

The Red Sox picked up a run in the first inning on Smith's triple and the wild pitch. Boston made it 2-0 in the third on a walk and singles by Smith and Carl Yastrzemski.

Fernandez hit his first homer into the left field screen in the fourth. Mincher hoisted a shot just inside the right field foul pole in the sixth for his sixth homer.

The Red Sox broke a 2-2 tie on consecutive doubles by Rico Petrocelli and George Scott in the seventh, but Oakland bounced back for another tie on Monday's long smash high off the wall to the right of the 379 foot mark.

Romo, who had pitched only 7-2/3 innings previously this season tied and was relived by Sparky Lyle after Mincher led off the ninth with a single. Romo struck out five and walked just one while allowing nine hits.

Golfers Lose to URI But Defeat BC, HC

Last Thursday, the UMass Golf Team beat both Boston College and Holy Cross in a triangular match at the Charles River Country Club, Boston College's home course. They topped Boston College 4 to 3 and Holy Cross 5 to 2. The last three men in the UMass lineup were the determining factors in the match as Rick Aherne, Dick Barber, and Dick King all won their matches against Boston College to keep the unblemished Redmen record intact. Barber's two over par 74 was the best of the match. Included in his round were five birdies.

The next day, the Redmen travelled to Rhode Island where they were finally defeated 4-1/2 to 2-1/2 in a dual meet with Rhode Island. The loss snapped an eight match UMass win streak that extended to the final match of last year's season. Heavy rain and wind, with added fog, made playing conditions abomidable. Medalist for UMass was Dick King with a 74, which was miraculous under the poor conditions.

Tuesday, the Redmen will host UConn and AIC at the Orchards Golf Course at Mount Holyoke.

Redmen Put Yan Con Hopes On Line Against UConn

Anderson Slated to Start Today

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

UMass' Yankee Conference title hopes are on the line this afternoon as UConn, undefeated in Conference at 4-0, invades Varsity Field for a crucial 3 p.m. tilt.

The Redmen, who are presently 3-2 in Conference cannot afford another loss if they are to successfully defend their title and battle for the District I spot in the College World Series at Omaha. UMass, shut out in the northern opener by the Huskies, 2-0, must start its comeback with a win today since a third Conference loss would probably remove the Redmen from title contention.

Such a win would enhance their chances considerably, giving them only one more loss than UConn with four league games remaining; two this week end at Maine and single contests with UNH and URI.

The hope is that if the Redmen can win the rest of their Conference games then some one may knock off the Huskies at least once, thus insuring at least a tie for Conference honors.

Such a possibility is not unlikely as UConn has games remaining with UNH, URI and Maine, a team which could well prove to be a definite factor in the race before the dust settles.

UMass Coach Dick Bergquist will go with ace pitcher Don Anderson as his starter. Anderson has pitched magnificent ball as of late and is the holder of a dazzling 1.91 ERA. He'll be after his third victory against one loss.

Harry Trohalis will be at short for the Huskies, probably batting in the lead off spot. Only a sophomore, he's a solid hitter. Jeff Filmer, who batted .255 last year will probably go in center, batting second.

Soph Keith Kraham will bat third at third base while second baseman Tom Stanulis will bat cleanup. He's good. John Slosar, who belted a home run Sunday to defeat Vermont will bat fifth. Ron Romaniello, an outstanding college catcher will go sixth. Chucks Perrotti, will go in left batting seventh while Howie Gura will probably go in right.

Pete Carlin, dean of the UConn pitching staff will probably be the Husky mound man today. He's stingy at giving up the runs.

This shapes up as a solid battle although UMass has much more to lose with a loss than the Huskies. However, with Anderson on the mound for the Redmen, victory is definitely not out of the picture. It can't be, for if UMass is to do anything this spring, it must start today.

HOT BAT – Redman sophomore outfielder Brian Martin presently leads UMass in hitting as he boasts a strong .426 average. He also leads the squad with 12 RBI's. In addition he has pitched seven innings without giving up an earned run.

Trackmen Set Records at Penn Relays, Face UConn Today

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

Four UMass trackmen took advantage of excellent competition at the Penn Relays on Saturday and set new school records in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles and the sprint medley relay, and the Redman tracksters travel to UConn today to continue their track rivalry in a meet beginning at 3 p.m. These are the stories for this edition on spring track.

Jerry Spellman continued his outstanding outdoor hurdling by rewriting the record book for the 440 yard intermediate hurdles with a time of 53.2 second, eclipsing the old mark by a half a second.

He then came back to run the lead off leg for the sprint medley team that also consisted of Jim Graves, Al Mangan, and Dave Evans, and the four continued efforts to set another school record of 3:30.9 for this event which consisted of a 440 yard leg, two-220 yard legs and a half mile anchor leg.

Now the focus of the team is set on this afternoon's dual meet with the Huskies of UConn. These two teams have been one-two in Yankee Conference track for the longest time and each year, whether it's indoors or outdoors, both teams are out to show who really is number one.

UConn is coming off of four impressive dual meet victories and the Redmen will have to be at their best to contest for top position when the final score is in. The huskies were victorious indoors and the Redmen have a score to settle, so everything is pointing to an outstanding meet this afternoon at Storrs.

UMass has been victimized by the loss of its top three sprinters for this meet. This means no points in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, which otherwise would have been all UMass.

The 440 yard relay team will also suffer from the loss of these performers as it will be a makeshift team of Spellman, Graves, Mangan, and Evans. These were the guys who set the record on Saturday, so UConn better take them serious or they'll be looking at Evans back at the finish.

The weight events will be hotly contested today. These events will be the first on the program and will renew the rivalry between Eddie Arcaro of UMass and Art Polawoda and Craig Conners of UConn. These three were the top weight men in the YC during the indoor season and will probably continue their ratings through the spring season.

The jumping events will be very important in this meet. With Cal Carpenter and Eddie Shaughnessey, UMass should take one-two in the high jump. UConn will even this off with a one-two finish in the pole vault. This means the triple and long jumps will decide the jumping events as both events will have good competition between Dave Canterbury, Rocco Pettito, Graves, and Shaughnessey of the Redmen, and Miller and Machowicz of the Huskies.

Dana Robertson faces his toughest competition to date in the javelin with Bob Smith and Ralph Tiner. Robertson finished sixth at the B.C. Relays and is improving with each meet. Today should be no different.

Spellman and Graves, the finest pair of hurdlers in New England, meet old rival Peter Lacallade in the 120 yard highs and 440 yard intermediate hurdles. Coming off his record performance, Spellman will be in excellent shape for this meet and could once again set a record, this time bettering his own mark. Coach O'Brien looks for Graves to run his best time of the season today.

Every time UMass and UConn get together in a track meet, the best battles always seem to be between the middle and long distance runners. Today this should hold true to form.

Larry Paulson and Bill Donaldson go up against the UConn duo of Craig McColl and Rich Cody in the mile. All four competed against each other indoors which makes this race a natural.

A knee injury has forced Ron Wayne to only run the two mile today. Because of the injury he has not been able to train properly for the mile, so he'll be teaming up with sophomore Bruce Blackburn to tangle with John Vitale and Rich Spurling.

For a change of pace, Evans, who normally runs the half mile, will come down a quarter of a mile to run the 440 against the Huskies' Peter Hillman and Mike Share.

With Evans running the 440, this puts the half mile run on the shoulders of sophomores Mangan and Arnie Morse. These two will have to be at their best because their opponent is Steve Flanagan, the defending YC 880 outdoor champ.

Stickers Host Trinity Today Go for Second Straight Win

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Back on the winning trail after beating Wesleyan on Saturday, the UMass lacrosse team returns home today to meet Trinity College in a 3 p.m. encounter. The Redmen enter the contest with a 3-1 record while Trinity is 2-2.

The Bantams opened the season with a 7-6 loss to Bowdoin and then beat a good Nichols club, 16-8, and followed with a win over Holy Cross. However, injuries to some key players diminished the attack and this was evident in an 11-2 loss to Amherst last week.

Co-captain Frank Stowell leads the attack for Trinity. He scored four goals in the team's opening loss to Bowdoin, but has been hampered by injuries since. Veterans John Stevenson and Scott Phillips return to help the offense along with John Nelson, leading scorer for the Trinity frosh last year.

The main strength of the Bantams is the midfield. Senior Peter Wiles, an all New England selection last year and co-captain with Stowell, is probably the best player on the team. He is joined by Spike Birmingham, Sheldon Crosby, Charlie Tuttle and Harper Follensbee, all veterans. Junior Bill Prevost is the only experienced defenseman and coach Chet McPhee has been alternating Bill Fisher and Randall Terho in the net.

Trinity has a small squad and may be undermanned against the Redmen. Coach Dick Garber feels his team should be scoring more goals and may have some lineup changes if the Redmen have trouble getting on the scoreboard. Tom Malone, Bob Waters and Paul Ritch will start at attack and the defense will be the same having Bruce Crawford in the net and Al Ruggiano, Joe Smith, and Bill DeVore protecting him.

The first midfield will have Lou Marinacci, John Gannon and Bob Florin. Behind these three are Dana Stone, Tim Bosworth and Bob LaChance. Larry Diamond and Phil Sheridan will probably see considerable action also.

Referendum Committee Seeks Support

In order to seek support for participation in the May Referendum, April 10 - 11 Committee members met Tuesday, April 28, with the Chancellor's Advisory Council, which includes the deans of all schools, administrators, and representatives of student constituencies. After an hour and a half of considering the initial referendum questions (published yesterday in the COLLEGIAN), the Council recommended changes which will appear on the IBM card ballots which each voter will receive. These changes will also appear in the daily news stories discussing referendum items.

The following open letter to the community summarizes the Committee's position on the referendum:

"In response to a charge by the Chancellor, the Faculty and Student Senates and following a detailed discussion on April 10 - 11, six major concerns on this campus have been clearly defined by the University at large. The University is at a crossroads in its present development. Significant changes must be studied and undertaken now. To direct the new administration, the sentiment of the entire campus - students, faculty, professional staff, and non-professional staff - will be measured in the campus's first referendum on matters of major policy. The issues on the ballot include:

(1) reform or elimination of the present grading system.
(2) University relations with the war effort and war research.
(3) reorganization of the University calendar and the academic year.
(4) student evaluation of faculty and courses.
(5) retention of University-wide core requirements.
(6) semi-autonomous undergraduate living and learning centers (or colleges).

All graduate and undergraduate students except seniors, will receive IBM card ballots in their pre-registration packets on May 6, Counseling Day. When students return their packets to Whitmore, ballots will be collected by the April 10-11 Committee members. Seniors will receive their ballots in the mail and can return them to Whitmore, the Student Union Lobby or Coolidge Lobby Student Office. Faculty and Staff will receive ballots in their May 8th paychecks. Faculty should return ballots to departmental secretaries, and staff members should give their ballots to their supervisors. Balloting will be completed by 5:00 p.m. on Tuesday, May 12.

We urge you to study the referendum issues carefully and thoughtfully so that you can vote according to yoor best insights in these crucial matters."

April 10-11 Steering Committee

The following comments are part of a series of stories presenting the precise questions which will appear on the May Referendum ballot and explaining both sides of the issues behind each question. Anyone interested in supporting a particular side of an issue is invited to write a letter to the editor to stimulate discussion.

GRADES

DO YOU FAVOR THE PRESENT GRADING SYSTEM OF ABCDF?

YES:
1. it has survived and seems reasonably successful
2. it is most universal of all systems and allows transfer of credits from one place to another most easily
3. it allows mathematical computations for cumulative averages, class placement, dean's list, honorary qualifications
4. it is easy to record and store.

NO:
1. it promotes false competition and thus hinders true learning
2. it can make the teacher too powerful and might motivate through intimidation
3. this system is not refined enough; the distinctions allowed are usually so broad as to be meaningless
4. it tends to categorize and depersonalize education

DO YOU FAVOR A SYSTEM IN WHICH FOR EACH COURSE THE STUDENT HAS THE CHOICE OF BEING GRADED (a) (ABCD?NO RECORD) OR (b) (PASS/NO RECORD WITH PORTFOLIO) (THAT IS, A COLLECTION OF FACULTY EVALUATIONS AND STUDENT PAPERS AND REPORTS FILED AT THE DISCRETION OF THE STUDENT)?

YES:
1. option provides grades if student wants them but does not force grades on students who do not wish to work for them
2. provides the sort of evaluative material which the student feels is most valuable and comfortable for him

NO:
1. open option would be difficult to administer and finance; students might not build the best portfolios for themselves
2. some courses may not provide materials that could be as easily judged both ways and some teachers may not be able to judge as well one way as another

DO YOU FAVOR A SYSTEM IN WHICH FOR EACH COURSE THE STUDENT HAS THE CHOICE OF BEING GRADED (ABCD/NO RECORD) OR (PASS/NO RECORD WITH PORTFOLIO) AND WITH THE (ABCD/NO RECORD) OPTION PHASED OUT BEGINNING WITH THE FRESHMAN CLASS OF 1971?

YES:
1. this slow transition to a new grading structure would allow the system to be fully worked out before it is employed
2. those students who maintain portfolios beginning in 1971 would always be evaluated in a single way (through portfolio) and would be able to choose courses and perform accordingly

NO:
1. students are accustomed to the process of grades and may be able to measure their own accomplishments better that way
2. students who come here beginning in 1971 ought to have options and not have the evaluation process of their work decided for them in advance even if it does appear beneficial to some of them

Student Senate to Organize Bus Service to Look Park

The Student Senate Services Committee will operate a special shuttle service between Haigis Mall and Look Park this Saturday, May 2 and next Saturday, May 9. Buses will leave Haigis Mall approximately every half hour on the half hour between the hours of 10 a.m. and noon.

Between the hours of noon and 5 p.m. they will leave Haigis Mall on the hour. Between the hours of 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. they will leave Look Park every half hour on the half hour.

These will be the two student senate buses and will be free to all riding them. The bus will be non-stop between Look Park and Haigis Mall with no side trips.

2000 Attend New Haven Defense Rally

Doug Miranda spoke at length about educating America. He sees his involvement as an effort to get people to "humanize themselves." (MDC photo by Steve Shmidt)

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

The air inside of the Cage was surprisingly cool last night, especially in contrast to the long, hot afternoon which drew most UMass students to the plush lawns around the campus pond and elsewhere; tossing "frisbees", drinking beer, smoking or just lying in the sun.

Approximately 2000 students gathered in the Cage, however, to listen and respond to the voices of Doug Miranda and Tom Dostou. Both involved in the New Haven Defense; Miranda a black panther, Dostou a captain in the New Haven Defense Committee.

The rhetoric was hard and impressive; calling for "peaceful" demonstration and "heavy education" in New Haven this weekend. The atmosphere of the UMass Cage changed considerably during the speeches. The two leaders of radical action hit deeply into the dignity of the students present.

Much of what was said was received skeptically, but as Dostou impressed upon the people of UMass "there will be more and more of this kind of talk."

Tom Dostou shouted to the audience assembled in the cage last night, "The people are either going to be for Nixon or for me." (MDC photo by Steve Scmidt).

Doug Miranda

New Haven: Education Process

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

"Right On!" said Doug Miranda, Black Panther and eloquent voice for what he claims to be a "world wide revolution . . . to which America is a latecomer."

Miranda came to UMass last night to tell everyone to "come on down to New Haven.

"We don't want violence. We could dismantle that place (Yale) if we wanted to. We want to educate people . . . a very heavy educational process," commented Miranda about the purpose of going to New Haven this weekend.

Miranda called the movement he was involved in an effort to get people to "humanize themselves."

"If we are going to talk about the human problems, we have to move politically . . . political struggle is a human struggle," emphasized Miranda. He further told of success in the political movement, "when a place like Yale is supporting you, you know that you have made some political progress."

Miranda spoke at some length about "education" in America. "They program you . . .to just sit there and lap it up," mused Miranda who claimed to have quit his "education" to "work for his people."

He went on to express his impressions of UMass. "If I didn't know better when I came here, I'd swear this was an institution for the mentally retarded. . . fucking around with frisbees and shit like acid and dope."

Miranda told the audience that even while more blacks are going to college . . ."they are still killing the people back in the community." He warned that as long as the black communities don't have peace "nobody is going to have peace."

Miranda claimed that the Black Panther National organization was 'probably the most disciplined in the country.' "We are going to kill anything that is messing on black people." He went on to "educate" the white in the audience to the growing fanaticism of groups like the Weatherman. "The Weatherman is going crazy!", said Miranda, "they want to destroy every white man in the country, and they are white."

The audience responded well to the impassioned and earnest challenges thrown out by Miranda. At least 100 students raised their hands to signify that they would be in New Haven this weekend. All told, many more students at UMass seem to be undergoing the "heavy educational process." One wonders, however, where this new found enlightenment will lead the people; to the streets or to the future.

Tom Doustou

"Peaceful Demonstration"

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

"Power to the revolutionary students . . . no power to the pigs."

Tom Dostou, captain of the New Haven Defense Committee, came to UMass ("Giant skyscrapers and all around a lot of poor farm houses,") and confronted the sometimes nervously receptive audience with frightening perspectives on the world, where he sees "everything as a lie."

Dostou immediately lashed out at the "news media" ("they are used to saying a lot of lies"), the "avaricious freaked out college administrators", the "freaked out pigs of New Haven," Nixon ("a pig"), and "anyone who supports them."

"The people are either going to be for Nixon or for me!" shouted Dostou speaking about the impending "Dictatorship of the proletariat" which he claimed will be "a lot of poor people ripping off the rich."

Dostou urged people to be in New Haven this weekend. He stated that the "pigs" are "getting ready to kill people in New Haven." The demonstration, he emphasized is to be a peaceful one, but he warned of preparation on the part of the authorities for violent action.

Dostou hit upon many of society's ills, laced between calls for people to "get themselves together". He characterized universities like UMass as "Castles in the middle of poverty." The drive for every man in America is to aspire to become rich. He called those trying to be "like the Kennedy's and Rockefeller's" people "freaking out on nothing."

"You are not rich," bellowed Dostou "and that makes all the difference in the world in America."

Dostou warned that "the majority who are poor, are going to say 'ste p aside Nixon' and let the seat go to Eldridge Cleaver."

The UMass students cheered at different times. It seems like most listen to a man "of the streets" as Dostou called himself and walk away more confused than ever about this world full of, once again in Dostou's own words, "mother fuckin' crazy people."

Northeast Dorm Opening Delayed Due to Strike

At a meeting yesterday of representatives of the Building Authority, the General Contractor and the Dean of Students' office, it was concluded that the new Northeast dorms will not be open in September as originally planned, says Bruce Cochrane, Assistant to the Dean of Students.

Primarily labor strikes have caused the delay. It is expected that the dorms wll be open for Second Semester. Students who have made plans to live in Northeast are urged to find room in their present dorms or in other dorms.

It is not now known how it will be determined who will receive rooms in Northeast if the dorms are opened second semester.

There reports have caused speculation as to the number of students who may have to be placed in triples due to the ensuing housing shortage. This year the University is accepting 1500 more students than last year.

Lewis Coed Dorm

In an attempt to better the communication and education of students, administrators and Board of Trustee members on all issues of co-ed proposals, there will be an open meeting for representatives of all dorms considering deviating from the Greenough Plan tonight at 9 p.m. in Lewis Lounge.

Various members of the administration and Board of Trustees will be invited to attend.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A women's rights group has filed federal charges of sex discrimination against 19 New England colleges and universities which share in millions of dollars worth of government contracts, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Dr. Bernice Sandler of the WOMEN'S Equity Action League announced the complaints were filed with the Department of Labor under terms of executive orders forbidding government contractors to discriminate by sex.

Dr. Sandle said complaints have been brought against 43 colleges in all nationwide in the effort to gain compliance review of such matters as admissions to educational programs.

She added that she wants the government "to look at financial aid for women, placement s of graduates, hiring and promotion practices for staff and faculty, and salary differentials."

Supreme Court Nominee

American Bar Association Supports Judge Blackmun

WASHINGTON (AP) - Judge Harry A. Blackmun received the enthusiastic support of the American Bar Association Tuesday as the Senate Judiciary Committee prepared to open hearings on his nomination to the Supreme Court.

Following an investigation billed in advance as extensive, the ABA's standing committee on the federal judiciary reported in a letter to Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., that Blackmun "meets high standards of professional competence, temperament and integrity."

Where two prior nominees failed, the 61-year-old federal appeals court judge apparently faces a trouble-free horizon. Committee approval and Senate confirmation may be as swift as that accorded Blackmun's boyhood chum from Minnesota, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

Chairman Eastland has only one witness scheduled for the hearing, Blackmun himself.

Last June 3 Burger testified and was approved unanimouly by Eastland's committee all in one day. The Senate completed confirmation 74 to 3, on June 9 and Burger was sworn in as chief justice June 23.

The fate of President Nixon's next two nominees for the court was entirely different. Judges Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. and G. Harrold Carswell labored through prolonged hearings and then were rejected by the Senate.

The ABA's report on Blackmun, in a letter signed by Lawrence E. Walsh of New York, said scores of judges, lawyers, law school deans and students had been interviewed with only two sour replies.

Walsh, a former federal judge who is chairman of the ABA committee, reported also that some of the people interviewed on Blackmun's lack of a national reputation.

But, Walsh added, "Lack of national reputation is not unusual for highly competent federal judges whose work is primarily in their own circuit."

The committee found no violation of federal law or bar canons in Blackmun's participation in two cases involving companies in which he held stock interests and his moonlighting as the executor of two estates.

Walsh said Blackmun's stock holdings were too small to present a problem and that the wills had been drawn before he became a judge.

Haynsworth, Nixon's initial choice for associate justice, was tripped partly because he rules in cases involving firms in which he held stock and because labor and civil rights groups disapproved of his decisions.

He had been judged "highly acceptable from the point of view of professional qualifications," by Walsh's committee.

Carswell lost amid assertions that he was anti-civil rights and a mediocre jurist. He had been declared "qualified" by the ABA committee.

Anti-Pollution Efforts Continue Past Earth Day

Earth Day was not merely a one-day love affair with the environment for many Americans. It's spirit is being kept alive through anti-litter campaigns and prosecution against polluters.

Post-Earth Day efforts to bring man into balance with nature are widespread, particularly among youths, a sampling shows.

Some communities plan additional Earth Day style compaigns.

One state, Indiana, announced a statewide cleanup campaign "Cleansweep." More than 900 dignitaries are expected May 9 at the opening ceremonies in Indianapolis. Each of Indiana's 92 counties has been invited to send at least one piece of cleanup equipment.

Mayor Stephen May of Rochester, N.Y., says his city will set up a corps of young volunteers to help dispose of abandoned cars, to paint and repair deteriorating buildings and do other rehabilitative work.

Some 2,000 high school students in Spokane, Wash., signed pledges this week saying they would no longer pollute the city. The petition, presented to the City Council, says: "I pledge to make an effort not to pollute my environment by littering or any other means. I shall make it my responsibility to help clean up pollutants which already exist."

Legislators and public officials also are responding to the Earth Day demonstrations.

In Chicago, the City Council Committee on Environmental Control continues to hold hearings on amendments to the city's air pollution code, calling for tighter restrictions on sulfur content of fuel burned in the city.

The Army Corps of Engineers announced a crackdown on Mississippi River oil pollution from Cairo, Ill., to southern Arkansas.

A joint session of the Massachusetts Legislature gave initial approval to a proposed constitutional amendment guaranteeing a clean environment as a right for all citizens.

Fred Kent, coordinator for the Environmental Action Coalition, which spearheaded New York's Earth Day efforts, said he believes Mayor John Lindsay soon will announce more street closings. During Earth Day the mayor closed a section of Fifth Avenue and all of 14th Street to motor vehicles.

Tempo Speedup Indicated For Berlin Status Talks

BERLIN (AP) - Ambassadors of the Big Four wound up their second meeting on the status of divided Berlin Tuesday and agreed to meet again May 14, indicating a speedup in the tempo of the talks.

There was no sign, however, of a quick accord on reducing tensions over the city. The discussions were as "an exchange of views", which have not yet reached the negotiating level.

Like the opening session March 26, the second round involving the four victors of World War II was conducted in secret. The communique said only that it was an exchange of ideas and gave the new meeting date.

The U. S., French, and British ambassadors to West Germany and the Soviet envoy to East Germany met for two hours and 10 minutes at the old Allied Control Council building in West Berlin.

Some observers felt agreement to schedule the next meeting so soon indicated a willingness by the four powers to attempt steady progress on solving the manifold problems of a divided Berlin that have produced East-West tension for more than two decades.

There was no departure from the tight-lipped refusal of all officials to reveal any details of the meetings that, by agreement, are confidential.

Officials did announce that French Ambassador Francois Seydoux, who chaired the session, was host at a luncheon for ambassadors Kenneth Rush of the United States, Sir Roger Jackling of Britain and Pytor Abrassimov of the Soviet Union.

At the opening meeting officials even refused to confirm that Rush gave a lunch for the other three.

Sources said before the meetings that the three Western allies wanted to get the talks scheduled every two weeks and to arrange staff consultations between meetings. The new meeting date indicated agreement on the first point, but nothing was said about any meeting of staffs.

Ohio Attempts To Save Erie From Pollution

WASHINGTON (AP) - The state of Ohio appealed to the Supreme Court Tuesday to safeguard Lake Erie from mercury contamination.

Ohio Atty. Gen. Paul W. Brown said two chemical companies, one in Michigan and the other in Canada, have been feeding poisonous mercury and mercury compounds into the lake for years.

Brown said the justices should order them to stop, clean up the lake, and pay damages for harm to the people of Ohio, fish, other wildlife and vegetation.

The targets of Brown's suit are the Dow Chemical Co. of Canada and the Wyandotte Chemicals Corp.

Dow, said Brown, has been discharging mercury into the St. Clair River since 1949 in its manufacture of caustic soda and chlorine near Sarnia.

Brown said Wyandotte Chemicals has been making similar discharges into the Detroit River for several years. The waters of the two rivers feed into the lake.

Also named in the suit is the Dow Chemical Co., which owns all outstanding shares of captial stock of Dow of Canada.

Brown said the situation is urgent and that Ohio has no speedy legal remedy other than to ask the Supreme Court for a permanent injunction against the alleged contamination.

In sufficient quantity mercury is a lethal poison for which there is no known antidote. Canada has banned all fishing from its side of the St. Clair River and the Detroit River and in St. Clair.

Canadian Study

Theraputic Use of LSD Won't Harm Chromosomes

BOSTON (AP) - A five-member research team of Canadians says it has completed a study showing that there appears to be no evidence that the drug LSD, given therapeutically, produces chromosomal damage.

The group's study was reported in a recent edition of The New England Journal of Medicine.

Three different groups of subjects were used in the experiments. Two of the groups had no prior use of LSD. The third group contained persons who had been treated with the drug over a number of years.

"There was no significant change in the frequency of single-break aberrations, total breaks or gaps," the report said. It added:

". . . we found no indication of an increased frequency of chromosomal breakage in subjects who had ingested LSD. Neither the direct comparison of samples obtained immediately before and again 24 hours after treatment nor the study of persons exposed to varying doses over a given time indicated any increased frequency in chromosome breaks."

"There is further evidence that differences in the experimental groups influenced the results. To date all indications that LSD ingestion is associated with significant increase in the frequency of chromosomal breakage are based on the study of subjects who have ingested "LSD" under nonclinical conditions. On the other hand, studies on patients treated with LSD under clinical conditions have not indicated similar increases."

Amherst Development Walk Aids Self-Help Project

The Amherst Walk for Development will be this Sunday. Proceeds from the walk go into foreign and domestic self help projects. Participants can pick up cards at the table in the Union. Organizers hope for 500-1500 participants.

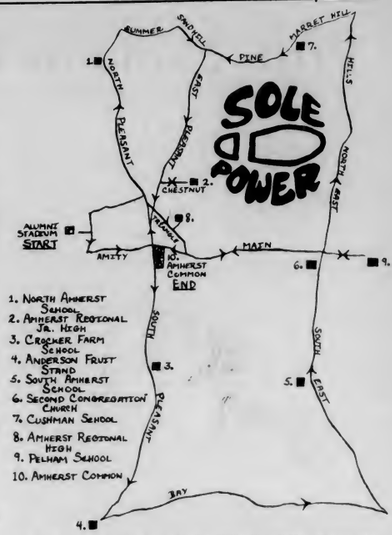
Walkers will go to businesses or private individuals to obtain sponsors who pledge to donate specific amounts of money for each mile walked. Participants also must sign a waiver card relieving the organizers from the responsibility of injuries obtained by walking.

The Walk For Development is part of a nation wide group called Young World Development. This is the youth arm of the American Freedom From Hunger Foundation. Seventy other walks similar to this one have taken place throughout the country. More than 200,000 people have taken part in collecting over $1.5 million. This is the only walk scheduled for the Western Massachusetts area.

The foundation stipulates that 42.5% of the money goes towards a domestic program, 42.5% to a foreign program, and 15% towards walk promotions.

The leaders of the Amherst walk have decided to donate the domestic proportion to ABC (A Better Chance). This program helps students who have the potential for college but not the socio-economic means.

More information is available from Moe Rodenstein, 546-5133.



This is the route to be followed by those participating in the Amherst Walk for Development this Sunday.

Universal Life Church To Hold Mass Baptism

The Universal Life Church will hold a mass baptism in the Campus Pond on Wednesday as part of Water Afternoon. The merry reverends will also sponsor various boating events.

The Great Homemade Boat Race will start with several grand explosions at 1:00 p.m., rain or shine at parking lot 3 and finish at the dam. Entry is open to everyone who will make a homemade boat or raft. Handicaps for sleek-looking crafts; the Church flag will fly on the losing ship. Anyone have a canoe? Please bring your canoe so we can have a water joust. The Church will provide padded lances. All sailors are invited to helm free boats as pirates or "in the name of the queen."

We will launch a Universal Life Toy Boat Armada which ever way the wind is blowing. People are encouraged to make boats although the church will have some boats for everyone to play with. No prize will be given for the most unusual boat.

The Koolade Stand, located at the willow tree, will set you back 2¢ a glass, freewill offerings also accepted.

Those wishing the baptismal rites come in bizarre wading garments (and tennis shoes to avoid the risk of broken glass). Bring towels and warming-up clothes. The Floating Balloon Peace Symbol Alter will be donated by Ministry of Religious Paraphernalia.

Coolidge Upper To Develop Dorm Program

For the first time in this University, a WOMEN'S dormitory will develop a total student community. The residents of Calvin Coolidge Upper House have formulated a concept for a dormitory which will enable them to "develop a sense of unity, responsibility and awareness."

The students will undertake all the duties previously held by house parents. "This entails placing more responsibility on each individual in an attempt to form an active community."

The benefits of this program will include group interaction of ideas and personalities, individual freedom and creativity, expressed through academic, aesthetic and social channels.

They are looking for enthusiastic, interested students to take part in the experience. We are also looking for a graduate student (s) or faculty fellow (s) to accupy our apartment in the capacity of an advisor.

All interested can call either: Ann Lebreck - 546-8159, Kim Macaione - 546-8157 or Kathy Malfa - 546-8166.

Northeast Drop-In Center Sponsors Drug Program

"Drugs and Altered States of Consciousness" is the theme of a program sponsored by the Northeast Area Drop-in Information and Counseling Center. The program will be held in the Hamlin basement, in the quad, location of the Drop-In Center, on Monday, May 4, at 8 p.m.

Featured in the program will be Ron and Sue LaFrance, students working in the South College Drop-In Center, and the Open Door Staff. Guest Speaker will be Dr. Joseph Havens of the Student Health Services. All interested students and staff are invited to attend this educational program.

Seniors

Each year the University News Bureau sends the pictures and names of all seniors who will graduate to their hometown newspapers. The pictures are attached to the news cards filled out at the beginning of first semester. If you expect to graduate in June and have not filled out a news card, please fill one out in the News Bureau, Room 345, Whitmore Hall.

This year newspapers will receive the names and pictures of all seniors as prospective graduates. If you know you will not graduate this May, and would not like your name and picture sent, please call 545-0444 by April 30 and we will remove your name from the list.

Psych

The Council of Undergraduate Students in Psychology - CUSP - would like to invite all students who are enrolled in psychology courses to a meeting to be held Thursday, April 30, at 8:00 p.m. in the New Hatch. We will be discussing the Psych 101 requirement, in which psych majors and non-majors have been required to participate in experiments for graduate students and faculty. Such use of students has been called "involuntary servitude" and has been described as educationally valueless to the guinea pigs! If you would like to express your opinion on this issue or suggest modifications or alternatives to the present system, please attend our meeting.

Air Pollution Expert Speaks Here Tomorrow

Hans A. Panofsky, nationally-known air pollution meteorology authority, will speak at UMass tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Room 132, Marston Hall (Engineering).

His talk on "Air Pollution Meteorology" is open to the public without charge and is sponsored by the School of Engineering. Air pollution meteorology deals with the weather conditions that affect air pollution--such atmospheric conditions as those that produce Southern California's smog and have caused air pollution disasters in Donora, Pa., and other industrial areas.

Dr. Panofsky is Evan Pugh Research Professor of Atmospheric Sciences at Pennsylvania State University, where he has been a faculty member since 1951. He has also been on the faculties of Wilson College and New York University.

He was graduated from Princeton University in 1938 and holds a Ph. D. degree from the University of California at Berkeley.

Would you like to help draft counsel freshmen during summer orientation or next fall? Maybe you would be capable of organizing an area residential drop-in center for counseling. Or perhaps you think that you might have some suggestions for organizing a course about Selective Service next fall.

Meeting at Moore House Apartment, Thursday at 4:00 for proposals and organizing.

Prof. Explains New Physics Structure

(Ed. Note: The following is an explanation of the new courses proposed for the Physics and Astronomy Department by prof. A. R. Quinton.)

The past twenty five years have witnessed a dramatic growth in physics in the United States. With some important exceptions such as defense, space and nuclear power, the principal trust of this growth has been in the direction of fundamental research.

For reasons that have not always been clear the financial support for this basic work has come from the federal agencies such as the Atomic Energy Commission, the National Aeronautics and Space Agency and the Department of Defense. This support was in the form of the building of national laboratories and supporting by grants the research of workers and teams of workers at the universities.

The universities responded by developing and enlarging their Ph. D. programs to produce more and more physicists able to go out and staff the national laboratories or develop research programs of their own at the growing universities.

The result of all this is that we have, among other things, a superb network of university departments of physics where the traditions of pure research and scholarship are by now rather firmly established. The enthusiasm for this task caused the instructors at the universities to develop even their undergraduate courses and programs with an eye to graduate school work and the eventual Ph.D.

It seems right and proper for this kind of work to go on. There are students well-motivated in this direction and we should surely provide them with the most rigorous training that they can absorb. The UMass Department of Physics and Astronomy has no intention of watering down its program for the would-be Ph.D.

It was obvious that the 10% growth rate of the 1960's in physics could not be sustained indefinitely if for no other reason that perhaps, ere long, the entire resources of the United States would be devoted to physics research! Now in the 1970's the time for a readjustment is upon us and we must reshape our departmental offerings to reflect the conditions and problems existing in the real world of our society.

Accordingly the Department of Physics and Astronomy has been studying for nearly three years now the possibility of setting up a new undergraduate major in physics. The outcome is the so called Second Track program and its related T-curriculum. The new courses are presently awaiting final approval by the Senate. Despite the provisional nature of these courses, we feel it advisable that the student body has the opportunity to hear of them at this time in order to assist the interested persons to make at least tentative plans for next year.

Although taking the T-curriculum does not forbid the student from going to a graduate school in physics that is not the idea of the program. The "T" stands for "teaching" or "terminal" which ever is your choice. The point is that the production of trained high school physics has never been seriously entertained by working physicists, least of all at the research-minded major universities.

Not only does it seem worthwhile to tackle this problem but it is important for the student to know that positions (i.e. jobs) exist in this profession. The program under discussion is believed to be well aimed at this market and plenty of time is left for practice teaching in the State under the general guidance of the School of Education.

It is our belief as physicists and/or astronomers that a B.S. degree in physics can produce a person rather well-suited to many walks of life including teaching. There is enough flexibility in the T-curriculum to accommodate students with a great variety of aims and ambitions and I list a few here: (a) premedical students (b) environmental scientists (c) administrators of research and development installations (d) biophysicists (e) technical salesmen (f) soil scientists.

A healthy development, I believe, would be if students thinking of law school and perhaps public life prepared themselves as physics majors. It does not seem unreasonable in an age when our society is so clearly dependent upon science that physics, the fundamental science, should play a role in training a significant segment of the community to work AT science. Let me hastily add that if the student should come along just interested in the subject for itself we shall gladly accommodate him also!

The courses awaiting approval follow. To make a program they are to be incorporated into a coherent whole with existing courses in the Department of Physics and Astronomy and several other departments. There are seminars also. You are recommended to seek out any member of the department for more advice.

Classics Dept. Creates New Courses, Names Prof

The Classics program announces the appointment of Anne Amory Parry as Associate Professor of Classics. In the fall she will teach a new course in Greek Civilization and Literature, which is designed as a broad survey of the Greek experience with an emphasis on Greek character, society, public and private life, art, and literary and philosophical visions of man and the world.

She will also teach a course in Greek Drama in Translation, in which she will use a new series of translations accompanied by an extensive commentary dealing with linguistic, poetic, and dramatic aspects of the play.

Mrs. Parry received her Ph.D. from Radcliffe College and has taught at Berkeley, Yale, Connecticut College, and New York University. She is co-author of the beginning Latin reader, presently being used at UMass, and the author of several important essays on Homer and Lucretius.

She has completed a book on Homeric epithets which will be published in Europe, and is presently working on a book on modes of knowledge in the ODYSSEY and on a translation with commentary of Sophocles' ANTIGONE. Classical scholars in America and England aim at presenting not only readable renderings in a contemporary idiom but also a kind of accuracy and faithfulness to the original.

The Classics program also offers another new course this fall in Roman Civilization and Literature recommended for all students desiring some background in the Classical roots of the Western world, and especially recommended as collateral courses for students taking courses in Greek and Latin language and literature.

Students are reminded again of the two-semester sequences in ancient Greek and Latin that satisfy the Foreign Language Qualification. These courses meet five times a week and receive four credits. The first semester provides a complete survey of the language with readings in simple ancient texts; in the second semester the student will read Plato in Greek and may choose between Catullus or Medieval readings in Latin.

UMass Profs In The News

Government Dept.

Professor Gerard Braunthal of the department of government at UMass has been elected to the executive council of the Conference Group on German Politics.

The national organization was formed two years ago to bring together political and social scientists who are interested in German politics. The organization has scheduled a number of conferences in Germany and in this country to examine political developments in both East and West Germany.

Prof. Braunthal is the author of "Federation of German Industry in Politics" and articles in a number of scholarly journals.

Management

Dr. Walter G. O'Donnell, professor of management in the University of Massachusetts School of Business Administration, has been recommended for membership in the International Platform Association.

Founded by Daniel Webster in 1826, the IPA is the oldest international trade association in the United States. Members include professional "platform people" who have become noted for frequent appearances before college, forum, convention and industrial association audiences.

Dr. O'Donnell is a frequent speaker at national and international management and professional meetings. He founded the College of Management Philosophy in the Institute of Management Sciences ten years ago, and it now has over 500 members.

English Dept.

Ellsworth Barnard, professor of English at UMass is the editor of a centenary collection of essays on Edward Arlington Robinson published by the University of Georgia Press.

According to the editor's preface, Edward Arlington Robinson: Centenary Essays," was written to "illuminate for present and potential readers of Robinson's poetry certain aspects of his achievement" which still attract the attention of members of the literary world.

The volume includes an essay by Prof. Barnard, "'Of This or That Estate': Robinson's Literary Reputation." Eleven other essays deal with topics ranging from "The Young Robinson as Critic and Self-Critic" to "Robinson's Modernity."

Dr. Barnard is generally recognized as the dean of Robinson scholars. His critical study of the poet published in 1952 remains one of the most valuable books about Robinson's work. The UMass scholar has also written a biography of Wendell Wilkie and other articles and reviews in American literature.

Clothing Drive for Appalachian Needy

Boston's best:

Jaime Brockett

Over the last decade, Boston has had a rich heritage of folk talent, exemplified by Tom Rush, Jim Kweskin and Geoff Muldaur. However, since the fallaciously typed "Boston sound" of two years ago, many of the Hub's musicians have hesitated to associate themselves with their hometown. Carrying on in the tradition of Rush, Kweskin, et al., Jaime Brockett, is using his talent to reinstate Boston's musical reputation and has become a major figure in the city's folk renaissance.

The young and handsome singer-songwriter observes his rural roots by playing dulcimer and autoharp as well as guitar. But Brockett is also concerned with contemporary issues, as indicated in his originals, "Death Rides On A Black Wind" and "Talking Green Beret New Super Hydraulic Teeny Bopper Blues." His combination of old and new musical elements should give him a diverse audience of adults as well as juves.

Brockett spends a bulk of his time travelling the backroads of the east coast in a camper bus so that he can sing for rural folks in addition to city crowds. Although he has assimilated many influences, his music maintains a directness and simplicity essential for communication with the assorted listenership he seeks. An example of his cohesiveness is 'Remember The Wind And The Rain," a recently penned original that could pass for a traditional ballad.

He raps a lot. Not necessarily about anything in particular. It might be Spiro, the draft, loco week, an old friend, the ocean, rednecks, or his latest kick - right now it's Screaming Yellow Zonkers, which he threw out into the audience at the Redeemer.

A Brockett concert is an exercise in total communication. The aura and mystique of Jaime Brockett is coming to UMass on Saturday, May 2 at the Spring Week Folk Festival which is going to be held on some grass by the Campus pond. Come listen to the music and bathe in the sun.

Nancy Michaels

Nancy Michaels is a timeless but young lady in antique clothes singing present day music. Her childhood was spent in Worcester, Mass., a time of feather collections, flower hunts, watercolor paintings and her music, always her music. Nancy began to sing and play the piano almost from infancy.

She studied piano for 10 years, coupled with four years of voice lessons. Her professional performing debut came in 1962 at the Club 47 in Cambridge. Since that time, Nancy has refined and distilled her music and her lyrics, making them as personal as possible.

Nancy spends her free time rummaging through boxes of seemingly decrepit clothes in second hand stores. She mends, alters and renovates her finds, bringing out the sensuality of fabrics, their softness and their age. Her pleasure in antique clothes is reflected in her music, which is woven from the threads of her thoughts and feelings. The richness of a blue velvet dress, the delicacy of an eyelet lace shawl, the flow of a pearl beaded purse . . . all are reflected in the fabric of Nancy Michaels' music.

Music versatility:

James Taylor

The music of James Taylor presents a most frustrating problem to those who are hung up in the taxenomy of popular music. Is his music mild blues? Or, does James Taylor sing a country form of rock?

However, such categories really don't matter. It's his music that counts. With the release of "Sweet Baby James," (his second album and his first for Warner Bros.), James Taylor creates his own field of music. The songs are subtle; they wash over the listener, lulling one into the relaxation of freedom before sneaking up from behind and attacking. The result is a total involvement which, while predestined, is emancipation.

That James Taylor can produce the same emotions in concert is proof of the versatility and universality of his music. Opening his show seated on a chair playing acoustic guitar, Taylor's music moves from the gently nostalgic "Sunshine, Sunshine," to the intensely exciting "Knockin' Round the Zoo." The effect of his performance is overwhelming only in the emphathetical sense, for the audience is always a part of the show.

Considering his music to be something that simply seems to have happened, Taylor feels that "people like to talk generally about roots, but I find it difficult. I am the product of a haphazard musical environment which, I suppose, makes me a folk artist. Green rock 'n' roll. Words about my lyrics are at best redundant."

Words about James Taylor are redundant, also, since it is impossible to capture him without sound. James Taylor will be captured with sound and music, however, when he appears by the pond Sunday afternoon May 3 at 1 p.m. in concert at the UMass.

If it should rain all of the free outdoor concerts will be held in the Cage and will still remain free of charge.

Innovative folk:

Pentangle

The word unique is one that is often used out of context, however, as far as THE PENTANGLE are concerned it is a word that can honestly be applied. No other group has so successfully knocked down musical barriers and incorporated the various types - folk, blues, jazz - into their musical whole.

The two guitarists, Bert Jansch and John Renbourn, are already well established names in the folk world where their guitar styles have been particularly influential. They bring into the group elements of folk, blues and classical music and contribute much towards THE PENTANGLE'S original repertoire.

Danny Thompson, a brilliant base player, and Terry Cox, an intelligent, understanding drummer, underpin everything expertly. These two musicians, who have names as first class session and jazz men, provide as strong a rhythm section as can be found in any group, but both can take constructive solo roles in the general PENTANGLE pattern.

Jacqui McShee does much of the singing within the group, either working solo or dueting with Bert or John. Her clear voice can handle anything from an unaccompanied folk song to a modern blues. Jacqui is an excellent foil for the group's musicians and an integral part of THE PENTANGLE'S sound.

These five individuals, with five individual talents, have developed into a flexible musical unit and yet are still able to permutate into segments giving each member a chance to expand beyond a group entity. Trying to describe THE PENTANGLE'S music is like trying to describe a sunset. You can talk of the colours, but the overall effect has to be seen to be appreciated. To appreciate THE PENTANGLE, you have to listen.

Which Way for the Anti-War Movement

INTRODUCTION

The Anti-War Movement has reached a decisive point in its historical evolution. We have been marching now for five years and the results of that marching is not always clear; our ranks have been weakened by a frustration bred defeatism. Everywhere our people are looking for a short cut, which will relieve us of the hard work of building a mass movement. Suddenly everything from letter writing to bank burning is a considered tactic. Notwithstanding, the McCarthy defeat, the search for a new peace candidate begins to get frantic ("please McGovern become more glamorous!") And so does the chorus calling for the Anti-War Movement to become an anti-imperialist, revolutionary movement by the simple expedient of dropping its preoccupation with the War.

Indeed we are at a historial juncture. Our solidarity of last October-November is gone. Now that organizational work for April 15 is over, it is time we took stock of ourselves and ask which way for the Anti-War Movement? What are the alternatives? What do we do now?

The alternatives which are presented to us fall into three main categories each of which have their own sub-divisions. The broad categories can be characterized as those which ask us to take our protest into the System, those which contend we must turn the Anti-War Movement into a broad movement for general social change - Revolutionary change perhaps - , and those which seek to continue as before - mass movements in the streets focusing on a immediate withdrawal of American troops.

I. THE POSITION OF THE MOVEMENT'S RIGHTWING

The question of should we take out protest into the System can only be answered by analysing the System. If the System contains some mechanism which we can use as a handle for ending the War, then by all means let us return to the System.

The mechanisms available inside the System are the right to petition for redress of grievances and electoral politics. Petitions are of course an adjunct to any non-violent campaign for change, if only because they give an organizational focus to our work. But I doubt if anyone is so naive to believe we can change a War policy so ingrain as to be the policy of four Presidential administrations, both Democratic and Republican, by the act of petitioning and letter writing. Obviously only the dreamiest reformer can consider petitioning to be the sole course for the Anti-War Movement.

Electoral politics has a forceful appeal to Anti-War activists. Not only does it recommend itself by its complete legitimacy, but it has the militant reformer flavor of "Throw the rascals out!" Electoral politics comes in two packages, the big name candidate from one of the major parties and the third party coup variety. The history of the major party Peace candidates is sad. It begins with the fact that Lyndon Johnson was the "Peace" candidate in 1964. The legacy then fell to Eugene McCarthy who never articulated a withdrawal policy very much different than the fraud of gradualism that Richard Nixon is carrying out. Michael Harrington, the Democrat from Essex, Massachusetts, did run on a withdrawal now platform, but he has been particularly silent since being elected.

This sad but true history of major party Peace candidates should not seem so strange to those who accept the theory of imperialism. The reason we are in Vietnam is the big profits that big business makes on that cheap labor and raw materials like tin and tungsten. Add to that the dominoe theory with the dominoes being those juicy underdeveloped countries like Thailand, Singapore, and Indonesia and juicy markets like Australia and Japan. We have compelling reason why American Big business should want to see us in Southeast Asia and protect our presence there with U. S. troops. But now add to all that the theory of containment as applied to Red China, one of the world's foremost anti-capitalist powers, and we really have compelling reason for big business to want the United States in Vietnam, as a out-post of U. S. imperialism and as the front line in the encirclement of China.

American big business translates its self interest in U. S. foreign policy via the major parties. The Republicans and Democrats require millions of dollars to stay afloat and that money comes from big business. Both parties are parties of business, no matter how their image makers try to disguise that fact. The hope that one of the parties could produce a real Peace candidate who would embark on a course of immediate withdrawal is therefore utopia. (But alas, hope springs eternal in the human breast and if we are no longer mesmerized by Eugene McCarthy, there is still Lindsey and McGovern for those who prefer to be stung twice.)

Third parties like the New Politics Coalition are just as utopian concepts since the odds against beating major parties are simply immense. The best that a third party can do is influence and try to make a deal with a major party. But dealing with a major party puts us back in the hands of the party financiers, big business. Moreover, how do we make a deal on the immediate withdrawal of all U. S. troops without falling into the Vietnamization trap.

It's A Best of Five Series

With the Coast Liberals leading the Silent Conservatives two games to one, its getting close to game time for this fourth and possibly final game in the best of five Congressional Cup Series. The excitement and strategy we all saw in games two, and three should be absent in the fourth one.

If you remember back, the Conservatives knocked Liberal hurler Abe Fortas out of the box early in the first game. In fact they did such a good job off his serves, that Abe called it a career and resigned rather than face the Silent "Louisville" Sluggers again. Strangely enough, that was the only game played at the Liberals' home-Johnson field. They have been victorious however, in their two road games at Nixon stadium.

Prior to the second game the Conservative' Vice - President Spiro Agnew criticised the fans in the Liberals' ballpark and even said that they were untypical of the majority of baseball fans. With President R. Millhouse Nixon beaming approval, Manager John Mitchell sent southpaw Clement Hainsworth to the mound in the second game. Mitchell, it should be remembered took the Conservative team to the pennant, though his team saw a 16 game lead dwindle down to one, as the Liberals under manager H. Horatio Humphrey made a brilliant stretch run.

The Conservative sluggers' bat of Strom Thurmond, has been surprisingly impotent in the last two games. Thurmond must hit, and hit with power for the Conservatives to win. Hainsworth's serves were hit all over the field as he pitched his team to 4-0 defeat. Carswell, who lost in the hectic and exciting ninth inning of the game, has indicated that when fall training comes around, he will try to make it as an outfielder.

Carswell was winning 2-1 after 7, when shortstop Ted Kennedy led off the visitors' eighth with a clean single up the middle. He then stole second and scored as Goddell doubled to left. Goddell has been experiencing success since he started hitting to the opposite field this year. Last year he pulled everything to right and hit a meager .205 in Albany. However, he showed scout Nelson Rockerfeller what he could do when he went with the pitch and hit .300 in Washington this year.

Goddell was left at third and the Conservatives were retired one, two, three by flame-thrower Jacob Javits in the home eighth, as the veteran pitched a truly outstanding game. In the ninth, with both sides predicting a close victory, pinch-hitters Cook, Smith and Fullbright hit home runs as the Liberals went into the home ninth with a 5-2 lead. Needless to say, it stood up.

The fourth game has all but been conceded to right-hander Blackmun who has had a brilliant career. The Minnesota righty will face a pitcher not yet determined by the Liberals. There even has been talk of conceding the game.

The fifth game, if necessary, will see the aging Douglas throwing for the Coast team and probably opposed by Gerald Ford. Ford who has been calling Douglas bad names, doesn't have a prayer to win.

Regardless of how the Silent Conservatives make out in the Series, John Mitchell should be back for at least one more session. There is even talk of a two-year no-cut contract for the skipper. The club's President, Nixon, is satisfied with his work, though many in the press have been saying otherwise. One noted sports columnist even wrote that Mitchell was "the worst manager in the league's history." "His strategy" the columnist continued, "is as bad as can be imagined."

So the name-calling continues; the disputes run rampant; but who wins this series will have an edge when '72 comes around and the U.S. Championship is on the line (as it was in '68) again.

change of sex--Henry does not want to be hero anymore. He's shooting skag now. His close fiend Kromwell Beastwhore hints that he wants to pick up where Henry left the scene...he acquaints himself with the mood by listening to some mood music...then ha ha he goes fishing out his 3rd floor window in the suburbs. Neat as apple pie with his pubic hair trout fly....A guy with a sheet over him, walks by and the hook catches and Kromwell Beastwhore has got himself a sheet at the end of his line and an irate Kluxer knocking at his door. Beastwhore asserts himself, straightens his tie (he looks like an out of wack royal lion-haired poodle ruffian) and answers the door...but no Ku Kluxer...just a small crib on the doorstep with a tag attached, "Bundle of Joy" scrawled illegibly.

Beastwhore took the cumbersome parcel inside and out pops a cherubic acned face from under the mess of sheets and blankets. There was an SDS button affixed to the sheet and a small smoking cross in the baby's mouth...it appeared to be a pacifier but Beastwhore thought he was a swordswallower. In fact, the new hero collected all pertinent data concerning this new mutant...The Mexican Baby..."nice bab!" said K.B..."you gringo!" bawled the baby. Kromwell called up Henry to come over and have a look at this....Henry staggered in like really downed-out and checked the baby's gums, whipped out a bottle of paregoric which he poured into the milk bottle. Beastwhore wants to know what is the story. "Do you remember the day I threw myself in the Rhone?" says Henry.. "We were grape harvesting" says K.B...."You fished me out" replies Henry. Beastwhore looks puzzled--"You were a real bundle of joy weren't you, all filled to the brim with polluted water!"

Suddenly both of them think they know what is going on... "and this baby is like you were that day--helpless and polluted!" Beastwhore feels like a real genius now. .."yes that's it! flashing lights The Mexican Baby holds the key to something fab-U-lous. There is some secret locked inside him which will make this a better world to live in, but all he keeps on howling is Rowwwrrr and you gringo!"

The sky was rumblin...someone fired a shot through the window striking Henry down--his skull crushed in like a leper's asshole.. Henry was dead. Kromwell was terrified. The baby was escapist revelling in his sleep and lukewarm piddle dreams. It was the week before Christmas, traditionally a time of heightened emotion, and two residents of King's Neck (the name of this house where K.B.lived) shared the feeling that the world, or at least their private worlds, would soon end. A siege of terror seemed to be chilling all surviving heroes and kids who eat trix at an early age.

Meanwhile: at Lord Arnold's pigpen, the slopmaster General was handing out blue ribbons to the filthiest oinkers. One being Arnold's chauvinistic favorite -- Tabletalk. Tabletalk was fed the finest food and belched the best and went to schools where he learned how to think. He was also bi-animal. Every second week he became a human being for a day. Today he was not around to pick up his blue ribbon. He had gone to the gang at Lindy's knock em dead sweetie, bored his nose in the city library, raped a birdnest... took in the skin dance down Queen Murky's Penthouse and bought a gun and shot up the streets and just happened to fire through the window and kill Henry.

There inside King's Neck, the baby's piddle had seeped through the blankets and had dripped onto the floor. Already a puddle had formed which ran into the pool of Henry's blood---an off-color omen. Kromwell Beastwhore stole to the airport clutching the baby in an absurd display of bravery and flew off to Argentina where he would try to come up with an answer... in seclusion...

No Privilege of Nutrality

The eyes of the world are on New Haven. Hundreds of thousands of youth are preparing to move on New Haven to demand freedom for Bobby Seale, Chairman of the Black panther Party, Ericka Huggins, Deputy Chairman Lonnie McLucas, State Area Captain, Rory Hithe, Landon Williams, Rose Smith, George Edwards, Peggy Hudgins, and Frances Carter - all political prisoners of the State of Connecticut. The political trial of these revolutionaries is the culmination of the government conspiracy to sabotage the Black Liberation Struggle and to annihilate the Black Panther Party in particular. This trial which puts racism and repression against the rising force of the People will determine either the official reign of Fascism or the triumph of Justice and Solidarity. For these reasons we analyse New Haven as the turning point in the struggle of Blacks and all oppressed or progressive people. The situation thus reduces to an EITHER/OR crisis for every one of us.

The purpose of this statement is to intensify this crisis by massing support on university campuses across the country. The college population of America (7-1/2 million) represents a virtual army and we must move on every level to activate these numbers. (The university cannot preserve the privilege of neutrality any longer, nor can students recline in the pose of passive resistance. A conspiracy of silence is, in the end, an expression of approval for the tactics of Fascism.) Full scale information campaigns on the Panther Trial should be underway on every campus. Our immediate objectives are to get out information, raise funds, and prepare to move on New Haven to free the Panthers.

We also want to fill you in on what's happening now in New Haven. On Tuesday, April 14, David Hilliard, Chief of Staff of the Black Panther Party and Emory Douglas, Minister of Culture and Revolutionary Artist of the Party were kidnapped by police in the New Haven courtroom and sentenced to six months in jail for "contempt." With this incident, the police plot to liquidate the Black Panther Party and to thwart and divide our struggle has reached a still higher level of fascist repression.

The tactics of these "pigs" are now no more or less than armed counter-revolution.

On Wednesday, April 15, a mass meeting of 600 Yale students voted to go on strike if the Yale Corporation does not turn over $500,000 to the Panther legal Defense Fund by April 20. At present these students have declared a moratorium and organized a campus-wide political education program.

The weekend of May 1st is now the date to move on. "Mayday" will be the first major rally here, and the call is going out across the East Coast for a people to converge on New Haven. The weekend gathering will be a combination of jazz festival, mass demonstrations, and a people's court against the Yale Corporation. Big Man, Editor of the Black Panther Newspaper, Artie Seale, Jean Genet, the Conspiracy 7, and many other will speak. Bring sleeping bags and come prepared. We ask that you spread this information across your campus in an all-out publicity campaign.

We of the N.H.P.D.C. are working closely with the Black Panther Party for the political and legal defense of our revolutionary brothers and sisters. We will struggle at every level and organize in every community to build a solid force behind the Panthers, a force of people who will act. We realise that the alternatives are too clear cut for any vascillation. We are ready to use ANY MEANS NECESSARY to free Bobby and the New Haven Panthers. Unless we relate to action today, it will be too late for all of tomorrow.

Massage Dismay

To the editor:

As a concerned member of the NEW New Left - the one which has thought its way through to the understanding of the revolutionary value of the due process - I wish to comment on the so-called Referendum on the April 10 - 11 proposals, scheduled for May 7.

As far as I can see, the organizers of the referendum are a self-appointed group of people engaged in what would seem laudable, constructive pursuits. As far as I know, no referendum has been provided for by University statutes as part of the decision-making process (with the exception of the Student Senate). Therefore, within the legal framework of the University a referendum is not derived from any existing norm. Therefore, it has no value beyond that of a public opinion poll.

The content of the questions is, in principle, of no relevance. In matters like these the FORM becomes the SUBSTANCE. The method is the message. The method, in the case, is also the MASSAGE - of the public opinion here, what with all the referendum questions styled according to the tested recipe: "Are you in favor of the University stopping to beat his wife?"

Considering the alarmingly weak sensitivity to parliamentary property on our campuses, and the need for a good revolutionary education in citizenship - a case of teaching by doing - I suggest that the Steering Committee change the title of the referendum to that of a public opinion poll.

Water

To the editor:

The proposed diversion of part of the Connecticut River into Quabbin Reservoir is intended as a solution to the problem of water shortages in the Boston area. When Mayor White visited campus, I asked him, "What is the Boston area doing to solve this problem with its own resources?" Apparently the letter published in the MDC on Friday, April 24, 1970, is Mayor White's answer.

I am pleased that Mayor White thinks the proposal needs further study. Certainly no new legislation in this area should be passed without careful consideration of the consequences. Furthermore, I agree wholeheartedly with the Mayor's assertion of a "solemn obligation not to waste or dissipate our resources."

Consequently, I am disappointed that Mayor White failed to describe any measures that the Boston area may be taking to be more careful with its own resources. Is the Metropolitan District Commission considering changing its pricing policy? At present, the more water one buys, the lower the price. What efforts are being made to clean up the eastern rivers and to use these for water? Maybe, when all the benefits are included, it would be cheaper to clean up the Charles River than to clean up the Connecticut and then pump the water to Boston. Finally, is it clear that the spring runoff is "used by no one"? That water goes into Long Island Sound where it plays a necessary role in the production of sea food. It is certainly fair to ask that any loss of edible seafood be included in the costs of the diversion. What are the major uses of water in Eastern Massachusetts? Without an answer to that, how can we decide whether it's wiser to use the Connecticut River water in Boston or in the river itself for fish?

JONATHAN B. SKINNER

Like many of my peers I became dismayed at the obviously outdated picture on the cover of the new 1970-1971 undergraduate course catalog. The picture shows short haired boys, white socks and girls with long hemlined skirts and a conspicuous lack of "mod" dress walking in front of Bartlett Hall. I couldn't help but wonder why this outdated picture was chosen instead of a modern scene. So I spoke to Kenneth Walter, head of publications.

I asked him when this picture was taken and inquired about the reasons behind its selection for the cover of such a much viewed publication. He told me that it was taken about 2-1/2 to 3 years ago for a president's report and it was selected for its general feeling. He emphasized the ecological value of the picture. He wanted to show something living (trees) instead of concrete.

I then inquired about the reason this picture with its outdated students was chosen. I explained that many of my peers had this feeling that the university was trying to project an image of conservatism. He replied that his office is not "anti-hair", "anti-mod" but felt that this was the best picture for the type of ecological flavor which is hard to find on this campus NOW.

He told me he willsuggest that every year new pictures be taken to be used in university publications. My suggestion is to not only use new pictures instead of the 'green' campus pictures of old but also to use some type of student input in the selection of these pictures.

The dignity and beauty of man rests in the human spirit which makes him more than simply a physical being. This spirit must never be suppressed for exploitation by others. As the people recognize the beauty of their human spirit and move against suppression and exploitation, they will be carrying out one of the most beautiful ideas of all time. Because the human whole is much greater than the sum of its parts. The ideas will always be among the people.

Flying Redmen Are Best In Regimental Drill Meet

The UMass drill team the Flying Redmen, climaxed the 1970 competition season by taking first place in trick drill and the New England championship trick drill crown for the second year in a row at the Annual 12th Regimental Invitational Drill Meet held in Boston.

Facing teams from all over New England and the Northeast, the Redmen took first place in trick drill, winning 1839 points out of a possible 2000 points and in basic drill they placed third with 1720 out of a possible 2000 points. The Redmen also took second place overall.

Defending their New England championship trick drill title, U-Mass' biggest threat in the meet came from Northeastern University. Northeastern, out to win back New England trick drill title they lost to UMass two years ago, could only muster enough points to tie Lowell Tech for 2nd place in Trick Drill.

In the Individual Invitational Trick Drill Competition, UMass' entre, Peter Hogan, a freshman, placed seventh out of thirteen entries, winning 1744 points out of a possible 2000. It should be noted that Mr. Hogan was the only freshman to ever compete in this Invitational Trick Drill Meet mostly composed of the more experienced juniors and seniors.

After several years of rebuilding as an all-university drill team this year's successes, added to last year's five trophies, marks the re-emergence of the UMass Flying Redmen as one of the major drill teams on the East Coast.

The Redmen began their season on March 14, by taking second place in trick drill at the Canisius College Invitational Drill Meet, losing only to Gannon College, one of the best teams in the country.

Following this was the Boston Beanpot Drill Competition and although the Redmen finished better than they have in the past five years, placing fifth in basic and sixth in trick, they took no trophies. Prevented from being in the National Cherry Blossom Drill Meet in Washington D.C. because they are not an ROTC team, the Flying Redmen still marched in the televised Cherry Blossom Parade and the Parade of Princesses Tournament in which they placed as a semifinalist, finishing fifth out of sixty marching units.

The week before last, the UMass Flying Redmen were in New York for the Manhattan Invitational Drill Meet but again they came away empty handed with a sixth place in basic and a tie with Villanova for fifth in trick. Disappointed but not disheartened, the Redmen worked extra practice sessions and their effort paid off in Saturday's win to become New England's best trick drill team.

Administrative Intern Program Now Has Applications Available

Applications for the 1970-71 Administrative Intern Program are now available at the Office of the Dean of Administration in Whitmore. This program is open to all juniors in good academic standing who are interested in administration, advising or teaching at the higher education level. Participants in the program become working members of the staffs of a variety of administrative departments at the University.

While prospective interns are cautioned that a vital part of an administrater's duties is the routine work which must precede any decision, their assignments will be educationally oriented.

By the end of his senior year, the intern can expect to be knowledgeable of and sensitive to the process of administration as it is practiced here at the University. In addition, he will have gained a grasp of higher education administration on a statewide level.

The program consists of six weeks of summer work (July 13-August 21) in a selected administrative office at $85 per week; 15 hours of work per week at $2.27 per hour during the regular academic year, and two required 3 credit seminar courses, one each semester, in university administration.

Participation in the seminar will basically involve the presentation of one major paper per semester, with other presentations to be negotiated.

A meeting to discuss the program will be held on Friday, May 1, at 3:30 p.m. in Bartlett Hall, Room 61. All applicants are strongly urged to attend.

Viva Yankees for Insightful 'Day'!

BASEBALL AND SOCIETY- On Saturday last, the New York Yankees baseball organization sponsored its first "College Sports Editors' Day" in an earnest attempt to bring college students and baseball closer together. The Yankee front office personnel, from the amiable and cordial Robert O. Fishel, publicity director, to the top brass, Lee MacPhail and Mike Burke (pictured at left), was informative, pleasant and open to all the types of questions that arose concerning modern baseball. Burke, Yankee president, gave an extended talk on the relevance of baseball, as a means of getting away from it all, to society.

THAT FAMOUS YANKEE STADIUM SHADOW – Creeping out to the mound as the innings progressed was the Yankee Stadium shadow which, in this case, helped Oakland pitcher Pat Dobson slip one by Yank batter Bobby Murcer on his way to shutting out New York, 4-0.

BABE RUTH BUILT IT! – The most famous stadium in the country is pictured here. The people who run Yankee Stadium are setting the pace for baseball in the 70's. It's a shame that the team that plays here can't make the same claim.

AND THIS WAS BEFORE THE GAME – Yankee manager Ralph Houk (at left) spoke to 145 college sports editors, writers and photographers before the game. If he was pulling at his hair then, try to imagine what his reaction was after the Yanks bowed to Oakland, 4-0.

Frosh Stickers Crush Trinity

By STEVE MOSHER
Staff Reporter

Just about everything the Little Redman lacross team threw at the Trinity goal went in as the UMass frosh piled up a 20-1 victory Tuesday afternoon.

Almost the same thing in reverse happened on Saturday as the Redmen lost to Dartmouth in double overtime 5-4 when UMass just could not hit the net for goals.

Now Carl Schultheis' boys must prepare for UConn which comes to Amherst this Saturday. The Redmen will be looking to even their record which is now 2-3.

Exactly a minute and a half was left in the last of two overtimes in the Dartmouth game when the Indians scored the goal that sent UMass down to a tough loss. The game was played on horrible field conditions and this may have hampered both teams in their shooting. The Little Redmen played their best defensive game of the year., but just couldn't put it in the opposing goal.

Right from the start it was a close game as neither team could get more than a goal advantage and the score was tied four times. Joe DeRiso scored the first goal of the game. Vin Sbano scored the middle two, and with about three minutes left in regulation time DeRiso scored again to tie up the game and send it into overtime.

All the Little Redmen could throw at the Dartmouth goal just would not go in, but coach Schultheis said that, "it was definitely the best game of the year for us."

UMass had little trouble with Trinity yesterday under a hot sun that caused the last half to be shortened by six minutes. It really didn't matter because the Redmen had the game wrapped up after the first thirty minutes.

Henry Poirer gave Trinity a very short lived lead in the game when he scored an unassisted goal at 0:45 into the game. The Redmen were caught sleeping on that goal or goalie Rob Plasance might have had another shutout.

Plasance, however, made the play that tied up the game 40 seconds later. He made a save and cleared the ball down the field all by himself. His breakaway got the attack open and Fred Micheals passed to Vin Sbano who put it in the net.

That was all the scoring in the first period as the Redmen were content to feel out the Trinity team.

The Redmen exploded for six goals in the second period. Kevin Bush scored the first two on unassisted plays. Dwight Bloomquist scored two goals from Tom Bock on carbon copy plays. Both shots were rifled head high and caught the Trinity goalie in the face both times. The second goal shook the goalie up and he was ineffective the rest of the game, making only four saves while the Redmen scored 15 times.

Bock scored the sixth goal from Micheals, and DeRiso added the final goal from Sbano at the half-time buzzer on a rather spectacular score from far out.

In the half Plasance made 9 saves and Trinity 10.

The third period was all UMass as they scored 11 times. Kevin Bush scored four goals and got one assist, Dwight Bloomquist added four assists. Joe DeRiso scored once and had one assist. Fred Micheals got a goal and Craig Mussleman got an assist.

But the big gun in the period was Vinny Sbano. Sbano hit the twine five times. Included in this quintet of scores was a spectacular hat trick that happened so fast the Trinity players were befuddled for the rest of the game. It took Sbano just 45 seconds to score three goals between 10:45 and 11:30.

Chutists Jump Over Wope Sun.

After the UMass parachutists compete in the 13th annual Spring intercollegiate Parachuting Championships on Saturday at Orange, Mass., they will return to the air Sunday afternoon at about 1:30 p.m. to perform for the Quad's "May Day Fair".

The chutists will be jumping right next to the Women's Physical Education Buloding (WOPE). Featured in the air acrobatics will be David Cherry, Richard Clark, Marc James and Steve Smith.

Leaps will be made from 5500 feet, using a trailing tail of red smoke from foot in freefall. The amount of diving time will be 20 seconds, during which time the performers will display various artful maneuvers.

The daring young men who jump from the flying machine (two persons will be let out in each pass the plane makes over the target) will make hook-ups and will also fly freely.

Redmen Aim for Seventh Home Win

UMass Nine Hosts Ivy League Champs

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Dartmouth College, the 1969 Ivy League Champions will invade the UMass campus today for an afternoon baseball tilt with the Redmen; game time is 3:30. Last year the Redmen scalped the Indians twice, the first time, 12-6, during regular season play, the second, 5-2, eliminating Dartmouth from the NCAA District One Tournament. Indian Coach Ulysses "Tony" Lupien won't have to work too hard getting his charges psyched for this one.

This year's Dartmouth team consists of ten returning lettermen and a number of sophomore prospects from last year's 12-3 frosh squad.

Heading the list of returnees is captain Bruce Saylor. Saylor, who plays right field, was the Indian's leading hitter last year with a .325 mark and 31 RBIs. Other returnees include shortstop Bob Miaker who batted .281 and had a .940 fielding average.

Handling the hot corner is junior Craig Conklin, and accomplished fielder, .984 fielding percentage, but a rather weak hitter, .198. Converted outfielder Bud Dagirmanjian will handle the first base chores this season. The regular left fielder last year, Dagirmanjian batted .322 and stole 11 bases. Completing the infield at second base will be either converted pitcher Jim Bell or junior Dave Detz.

Besides Saylor in right field, the outfield will consist of sophomore Frank Mannanino, who hit .382 as a freshman, in left field, and Russ Adams in centerfield. Adams, a junior, batted .254 in 25 games with 10 RBIs. The top reserve is junior Tom Hanna, who alternated with Adams in centerfield last year, and batted .242 in 23 games.

One of Lupien's biggest problems will be finding a suitable replacement for catcher Jon Hansbergers, a three-year regular. Leading candidates for the starting nod are junior Tim Hannigan and sophomore Wayne Young.

The strength of the Dartmouth squad is its pitching staff. Leading hurler for the Indians is Chuck Seelbach, who posted a 3-2 mark in ten starts. In 58-2/3 innings last year, Seelbach struck out 66, but walked 32, while posting a 2.45 ERA.

Sophomore Pete Broberg will be the number two starter this year. As a freshman, Brobert posted a 6-0 mark including three no-hitters. Other veteran hurlers include Bill Saumsiegle, 1-2, with a 3.27 ERA; Dick "02" Griebel, 4-0, with a 2.04 ERA; and junior John Prado who was 0-1 in 15 innings last year. Sophomore hopefuls, beside Brobert, include Charlie Janes, Fred Grossman and Chick Doll.

The starting assignments are still not known; Dartmouth will probably start either Seelbach or Broberg, while the Redmen will likely counter with righty Rich Rappoli. All indications point to a low-scoring game, since both teams have excellent pitching and good defensive infields.

If Ray Ellerbrook and captain Tom Semino can break out of their slumps, it should make things considerably easier for the Redmen. Despite Ellerbrook's .238 average and Semino's .180 mark, going into yesterday's fray against Connecticut, the Redmen as a team are batting .300 while the pitching staff has a combined ERA of 2.45.

Astrological Forecast

by Rabbey Qumarr

ARIES women look for men — but, very often, the ARIES woman winds up with a man who is looking for a mother. One of the outstanding traits of these natives is their ability to plow through and pioneer a project. The most fascinating Aries woman I've met — one who is very interested in astrology — is Bette Davis.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): You can re-establish contact with family members. Friendly gesture on your part can work wonders. Stress diplomacy, maturity and understanding. Emotional balance should be your goal.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): You can be aided by ARIES individual. Accent confidence, but avoid arrogance. Don't push too hard — many who seem to have everything are merely convincing talkers. Act accordingly.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Your ability is tested. Opportunity requested is obtained. Now move forward knowing that those in authority back your efforts. Check communication lines; keep them clear.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Interest in occult is stimulated. You delve into mysteries. Answer is found if willing to let go of past concepts. Money situation affecting mate, partner is crystallized.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Accent on how you relate to mate, partner. Many observe your actions — and reactions. Display creative abilities. Do not hold back. Be observant, follow through on clues.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Employment matters dominate. Renew contact with individual who made promises in past. One you aided may now be in position to return favor. Do not let pride stand in way of progress.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct 22): Accent on how you handle emotions. Don't give up something for mere promise. You can expand — you can find object of affection. But realize giving is a two-way street.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Home base is spotlighted. You find out what is essential, what can be discarded. Check details; be thorough. One who is older may need helping hand. Give it. You will be repaid.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Plenty of activity is indicated. Try to avoid as much meaningless motion as possible. Get ideas on paper. Individual who sweet-talks may have nothing else to offer. Act accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Do some shopping. Purchases today could delight family members. Avoid boring on impulse. Genuine bargains are available. Read your paper — check and compare.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): You are able to perceive, detect. You find out what you need to know. Key is to recognize truth when you encounter it. New moves in different directions gain best results.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): You may be chasing rainbows. Take time to find direction of actual goal. Then you won't waste motion. Check behind-scenes activity. Work quietly. Avoid boasting. Do job efficiently.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY your intuition often startles others. You are in the process of making meaningful changes. One you are concerned with earns your trust.

Redmen Outslug UConn In Crucial Yan Con Tilt

Sawyer Triple Decisive

By STEVE SHAMBAN
Staff Reporter

Mike Sawyer cracked a two out pinch hit triple to deep center driving in Chuck Newell with the tie breaking run yesterday as in the eighth inning UMass outbombed UConn 14-12 at Varsity Field in a crucial Yankee Conference tilt. The Redmen now stand 4-2 in Conference and 11-5 overall while the Huskies fall to 3-1 and 8-9 respectively.

Pitching was definitely a lost art as the two teams combined for a total of 33 hits. Don Anderson struggled for 5-1/3 innings giving up nine runs, four of them unearned. He was replaced by Bob Fichera, who emerged as the winning pitcher, thanks to Sawyer and gave up three runs, one unearned, in 2-2/3 innings. Tom Austin finished the ninth.

Lefty Bob LaMontagne took the loss for the Huskies after replacing John Staab. LaMontagne went 2-1/3 innings giving up two runs on four hits. Staab had replaced Steve Swedberg who had replaced starter Bob Kaplan.

Kaplan really had nothing on the ball although it took the Redmen three innings to discover this. He had been trying to fool them by changing up on his speeds but this strategy came to an unglorious halt in the third when the Redmen struck for six runs on six hits.

The key hits were consecutive singles by Brian Martin and Steve Rogers and doubles by Paul Sulzicki, Tom Semino and Newell. Each hit produced one run with the exception of Sulzicki's which drove in two.

The six runs wiped out a 1-0 UConn lead, the result of three singles off of Anderson in the first inning.

UMass added singletons in the fourth and fifth and four in the sixth to regain the lead as UConn had been producing two of its own in the fourth, one in the fifth and six in the sixth to temporarily control the lead.

The Husky runs in the fourth were the result of Kaplan's two run double off the wall in left. UMass' lone fourth inning run came on Martin's double to left scoring Hosea Kelly.

Paul Slosar drove in UConn's fifth inning run with a single while Paul Sulzicki belted a home run for the Redmen to straight-away right in their half. At this juncture the score was UMass 8, UConn 4.

T. Raymond Brickley was the unlikely star of the six run Husky sixth as he belted a three run homer up the alley in left. It was his first hit of the year in 22 at bats. The other runs were the result of John Slosar's double to right. The Huskies led at this point, 10-8, greatly aided no doubt by three Redman errors.

UMass attempted to atone for its sins with four in the bottom of the sixth to go ahead 12-10. Bob Willman scored on Sulzicki's sacrifice fly to center, Martin scored on Semino's single to left, Ray Ellerbrook on UConn second baseman Harry Trohalis' mishandling of a ball hit by Newell and Semino on the umpire's mishandling of a call.

UConn tied it up 12-12 in the eighth. Trohalis scored on Keith Kraham's sacrifice fly and Jaff Filmer on Slosar's single to right.

Then came Sawyer's heroics as he pinch hit for winning pitcher Bob Fichera. Kelly drove in Sawyer with the fourteenth run on a bunt single.

This victory, unartistic as it may be, boosts UMass back into prime contention for Yankee Conference honors. UConn now has six games left in the Conference and could well lose at least one of them, thus forcing at least a tie, given that the Redmen do not lose anymore themselves. Today's URI-UConn game at Storrs could well be a key.

Golfers Split Tri-match

By TOM KROL
Staff Reporter

Yesterday, the host Redman golfers split their triangular match, losing to Connecticut, 4-3, but beating American International, 6-1.

UConn's victory was not sealed until the very end of the match. The Huskies' Kain and UMass' Mike Minkos were the last golfers off the course as Kain edged Minkos out after 20 holes. Minkos had been two up with two holes to play.

Again, the bottom three men fared well, but the failure of the men in the top spots resulted in the defeat. The best rounds of the day were turned in by Dick King and Erih Filsinger, who both shot 74. UMass' record now stands at 8-2.

Friday, the Redmen will play in the Yankee Conference meet at Pleasant Valley. Coach Dick Page is unsure of which players he will use for the meet and said that the lineup will be decided this week in practice.

Although UMass has previously lost to Uconn and Rhode Island, the losses were by slim margins (and, in the case of the URI march, played under extremely poor conditions), so the Redmen are still very much in the running for the Yankee Conference Championship.

Wrap-up: Puzas(M) lost to Blonder (C) one up, but beat Orlen (AIC) one up; Salter (M) lost to Fagan (C) four and three, and Riley (AIC) three and two; Langevin) beat Heaton (C) two up and ...ipman (AIC) one up; Aherne (M) lost to Gorman (C) two and one, but beat Myers (AIC),

Stickers Bury Trinity

By BOB GANLEY
Staff Reporter

Scoring almost at will, the UMass lacrosse team put on its' best offensive showing of the year in downing Trinity College, 24-3, yesterday afternoon.

Twelve different Redmen scored goals in the rout, led by Tom Malone, who had his finest scoring day of the year with seven goals and six assists for 13 points. Bob Waters also played an outstanding game, assisting on seven goals and scoring two of his own. Bob Florin scored the "hat trick" while Paul Ritch, Lou Marinacci and Steve Herschoff each scored twice.

The normally slow starting Redmen wasted no time in sending the Bantams on the road to defeat. Six first period goals settled any doubts of the outcome and the Redmen didn't let up until the score reached 17-1 at halftime. Coach Dick Garber cleared the bench in the second half, but UMass still managed to score five times in the third period and twice in the fourth.

Malone opened the scoring with an unassisted goal in the first period hollowed by Marinacci with a solo effort after two fine fakes. Florin scored on a Malone pass and then turned playmaker in setting up Ritch for the fourth goal. Malone and Ritch both scored their second goals of the period to vault the Redmen into a 6-0 lead at the quarter mark.

The second period proved to be UMass' most productive of the year. Eleven times the ball was put in the net by the Redmen and much of the credit can be given to Waters. Bob set up six goals in this period including three straight at the midway mark. Malone and Waters combined for three goals with an unassisted effort by Herschoff sandwiched in between.

Herschoff made it 11-0 with an assist to Waters and then Malone set up Florin for the second and third time to give Bob the "hat trick". Larry Diamond got into the scoring act at the 11 minute mark and Malone ran the score to 15-0 on another Waters assist. At this point, Trinity was finally able to beat Bruce Crawford on a score by John Stevenson with an assist to Peter Stiles. Marinacci and Dana Stone closed out the first half scoring with last minute goals.

The second half provided coach Dick Garber the chance to give the bench some extensive playing time and also a chance to experiment. Malone started the half, but was taken out when he scored a goal in the opening minute. Jim McGuire scored his first goal of the season when he knocked in a rebound of f the stick of Trinity goalie John Terho. Karl Leudes put the Redmen at the 20 goal mark for the first time this year on his initial goal, which was a solo effort.

Trinity's Spike Birmingham netted the second goal for the Bantam's as Stevenson assisted, beating Redmen goalie Ron Dumont. Garber let the first attack finish out the period and this gave Waters a chance to finally do some goal scoring. Malone set him up for his first score and then Bob followed with an unassisted effort to make the three period score 22-2.

Garber let the defensemen play attack in the last period and this gave the big men a chance to score. Bill DeVore, Joe Smith and Al Ruggiano put on a great deal of pressure, but DeVore was the only one who was able to score. Little Rich Vogel closed out the Redmen scoring with a goal while Wiles netted the final Trinity tally.

UMass has now scored 73 goals in five games while allowing 28 for an average of about 15-6 per game. The win put the team at 4-1 and 4-0 in the league. Malone still leads the team in scoring with 20 goals and 19 assists for 39 points, which is slightly behind his record breaking pace of a year ago. Among the reserves who shone for the Redmen was goalie Dumont who made several excellent saves during his stint.

U.S. AIDS VIET ATTACK ON CAMBODIA

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States announced Wednesday it is providing military advisers, bombing strikes and other support for a major South Vietnamese attack on Communist forces operating in Cambodia.

The move appeared to add a whole new dimension to American involvement in Southeast Asia and the news quickly produced these results:

–President Nixon announced he will explain the step to the nation Thursday evening in a speech to be broadcast on television and radio at 9 p.m. EST.

–Cries of alarm arose in the Senate from those who have been pressing for U. S. disengagement from Southeast Asia.

–The stock market which had moved up from Tuesday's six year low point was hit by a selling wave that sent prices quickly over to the minus side. However, after the Dow Jones industrial average had been pushed more than four points below the Tuesday close, strong buying developed and it closed with a gain of more than 13 points.

The purported objective of the new campaign is to deprive the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong of the use of Cambodian territory as a staging area for attacks into South Vietnam and as a sanctuary to which to retreat when necessary.

Whatever the purpose, however, the development suggests that for better or worse, the affairs of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia have taken a sharp turn. The conflict is much different now than it was before March 18, when a military coup deprived Prince Norodom Sihanouk of his role as Cambodia's chief of state.

Once Sihanouk was over thrown, the Viet Cong North Vietnamese sanctuary was threatened. The new regime told them to remove their 40,000 or more troops. They reacted by going on the offensive against Camobdia's insignificant armed forces. Barring outside interference, the result of that would seem to have been a foregone conclusion.

A few weeks ago, the objectives of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in Cambodia probably were limited to restoring Sihanouk to power. This would be sufficient in the circumstances to secure their Cambodian Sanctuary. Now, however, there seems to be a good chance that Cambodia will be, henceforward, deeply involved in the war.

Sihanouk has declared himself the ally of North Vietnam, the Viet Cong and the Pathet Lao against the American presence in Indochina. His declaration was made at a recent summit meeting of the leaders of those elements, under Red Chinese auspices, somewhere near the common China, Laos, Vietnam border.

Sihanouk's new allies used, for their actions in Cambodia, precisely the same justification as the Americans had used long years ago for their intervention in South Vietnam. In the American case, a Saigon government had asked for help. Now the Communist side legitimizes its use of force in Cambodia by invoking the request of a deposed ruler.

In the case of Cambodia, it was the Communist side and not the American which penetrated and occupied Cambodian territory, long before Sihanouk was overthrown. If the coup had not taken place, Saigon would have had to live indefinitely with the idea that its enemy had this sanctuary area.

What is changed now is that Saigon's regime probably sees a golden opportunity to hit hard at that santuary and perhaps put it out of business.

Referendum Issues Examined

The following comments are part of a series of stories presenting the precise questions which will appear on the May Referendum ballot and explaining both sides of the issues behind each question. Anyone interested in supporting a particular side of an issue is invited to write a letter to the editor to stimulate discussion.

UNIVERSITY AND THE WAR

The present University policy is reasonably satisfactory?

Do you favor ending ROTC on the University campus at Amherst?

Do you favor ending military and war-related recruiting?

Do you favor ending Defense Department and war-industry research here?

YES

1. in supporting ROTC the University directly contributes to training 85% of the officers in the current "illegal" war (since the war has not been authorized by the U. S. Senate)

2. research and recruitment are clearly not neutral because they support only the war effort of the United States

3. academic freedom is not an issue; what is being protested is not speech, but facilitating a war effort and war machine.

NO:

1. as a land-grant institution, the University owes a special obligation to the federal government (in connection with ROTC)

2. the University is an essentially neutral place for all groups, all recruitment, and all research

3. the University must protect the academic freedom of all elements that wish to come herefor whatever reasons they wish to come

Do you favor the establishment of a draft information and counseling center on campus responsive to student needs and in no way affiliated with the Selective Service system"

YES:

1. any counseling service sponsored by the University should have all information available to it, not just Selective Service information

2. no counseling service should act as agency for a particular branch of government as it should not act as agent for any particular business or any other "special" group

NO:

1. the University should not deny the Selective Service (and military) system of the government an office and the right to distribute any materials it wishes.

ULC Holds Water Afternoon

The Universal Life Church held Water Afternoon by the Campus Pond yesterday. They set up a Kool Aid stand, held a jousting tournament and generally frolicked at the pond.

The big part of the afternoon was the boating. Two canoes were borrowed from the outing club, and two home made boats were used. One of these boats was made from three fifty-gallon drums but turned out to be unseaworthy. The other, made out of a door and tire tubes was operable but slow.

Assistant Dean of Students Jerry Scanlon tried to intervene in the affairs of the afternoon when students were using concrete form tubs taken from the new library construction site. Scanlon said that the O'Connel Construction Company was getting upset over the tubs' use and were threatening to call police.

When Scanlon asked the Rev. Eric Walgren to use his influence to see that the tubs were promptly returned, Eric replied, "As a non-leader, I would not attempt to influence the congregation." The churches credo is to do whatever you think is right.

Scanlon gave up trying.

Alternatives Center

The creation of an "Alternatives Center" within which various drop-in and information centers on campus intend to coordinate and in some cases combine their efforts will be discussed Thursday night, 10 p.m., 3rd floor S. College, at the Learning Resources Center in the Free University City Office. All interested are welcome. We've met a few times already, informally, and it looks like we're on to something that speaks to our desires to create alternative lifes styles for ourselves, and facilitate them for others.

Senate Accepts Grade Report

The Student Senate last night accepted a Grade Report which would give students a great choice of grading systems. The report, prepared by the Academic Affairs Committee, goes beyond the Faculty Senate plans for restructuring the grading policy, and provides for a choice of a seven-point grading system, or an unlimited system of Pass/No record with a personal evaluation upon petition.

This plan, if implemented by the University, would end the cumulative-average system and leaves the student a choice of how he wants his grades recorded. The Committee's recommendations were based in part on a feeling that the cume is no longer relevant to students or education. Emphasis is placed on the individual's idea of educational relevancy.

The plan is now headed for consideration by the University Administration, along with the one suggested by the Faculty Senate.

Student Senators also heard the ideas of Chancellor Oswald Tippo and Prof. Joseph Marcus on re-organization of University administration. Both plans rely on a more broadly-based administrative system than is now in operation. The Chancellor stressed that his plan is "a rough draft, and it's fluid." He urged discussion and suggestions from all interested persons.

In other action, the Student Senate witnessed the swearing-in of its new officers and the newly-elected class officers. The Senate also supported the University Mobilization Committee by hearing the budget and sending it back to committee. This means that the Mobe budget will be included in the current budget act, and thus will receive SATF funds.

In internal action, the senate voted to eliminate the office of Secretary, and instead hire a professional secretary to handle Senate business matters. The rationale behind this motion was that a single student simply cannot handle the paperwork and still fairly represnt her constituency.

When "THE PEOPLE" read this column they will call me nasty and obscene names, and so will some of THEIR followers. But, hopefully, some of THEIR other followers on this campus will call 212/889-1414 and see what it's all about. The "Movement" is made up of leaders on each campus in this nation and they are just as "bad" as Nixon. But can't you see, that when Senators like Cook of Kentucky, Fulbright of Arkansas and a staunch Republican like Smith say "NO" to the corruption and bigotry in our "system" as they and the senate did when it rejected the Carswell nomination and Nixon deals that there is hope. And the ecological problem was pointed out by John Kennedy at the University of Michigan a long, long time ago. And don't tell me that Muskie hasn't done a lot in the Senate to combat the pollution problem.

Look "People" don't tell me how lousy the U.S. is and then go out and protest and sign. Go out and get legislation through Congress and "good" men into it; and then Nixon won't be able to make this nation a horror show for the Panthers and Rennie Davis. DIG?

Student Leaders Night

Shapiro Receives Metawampe Award

Dean Seymour Shapiro of the College of Arts and Sciences is the 1970 recipient of the Metawampe Award. He was honored last night at the Student Leaders night in the Student Union Ballroom in a ceremony which had marked overtones of student dissatisfaction.

Master of Ceremonies, Ina Goldstein, said in her opening remarks that, "The only people who take this night seriously are the ones who receive awards, and even some of them don't."

This sentiment was echoed throughout the evening by various people, particularly by David Veale, who gave the welcoming address. He said, "The problems of this University cannot be solved by titles - only by actions . . . The organizations represented here must help or lose their relevancy and legitimacy."

In presenting the Metawampe Award, Miss Goldstein prefaced her introduction of Dean Shapiro by saying, "This award is given annually by the four classes to the professor or administrator who has given a little more energy than required." Dean Shapiro was presented with a large silver platter.

The rest of the program was given over to the various student organizations for the giving of awards. A notable exception was Donald A. Epstein, former editor in chief of the Collegian, who was to give the Collegian presentation. Instead of the traditional speech, Epstein shocked the audience by saying, "I'm going to depart from the traditional program tonight . . . we have decided that the Collegian will not participate in tonight's activities." Speaking in shirtsleeves and tattered shorts Epstein went on to say, "The news of today is horrendous. This morning our President, Richard Nixon, ordered American boys into Cambodia. There is no cause for celebration tonight."

Presentations were then given by the students representing their various groups. Among these groups were: Index, WMUA, Apha Phi Omega, Gamma Sigma Sigma, Student Senate, SUG Board, Adelphia, Mortar Board, Maroon Keys, Scrolls, Arcon, Revelers, Southwest Patriots, Cheerleaders, the class governments and the Area governments.

The Who's Who Awards and the Distinguished Senior Awards were also given out. The 1970 Distinguished Seniors are: Cynthia Olken, Dawn Dudash, David Floreer, Glenn Mangurian, Carolyn Nevins, Larry Gauthier, Steve Parnell, George Childs, Jim Albert, Alan Marcus, and David Veale. This award is given for service to the community.

On the lighter side, Southwest Assembly President Larry Kravitz awarded Dr. Robert Gage of the Infirmary the "Dining Commons Golden Spoon Award" for service above and beyond the call of duty during the infamous Southwest Food poisoning. Adelphia also gave special awards to John Kezeriski and George Kicza, janitors in the Student Union.

Judge Challenges Kennedy's Story

By CORNELIUS F. HURLEY and WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press Writers

BOSTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's account of the accident that killed Mary Jo Kopechne was challenged Wednesday by an inquest judge who said he did not believe the senator intended to leave Chappaquiddick Island with the 28 year old secretary before his automobile plunged from a narrow bridge.

Judge James A. Boyle said, in his judgment, Kennedy turned intentionally onto the unpaved road which led toward Dyke Bridge - and away from the ferry the senator said he planned to take.

Boyle said there was cause to believe Kennedy drove negligently, in a way which "appears to have contributed to the death of Mary Jo Kopechne."

Kennedy's reply was instant: he rejected the judge's findings.

"At the inquest I truthfully answered all questions asked of me," he said in Washington. "In my personal view, the inference and ultimate finding of the judge's report are not justified and I reject them."

Boyle could not be reached for comment on why he did not file charges against Kennedy for driving negligently. Conviction of such a charge carries a maximum penalty of two years in jail and a fine of $200.

It was not certain whether a new grand jury to be sworn in next month for Dukes County could reopen an investigation and review the report made public Wednesday.

A grand jury met in special session this month to investigate the accident and came up with no findings. It denied access to the transcript released Wednesday.

The State Supreme Court had ruled that the judge's report and transcript of testimony at the inquest could not be made public until all possibility of further prosecution in the case had ended.

Boyle, who is retiring Thursday as a judge, recited inquest evidence, then delivered this finding:

"I infer a reasonable and probable explanation of the totality of the above facts is that Kennedy and Kopechne did not intend to return to Edgartown at that time; that Kennedy did not intend to drive to the ferry slip and his turn onto Dyke Road was intentional. Having reached this conclusion, the question then arises as to whether there was anything criminal in his operation of the motor vehicle."

The judge said he was convinced the bridge is a traffic hazard which must be approached with extreme caution.

"A speed of evey 20 miles per hour, as Kennedy testified to, operating a car as large as this Oldsmobile, would at least be negligent and, possibly, reckless," he said. "If Kennedy knew of this hazard, his operation of the vehicle constituted criminal conduct."

Reflections of A Lie

"POWER TO THE PEOPLE!" That's what was being screamed (among the obscenities) when Humphrey spoke, or rather attempted to speak, at the Cage earlier this year. But, of course, if you dont' agree with THE people you are a PIG, a FACIST, or some other unsightly creature who doesn't have the "right" to be heard. And "People" doesn't refer to the mass of people, because the majority at Curry Hicks wanted to hear Hubert expound his "pearls of wisdom" on American foreign policy' but THE people said "no," and thus we were denied the "right" of hearing him speak.

"POWER TO THE PEOPLE!" is a catchy slogan which means exactly what it says. However, "The People" refered to are not the masses, but a self-proclaimed elite who find legitimate faults in our nation, expose them, and then through the use of martyrdom gain unwarranted support; support for an ideal which the "revolution" has NO intention of seeing come true.

Take, for example, the widespread belief which many in the movement expound - that our form of government corrupts all men. While it is true that any government, and especially ours, tends to corrupt people, it does not follow that all men in our government are nasty, conniving S.O.B.s who only look out for themselves. If "the movement" was correct, then why are men like gubernatorial candidate Robert Morganthau (former District Attorney for southern New York State who was forced to resign after investigating House aides and black-marketing in Vietnam) and senatorial hopeful Ottinger running for election? Ottinger, it should be noted, resigned from the American Bar Association after it backed the Carswell nomination. And while both men are only running for office, and not in it, they are doing it the McCarthy way, with youth. Interested in helping, then call 212/889-1414 collect and Morganthau people will talk to you. Of course, that's the hard way, but we all know that moratoriums with bands will get the United States out of Southeast Asia sooner. BULLFEATHERS!

"POWER TO THE PEOPLE!" is cool if you agree with THE people, cause if you don't they'll treat you a whole lot worse than our government is mistreating the Panthers. And while their proclaimed ideals are praiseworthy, any group or movement which condones violence (the SDS which tried to burn a dog over Vietnam last year is in it, as are the Weathermen and other violent groups) is no better than the Nazis were. At least the Nazis said what they stood for and were consistent; is the "movement?"

"POWER TO THE PEOPLE!" means showing disapproval over tuition raises by closing Hunter College, keeping a dean hostage, and destroying a professor's only manuscript for his book, which was the result of ten years' research. "POWER TO THE PEOPLE!" also means Columbia, San Francisco State and 11 the other institutions where violence comes to the campuses under that holy proclamation.

Yes, "Power to the people" means a whole lot more than getting out of Vietnam, worrying about ecology, and heaping scathing verbal attacks upon our government's many wrongs. It means hooliganism and a cop-out from the wrongs which should be corrected peacefully. It means a revolution and quoting Mao and other "great" men. Yes Sir, that's "POWER TO THE PEOPLE!" or should I say "POWER FROM THE PEOPLE!"

You say that the "system should be changed; that racial equality should be practiced and not denied; that the U.S. should get its tail out of Southeast Asia; and that it whould stop supporting dictatorships like Poppadulos of Greece; well I'm RIGHT WITH YOU. You say that you hate the way "bigots" judge a man by "the length of his hair and the cut of his clothes;" well then why call all cops "pigs"? Surely they're not all Gestapo agents.

You want to make the country better; well then what are the alternatives men? We can rise in revolt ("POWER TO THE PEOPLE!") or as one of the great "PEOPLE" said about the November Moratorium in Washington, D.C. - "if they had only fired a shot from the Department of Justice, we'd have had a revolt" and quickly be put down. The result would be a more "conservative" and "repressive" form of government. And if the revolt works (dreaming) what the "system" replaced by? That's right - Socialism. But who runs it you ask, "THE PEOPLE," who else? If they'd run it, I'd probably be put in jail for wiring this. But, of course, they never talk about who'll run the government and how it would work.

But what are the other alternatives you ask. We can recognize that as bad as the "system" is, it can be changed. But that takes hard work, and "THE PEOPLE" don't get their power. "THE PEOPLE" claim that starvation and poverty are plentiful in our nation, well one person in poverty, or going to bed hungry at night makes the problem plentiful as far as I am concerned. Of course, there are people starving in this nation and around the world, but it (like murder) is an insoluble problem. But the intensity of the problem could be lessened through legislation, and that legislation will come when "good" men are elected.

This year the entire House of Representatives and 1/3 of the Senate is being elected; why not go out and work to get "good" men through the primaries in victory and then elected in November? But then again, complaining is more fun and continuing the problem is "cool" so that there is an excuse to riot and run wild through the streets.

ART BUCHWALD

Roman Circus

WASHINGTON -- "Good afternoon, everybody. This is Chris Schenkel speaking to you from Yale University on this beautiful June day. As you recall, after the tragic events of May when the students struck the university in sympathy with the Black Panthers, the authorities agreed to dispense with normal judicial procedures and hold the trial of the Panthers in the Yale Bowl with the students deciding the guilt or innocence of the Panthers by popular acclaim.

"The idea for the compromise was suggested by a professor of Roman history, who felt that this would satisfy both the legal requirements of the state as well as the complaints by the student body and faculty that the Panthers could not get a fair trial.

"At first the Connecticut courts objected to this type of trial, but when the students said they would refuse to go back to school unless their demands were met, the courts had no choice but to give in. Everyone knows the country cannot run without Yale.

"And so today I am sitting here in the press box on the top of Yale Bowl, which is packed with students and faculty, ready todecide if the Black Panthers did or did not kill a so-called police informer.

"If you'll forgive me for saying so, there is a Roman circus atmosphere here today as well as a sense of excitement. The crowd knows that they are making history, and all I can tell you is that after this day American jurisprudence will never be the same. To keep the crowd amused, a few minor trials have been held already.

"A professor who decided to hold classes during the student strike was found guilty of racism and was thrown to a group of hungry lions which are now tethered at the 40-yard line.

"A judge of the state supreme court who issued an injunction against holding the trial in the Yale Bowl was also thrown to the lions.

"And just before I went on the air the mayor of New Haven as well as the fire chief were tried as counter-revolutionaries. All I can tell you, folks, is that those lions aren't hungry any more.

"Well, we're just about ready for the big trial. The cheering section across from me is now doing card tricks. There they go with 'Free Huey Newton'. Now they're spelling out. . .well, let's skip that one. . . And here is the final card stunt. . .all I can make out from here is the word 'mother.'

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute! That roar you just heard from the crowd means. . .Yes, there they are, coming at the far corner of the stadium. . .the Black Panther defendants. . .The crowd is on its feet waving their BP banners. It is an unbelievable sight.

"Now they're starting to boo. . .Oh, I see, the government witnesses are coming out of the other end of the stadium. The crowd is starting to throw bottles and cushions at the government witnesses. . .

"Now there goes Bobby Seale. He's giving the black power salute. . . That did it. . .The crowd is pointing their thumbs up. It's a not guilty verdict. . .Now the crowd is chanting 'Free them, free them'. . .The Black Panthers have been found innocent!

"This is a great day for New Haven, a great day for the United States and a great day for Yale. What a magnificent sight. . .Now the students are pointing their thumbs down. . .I'm not sure what this means. . . Wait a minute. . .They're finding the government witnesses guilty. . . They want the witnesses thrown to the lions. . .Yes, there they go. . . The crowd is on its feet. The witnesses are being thrown to the lions, and there goes the prosecutor and the judge. . .

"That about winds up the legal arguments here at Yale University for this week."

(Editors note-Part II of Series on Anti-War Movement)

The Position of the Ultra-Left

So much for working within the System, what about trying to revolutionize it? I want my position to be clear on this issue. I am a revolutionist. I don't see the possibility of the pursuit of present System ever becoming responsive to people's needs for life (the RIGHT for good medical care, adequate income and decent housing for everyone), liberty (the RIGHT to freedom from alienating labor), and the pursuit of happiness (the RIGHT to free education and quality environment and freedom from racism and sexism). However I don't see any shortcuts to revolution besides building a mass socialist consciousness among working people and a mass nationalist consciousness among Third World people. I certainly don't see any way of simply transforming the Anti-War movement into a revolutionary movement.

Those who do give two prescriptions on how do so. Broaden and deepen our demands on the System and/or bring the war home - its fights in the streets. The first prescription gains us nothing and loses us much. The second is the most utopian of all utopian notions.

Broaden and deepen our demands they tell us. Great! How? By demanding the end of U.S. imperialism they tell us. Beautiful! We gain nothing and lose people and program. We turn from the concrete end of U.S. imperialism in Southeast Asia to its abstract end all over the world. The Wall Street Journal can call for the abstract end of U.S. imperialism over the world, it is only the Anti-War Movement which has called for the concrete end of U.S. imperialism in Southeast Asia by demanding all U.S. troops home now.

"But", these revolutionaries say, "You are not preparing for the next U.S. intervention in Guatemala perhaps." "Nonsense," we say. How can fighting future intervention be more important than fighting present interventions. The future intervention argument only puts us back to fighting the abstraction of imperialism, instead of its concrete manifestation today in Southeast Asia. If the U. S. does intervene in Guatemala, we will just adjust our demand to "U.S. Out of Southeast Asia and Guatemala NOW! Such an adjustment doesn't seem much of a problem, especially when we are now making the transition from "Out of Vietnam Now!" to "Out of Southeast Asia Now!" with no great difficulty.

Fighting against imperialism is still not enough to satisfy the revolutionaries. They tell us to broaden and deepen our demands by adding "smash racism and male chauvinism." Again we return to the world of abstractions. Fighting a concretely racist and chauvinist war in Southeast Asia is somehow less important than carrying signs which say "Smash Racism" and "Smash Male Chauvinism." I think such rhetoric smacks of white male paternalism and is simply patronizing. The struggle against racism is to be led exclusively by Third World people both in and out of this country. The struggle against sexism is to be led exclusively by women. These struggles cannot be led by a predominantly white Anti-War Movement or by a movement which still is in the process of overcoming its own chauvinism.

Whites can help fight racism by supporting the demand of Third World Self-Determination which includes Vietnamese Self-Determination. Males can support the fight against sexism by following the lead of our sisters in fighting for abortion reform, day care centers, and job equality. And all these support actions can take place under the umbrella of the Anti-War Movement.

As I said before, broadening and deepening our demands as the revolutionaries ask, loses our program and our people. Every time we add another major plank to the Anti-War Movement we decrease the number of people who can belong. The Anti-War Movement is not a revolutionary party with a clearly formulated program on a whole range of issues. It is a loose coalition of people who may agree on nothing else except the need for an immediate withdrawal from Southeast Asia.

Making our focus the war does not make us a "single issue" movement. The war is the focus. Being against it is the condition for joining our movement and the only condition. Underneath that focus we can take part in many other struggles: for Black Self-Determination, for Women's Rights, for Wage demands of workers, and against university complicity in the war.

The Anti-War Movement is multi-issue because it can't help but be multi-issue. The war is racist, chauvinist, anti-working class, and repressive. In fighting against the war we can't but help to fight against all those forms of oppression. But our condition of membership is only one: our focus is only one; support for the demand 'Bring All the G.I.'s Home Now!"

By using this slogan as our organizational umbrella, we can build a mass movement. We can bring people into the Movement where they will then learn about other issues. That's the way most of us got our radical education. Why should we deny it to others by insisting they support broadened and deepened demands before they can join us.

The other part of the so-called revolutionaries position towards the Anti-War Movement is that the war needs to be brought home. This position is elitist and defeatist in the extreme.

Those advocating it have given up on the attempt to build a mass movement against the war and so they retreat to the idea of small groups fighting in the streets to end the war. This position is also stupid in the extreme. It not only gives up the attempt to build a mass movement but isolates the Left which exist now. The facts of history and politics in this country are that when the Left is isolated, it will be repressed. We need a mass movement not only to end the war, but for the simple reason of our own protection.

The last point in the attack on the present Anti-War Movement by the revolutionaries concerns the relationship between the Movement and "college presidents, liberal politicians, and business." The revolutionaries contend that the Movement should not allow these Liberals to speak at Anti-War meetings. In effect the position is exclusionism in reverse. Instead of being directed at communists it is directed to exclude Liberals. In either case the results are the same: it divides the movement on an artificial question, it keeps many hard working people from joining us, and makes a mass movement impossible.

We don't have to be afraid of Liberals; we can confront them within the Anti-War Movement and show their position is a shady defense of U.S. interests in Southeast Asia and around the world. Not to do so is a guarantee that the groundswell of popular opposition to the war will be co-opted.

CAMPUS COMMENT

Unstacked

To the editor:

The time has come for local ecologists to take their noses out of the streams and dumps and lift them into the air. For right here on campus will then find what must be a major source of pollution for the Pioneer Valley.

The twin stacks of the power plant just west of the Lincoln Student Center have been alternating, winter and summer, in belching forth soot, grime and noxious fumes.

Proof positive was visible during the winter, when the blankets of snow blackened overnight across the campus. And now that Spring is here, white automobiles in #5 lot give glaring evidence of the soot and grime being manufactured here.

Now that the campus community leadership has lipped its support of a clean earth policy, perhaps it will inspire action as a follow up.

In this generation of relevance, academicians cannot live by words alone.

Pigs Want War

To the editor:

Last week in Connecticut there were 250 automatic rifles stolen from an armory and a warehouse. There seems to be three possible reasons for this theft:

1. The rifles were stolen by the Mafia which is running short of arms at the present time.

2. The guns were stolen by the Black Panther Party or a radical group to aid as tools in the "meaningful discussions" of racism in America to take place in New Haven.

3. The guns were actually stolen by the police or F.B.I. to frame the Panthers for any violence which occurs in New Haven during the Bobby Seale trial.

If I were naive and trusting, I would say the first reason was the most probable. If I were a racist, I might find the second motive very appealing. If I were a radical or a Panther, the third reason becomes obviously trus. However, I am praying that a true-pacificist group stole and destroyed those rifles. My personal hopes fell through on Sunday night when I found an eight-page Panther bulletin at my door. Inside the bulletin read, "seize the time free the nine" and above the caption was a bayonet equipped automatic rifle. A second photo declared "pigs want war."

Organizers Stress Non-Violence

New Haven Readies For Panther Rallies

Stressing non-violence, New Haven Nine demonstration leaders and Yale University are preparing for the arrival of an estimated 25,000 student this weekend for a mass rally in support of Black Panthers who go on trial this Friday.

As its strike continues, Yale University is virtually mobilized both to analyse the New Haven Black Panther trial and to accommodate the 25,000 demonstrators expected for the May 1 demonstration. The demonstration groups have unanimouly supported a non-violent demonstration as the means of summoning sympathy for the Panthers.

The directing force behind the rally, the Panther Defense Committee, has announced that New Haven's Park Department has granted a permit to use the town green May 1 and 2. For Friday, May 1, the permit extends from 12 noon to 8 p.m. and on Saturday, from noon to 6 p.m. The permit explicily allows sound equipment and a performance platform for the rally.

The Panther Defense Committee also announced measures taken to insure a non-violent demonstration. Messengers have been sent to movement groups in New York, Boston, and Washington, informing them of the volatile New Haven situation and relating the Committee's urgent concern for non-violence. The Committee is organizing marshalls and legal observers to patrol the rally and prevent violence. A spokesman expressed hope that the police presence will be "understated."

The major demonstration group within Yale itself voiced the same concern. The Strike Steering Committee, composed of representatives from all undergraduate colleges and the Black Students' Alliance at Yale, said Monday:

"We will do all we can to keep the visitors to New Haven from inflammatory action; we ask the community. . .to see that no force, legal, quasi-legal, or extra-legal, be permitted to touch off. . .destruction in New Haven."

To underline its commitment to non-violence, Yale prepared to absorb a crowd estimated anywhere from 5,000 to 70,000 people. The University Dining Halls announced its intent to feed as many out-of-town demonstrators as possible; to do this the quality of meals given to undergraduates will be cut considerably. The meals for the weekend of May 1-3 will consist of grain meals and beans. The dining halls service will accommodate 35,000 people at each meal, with Yale students and demonstrators eating the same foods.

Virtually all the undergraduate colleges have opened their courtyards to house demonstrators, and some even offer their libraries and common rooms. Many students have offered their own rooms. The Law School has offered its courtyard, and the School of Art and Architecture has allotted space within its building. Saturday President Brewster's office said the fields around the Yale Bowl will be opened it necessary.

Strikers are canvassing in the New Haven community to explain their views on the trial.

New Haven Orientation Held This Afternoon

Workshops on first aid, street lore, and New Haven orientation will be held this afternoon for those planning to participate in the May 1, 2 and 3 activities in New Haven. The purpose of these workshops, to be held on the North Pleasant side of the campus pond beginning at 2 p.m., is to educate participants on what to expect from New Haven, where to stay while there, what problems may arise, and possible ways to deal with them

As approximately three hundred people are going to New Haven, there is a severe transportation problem. Campus organizers are currently trying to arrange to charter a bus for Friday and Saturday at a cost of five dollars per person, round trip.

All people going to New Haven can sign up at the Panther table or at the workshops today. All people going down should meet at 9:30 a.m. on Friday at Haigis Mall for final information and maps and shuffling of passengers.

New Group Seeks ROTC's End

The newly formed UMass Committee To End ROTC has announced a plan to bring their case before Chancellor Oswald Tippo this afternoon. Demanding an end to ROTC on this campus by next September, committee spokesmen stated, "It is morally imperative that ROTC should not exist." The Committee plans to meet in front of the Student Union at 1:00 this afternoon to present the demand to the Chancellor.

The Committee has invited Chancellor Tippo to the 1:00 rally. If he does not attend, the group will march to Whitmore where they hope to present the demand personally to the Chancellor.

Committee members have termed the referendum on April 10 - 11 proposals, including questions on ROTC, and military recruiting and research, a "sellout the administration has offered to the students."

Frosh Top Dart., 9-3, Five in Fourth Does It

By DAN KAMAL
Staff Reporter

A five-run outburst in the fourth inning enabled the UMass freshman baseball team to roll over the Dartmouth frosh, 9-3, yesterday afternoon at home.

Dartmouth opened the scoring in the first inning off UMass southpaw Tom White when Don Bates tripled and came all the way home as the relay from the outfield was misplayed. This gave the visitors a quick 1-0 lead.

The little Redmen tied the game in the bottom half of the first. Mark Palau singled home Earl Manley from second base with two out. The home team then went ahead in the third inning when Manley again came around to score, this time on a single by Bill Ryan.

UMass put the game out of reach with its big fourth inning. Dan Kelly opened the inning with a single. Rick Marchetta then doubled, Kelly stopping at third. White then hit a ground ball to short which was bobbled for an error, allowing Kelly to score.

Marchetta then scored on a wild pitch by Dartmouth relief pitcher Jim Kloppenberg, who had just come in for starter Jim Metzler. Fred Kloppenberg singled, Manley was intentionally walked to load the bases, and Esposito was hit by a pitch to force White in with the third run of the inning.

Palau reached on a fielder's choice with Ryan being forced at the plate for the first out of the inning. However, Kloppenberg walked Ryan to force in another run. The final run scored when Rick Scarpignato beat out a double-play attempt.

UMass stretched its lead with a single tally in the sixth when Palau reached on an error and came around on a double by Ryan. Dartmouth then scored single runs in the seventh and eighth innings.

UConn Nips Fr. Track

By KENN LITTMAN
Staff Reporter

UMass' freshman track team was defeated Tuesday by a score of 77 to 76 by a tough Connecticut team. Coach Kenneth O'Brien said that he was extremely pleased with the performance of the team and that the versatility of the team was again prominent as in the tri-meet against Northeastern University and Boston University.

Many members of the team are entered in three or more events and "some are giving their best performances in not only one event but in two or three." O'Brien pointed to the throwing events, where UMass outscored U-Conn 28-8, as the outstanding point of the meet.

In the throwing events Pete Natti again was sensational as he scored sixteen points, winning the hammer, discus and javelin and placing third in the shotput. He was just a few feet off the school's freshman record in the discus and the javelin. The javelin was swept by UMass as Natti took first, Jim Queeny took second and Gil Sylvia took third.

Barney Schneider continued his fine performance this year as he won the shotput and placed second in the hammer. Another outstanding performance was by Steve Levine who had his best time in winning the 440 in 51.5. Tom Jasmin continued his excellent running by winning the mile and two mile. Bob Landry won the 440 intermediates, which was his fifth event.

This shows the great versatility and stamina of the team. Mark Robinson placed second in the long jump and triple jump and third in the 220.

Other scorers were Bill Hackler second in the high jump; John Kamp, second in the pole vault; Sterling Orr, third in the 440; Dennis Busa, third in the 100; Jerry Schoen, third in the 880; Bob Clark, second in the high hurdles and Paul Wesockes, third in the high hurdles.

Next Saturday the freshman team will be at Central Connecticut for a tri-meet against Central Connecticut and Springfield College.

Dartmouth Scalps Redmen, 8-4

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Sophomore Charlie Janes, with ninth inning relief help from John Prado, muffled UMass' bats while his Dartmouth team mates were belting Redman pitching for 10 hits and eight runs as the Indians romped to an 8-4 victory yesterday at Varsity Field.

UMass' record is now 11-6 while Dartmouth's climbs to 10-8.

Dartmouth jumped on Redman starter Rich Rappoli quickly as leadoff batter Tom Hanna tripled to right center. Jim Bell then bounced one to shortstop Jim Saracino, who bobbled the ball, allowing Hanna to score.

The third batter, rightfielder Mike Mannarino, singled to center, giving the Indians runners on first and second with no outs. Cleanup hitter Bruce Saylor bounced into a 6-4-3 double play but Bell advanced to third. Footballer Bob Mlaker singled, driving Bell home as the Indians quickly took a 2-0 lead. Rappoli settled down and struck out Craig Conlkin to end the inning.

In the Redman first, Janes looked wild, but he settled down after Brian Martin singled and retired Paul Sulzicki on an easy fly to center.

Rappoli looked sharp in the second as he retired the side in order, but Janes struck out Semino and Sawyer, while Newell flied harmlessly to center.

In the third inning Rappoli was having trouble finding the plate as he fell behind on most of the hitters. Bell walked, Mannarino singled giving Dartmouth runners on first and second.

Saylor singled to load the bases. Fifth batter Mlaker grounded to Saracino, but Bell scored and there were runners on first and third with one out. Conklin walked loading the bases as catcher Tim Hannigan came to bat.

Hannigan singled to center knocking in Mannarino as UMass Coach Dick Bergquist replaced Rappoli with Jack Bernardo. The first batter to face Bernardo was Adams who clouted a blast to deep center narrowly missing a grand slam; two runs scored and Dartmouth led 6-0.

Janes attempted to squeeze Hannigan in, but missed the pitch and Redman catcher Mike Sawyer nailed Hannigan at the plate. Bernardo then struck out Janes to end the inning.

UMass, helped by three straight Dartmouth errors scored a run in the bottom of the third, after Janes had retired the first two Redman batters. Semino came up with the bases loaded, but bounced to the third baseman ending the inning.

In the fourth, Dartmouth scored its last two runs off Lou Colabello who was having trouble finding the plate. Hanna walked on four pitches, stole second, and third as Bell took a third strike.

Mannarino doubled, driving Hanna home, Saylor was given an intentional pass, but a wild pitch on the third ball let Mannarino advance to third.

Mlaker singled driving in the eighth Dartmouth run. Colabello suddenly found the groove as his curve started dropping in and he finished strong getting Conklin to ground into a 5-4-3 double play.

Redman pitching settled down as Colabello, Tom Austin and Brian Martin shut out Dartmouth the rest of the way.

BASELINE BANTER - Janes finished with eight K's but could have sued for non-support as the Indians committed seven errors . . . on the plus side for the Redmen were the two double plays turned in by the infield . . . Colabello seems to have found the groove again, and sophs Austin and Martin were very impressive in their outings . . . Austin gave up one hit in the two innings he pitched while Martin gave up two in his two innings although one was very questionable . . . Bell grounded to Semino who threw wide to Ellerbrook . . .

TOM SEMINO (10) slides into second in attempt to break up double play during Tuesday's 14-12 victory over UConn. He made a valiant effort but Umpire ruled he was out of the base path and awarded DP to Huskies. (MDC photo by Gary Slickman)

UConn Axes UMass Tracksters

By EARLE BARROLL
Staff Reporter

Before Tuesday's track meet with UConn, Coach Ken O'Brien felt that without the services of his two ace sprinters, Walter Mayo and Dave Marble, his Redmen would not be able to defeat the Huskies, and that he was hoping that eachs trackman for UMass would turn in an outstanding, if not the best, effort of his career.

On this occasion O'Brien called the right shots as the Huskies defeated his Redman tracksters, 101-53, at Storrs, but in the process many outstanding performances were turned in by the Redmen. The final margin may seem quite large but after analyzing the meet and realizing what the two sprinters would have meant, if they were able to perform, then the margin just doesn't appear to be as impressive as it looks on paper.

The weight events went as expected with Paliwoda of U-Conn winning the hammer throw, and his teammate Conners winning both the shot put and discus. Redman Eddie Arcaro once again turned in another outstanding performance in the weight events as he took seconds in the hammer throw and discus, and a third in the shot put. Arcaro's mark of 175'2 was the best effort of his career in the hammer throw.

Rocco Pettito threw the javelin longer than he had ever thrown before but had to settle for third place. His throw of 190'9 is the best Redman effort in this event so far this season.

Dave Centerbury and Eddie Shaughnessey placed one-two in the long jump and in so doing came up with the best performances in this event. Canterbury's jump measured 21' 1/4 and Shaughnessey's was just a little shorter at 20'8.

Then Shaughnessey came back and placed first in the high jump with Cal Carpenter equalling Shaughnessey's mark but placing second on more misses. Their effort was measured at 6'4.

Centerbury and Pettito continued their fine performances by placing one-two in the triple jump. Canterbury's leap was 41'6 1/4 with Pettito's jump measuring 40'7.

The pole vault was a sweep for the Huskies as was the 100 yard dash. Connecticut's quarter mile relay team also defeated a makeshift Redman quartet, but in its losing effort the UMass relay team ran well enough to be timed at 44.4 seconds. The latter two events mentioned above would have been all UMass if the sprinters were not injured.

Next came the 220 yard dash and versitile Jerry Spellman filled in for the absent sprinters and ran an excellent race, just being nosed out at the finish with a time of 23 seconds flat.

Spellman then ran his race, the 120 yard high hurdles, and won in the time of 14.8 seconds with teammate Jim Graves finishing third.

Graves ran in the next hurdle event, the 440 yard intermediates and finished second in his best effort to date, 59.6 seconds. Larry Paulson, normally a long distance runner came in third in this event with a fine time of 61 seconds.

Dave Evans turned in another of his now familiar top notch efforts as he ran away with the 440 yard run in the time of 50.2 seconds. Evans usually runs the half mile, but dropped down to this event for variety and came up with an effort that seasoned performers would like to match.

This was Evans last track meet of the season as it came to an abrupt ending when he pulled a hamstring muscle on the anchor leg of the mile relay, the last event of the meet. His loss will be felt by the team as he could always be counted on for the big effort when it was needed.

Craig McColl of UConn won both the half-mile and mile runs. Al Mangan finished third in the half with Larry Paulson taking his second third place of the meet in the mile.

Ron Wayne showed the effects of his knee injury with a sub-par performance for him, finishing third in the two mile behind old rivalries, Rich Flanagan and John Vitale. Wayne is now working his knee back into the shape that he will need it in when he runs in the YC and New England track championships at the end of May.

And then the meet ended on that sad note with the injury to Evans. His injury is one of many that have hampered the team so far this spring.

NCAA Places UMass on One Year Probation

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

UMass' intercollegiate athletic teams were placed on a one-year probation by the Policy-making Council of the National Collegiate Athletic Association for having violated the NCAA's 1.6 academic rule.

Said action was decided upon on Tuesday at the wrap-up session of the NCAA ' s five-day meeting in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. It came because UMass failed to meet the minimum standards for first year athletic participation in the years 1966, 67, and 68.

The actual violation of the NCAA code involved 12 UMass freshman athletes who were allowed to participate in practice sessions even though they were riding sub 1.6 cumes. Out of the 12, 11 went on to take part in game action.

The decision on probation has been best described as a "slap on the wrist" for the UMass teams. It means that the various Redman squads will be watched very closely by the NCAA for the duration of one year, during which time they will be allowed to enter into post-season athletic competition.

The present situation had its beginnings in September of '68 when UMass "blew the whistle on itself" by notifying the NCAA and the Yankee Conference that the 1.6 academic rule had been violated by 12 freshman athletes during 1966, 67 and 68.

On December 5, 1969, the Presidents of the six Yankee Conference member institutes met in order to decide upon appropriate action. The main agreement made at that meeting was to have "the Conference Commissioner to obtain through the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference an independent investigation with respect to the 1969 eligibility of certain members of the University of Massachusetts 1969 football squad."

In reaction to this move by the Yan-Con, the 18-member NCAA Council stated on Tuesday, "that the University of Massachusetts be placed on probation for a period of one year from this date (April 28, 1970); it being understood that prior to the expiration of the probationary period, the NCAA Committee on Infractions shall review the athletics policies and practices of the institution."

And so, in essence, the UMass Athletic Department has been told that it is "naughty", and that the NCAA will keep close tabs on it for a year and, if during that time it is "nice", it will be in favor with the NCAA as it was before the infraction.

All those interested in broadcasting UMass football games next fall should attend a meeting at the WMUA studios (old Engineering building) tonight at 9 p.m.

Red Sox Blast A's, 5-3, In A Real Pier Sixer

BOSTON (AP) - Sonny Siebert flashed his sharpest form of the year before being ejected in a sixth inning beanball incident, striking out nine batters and picking up his first victory as the Boston Red Sox downed the Oakland Athletics 5-3 last night.

The veteran right hander, who had a 12.00 earned run average after getting bomed in his first three starts, shut out the A's on four hits over the first five innings but left prematurely when a melee developed after he hit Reggie Jackson with a pitch. Relievers Lee Strange, Ken Brett and Sparky Lyle preserved the triumph.

Singles by Mike Andrews and Luis Alvarado, a wild pitch by loser Chuck Dobson and Carl Yastremski's two run single gave the Red Sox a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

Siebert was hit by a pitch in the fifth inning - the first of two incidents which emptied both dugouts and led to the sixth inning fracas. Mike Andrews followed with a bunt single, Alvarado doubled home one run and Tony Conigliaro singled home another to make it 4-0

Pinch hitter Tito Francona homered for Oakland in the seventh, but Boston got that run back in its half on Alvarado's second double and another single by Conigliaro. The A's scored twice more in the eighth on a walk, a double by Don Mincher, a ground out and an infield hit by Bobby Pena.

The trouble which started in the fifth erupted into a wild melee in the Oakland sixth when Siebert's first pitch of the inning hit Jackson. Several Oakland players charged the mound and knocked Siebert down. Jackson also scuffled with the Boston pitcher, and both dugouts and bullpens emptied before order was restored.

17 Starters as 96th Derby Day Approaches

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Mother Nature and Doc Lavin will help make the final decision, but for the moment 17 horses seem likely starters in Saturday's 96th Kentucky Derby.

All 17 trainers are keeping wary eyes on the sky over Churchill Downs, some hoping for rain, but most fearing it. They also are concerned with the results when Lavin, the racing secretary, draws for post positions this morning. With a possibility of the largest field since Tomy Lee won in 1959, post position will be a serious factor.

Most trainers favor a starting gate near the middle of the pack or toward the rail from center.

Two dandidates - Supreme Quality and Fathom - were withdrawn yesterday from Derby consideration, Supreme Quality because of a foot problem and Fathom because of a poor showing in Tuesday's Derby Trial.

The loss of Fathom means the "for men only" sign still hands over the Derby jockey room, Diana Crump would have been the colt's rider.

My Dad George is the probable early betting favorite for the $125,000 added classic, which starts at 5:40 P.M., EDT, Saturday and will be carried on national television and radio by CBS.

Trainer Bud McManus tagged My Dad George as "a spoiled brat with a lot of money. He decides what he wants to do in training."

4000 Troops Alerted For Seale Demonstration

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) - Gov. John Dempsey requested today that federal troops be placed on alert to handle possible violence in New Haven during the Friday and Saturday demonstrations on behalf of eight Black Panthers facing trial in a murder case.

Several hundred UMass students are expected to travel to New Haven for the demonstration this weekend.

In a letter to Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, Dempsey said the "possibility that violence could escalate beyond our capacity to contain it, and additional forces would be necessary."

Earlier he placed the entire Connecticut National Guard on alert for possible duty.

Thousands of activists from throughout the nation are expected in New Haven for the demonstrations on the spacious New Haven Green, across the street from the courthouse where National Black Panther Party Chairman Bobby G. Seale and seven other Panthers are to be tried for the slaying of a fellow Panther.

"As a precautionary measure I therefore request that an adequate number of federal troops be placed on alert and positioned so that they could respond within a minimum of four hours," Dempsey said.

Less than an hour before his announcement, a spokesman for the pentagon said in Washington no federal units had been placed on riot alert.

Kingman Brewster Jr., president of Yale, told a news conference the rally is not in any sense sponsored by the univerrity.

Brewster said he felt the rally can only "heat up the atmosphere" in New Haven and make it more difficult for the eight Black Panther defendants to receive a fair trial.

On Cambodia

Senators: He's Hurt Himself

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Republican senator who has been a strong backer of President Nixon's policies said Thursday night the decision to send U.S. ground troops into Cambodia will bring an adverse public reaction and a sharp downturn in Nixon's support.

Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., said "There is no doubt in my mind the public reaction is going to be adverse.

"I just can't see anything but an increase in wounded, killed, and this will cause a sharp downturn in support of the President's policies," Dole said. He and other GOP senators received a briefing from administration officials on Nixon's speech at the Capitol.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., a longtime critic of the war, left the room shaking his head. "Unbelievable," he exclaimed.

But Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, who had remained silent after initial announcement Wednesday of U.S. backed South Vietnamese operations in Cambodia, said "There has never been a time when it is more important to hold one's emotional fire and to trust the President who alone has all the facts."

"I'm with the President," said Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz.

"It was a fine presentation," said Sen. J. Caleb Boggs, R-Del.

But Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., who has called for withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Vietnam by Dec. 1, said "It was pretty ghastly."

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said he was terribly disturbed and concerned about the President's remarks. He said Thursday night's speech and the one 10 days ago in which Nixon said a just peace was in sight were "irreconcilable" and added: "The President has decided to seek a military method of ending this war rather than a negotiated method."

Earlier, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, calling the attacks into Cambodia "a grave development," demanded that the Nixon administration answer "important questions concerning United States policy in the widening war in Indochina."

It scheduled another meeting for Friday.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said the committee specifically wanted to know if the attack was requested or backed by the Cambodian government and was intended as a one shot, or a continuing operation.

Proposals to prohibit Nixon from sending U.S. combat troops into Cambodia became embrolled in heated debate in the House. All action was put off until next Wednesday.

But before debate was halted, the House appeared close to approving a ban against sending in combat troops without approval of Congress unless the President determined the action was needed to save U.S. lives in Vietnam.

New Senate Officers Discuss Future

President Glenn Elters

Speaking on his upcoming appointment as the next student trustee, Senate President Glenn Elters said, "I see myself as a representative of the senate on legislative matters but as an independent student I'll have to be as broad in my representation as possible."

As a transfer student from the University of Denver, Elters has served (in the past year) first as secretary, then vice-chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, and chairman of the Finance Committee.

He is majoring in government, concentrating in foreign relations.

Elters also serves on the University Governance Committee and seems fairly optimistic about the proposed University Senate.

Asked about student representation in the new proposal, he replied, "I don't think equality in numbers is essential - 30% or more would be enough."

"Students should have sole concern on some things, such as our living conditions, but we should hear the faculty's side on areas like grading systems and curriculum. If we understand their arguments, we can form a better argument ourselves."

"The administration should just implement policies recommended by the students and faculty. But their views have to be listened to so we can understand their side, too."

The University Senate will be a legislative body that includes administrators, faculty, graduate students, and undergraduates to replace the separate senates that exist now.

Elters does not foresee a change in his role as president if and when the transition is made from the Student Senate to the new body.

"My major stress will be on academics. The reform that has taken place in the College of Arts and Sciences has to spread to a university-wide basis."

Treasurer Rick Verrochi

As Senate Treasurer, Rick Verrochi sees his first obligation as "working for the best system of finance for students."

"We've reached a time when RSO has to be reshaped. It has to become more responsive to students' needs, acting essentially like a bank, an overseer of financial affairs."

"Students are becoming more socially aware. I personally feel they want more services and social action groups such as CAF and CEQ," he added.

Treasurer Verrochi would like a system of priorities set up to make sure students will get the most for their tax money. "The Senate has to spend money realizing they have only so much of it to spend."

Serving two terms as the senator from Greenough, Rick has been a member of all three Senate financial committees - Ways and Means (of which he was chairman beford taking office), Budgets, and Finance.

The main emphasis of his past Senate work has been put on revising the Financial Policy Act. The revised edition was accepted by the Senate several weeks ago.

"In working with the financial committees, the treasurer should act as a coordinating body, meeting regularly with those three committee chairmen."

"The Budgets Committee is definitely the most important since it has almost full say in deciding budgets." (The Senate, as a whole, reserve the right to strike a budget completely.)

Verrochi expects to be working most with the finance committee next fall, since that is the time new appropriations come up under senate consideration.

A sophomore, Rick is majoring in government (pre-law). When asked his reaction of the Waters' withdrawal, he said, "Bob won an individual race that night - he won the respect of everyone in the Senate Chambers."

Senator Robert Waters withdrew from the treasurer's race on the night of elections.

Vice-President Pat Belany

"We need a revitalization - a government that governs the university and is responsive to community needs."

Vice-President Pat Beharry sees this effort as the main goal for student government to strive for in the next academic year. She feels it can best be achieved by working along with the other senates and administration to set up a new governance system.

Of her duties as an officer, Pat said, "The vice-president is mainly the internal organizer of the senate, administering to the committee structure and assisting the president whenever called upon."

"At one time, the vice-president was only an internal organizer, not a spokesman or assistant, but expansion has caused the office to change in the past few months. As the student body changes, the Senate has to."

Miss Beharry maintains that making the work of the Senate known to students depends on their interest in that work and the extent to which their individual senators keep them informed.

"More student interest would make the channels of communication we now have open, work," she added.

Giving her view of decentralization in student government, Pat answered, "At a university of this size with areas so diverse in population, budgets, and facilities, area governments are necessary for students to adjust to their living environment through government."

Pat Beharry is majoring in Urban and Regional Studies. Her Senate credits before being elected Vice-President, included the chairmanship of Finance Committee two years ago and Secretary of the Senate prior to the recent elections.

U.S. Troops Raid Neutral Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon dramatically announced Thursday night that American ground troops have attacked - at his order - a Communist base complex extending 20 miles into Cambodia.

Nixon told a nationwide radio and television audience that he would stand by his order, certain to provoke controversy, even at the risk of becoming a one term President.

"This is not an invasion of Cambodia," he asserted, "The areas in which these attacks will be launched are completely occupied and controlled by North Vietnamese forces. Our purpose is not to occupy the areas. Once enemy forces are driven out of these sanctuaries and their military supplies destroyed, we will withdraw."

The attack, commanded by American officers and augmented by units of the South Vietnamese army, began about 7 p.m. EDT Washington time - about two hours before Nixon addressed the nation and about one hour before he met with Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress to discuss his decision.

A White House source, who declined to be quoted by name, said several thousand U. S. combat troops were involved in the operation, which he said is expected to last six weeks to two months.

This official said the new move would not affect Nixon's April 20 announcement that at least 150,000 America n troops will be withdrawn from South Vietnam by May 1971.

Nixon said, "I have concluded the time has come for action" because, he argued, the enemy's moves "in the last 10 days clearly endanger the lives of Americans who are in Vietnam now and would constitute an unacceptable risk to those who would be there after our withdrawal of 150,000."

The chief executive said he had three choices, one to do nothing, the second to provide massive military aid to Cambodia and the third "to go to the heart of the trouble."

Announcing that he had selected the third alternative, he said:

"Tonight, American and South Vietnamese units will attack the headquarters for the entire Communist military operation in South Vietnam. This key control center has been occupied by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong for years in blatant violation of Cambodia's neutrality.

"We take this action not for the purpose of expanding the war into Cambodia but for the purpose of ending the war in Vietnam and winning the just peace we will desire," Nixon said.

The area of the attack was in the "fishhook" area of Cambodia, about 50 miles northwest of Saigon and northeast of Cambodia's "Parrot's Beak" region attacked Wednesday by South Vietnamese troops with American advice and support.

Nixon, without naming him, noted that Republican Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont had said Wednesday American involvement in Cambodia meant the GOP had lost all chance of winning the November elections.

"Others are saying today," Nixon declared, "that this move against the enemy's sanctuaries will make me a one term president. No one is more aware than I am of the political consequences of the action I have taken. . .

"But I have rejected all political considerations in making this decision.

". . .I would rather be a one term President than to be a two term President at the cost of seeing America become a second-rate power and see this nation accept the first defeat in its proud 190 year history."

The President concluded that rather than wind up by seeking support for himself, "I ask for support of our brave men fighting tonight halfway around the world - not for territory - not for glory - but so that their younger brothers and their sons and your sons will be able to live in peace and freedom."

One section of the address seemed aimed at Communist China and the Soviet Union. Said Nixon:

"These actions are in no way directed at the security interests of any nation. Any government that chooses to use these actions as a pretext for harming relations with the United States will be doing so on its own responsibility and at its own initiative and we will draw the appropriate conclusions."

Reciting American actions to halt the bombing of North Vietnam, reduce air operations in the South, plan to withdraw more than 250,000 troops and offer to negotiate flexibly, Nixon said the reply from the Communist camp "has been intransigence at the conference table, belligerence in Hanoi, massive military aggression in Laos and Cambodia and stepped up attacks in South Vietnam, designed to increase American casualties."

Using strong language, he went on:

"This attitude has become intolerable. We will not react to this threat to American lives merely by plaintive diplomatic protests. If we did, the credibility of the United States would be destroyed in every area of the world where only the power of the United States deters aggression. . .

"This action puts the leaders of North Vietnam on notice that we will be patient in working for peace, we will be conciliatory at the conference table, but, we will not be humiliated. We will not be defeated. We will not allow American men by the thousands to be killed by an enemy from privileged sanctuaries."

Nixon, shown here in front of his daughter's Northampton apartment, said last night that American "advisors" and combat troops were being sent far into Cambodia to "protect that nation from Communist invasion." (MDC photo)

The Local Reaction

"Frustrated And Cynical"... "A One Term President"

President Nixon's speech last night seemed to frustrate and evoke cynical laughs from many of the 300 persons watching the Student Union T.V. After the speech, a random survey of opinions was taken by the MDC.

"Nixon must know what he is doing or he wouldn't be in office... This action is better than no action at all. Peace should and probably will be the ultimate goal. I don't think it will be necessary to go into Thailand and Laos."
--Rich Hosley

"I think he knows a lot more than he is telling us. The idea that America can't accept humiliation is warped since so many countries think badly of us now. We have totally committed ourselves to destruction. It's horrible." - Anonymous Woman

"He was transparent; I've heard it all before. I don't accept his pitch and I won't mind a one term president." - Ken Perkins

"He is talking World War II talk. Bring the boys home to what? He appears as simple-minded as Truman was. Escalation isn't a way to end the war, especially in terms of what happened in World War II." - 43-year-old woman

"He is trying to deceive the American people. His logic is good if you accept his premises, but I don't agree with him at all. He is carrying his power too far... I hope Congress questions it tomorrow." Richard Hausek

"His speech didn't embarrass me this time, although he seemed like a teacher pointing at his map.. He has a strange idea that everyone's out to get him; why can't the U.S. be a second rate power?"
Steve Mosher

"There's no doubt about it, he'll be a one term president." - Jane Rauk

"Nixon has widened the war in South East Asia to protect the troops already there. He used the same rational that President Kennedy and Johnson used to justify their intensification of the war in the past. . The reasoning is illogical because we shouldn't be there in the first place." - Arnold Smithe.

U.S. Bombs Last Night

SAIGON (AP) - The Untied States early Friday hurled combat troops and B52 bombers, the toughest aerial arm, into an offensive to crush the Communist high command inside Cambodia.

It was the first strike by the eight engine Stratofortresses against the Cambodian sanctuary of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces.

China Rips Nixon Stand

TOKYO (AP) - Red China said Thursday that U. S. penetration of Cambodia is "naked gangster logic" for "indefinitely enlarging its aggression and wars of aggression."

It said the Untied States has "miscalculated the situation" and it announced "the Chinese people are standing on the same battle line with the three Indo-Chinese people" in Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia.

Mao Tse Tung's offical party organ, the Peking People's Daily, said this in an editorial distributed before President Nixon announced American forces are moving into Cambodia.

There was no immediate Chinese reaction to Nixon's speech.

Highlights of the Speech

Move Taken "To Guarentee Success" in Viet

WASHINGTON (AP) - High lights of President Nixon's address Thursday night on the situation in southeast Asia:

After full consultation. . .I have concluded that the actions of the enemy in the last 10 days clearly endanger the lives of Americans who are in Vietnam now and would constitute an unacceptable risk to those who would be there after our withdrawal of 150,000 troops by next year. . .

To protect our men who are in Vietnam and to guarantee the continued success of our withdrawal and Vietnamization programs, I have concluded the time has come for action. . .

For the past five years. . .North Vietnam has occupied military sanctuaries all along the Cambodian frontier with South Vietnam. . . they are used for hit and run attacks on American and South Vietnamese forces in South Vietnam.

These Communist occupied territories contain major base camps, training sites, logistic facilities, weapons and ammunition factories, air strips and prison of war compounds. . .

North Vietnam in the last two weeks has stripped away all pretense of respecting the sovereignty or neutrality of Cambodia. Thousands of their soldiers are invading the country from the sanctuary; they are encircling the capital of Phnom Penh. Cambodia has sent out a call to the U. S. and a number of other nations for assistance.

If this effort succeeds, Cambodia would become a vast enemy staging area and springboard for attacks on South Vietnam along 600 miles of frontier - and a refuge where enemy troops could return from combat without fear of retaliation. . .

This is my decision:

In cooperation with the armed forces of South Vietnam, attacks are being launched this week to clean out major enemy sanctuaries from the Cambodian Vietnam border. . .

This is not an invasion of Cambodia. The areas in which these attacks will be launched are completely occupied and controlled by North Vietnamese forces. Our purpose is not to occupy the area. Once enemy forces are driven out of these sanctuaries and their military supplies destroyed, we will withdraw. . .

It is not power but our will and character that is being tested. . . The question all Americans must ask and answer. . .does the richest and strongest nation in thehistory of the world have the character to meet a direct challenge by a group which rejects every efforts to win a just peace, ignores our warning, tramples on solemn agreements, violates the neutrality of an unarmed people, and uses our prisoners as hostages?

If we failed to meet this challenge all other nations will be on notice that despite its overwhelming power, the United States when a real crisis comes, will be found wanting. . .

Egyptian Ambassador Greeted Warmly Here

Egyptian Ambassador to the United Nations Mohammed El-Zayyat, the first speaker in the DVP's two-part series on the Middle East crisis, spoke last night of "the spirit of learning to be objective as well as one can be objective." His speech reflected this spirit.

The small crowd gathered to hear him shared this mood. Although the group was sharply divided politically - one set of people immediately rose for the Ambassador when he entered, while the rest applauded in their seats - a friendly and restrained atmosphere was maintained throughout. While it is unlikely that many were moved from their previous political position by Mr. El-Zayyat's words, everyone involved admired his tolerance and his rational approach.

Mr. EL-Zayyat began his assessment of the Middle East crisis by talking of fear: the fear of the Jews because of the oppression they have endured for millenia, the fear of the Arabs caused by what Israel has done in securing nationhood. The Jews have undergone the Russian pogroms and the Nazi attempts to exterminate them; the Arabs have suffered massacres at the hands of the Jews.

There are essentially two groups in the land Israel occupies: the native Palestineans, two and a half million people predominantly Moslems and Christians, and the two and a half million Jews who came from without. Mr. El-Zayyat spoke of the problems the existence of these groups in one country has caused. They are distinct; the dominant force, the Jews, have tended to make second-class citizens of the native Arabs.

The neighboring Arab countries not only sympathize with their people under Israel's influence, but fear an Israeli desire for expansion. Israel has no legal borders, and certain Israeli factions, including Ben-Gurion's, have spoken of Israel's expanding across the Middle East. (The United States, which as thirteen colonies did not establish definite boundaries, and which expanded from ocean to ocean, is a parallel.)

Extremist propaganda on both sides has worsened the situation. Radio Cairo has spoken of a war of extermination against Israel; some Israelis have spoken of being justified in killing the Arabs, who they believe feel strongly enough to kill them. Neither position is a formal policy of the countries involved, but such talk does make for extreme extralegal action.

At present there is continuing friction on the outskirts of the land Israel dominates. There is an Israeli urge towards expansion, and an Arab desire for revenge, as well as a mutual desire for security. Mr. El-Zayyat spoke of the security which peace affords, and supported the United Nations Charter in this matter.

However, he could not deny that his own side had violated the cease-fire the United Nations called for; he justified Arab actions in terms of the problems Israel's indefinite boundaries create.

The main thrust of his arguments was not directed towards the abolition of Israel, but towards improved treatment by Israel of the native Palestineans. If Israel continues to treat its Arab citizens badly, in defiance of a motion of the United Nations, the oppressive and dangerous hate now being generated in the Middle East will continue. Mr. El-Zayyat stated that neither the Arabs nor the Israelis can expect to live in the past. The Arabs cannot go on thinking of abolishing Israel; the Israelis cannot go on thinking of the power which Israel commanded thousands of years ago.

The arrangement of states in the Middle East makes for conflicts of nationalism. This is a fact. But if a spirit of equality and of brotherhood can prevail, the tensions involved will lesser appreciably.

Mr. El-Zayyat stated that Israel must apply these principles to her own internal affairs as an absolute prerequisite for peace. The Israeli's treatment of Palestinean Arabs creates unbearable tension he said. While endorsing ideological Zionism, the Jews' struggle against oppression as a group, he deplored political Zionism - Israel's advocation of expansion.

Factions on both sides have created an atmosphere of hate, he stressed. Peace must prevail, and Arabs and Jews view eachother as brothers. Otherwise constant local wars, perhaps leading to a world war, will go on.

Who's Who on Ending the Draft

By ARLEN BRUNSON
Staff Reporter

The following article is a report on a visit to Washington, April 26-28, a of group of 23 Individuals, composed of members of the Mass. Council to Repeal the Draft, including two local members of the Committee to Repeal the Draft, and members of the American Friends Service Committee of Cambridge.

The purpose of the visit was to learn exactly where certain Congressmen stand on the issues of draft repeal and the volunteer army, as well as to encourage Congressmen to take a position for draft repeal. The group spoke with over fifteen Congressmen or their aides. The response was not particularly encouraging; however, there appears to be enormous potential for persuading Congressmen to support draft repeal.

Positions tend to fall into four major categories. First, there are a number of Congressmen who believe that the draft should be repealed by June 30, 1971. This group supports the conclusions of the Gates Commission. Included are Senators Hatfield, McGovern, Goldwater, Goodell, and most other "radical" Congressmen.

Secondly, there are those who favor the concept of a volunteer army in principle but feel that we should wait until we are no longer involved in Vietnam-type wars to eliminate the draft. This is a sizable minority in Congress including many Republicans, as this is basically the President's plan for the future of the draft. These individuals can probably be influenced more than any other. They should be made aware of the fact that the power of conscription is necessary for and integral to involvement in Vietnam-type wars and therefore these wars will most likely continue as long as the draft is maintained.

Thirdly, there are the reformers, the most prominent being Senator Kennedy. They believe that the present system is inequitable and that a volunteer army is undesirable. They therefore contend that reforms which would leave nearly every young male equally eligible for the draft would provide essential manpower in a just and equitable manner. Their plan is to gradually eliminate all major deferments except for conscientious objectors and those physically or mentally unfit for service. The underlying principle for their desire to keep the draft is that all citizens owe something to the state (shades of Nazi Germany).

It is not surprising that, with this principle in mind, they have seriously considered the possibility of instituting a system of Universal Military Training or National Service - rejected only because of incredibly high costs. Their opposition to a volunteer force is fivefold: 1. It would be more attractive to poor individuals because those in the middle and upper income groups would be able to make more money outside the service. 2. Draftees are necessary to "civilianize" the military. 3. A voluntary service would cost too much. The money could be used to improve social conditions elsewhere. 4. The draft is necessary to create dissent against unjust wars. 5. The President would be able to obtain appropriations from Congress for increased volunteers as easily as he now obtains appropriations for more draftees. Therefore, they contend, reforms, not repeal, are necessary. The first three points are thoroughly refuted by the Gates Commission, the fourth is absurd logic, while the fifth point is probably true but not relevant to draft repeal.

The fourth position of Congressmen includes those who are unconcerned, undecided, or ignorant about draft repeal. Unfortunately, this accounts for the largest number of Congressmen.

As for Massachusetts, Harrington is for draft repeal now, Heckler, Conte, Morse, Philbin, and Brooke are for a volunteer army in principle, Kennedy is for reform only, and Burke, O'Neill, and McCormack are basically unconcerned.

OTHER OBSERVATIONS:

1. Senator Kennedy's stand is extremely important, for it appears that many other "liberal" Congressmen tend to wait for Kennedy to make a final decision before they make theirs. It is imperative that Kennedy's arguments be completely refuted. Unfortunately, arguments from the Gates Commission report will be insufficient, as he terms the report "a political maneuver." To emphasize the importance of draft repeal and the significance of Senator Kennedy's decision, about 17 members of the Massachusetts group staged a sit-in and talk-in in Mr. Kennedy's office Monday night speaking with his aides for about three hours. The group was escorted out of the building by the chief of the Capital Police after receiving assurances that they would be arrested if they remained any longer. In order to dramatize their position, seven members of the group slept on the steps of the Old Senate Office Building that evening. They greeted Kennedy Tuesday morning, but were only allowed a half hour to talk with him about draft repeal. They considered the discussion unproductive.

2. The Senate Armed Service Committee of which Senator Brooke is a member should be holding hearings on the draft any day now. It is unlikely that the House Armed Services Committee will hold similar hearings this year.

3. Congress will probably grant the President the power to eliminate student deferments as of April 24, 1970.

4. Congress will probably extend, with protest from the vocal minority in Congress, the Selective Service Act for at least one year at the President's request.

5. Draft resistance is vital. Had there not been persistent and increasing resistance over the last few years, the draft would not be an issue today. There are now over 23,000 draft violation cases pending before federal courts. The system is not capable of handling increased resistance. In the final analysis, draft resistance may bring the downfall of conscription in the Untited States.

6. Hopefully, President Nixon's decision to send troops into Cambodia will alienate more Congressmen from the President's plans for the future of the military and the draft.

NOTES:

1. Frederick W. Lord, representing the National Council to Repeal the Draft will be in Amherst the week of May 4. He will speak on May 6, at 8:00 in the Grace Episcolpal Church Parish House in Amherst, about the draft and draft repeal. His visit is being sponsored by the Valley Peace Center.
2. The Committee to Repeal the Draft is interested in any information which will help us to understand the positions of Congressmen on the draft. If you have received a letter from a Congressman recently, please bring it to us or send us a copy. Our office is the 5th Floor Lounge Annex, Box F, Washington Tower, UMass. or call 546-5345.
3. If you are interested in writing a letter to your Congressman, the Committee to Repeal the Draft has a considerable amount of printed information which you may be able to use to construct a challenging letter on the draft.
4. Refuse to pay telephone taxes. Information available from the Valley Peace Center or the Committee to Repeal the Draft.

Socialist Gubernatorial Hopefull Lashes Kennedy in Speech

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

Critizing our society for being "based on the right of profit and private property to decide what is to be done" Peter Camejo, candidate for U.S. Senator in Massachusetts for the Socialist Workers Party, stated that the government really represents the rich not the mass of the people because the rich control the elections.

Camejo pointed to Edward Kennedy who is his opponent in the upcoming elections and said that he is so rich that everything is free. "He doesn't work; he rules." The rich according to Camejo feel, "it is a basic principle that the system must be supported."

Camejo went on to condemn the news media as one of those supporters since they are private businesses concerned only with profit. He said the illusion that prevails is that "the mass of the people run the government." However, he pointed to this as a huge farce. Using the depression period as an example, he asked who wanted a depression.

FROM OUR SIDE

A Turning Point?

There will be hundreds from the UMass community travelling to New Haven today for what could be a turning point in Movement activities. For New Haven will not be the place for the "peace now, we shall overcome" freaks.

This does not say that New Haven will definitely be violent. Leaders at a Cage rally Tuesday expressed hopes that the weekend would be a learning experience and stay non-violent. But as another leader said, "There's no way we can stop those who want to be violent from doing so."

And this is the change in the Movement. For now there are people who are not afraid of using violence, who are disgusted by the uselessness of moratoria, etc.

Violence in New Haven would be disasterous for Bobby Seale, for students and for dissenters especially coming on the heels of the extraordinary statements by Vice-President Agnew which urge the ouster of Yale President Kingman Brewster. Brewster, in principle, has approved a Yale student strike in support of Bobby Seale. Violence in New Haven would reward Agnew's conceptions of a responsive administrator, reward his drive for repression in America.

But truthfully where can the movement go? Three massive moratoria are met with troops in Cambodia. An articulate mass of American youth, struggling to be heard, are met by a President's decision to delay lowering of the voting age. Draft reform has come to mean the end of deferments.

Hopefully, the UMass contingent and the thousands of people they will join in New Haven can demonstrate peacefully and bring about a just trial for Bobby Seale.

But if violence occurs, who should rest with the blame, demonstration leaders who have urged people to attend teach-ins and remain non-violent, or a government that turns a deaf ear to its youth and begins another war?

Can't Stop for Trivia

At Wednesday night's "Student Leaders' Night", former Editor-In-Chief of the Daily Collegian would have no part of the night's activities.

This paper chose this stand for a number of reasons. The occasion is the night for frivolous back-slapping on the part of that minute minority of the campus known as "student leaders". On a campus that has 18,000 people, that has as many diverse types of people as this one, how can anyone with a straight face brand himself a "student leader"?

How, in 1970, can a group of students choose honorary fraternities, cheerleaders, etc., and brand them the most important honors a student can receive?

The DAILY COLLEGIAN ignored Student Leaders night because it is a complete anachronism to this campus, this country and this world, in the year 1970.

All the honors that are given carry with them a jacket that the lucky winners wears with pride, whatever the organization. Student leaders can then tell each other apart.

But maybe their jackets also serve to help the student body pick them out. What they see aren't leaders but individuals, out of place in the year 1970, and acting out a fantasy that they are leaders.

Student leaders night should cease existing. The world is moving too fast to stop for such trivia.

Seale on Fascism

America is a capitalist country, which is to say, it is built on the idea of a handful of individuals exploiting the people for profit, owning the properties, the goods, the resources which belong to the people themselves and from whom they were stolen.

A capitalist is just a grand scale criminal, a super-gangster who robs countries, peoples' whole populations, instead of liquor stores.

But because the capitalists in America own, control and regulate the laws and machineries of the state, they can't be brought to justice, even though they are the real criminals and their crimes against the people are enormous, their thefts and murders running into the millions each year.

Capitalist America is not responsible to the people, it is the enemy of the people. Its theory and practice are lawless, because all it's interested in is theft and oppression, that's why the fascist rulers in this country do not obey the constitution or enforce it. Instead, they violate it.

Let's get to a definition of fascism.

Fascism occurs when the capitalist state is in deep economic, political and racial trouble. In economic terms, fascism is the conversion of the economy to a warfare state, developing an enormous military machine to keep capitalism from collapsing. This war machine keeps the white proletarian masses employed, and its propaganda and practice keep them agitated with racism. This constant racist agitation justifies the racist war machinery the fascist state uses abroad on non-white people and justifies the use of that same war machine for race wars on non-white people at home. Fascism is a racist, military machine that works both internally and abroad, at the same time.

Fascism brutalizes the masses, castrates the so-called "liberal" middle class and crushes people of color. Its plan is to brutalize the white masses and replace whatever class consciousness and sense of class struggle they might have had with racism, race hatred, and race war. Thus the white proletariat sees people of color as its enemy and identifies, supports and honors the police, the green berets, the FBI, all the fascist things that oppress black people.

The terrorized middle class of bourgeois liberal pretentions keeps its mouth shut and more shut, because as we become more and more oppressed by the machinery of racist oppression, they become more and more intimidated by it.

So the fascist state's plan is to be at perpetual war -- internally and around the world -- to keep its capitalist economy going. To do that, it gets the white proletariat on its side with jobs provided by a racist war machine and makes the systematic elimination of nonwhite peoples an official policy of the state. To keep the masses and the petty bourgeoisie from developing revolutionary consciousness, fascism reduces the amount of education available -- especially college education -- in order to increase its supply of exploited, racist workers. Having this large surplus of workers, fascist capital moves to fascisize the labor force. Since many workers are employed making war machinery for race wars, they are easy prey to racist propaganda, and once persuaded that fascism is in their interest, they will support fascist capital. Once fascist capital has fascisized labor, the two move together for the systematic destruction of blacks, browns, Orientals, Jews, etc. Fascist capital and fascist labor form the upper and lower jaws of a racist dog. That is fascism and that's what's happening here.

Isolationism

To the editor:

"He got mad at his wife, so he went into the kitchen and kicked the icebox." The current fashion of kicking the ROTC program it seems to me, amounts to a similar displacement of emotion. You feel frustrated not being able to engineer a debacle in Southeast Asia fast enough, so you vent your anger on something that is conveniently close, weak, and vaguely symbolic.

Now, the sad side of the matter is that so much good energy with great revolutionary potential gets wasted. How come? Elementary, dear Watson. If you are a true political revolutionary with a long-range perspective, (not just a radical windbag), you try to achieve something more solid than pricking pins into wax dolls, i.e., attacking weak and handy targets in the magic belief that you are doing something about the System.

In this particular case, what can be more convenient than having elements of the military institution within reach and being able to influence its nature in the direction of the classic revolutionary objective - the transformation of the military machinery into what used to be called "people's militia" and is suggested by expressions like "citizens in uniform"?

What does that mean concretely? For instance: why not press for strict, additional University requirements for ROTC candidates, like training in foreign languages, sociology, psychology, political history, and other relevant subjects? This type of mastery would change the nature of the military because this type of mastery represents a great substitute for bullets and bombs, and makes possible a different type of revolutionary warfare than the limited, often counterproductive kind we have been observing until now. With a little bit of revolutionary imagination this line of reasoning could be elaborated further. (As a minimum, it implies possibilities of eliminating risks of the My Lai type.)

Unfortunately, the sidetracking of well-intentioned energies into sterility parallels the whole anti-war movement of which the ROTC-phobia is an offshoot. The drift of the anti-war movement has been correctly diagnosed as a drift toward isolationism, an old American reactionary reaction to frustration.

It so happens that the United States carrys something called responsibility of power, whether anyone likes it or not. These responsibilities of power have been discharged in a rather unsatisfactory manner by all the post-Trumanian petty-bourgeois political CONDOTTIERI, no doubt about that. Now, instead of pressing for constructive solutions of situations we find ourselves in, the anti-war movement asks for a course of action which would vacate whole continents to the reactionary regimes of the Soviet Union, China, North Vietnam, etc., which are constitutionally incapable of progressive solutions to any given problem. Instead of accepting historical challenges, the anti-war movement calls for chickening out into isolationism. Ironically, it is this type of withdrawal which promises to lead to situations in which the danger of the real War becomes greater and greater. Thus, the anti-war movement, shading over into isolationism, is not really sterile but pregnant - with war dangers.

Which Way For The Anti-War Movement; Part III

It should be clear by now that my position is with the Anti-War Movement as we have know it over the last five years: mass action in the streets around the central demand, "Bring All the Troops Home Now!" These demonstrations should be legal, non-violent, and peaceful when ever possible, for purely tactical reasons. The cause of violence during any demonstration must always rest clearly on the Establishment and their agents, the police.

The tactical reason for this policy for the Anti-War Movement is to make it possible for as many people as possible to participate in our Movement. Obviously less people participate when violence is expected and more people are turned off than turned on to the idea of immediate withdrawal.

The argument against the traditional position of the Anti-War Movement comes down to, "We have been marching for five years and what do we have to show for it." I would answer that we have a Movement of several million instead of the several thousand we had in 1965. I am not playing a numbers game, but giving a concrete political achievement of the Movement. It is an achievement which has impressed the Nixon administration enough for it to fabricate the elaborate Vietnamization hoax and try to sabotage the November March on Washington by holding up the permits and talking of impending violence.

The War goes on, but that is a reason to keep on fighting, organizing, and marching. It is not a reason for despair, dis-illusionment, or defeatism. We can win, but to do so we must set our sites on winning a majority of Americans to the position that accepts nothing less than immediate withdrawal.

The realism of this position is continued in the phrasism, "you can fool alot of people for a long time, but you can't fool a majority for very long when someone is telling the truth." Telling the truth is the job of the Anti-War Movement.

Mass mobilization serves as the organization focus of the Movement.

It also allows a person who is first accepting the need for immediate withdrawal the easiest step he can take to identify with the Movement. Mass mobilization builds the movement; tactics which make mass support impossible destroy the Movement.

There are things to do which supplement mass mobilization such as canvassing or working for referendum on the War. In Massachusetts we have the unique opportunity to let the people vote on the War on the state level for the first time. We should not lose the opportunity. We must make sure the question is on the November ballot and the vote is for immediate withdrawal.

The present malaise in the Anti-War Movement must be solved not by defeatist isolating tactics, but by going back to mass action in the streets around the central demand, "Bring All the Troops Home Now!" We must build an unmistakenly majority around this demand. At that point the Establishment must end the War or face the wrath of the majority. The troops will come home when the choice for the Power Elite is lose Vietnam or lose the United States.

May Day

To the editors:

In the electric-carnival, global village certain remaining predictive insights from history and from game theory should be kept in mind, especially on the eve of May Day at New Haven.

Violence and intimidation breed. Threat met with threat results in the greatest losses to both sides. Like those persons who emulated their tormentors in the WW II concentration camps, some activists follow the philosophy of the U.S.-Soviet nuclear race irrationality. As Buddha commented: "If we answer hate with hate, the world will never be free to love." Let hatred flow within you and it will soon flow without you.

Tom Dostou shouts, "The people are either going to be for Nixon or for me." You pays your money and you don't take your choice! This either-or mentality seems infectious. Nixon, in his Nov. 3 speech, could only name two possible choices to follow in SE Asia. J. McCarthyites ask, "Do you oppose the Communists or are you subversive?" Leftists demand, "Do you support the Moratorium or are you an Establishment lackey?" The May Referendum apparently seeks a yes or no answer in regard to University relations with the military. There are innocent bystanders. Some people haven't sifted enough facts out of the boiling emotional rhetoric to annihilate human relations and humans.

You can't convince a man by insulting him. Let's hope enough people among the thousands at New Haven with us will regulate their emotions sufficiently to reflect on the need for nonviolence and respect for all humans and all life.

Beware of Salesman

To the editor:

I am writing to warn other students of the possible dangers of cooperating with certain outsiders who are descending on the campus. BEWARE of people who come to your room selling magazine subscriptions! Not only are they not supposed to solicit in dorms but certain incidents have cast suspicion on them. As I wish to avoid slander, I will merely describe occurrences of last Friday night, April 24.

Last Friday my fiancee and I were visited in my room by a "Wayne Isaacs" who told me that his "friend" was visiting other girls in my corridor. After warmly and politely easing himself into my room, he explained how we could help him win a prize of $1,000 to get him through medical school! His personal story was indeed sad: he was 28, the eldest of six children whose father had died. As he was from Delaware, he simply loved our state for its respect for education. To show our humanity, we had the opportunity to "vote" for him. We could choose from a magazine list printed on parchment in black, blue and red ink standing for, as he explained, the increasing number of points to which they entitled him. He also showed us his picture and "bond" on two more parchment sheets. His deal entailed payment of a sum to him and mailing the rest later to a P. O. Box. He wound up with the claim that he had a wonderful reference: "Mom."

Unfortunately, "Wayne Isaacs" had come to the wrong person. As a freshman I was taken in by a girl using a similar story, "bond" and identification, and I never received a magazine for my $6. Both my fiancee and I declined a subscription.

After the incident, I spoke to two girls who bought subscriptions to get him out of their rooms, later cancelling the checks. On both receipts "Wayne" was perfectly legible, but the surname was only a few squiggles. The P. O. Box return address is untraceable. On one receipt "Wayne" had actually lowered the price from $20 when the girl said she could not afford that amount! Others who were not alert to the questionable nature of deals like his have never received their magazines.

I hope students will take heed and not be swayed by tearful stories and high-pressure salesmanship. If you want magazines, order them directly from a legitimate publishing house. Don't let people who enter your dorm illegally make their profits on you!

Oh, Beautiful

"Oh beautiful for spacious skies,"

R.O.T.C.

To the editor:

If R.O.T.C. is moved off Campus with the intent being to destroy it, our nations future military leaders will simply be "educated" in military-run academies. I'd like to think that they had at least been EXPOSED to the peace movement. Our best bet is to keep R.O.T.C. on campus, where they can hear Our side too.

Baha'i World Faith

The Tree of Cummunication

Into a perilous world a fountain of long-awaited messages have poured from the pen of His Holiness, Baha'u'llah.

In 1863 Baha'u'llah declared himself to be the promised One of All Ages, in the garden of Ridvan in Baghdad, and announced the glad tidings of a spiritual springtime. His messages offer us the alternative of transforming ourselves into human beings - citizens in the family of mankind.

No doubt you have, or will be, confronted with situations which demand the manifestation of truth and justice in what you say and do. At a time when some of us are embarking on careers in mass communication, it is of the utmost importance that we realize exactly which policies hold the greatest promise for an ever-widening and more spiritually mature audience. The advancement of newspapers, magazines, radio, television, and movies will be sorely delayed unless the world-wide communications media consolidates its efforts in portraying truth and reflecting it EXACTLY.

The role of the journalist or writer is especially relevant to me for I have specific understandings and interpretations of their individual functions as expounded on by Abdu'l-Baha, the son of Baha'u'llah in BAHA'I WORLD FAITH. He writes:

". . . Some are asleep; they need to be awakened. Some are ailing; they need to be healed. Some are immature as children; they need to be trained. But all are recipients of the bounty and bestowals of God."

After internalizing these words, it becomes evident that my role as a journalist and writer is even more crucial as the world grows smaller. For those who are "asleep" and "ailing", my communications must not only be exact and truthful, but the presentation must be fresh and expansive. As a writer, I must draw out of my tiny intellect the most correct and valid image of society, the world, and myself as it relates to all. I must always use this vehicle as a means of implementing unity. A common understanding of the values, mores, and events throughout the world will definitely aid every writer, even as his (her) frame of reference becomes wider. Writers must demonstrate the joys and rewards of life and how they can be utilized in raising nations out of their war-ridden, chaotic, and tremulous existences. What I am addressing myself to essentially, is the sovereignty or power of the written word as our world becomes not only smaller but more literate. Checking into all possible sides of truth and essence is the primary obligation of men and women involved in the field of communication. In relation to this Abdu'l-Baha says:

". . . The essence of all that We have revealed for thee is Justice, is for man to free himself from idle fancies and imitation, discern with his eye His glorious handiwork, and look into all things with a searching eye."
(BAHA'I WORLD FAITH, p.142)

In keying in on what is happening around me I must, therefore, implant my intellect and knowledge in firm, real, and replenishing soil. And I must claim it for the sake of tranquility of mind and heart. So that as a Baha'i I must evoke a consciousness inner and outer, and this must be evident in communication of truth. This is not an easy task. How very difficult it is today to exert ourselves as conscious, cultured human beings who come from a myriad of backgrounds, classes, and struggling experiences. Each hour is a constant battle at mature and just growth. Moreover, I feel that an individual ethic must be sown tightly into the vein of each being; a spiritual ethic which is in complete harmony with God.

Communication is SO important to progress. It is movement forward and the understanding and relating of this progress. It is. It is feeling life, shaping it, and breathing into it and exceptional strength. THIS, to me, is living the Baha'i life. Furthermore, the Baha'i Faith renders to my writing the true meaning of work; a meaning so natural and yet so crucial to the perpetuation of justice.

My role as a black Baha'i is even more distinct and meaningful because I must address myself to racial confrontations of all sorts. It is unquestionable that we have had racial prejudice, separation, and violence since time began. And we also know that no civilization yet has been able to crush these cancerous impediments to unity. The time has come, especially for us in America, to seek out the love and power which shines within each one of us. We must cease operating on the negative. We must begin to realize that there is a most erupting unity in our diversity. There is no question in my mind that the Baha'i Faith is, and can continue to resolve racial warfare and its egotistical implications. Viscious power play must be eliminated and must be substituted with greater thoughts of international peace and prosperity. As a Baha'i who is black and who communicates through the mass media, I must attempt to destroy negative self-images which have seriously hampered the progress of my black brothers and sisters throughout the world. For those brothers and sisters who are struggling to build an all-inclusive new world order, I feel I can urge them on and battle with them. But to those black people who are delaying revolution and change by eliciting contemptuous responses to those white members of the family of man, then I must lay open for their observation and deep ponderance the words of Baha'u'llah.

". . . The best beloved of all things in my sight is justice; turn not away therefrom if thou desirest Me . . . By its aid thou shalt see with thine own eyes and not through the eyes of others, and shalt know of thine own knowledge and not through the knowledge of they neighbor."

If what has been impeding racial harmony is overstated rhetoric on the part of black and white, then, as a writer, I must carefully choose language which reflects and appeals to the oneness of mankind. If we are quibbling over questions of integration, let me point out the marked difference between integration and unity. One of the principles of the Baha'i Faith explicitly resolves this absurd, but very real problem of language barriers. It is a call for a universal auxiliary language. In the Baha' writings it says that "a universal language shall be adopted and be taught by all the schools and institutions of the world . . . all must acquire it. This is one of the great factors in the unification of man. . ." (BAHA'I WORLD FAITH, p. 241). Also, there is much too great an amount of rhetoric (on paper and in the flesh) on the part of black and white people. This will be overshadowed by an abundance of deeds. "Some souls are like parrots. They learn any note which they may hear, and sing it, but they themselves are unaware of what they utter." (BAHA'I WORLD FAITH, p. 293).

In conclusion, may I offer these words of Baha'u'llah as a catalyst for consideration by each of us involved in the different branches of the tree of communication:

". . . Newspapers are as a mirror which is endowed with hearing, sight, and speech; they are a wonderful phenomenon and a great matter. But it is encumbent upon the writers thereof to be sanctified from the prejudice of egotism and desire and to be adorned with the ornament of equity and justice; they must inquire into matters as much as possible, in order that they may be informed of the real facts, and commit the same to writing."
(Baha'i World Faith, p. 171)

Faculty Senate Hears Referendum Objections

The Faculty Senate Thursday heard strong objections from many faculty over the forthcoming University-wide referendum. Discussion was introduced by objections to the wording of an announcement in the University Bulletin concerning the referendum. It was pointed out that the Bulletin announcement stated, incorrectly, that the referendum "will be the basis of change" and that "the referendum is a result of a charge by Chancellor Tippo and the Faculty and Student Senates..."

Professor Jay Savereid spoke on behalf of the referendum committee, and apologized for the mistake in the University Bulletin. The referendum committee had hoped that the referendum would be the basis of future changes in the University, and that the meetings of the April 10-11 weekend which led to this referendum, received the support of the Chancellor and both senates.

The discussion was the occasion for a wide-ranging debate of the referendum questionnaire. It was charged that the questions were biased and inept, and if submitted in a sociology class as a prospective questionnaire, would receive an "F". Others questioned the validity of calling it a "referendum," saying that "opinion poll" would be a better term.

The Faculty Senate ended their discussion by voting a resolution urging the April 10-11 Committee to delay the referendum, now scheduled for May 7-8, so that a more objective, informative questionnaire could be constructed.

Members of the referendum committee stated that the Faculty Senate failed to understand the nature of the referendum. "It is not intended to be an opinion poll," they said, "and should not be judged in that way. Its purpose is to call a community referendum on the most important proposals arising from the meetings on April 10-11."

Tippo Meets With Anti-ROTC Group

At a gathering in front of the Student Union yesterday, Chancellor Oswald Tippo met with the U-Mass Committee to End ROTC and heard them demand that all ROTC courses be ended on campus by next September.

Tippo discussed University policy on ROTC with the group, stating that the ROTC issue must be decided by the Faculty Senate and the Board of Trustees. Current Faculty and Student Senates proposals provide for ROTC to be incorporated into various academic departments within the near future.

Tippo refused to give his own opinion of the ROTC program on campus.

After talking with the Chancellor, the Committee prepared a proposal which they say they will present to the Faculty Senate next week. The proposal asks that ROTC be ended by next September, ROTC candidates presently on scholarship receive continued financial support, and the ROTC building and funds be used for the benefit of the community at large.

Graduate Senate To Hold Meeting Monday Nite

The Graduate Student Senate will hold a meeting Monday, at 7:30 p.m., in the Worcester room of the Student Union.

Dean Appley, Chancellor Tippo, and members of the University Long-Range Planning Committee will be present to discuss the role of the Graduate School in the Chancellor's proposal for campus reorganization, including the question of where to place the responsibility for graduate student affairs.

In addition, election of executive officers for next year will be held.

It is hoped that every senator and interested grad students will attend this meeting and bring additional nominations for executive office.

Give your contact lenses a bath tonight

In order to keep your contact lenses as comfortable and convenient as they were meant to be, you have to take care of them. But until now you needed two or more separate solutions to properly prepare and maintain your contacts. Not with Lensine. Lensine is the one lens solution for complete contact lens care.

Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. And soaking your contacts in Lensine overnight assures you of proper lens hygiene. You get a free soaking case on the bottom of every bottle of Lensine.

It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and in some cases can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine which is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Just a drop or two of Lensine, before you insert your lens, coats and lubricates it allowing the lens to float more freely in the eye's fluids. That's because Lensine is an "isotonic" solution, which means that it blends with the natural fluids of the eye.

Let your contacts be the convenience they were meant to be. Get some Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

Theatre Prepares 'Becket' For Presentation Next Week

The final production of the University of Massachusetts Theatre season will be Jean Anouilh's BECKET, OR THE HONOR OF GOD, translated by Lucienne Hill, and directed by Assistant Professor Harry Mahnken.

BECKET is a violently emotional drama, the story of Thomas Becket, the carousing youth who became the Archbishop of Canterbury and of the beloved friend-turned-enemy who decreed his death, King Henry II of England.

Never have Anouilh's characteristic intelligence and irony been employed with more telling effect than in this drama of the tragic relationship between the primitive-minded giant who was King of England and the introspective intellectual who had been his dearest friend but who became his implacable enemy when the King's intrigue raised him to the hierarchy of the Church. It is the irony of the struggle between these two towering antagonists that Henry, for all his later hostility toward his former friend, always continued to love him, while Becket, the man of saintliness and good will, had at no time more than affection for the savage and simple hearted monarch.

The set for this production is designed by Assistant Professor Peter Vagenas. Director Harry Mahnken describes it as "..beautiful! -- a space stage arrangement accented for twenty-one separate scenes." Costumes, designed by Assistant Professor Elizabeth Weiss, emphasize a bold and rugged richness in color and texture. It is a very tactile show, using much heavy metal, lead, and wool in deep browns, blues, and lavenders.

BECKET, OR THE HONOR OF GOD, will be presented Thursday through Saturday, May 7, 8, 9 and 10 at 8:30 p.m. in Bartlett Theatre, University of Massachusetts. All seats are reserved -- Theatre Box Office 545-2579.

Film Series Features Monroe

This Friday evening, the Spring Series continues with another classic film, "Bus Stop", starring Marilyn Monroe. One of the last pictures Miss Monroe appeared in before her death, the film was made in 1965 and is in color.

"Bus Stop" is considered by many critics as Marilyn Monroe at her best, supposedly coming at the peak of her acting career. The story surrounds a young cowboy's romance with a big city girl, and is set in the West.

Experimental films by local producers are also scheduled to be shown with the Marilyn Monroe feature, Friday evening, at 7:30 and 9:45 in the School of Education Auditorium.

The Madrigal singers will also be featured in tonight's program. The concert is open to the public free of charge.

The symposium will conclude with a second performance of the piece, after which Dr. Westergaard will be available for informal discussion.

Ruggers Lose Pair; Host Amherst Today

Saturday, the UMass Rugby team traveled to Boston's Cleveland Circle to face the veteran Mystic River RFC. In spite of the opportunities provided by Mystic to UMass, the first XV was dropped 11-0, the second XV lost a squeaker, 11-8.

UMass' first XV managed to outplay Mystic as usual between the five yard lines, but simply could not manage to score. Midway through the first half a maul formed on the one yard line when Jim Devin was tackled.

Bob Lawrence received a pass from Devin on the one yard line but one UMass player whose name deserves no mention was off side denying the Redmen a try and an almost certain conversion.

Mystic, playing with the wind during the first half, mustered only three points on the third of three penalty kicks within the 25 yard line.

The second half was marked with considerable hard hitting. Mystic scored twice, converted once. UMass could not get adequate penetration.

The UMass forwards, weakened by the loss of several players, did not play up to their usual standards. The Redman backs did play a much better game but were not able to capitalize on the breaks.

The UMass seconds played an aggressive game continuing their tradition of hard nosed play. Their inexperience cost them the game. However, the game did mark a significant improvement in their play.

In the first half, Ted Falk broke through and nearly scored a try not long after Mystic had taken a 5-0 lead. The penetration of U-Mass' back line continued as Falk kicked through and UMass covered well.

Two defensive mistakes early in the second half cost UMass six points, giving Mystic an 11-0 lead. Then the seconds began to play.

Moving the ball down to within the five yard line continually, they maintained pressure on Mystic, forcing eventually a penalty kick by Ed Chamberlain from 35 yards out.

The most spectacular play of the game came when Bob Grossman kept the ball on play with sideline acrobatics. With the ball on the ground, Steve Wyeth, playing a good game, kicked the ball through and in goal.

Obstruction by Mystic gave U-Mass a penalty try. The seconds continued their pressure and were about to score again when time ran out.

This afternoon, UMass' small but exciting second XV takes on the Amherst College XV.

Heavy Weekend of Sports

UMass athletics face a heavy schedule this weekend as six teams, plus those mentioned elsewhere in this issue, are in action. First to start will be the varsity golf team which will be competing in the Yankee Conference Tournament to be held in Worcester at 10 a.m. The frosh golfers also are in action Friday as they host Winchendon at 1:30 on UMass' home course.

In tennis, UMass will also be competing in the YanCon Tournament which will start at UConn at 9 a.m. today and continue through Saturday. The frosh baseballers are at home today at 3 p.m. against the Yellow Jackets of AIC.

On Saturday, the freshman lacrosse team meets UConn at 2 p.m. and the frosh track squad founds out the weekend as it will compete with Springfield and Central Conn in a meet to be held at 1:30 at Central Conn.

Injuries Give Tracksters Incentive for Tri-Meet

By EARLE BARROLL
Sports Day Editor

It has been shown in the past that when a team has been hampered by the loss of some key performers that the other members try just that much harder in their own events to make up for the loss of their teammates. On Tuesday the UMass track team exemplified this in its meet with UConn, and tomorrow the Redmen will have to duplicate this attitude if they want to come out on top in a tri-meet with Springfield and the host team, Central Connecticut, starting at 2 p.m.

Due to these injuries the track team has been depleated of the little depth that it had when the season opened. This means that individual performances will be the key in the remaining track meets.

Tomorrow's outcome will depend on a few variables. Springfield is noted for its strength in the field events and Central Connecticut is a first class team in the running events. The Redmen have individual strength in both areas and it will be the job of these performers to bore into the strengths of their two opponents. If they are successful then it will result in a Redman victory. If otherwise, then it could be a long afternoon for the team at Central Connecticut.

Ellie Arcaro is the first man to be counted on by Coach O'Brien to take the first bite at his opponents. He has performed well all year and is capable of taking all three weight events in the meet.

The high jumping competition could produce the best event in the meet. Both Springfield jumpers have jumped higher than Cal Carpenter and Eddie Shaughnessey but anything can happen in the heat of competition.

Jerry Spellman and Jim Graves, by dominating the two hurdling events, would make up for the points lost in the two sprints. Their competition is lacking in quality and O'Brien is counting on a one-two finish from them in the 120 yard highs and the 440 yard intermediates.

Sophomores Jack Olsen, Arnie Morse, Al Mangan, Don Dunsky, and Bruce Blackburn will be counted on tomorrow to come through with big efforts in the middle and long distances. This is their baptismal under fire, but past performances indicate that they'll be ready for the task.

Olsen, who has been the pleasant surprise of the track season, runs the 440 tomorrow and should continue his weekly improvement.

Morse and Mangan have to pick up where Dave Evans left off in the half mile, due to Evans' injury at the Connecticut meet. Both have times under two minutes for this event so far this season, and will supply any runners with excellent competition.

Dunsky teams with Larry Paulson in the mile, with Blackburn competing in the deuce with Ron Wayne, who has been hampered lately with a knee injury.

The triple and long jumps will be contested between Dave Canterbury, and Shaughnessey of U-Mass, Walter Jones of Central Connecticut and Al Kirzenstein of Springfield.

This meet's make-shift relay team consists of Canterbury, Graves, Spellman, and Mangan. O' Brien points out that this quartet doesn't lack in speed and could score tomorrow.

If all the pieces fit together tomorrow, with everyone performing to the best of his ability, then the journey to Central Connecticut will be successful for the Redmen and the journey back a satisfying one.

Sox Sweep A's

BOSTON (AP) - Rico Petrocelli, George Scott, and Billy Conigliaro hit home runs and the Boston Red Sox held on for an 8-7 victory over Oakland Thursday in sweeping a four game series from the Athletics.

Petro also added a double and single. Scott had two doubles to go with his homer, and Billy C added a single and sacrifice fly to his round-tripper.

Redmen Travel to Maine for Crucial Encounters

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

It's back to the Yankee Conference for the UMass baseball team as the Redman nine embark on that six-hour bus ride to Orono for a key two-game series with Maine's Black Bears, the initial fray slated this afternoon at 2:30 p.m. and the wind-up contest Saturday at 1 p.m.

Maine holds down the number one spot in the Conference with a 2-0 record and is 5-0 overall. Therefore the importance of this trip for UMass is evident. Connecticut, whose league mark is 4-1, goes against Vermont twice this weekend, while Rhode Island, at 1-1 in Conference play, has a doubleheader with listless New Hampshire, 0-4 in the Y-C.

A considerable amount of jumbling among the top four Yan-Con teams could take place this weekend as each one of them, UMass, Maine, UConn or URI, is susceptible to losing two, which would be disastrous, winning two, for a big boost, or splitting.

Maine is coached by Jack Butterfield who, in 1964, brought a lightly-regarded Black Bear squad to the Yan-Con title, the District One championship and a miraculous third-place finish in the College World Series at Omaha, Neb. for his outstanding efforts with a team that fielded five sophomores, Butterfield was selected as NCAA College Baseball Coach of the Year.

Butterfield is in his 14th campaign as skipper of UMaine, during which time his units have won 156 games, lost 130 and tied two. Over the past six springs, his teams have been .500 or better; last season the Bears were 12-12, their 6-4 mark in the Conference tied them for second with UConn.

Coach Butterfield's present baseball edition comprises ten lettermen, two transfers and many promising sophomores. Most highly-touted of the Maine ball players is junior Jim Cameron, a jack-of-all-trades.

Cameron pitches, plays short and first and can handle the out fielding chores. As a sophomore, he received All-Conference accolades on the basis of his having hit .266 with five home runs and 24 runs batted in and having recorded a 1-1 record on the mound with an earned run average of 2.79. Cameron spends most of his time these days in the outfield.

Other top-notch Black Bears include third baseman Bill West, centerfielder Steve Morin and first baseman Steve Hopping.

West, also a junior, led the team in batting in '69 with .324 mark. Senior Morin, the fastest man on the squad, belted the ball at a .283 clip last spring. Hopping is another junior; he hit .293 in 16 tilts last year.

Filling out the outfield in the company of Cameron and Morin will probably be soph Rich Arnold. The shortstop job brings one of two names into the lineup, either sophomore Eric Hayward or soph Frank Davis.

Second base sees the face of Bobby Young, a junior, and/or soph Alan Livingston in the starting lineup. The catching call goes to either of two juniors, Ken Addition or Tom Smith.

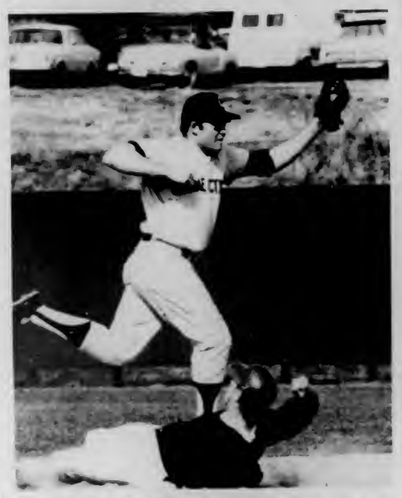
As for the pitching side of the game, Maine points to its mound staff with pride. The brightest star on this staff is Darrell Whittemore, who was the only pitcher in the Conference to tip the Redmen last season. A small guy at 5'10-150, the righty junior can throw hard but likes to show off his pretty curve. In '69 his record was 4-1.

Senior co-captain Bob Curry, a lefthanded flinger, is a solid hurler for Butterfield's charges. With good control and an excellent curve, he was 2-3 in '69 and 4-1 in '68. Other hurlers include righty junior James Chaplin and Rod Choroszy.

In past trips to Maine in this '69-70 athletic year, by the Redman football and basketball squads, the outcome of the contests were never in doubt from the time the teams left Boyden until midway through the affairs when UMass was comfortably ahead, having remembered what it was up there.

However, the present weekend's case is vastly different. Jokes about the painstaking trip are few. In baseball, the Black Bears are indeed a threat to Redman hopes for a Yankee Conference title; and the extent of that threat will not be decided until mid-Saturday afternoon.

DIAMOND DUST - UMass coach Dick Bergquist has announced that Don Anderson will start on the hill for Saturday's tilt, but that Friday's pitcher is still undecided, as either Brian Martin or Jack Bernardo will get the nod... outfielder Steve Rogers, who is nursing an injured leg, is still a doubtful starter.



REDMAN ACE PITCHER Don Anderson, shown here sliding into second safely in recent YC encounter with UConn, will be on the mound Saturday in important YC game with Maine.

Lacrosse Team Trys for 3rd in a Row at UConn.

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Asst Sports Editor

UMass, boasting a 4-1 record this season, will go for its third straight victory today against the stickers of Connecticut as it travels to Storrs. The contest is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

After finally opening up their offense and demolishing Trinity in its last outing, the Redmen should be ready for the Huskies. UMass demonstrated the type of lacrosse it is capable of playing and after gaining the confidence which comes with an easy win, should be priming for their battle with crosstown rival, Amherst. But as any coach will tell you, "let's play them one at a time."

UConn Coach Nate Osur has a veteran team which lost only four players from last year. Added to this is the fact that several fine sophomores have joined the club and Osur sees his team's prospects as good.

Defense is UConn's strong point. John Santucci, the junior goalie from Palmer, is the heart of the defensive unit. Four top defensemen will share most of the load at the three defensive positions. They are juniors Glenn NcNamara, Ron Feldberg, and sophomores John Meiers and Jim Kirch.

Senior Captain Brian Walsh will head one of three trios of midfielders. Walsh is probably the most outstanding player on the team. His linemates will be junior Les Stacy and sophomore Dave Shrum.

Another line will be manned by juniors Bill Harper, a Springfield native, Ken Gilesman, and Randy McGee. The third line includes junior Tom Adragna, senior Taag Pearson, and sophomore John DeNunzio.

Five men, four of them sophomores, will divide the duty on attack. Junior Dave Sloan is the only non-soph. Up from the freshman team are Steve Kiel, Charlie Geis, and Steve Turula, while Joe Patorno rounds out the group.

Crew Team Guns for Upset at Callow Cup Regatta

The UMass Crew Club travels to Worcester this weekend to compete in the 10th annual Rusty Callow Cup Regatta. The cup, symbolic of New England college division rowing supremacy, will be contested by twelve schools including the defending champion, Trinity.

Coming off last week's close victory over UMass, Trinity rates the favorites role with both the Redmen and Marist College of New York gunning for upsets. Worcester Tech and Wesleyan rate outside chances, while Holy Cross, Amherst, Williams, URI, Assumption, and Clark are long shots at best.

UMass takes a healthy, revamped squad to Lake Quinnsigamond for what they hope will be another dogfight with Trinity. The stakes are high as UMass and Trinity are presently ranked third and fourth in the tough 36 team Dad Vail league with this being the final tune-up before the championships in Philadelphia next week.

Frosh coach Larry Dean has again reshuffled his line-up in an effort for more speed. Doug Thompson, a 6'1-200 pounder, has cracked the first boat alignment with 6'3 Jeff Allen being inserted into the number two seat. Bill Moran, another 200 pounder, has moved to the number seven seat with Ted Fitzgerald regaining the number five seat he lost last week.

Dean feels that Trinity's undefeated frosh can be had and that either his boar or Marist frosh could pull the upset.

The JV race promises to be a rematch of last week's seventenths of a second loss to Trinity with Marist again looking towards the winners circle. The UMass JVs, now with Dave Sola in number seven seat and Rick Jones in the bow seat, have been moving well in practice.

The powerful middle of the boat, anchored by Scott Cline, with Dave Richards, captain Jack Fadden, Phil Dwyer, and Albert Flanders, is ready for the test. Converted starboard, Steve Malone, will again handle the hot stroke seat with Ed Giombetti calling the race from the coxwain's seat.

The UMass varsity has many new looks, as radical changes have been made to avoid last week's second and a half loss to Trinity. The schoenbrod eight now features European style rigging which seems to have eradicated the steering difficulties the boat encountered last week.

The boat is also ready to row at a little higher rate this weekend in an effort to cut into Trinity's high stroking pattern. Kevin O'Brien, completely recovered from last week's hospitalization, will row the bow seat on the port side. Ron Stolz and Bob Weimar, both 6'4-195 pounds, will row adjacent number four and five seats, now on the starboard side.

The rest of the alignment finds captain Charles Leonard in seat number two, Tom Mone in number three, Turk MacLean in number six, Bob Spouster in number seven, with Jack Appel in stroke. Chris Jedrey will again be the coxswain.

The large number of entries have necessitated the use of heats to determine the finalists However, the sharp cleavage between the college eights will produce some boring racing in the morning as none of the contenders are expected to extend themselves.

Coach Faherty is confident about the rematch with Trinity, but is guarded in his predictions. "The boats are moving well, we're getting faster every week, and we're quite anxious to avenge last week's race. However, we can't afford to make mistakes, but this again neither can say."

Spring Football Practice Ends with Clinic and Scrimmage

By DICK BACKER
Staff Reporter

Coach Vic Fushia's football chargers conclude a fifteen day spring practice session tomorrow with their annual football coaching clinic and maroon and white intersquad game; kickoff is 2 p.m. and the game will be played in the field next to the stadium.

The Redmen, with 23 returning lettermen, are concentrating on execution rather than technique, minimizing personal drills and devoting more time to group and team drills. Other objectives cited by Fusia were to find his best 33 football players and to work on the hitting aspect of the game. "Which is our game," commented Fusia.

Right now the Redmen appear to lack backfield speed and are very thin at all positions. The work of the first teams have been particularly good this spring, but the over all performance of the second and third units has been particularly weak. Fusia feels the intersquad game will give the coaching staff a good opportunity to judge and evaluate some of the younger players.

Fusia cited six criteria that were essential in evaluating an athlete. First of all, he felt an athlete must have the proper attitude. "If he doesn't want to be a winner, we don't want him on the squad." Next, the athlete must execute certain skills and techniques properly and consistently. Thirdly, he has to be dependable; he must act like a man in a clutch situation, not losing his head, but keeping his poise and finish the play.

The last three criteria are how the football player blocks, tackles, and his ability to move. The films, when broken down and graded, will be a tremendous asset in determining which of the new ball players really want to play.

"Potential has never won a game," commented Fusia, "only hard work and dedication will bring out the real potential of an athlete, and we feel all our athletes have outstanding potential and that dedication and willingness to work will bring it out."

Thus the intersquad game, to the casual observer, will mean the opportunity to watch a football game and catch a few rays. But to the football players and the coaching staff the game has a deeper significance in keeping with the traditions of UMass football, the making of a winner.

New Haven Crowd Urged To Demand Freedom

By ROBERT NORTHSHIELD
Staff Reporter

NEW HAVEN, Conn. - Under the shadow of 4000 federal troops, 6000 persons attended a series of predominantly peaceful demonstrations in support of jailed Black Panther leader Bobby Seale here this past weekend.

The demonstrators heard a tape recording of Seale speaking yesterday, urging the demonstrators to demand freedom for himself and for other political prisoners.

He said that he recalled saying the pledge of allegiance when a boy in school, and said, "It talked about liberty and justice for all, not racism, facism and war."

"Beautiful people came to this rally," he said, "and these people did not pledge allegiance to repression. We are all political prisoners."

The major speaker Saturday was Chicago 7 defendant Tom Hayden, who said, "It's becoming obsolete to say that Seale is a political prisoner. In fact, Bobby Seale's case does not belong here...it belongs before the United Nations and an international tribunal."

"We're not going to allow Bobby to spend the rest of his life in jail," he told the crowd, "and we are prepared to lay down our lives to assure that he does not spend one extra night in jail."

The rally ended about 6:20 p.m. and the crowd left the Green peacefully.

There were two minor incidents before the rally began.

About 1:15 p.m. a small group that had been playing games on the Green suddenly rushed across Church street toward City Hall. They were quickly herded back to the Green by National Guardsmen and student marshals.

Later in the afternoon, six persons -- one from Cambridge -- were charged with disorderly conduct after an incident just west of the Green.

Arrested were Michael Atherton, 25, of 48 Myrtle Ave., Cambridge; Ed S. Sachs, 20, of New Haven; Kevin Fitzmaurice, 20, Susan Spica, 20, Joel C. Lewis, 23 and a 16 year old, all of New York City.

Before the afternoon rally began, New Haven Panthers had spent most of the day disclaiming any connection with Friday night's violence.

"We have very reliable information," said Panther spokesman Tom Dotsau, that the disturbance on the Green and the bombing of Ingalls Rink were done "by very right wing vigilante groups in New Haven."

Douglas Miranda, chairman of the New Haven Black Panther Party and one of the speakers at the April 15 rally on Boston Common, described the incidents which led up to the disturbance on the Green

Yippie Jerry Rubin had been speaking to a workshop in Yale's Branford College when a man who identified himself as a Black Panther rushed in and grabbed the microphone said Miranda.

He told the gathering that several Panthers had just been arrested on the Green, less than a half-mile away on the other side of the Yale campus. The crowd left the meeting and headed toward the Green, picking up supporters along the way.

Police later estimated that 1500 to 2000 persons gathered on the Green between 10 p.m. and midnight. There were numerous incidents of rock, bottle and iron pipe throwing. Police and National Guardsmen used tear gas to disperse the crowd. Twenty-one persons were arrested before the crowd melted back onto the Yale campus where student marshals helped calm them.

Students Plan UMass Strike Tactics

By MARK SILVERMAN
Managing Editor

More than 500 persons met in the Student Union yesterday to map plans for shutting down the University tomorrow as part of the nationwide student strike called for at New Haven over the weekend.

Student from at least 20 major colleges across the nation have stated that they will stay away from classes until the following demands are met.

"1) The United States cease its expansion of the Vietnam war into Cambodia; that it unilaterally and immediately withdraw all forces from Southeast Asia.

"2) The United States government end its systematic oppression of political dissidents and release all political prisoners such as Bobby Seale and the Black Panther Party.

"3) The universities end their complicity with the United States war machine by an immediate end to defense research, R.O.T.C., counterinsurgency research and all other such programs."

UMass student have established a strike headquarters in the Student Union, and are using several rooms on the building's second floor as planning and information centers.

The Union remained open all night last night, and persons involved in the Strike's steering committee say that the building will probably stay open 24 hours a day for the rest of the week.

The steering committee announced yesterday that meetings will be held in all University dormitories tonight, to inform students of strike plans and to gather support. Students are urged to contact their heads of residence for information of specific times and places.

The UMass students planning the strike received a boost yesterday in the form of a telegram from Chicago 7 defendant Rennie Davis which urged the University to join the nation-wide strike.

The telegram read, "Twenty-five thousand of us in New Haven say to the brothers and sisters of UMass to seize the time May 5. Across the country we are saying no to the war in IndoChina, no to the war on the Black Panther party and the Black community and no to R.O.T.C. and to university war-related research. Join us. Shut down the University of Massachusetts and join the national student strike on May 5."

Other major colleges actively planning strike activities as of last night included Harvard, the University of California at Berkeley, Columbia, Santa Barbara, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Rutgers, Bryn Mawr, Haverford, Sarah Lawrence, Hunter, New York University, Villanova, Yale, Maryland, Ohio State, Dartmouth and Kent State.

Interim Mobe Committee Meets To Plan Wednesday Cage Rally

A rally will be held Wednesday night in the UMass Cage and is being organized by the interim Mobilization Committee to generate community protest against the invasion of Cambodia by the Nixon administration.

The organizers plan to gain wide community support through off campus leafletting, advertising in area newspapers and setting up of information tables in shopping centers and the centers of neighboring towns.

The focus of the rally Wednesday will be a call for all U. S. troops to leave Cambodia and be brought home from all of Southeast Asia.

The interim Mobilization Committee, consisting of members of the University Mobilization Committee to End the War in Southeast Asia (UMC), will present the plans for the rally to the full body of UMC at an emergency meeting tonight in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union at 8:00.

At that meeting the precise outlines of organizing a community response to the invasion of Cambodia will be worked out and the UMC position on the strike being called by the General Strike Committee will be discussed.

Community groups who are expected to support the rally on Wednesday night include the Valley Peace Center and the New Politics Coalition.

The meeting will be the beginning of what organizers hope to be a broad coalition against War in Southeast Asia, based on and off the campus. Such a coalition, they say, will guarantee the success of the Wednesday night anti-Cambodia invasion rally as a community wide meeting.

The coaliton creates the possibility of bringing the whole issue of the War in Southeast Asia to broad layers of the area's non-student population such as wage workers, teachers, and professionals they say.

The rally itself will galvanize area public opinion against the War not allowing Nixon the opportunity to manipulate this opinion back into the Silent Majority, according to organizers.

The plans for building the rally will be finalized by the full UMC. Included in the plans are a petition drive in the community at tables set up at shopping centers and at the centers of town. The petitions will be used as a vehicle for protest and a means of informing people of the Wednesday night rally organizers say.

Academic Strike Called For By Student Newspaper Editors

Student editors from 11 of the nation's most prestigious colleges called Sunday for an academic strike this week to protest President Nixon's dispatch of American troops to Cambodia.

A curfew remained in force at Kent State University in Ohio, and elsewhere around the country, there was relative calm on campuses.

Among scattered signs of campus support for the administration, members of veterans groups clashed with anti-war demonstrators at Rutgers ROTC field Sunday.

The student editors met at Columbia University and issued a statement that said the Cambodian intervention "has placed our country in a state of emergency."

A strike, they said would demonstrate that "classroom education becomes a hollow, meaningless exercise" in the face of such an event.

They set no specific date, but urged that undergraduates, faculty administrators and staff take part, using the out of class time to prepare for a mass quarter demonstration in Washington for May 9.

Columbia University's president Andrew W. Cordier, immediately announced he would take part in a rally Monday noon to protest Nixon's action in Cambodia.

Representatives of all Ivy League colleges except Yale were either present or linked to the meeting by telephone circuits.

Those at the meeting edit newspapers at Columbia, Cornell, Rutgers, University of Pennsylvania, Bryn Mawr, Haverford and Sarah Lawrence. On the phone were editors at Dartmouth, Harvard, Brown and Princeton.

Besides expressing opposition to the Cambodian venture, the undergraduate editors called for an end to what they said was "political oppression" of the Black Panther party and other dissident groups.

Yale, still recovering from a weekend rally in support of the Panthers, did not join in the declaration. Students there have already called a strike Tuesday.

The trouble broke out at Kent State Friday after the U. S. intervention in Cambodia. Early Saturday, about 500 young people, most of them students, marched around campus shouting "Down with Nixon."

Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes showed up at Kent State University and called those responsible for violence there part of "the strongest, well trained, militant, revolutionary group that has ever assembled in America."

The school's ROTC building was burned down Saturday and on Sunday about 100 students petitoned that a new one be put up and offered to help build it if necessary.

The city of Kent continued under an 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew. The curfew on campus, however, was eased to start at 1 a.m.

The Ohio fire marchal's office began an investigation of a $40,000 blaze which involved six planes at an airport a few miles from the campus.

Rhodes warned potential rioters at Kent that they would shortly be outnumbered 10-1. "We have all the troops we need," he said.

The governor has ordeed National Guard troops into Kent.

The governor also said he would ask the legislature to make it a felony to throw objects at police officials and to expel permanently any person convicted of a felony stemming from disorder at any state university.

About 300 drinking and shouting students from the University of Maryland poured out of night spots at the closing hour early Sunday morning and halted traffic on U.S. 1 which connects Baltimore and Washington.

By 4:30 a.m. the 200 police officers called to the scene had arrested 22 persons.

The mood seemed festive compared to serious demonstrations against the Cambodian involvement Friday and early Saturday.

The War in Asia

First Phases of Cambodian Offensive Sporadic

SAIGON (AP) A force of 15,000 South Vietnamese supported by U. S. advisers and helicopter gunships thrust 24 miles into Cambodia Thursday seeking to wipe out enemy sanctuaries and link up with hard pressed Cambodian troops.

Military observers said it was too early to assess the two day offensive in the Parrot's Beak area 50 miles northwest of Saigon so named because of its shape on the map. North Viet namese and Viet Cong troops who are roaming the area with impunity seem to be fading away and putting up little resistance.

An exception was in the northern quadrant of the Parrot's Beak where South Vietnamese forces suffered heavy losses trying to take an elaborate supply, training and base campnetwork, their commander said.

South Vietnamese losses were put at 32 dead and 168 wounded, including 55 wounded when U. S. helicopter gunships fired by error on a battalion of government troops. The U. S. command confirmed the incident and said an investigation is under way.

The U. S. Command said two American advisers were wounded the first U. S. ground casualties in the Cambodian offensive.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong losses were place d at 435 dead more than 300 of them killed by American and South Vietnamese aircraft, by Saigon spokesmen.

The invaders, working in four task forces, reported capturing more than 150 weapons and 50 tons of rice, most of it in sacks from Red China, and destroying 350 bunkers and 160 storage huts.

Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnett who is with South Vietnamese forces in Cambodia, reported that one task force under command of Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri had rolled unhindered through the towns of Chipou and Prasaut which had been occupied by the enemy.

Tri told newsmen he hoped to link up Friday with Cambodian troops defending the provincial capital of Savy Rieng, six miles west of Prasaut and the last Cambodian outpost east of the Mekong River. Enemy forces have severed supply routes to the city.

The linking of South Vietnamese and Cambodian forces would bring a new element into the situation.

Some political and military observers wondered whether Washington and Saigon would be able to resist the temptation of sending the invasion force beyond the Parrot's Beak in pursuit of withdrawing North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops.

The South Vietnamese government has insisted that its troops are under orders to complete their assignment in the Parrot's Beak and return to South Vietnam.

Tri's announced plan to reach the Cambodians seems to have raised a credibility question. A Cambodian spokesman said in Phnom Penh Thursday that Cambodian troops were not taking part in the offensive and had not been consulted.

"Cambodia is a neutral country," the spokesman told a questioner, adding that the Phnom Penh government "does not approve of this type of intervention by foreign forces."

Tri said the decision to move so deep into Cambodia had not been made until 10:30 a.m. Thursday.

The original targets were enemy bases a few miles inside the border, but Tri said he decided to make a major thrust along Highway I "so that we could finish the job neat and tidy."

Asked how long his forces intended to remain inside the sector of Cambodia they had occupied, Tri said "for many days. We need much time to seach the whole area."

Tri said the 24 miles of Highway I, reopened Thursday "will be kept open to resupply our troops for as long as we are in Cambodia."

North Vietnamese and Pathet Lao troops who seized the southern Laotian provincial capital of Attopeu, about 25 miles north of the Cambodian border Thursday, inflicted heavy casualties.

Associated Press correspondent Michael Putzel reported from Vientiane that the Communist attack caught American advisers and Laotian military planners by surprise.

Government spokesmen listed 93 defenders killed and 23 wounded in the attack, but reliable military sources said at least 200 of the town's 300 defenders were killed or wounded. The rest are believed trapped by a North Vietnamese regiment.

In South Vietnam, North Vietnamese forces attacked allied installations in Northern I Corps and shot down two more U. S. helicopters. Five Americans were reported killed and 29 wounded.

Meanwhile, 100 miles north of the Parrot's Beak, Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops were reported attacking the Cambodian town of Kratie, on the Mekong River. This is the last major town in Northeast Cambodia still held by Cambodian troops.

A military spokesman in Phnom Penh said that on the south coast of Cambodia, enemy troops fought their way into the major port of Kampot Wednesday, but government forces drove them back after 16 hours of heavy fighting. Twelve enemy bodies were found in the town, the spokesman said.

The allied commands in Saigon issued the weekly casualty reports showing 94 Americans, 436 South Vietnamese troops and 2,368 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops were killed in action last week. The week before the totals were 101 American, 640 South Vietnamese and 2,962 of the enemy.

Another 1,291 Americans were wounded last week, 593 more than the previous week.

The report raised the total combat dead announced during the war to 41,610 Americans, 105,979 South Vietnamese and 626,960 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese. A total of 274,727 Americans have been wounded.

Agnew Backs Expanding War

Vice-President Agnew said yesterday he thinks the North Vietnamese forces are overextended, "debilitated and decimated" and unable to continue their fight in South Vietnam and neighboring states.

"They have 67,000 troops in Laos right now, they have 40,000 troops in Cambodia," he said.

"They're trying to fight a war in Vietnam. They've been in a war for years and years and they're quite debilitated and decimated and I don't think they're capable with any kind of resistance, to continue this fight."

To a newsman who questioned that statement, Agnew said, "You would admit, I believe, there has been a great diminution in their capability and their activity in recent years."

Agnew paused, smiled and said, "Yes. Exactly."

Agnew was interviewed on the CBS television - radio program "Face the Nation."

He reiterated the administration position that U.S. incursions into Cambodia are necessary to ensure that U.S. forces can continue to withdraw from Vietnam without danger of attack from Communist sanctuaries.

Agnew denied the drive into Cambodia was a "knockout blow."

Agnew said talk in the Senate of cutting money from defense spending to halt the Cambodian move indicated the senators who had supported the Vietnam war through the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations were now "talking about running out . . . these troops have to be defended . . ."

He said the policy of withdrawal is not in question.

"We know we can't win a land war in Southeast Asia, that's perfectly obvious," he said.

"We also know that Vietnamization is the proper course to pursue to disinvolve American fighting men from this war while at the same time preventing the continuing incursions of the Communists into areas where the people don't want them."

Almost immediately after the broadcast, Lawrence F. O'Brien, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, asserted Agnew's comments and the administration's moves "mean, in effect, that the American policy of disengagement has ended."

O'Brien said in a statement

U Thant Paints Dark Viet Picture, Says He Will Present 'Some Ideas'

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - U. N. Secretary General U Thant said Sunday the Vietnam War threatens to engulf Indochina and he will present "some ideas" to try and prevent that from happening.

Thant, speaking to newsmen after addressing a meeting of the League of Women Voters, said he would present his ideas on limiting the war in a statement to be issued in a few days. "I don't know how they'll be accepted," he said.

The widening war in Indochina was the main topic of Thant and other U.N. delegates in a review of the world's trouble spots for 750 league members meeting in a U.N. conference room.

"We see the tragedy of the war in Vietnam threatening to engulf the whole Indochinese Peninsula," Thant said.

Lord Caradon, Britian's chief U.N. delegate, said it was impossible for the United Nations to intervene now.

"The Far East is precluded from the United Nations by the fact that two super powers are in confrontation," he said. "That's a fact and we have to accept it."

Caradon added that the United States had tried frequently to bring the Vietnam issue to the Security Council, "always to be opposed by the Soviet Union."

Brown Trial May Resume Today

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (AP) - The much delayed arson riot trial of H. Rap Brown is scheduled to resume here Monday, but there is no indication the black militant, who has been missing for more than nine weeks, will appear.

Proceedings before Howard County Judge James Macgill were halted April 21 when chief counsel William M. Kunstler filed a petition to remove the case to federal court.

The move, based on a century old civil rights law, was denied the next day by a U. S. District Court and then again by a three-judge federal panel from the 4th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Brown's attorneys have not indicated any plans to appeal further.

Brown, who has not yet been required to appear, has been missing since March 8, the night before his trial opened in Bel Air, 30 miles northeast of Baltimore.

Agnew "made it clear that the administration intends to consolidate its territorial gains. This means the establishment of a new front in Cambodia in the prolonged ground war which the vice president himself admitted we cannot win."

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Sunday that allied action against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces in Cambodia would serve to lift some pressures from the beleaguered government of Gen. Lon Nol in Phnom Penh.

Asked if he thinks Cambodia is on the verge of collapse, Laird replied:

"I wouldn't want to make any kind of prediction along that line but there is no question in my mind that the North Vietnamese forces, if they were allowed to concentrate all of their efforts against Cambodia, could probably defeat the Cambodian Army."

Agnew said those who dissent violently should be "put down."

"The lawbreakers always like to attribute their illegal and criminal actions to some cause that will gain sympathy for them," he said.

"I don't think many are really honestly sincere about the cause. I think they're simply utilizing this as a vehicle to continue their anti-social, outrageous conduct, and I think when the war is over they'll find something else to use as an excuse for throwing firebombs. ."

Senate Committee Delays Nomination of Blackmun

Vote on Judge Due Next Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Senate Judiciary Committee vote on the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Harry A. Blackmun of Rochester, Minn., has been put off until next Tuesday.

But there was no sign of any developing opposition to the 61 year old U. S. 8th Circuit Court judge, who drew bipartisan support at a three-hour committee hearing Wednesday.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.VA., requested the delay Thursday. He told newsmen he thinks committee members ought to have an opportunity to study the hearing record before they vote.

Although Byrd said he was satisfied with respect to Blackmun's ability, integrity and judicial philosophy and expects to vote for his confirmation, he still wants "to see the fine print."

Other senators on the 17 member committee reportedly raised no objection to the delay, as agreement was reached to vote at 11 a.m. Tuesday. Some predicted approval by a unanimous vote.

However, there appeared to be some reluctance to act too quickly after the long, bitter fights that preceded the Senate's rejection of President Nixon's previous nominations of two Southern judges to fill the year-old facancy on the Supreme Court.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a leader in the fight against the earlier nominations, said he had been prepared to vote on Blackmun Thursday but with the understanding that he would have a week to prepare separate views on the nomination.

Bayh said he knows of no committee member now who plans to vote against recommending Blackmun's confirmation, but he said he imagines the majority report will make some assumptions with which he can not agree.

He said also he wants to look over Blackmun's income tax returns. These have been made available to Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., for inspection by committee members.

Nader Asks More Response

RINDGE, N.H. (AP) - Consumer advocate Ralph Nader told a Franklin Pierce College commencement audience Sunday that there is a great demand for "full time profound college career people who will represent the overall interests of the public ahead of governments and corporations."

Nader added that if individual freedom is to reach its fullest development, each person must find within himself that point at which he will say "no" to bureaucracies and corporations when he is asked to act against the interests of his country and his fellow citizens.

STRIKE!

There is no longer any time to vacillate; the "middle ground" is gone. The planned nation-wide student strike against the widening Asian war and the repressive political strategy of the Nixon administration is forcing every Amerikan to make a choice. He must be either for or against actively working for immediate changes.

The invasion of Cambodia last week was the turning point for many people "in the middle" – the people wanting an end to the war and the creation of a new domestic society, but unwilling to become personally involved in the struggle for these goals.

These people came to the realization last week that all the talk, all the moratoria, and all the letters in the world can not succeed in forcing any changes in Nixon's basic political stratagums.

It has become clear that the only thing left for those who oppose the way in which this country is being run is dramatic, forceful, and immediate action directed toward stopping the governmental practices which people find abhorrent.

And the nation-wide student strike is a dramatic and forceful means toward the goal of change.

The educational system in this country is geared to support the national government by providing it with technically skilled man-power and an allegedly intelligent group of people who can lend credible-sounding arguments to support national policies. Students are in a position to cut the national administration off from this support, to show the nation as a whole the depth and breadth of their committment for change, and to show those persons running for public office over the summer that they must either be with us or against us.

This is strong action, action capable of making an impression on the vast belly of sleeping Amerika. It is not action devoid of risk, for the strikers could jeopardize their "academic careers". But what strong and dramatic actions are not without risks? This is the time to put things on the line. This is the time to show committment.

The passive rhetoric of 1967 and 1968 is over. Amerika must make a choice now and we, as Amerikan citizens must also make a choice. That choice is between joining the student and doing nothing. If you're not sincere in wanting to change this country, go to class. If you are sincere, STRIKE!

"PEACE, PEACE," SHE CRIED. BUT THERE WAS NO PEACE ON EARTH THAT NITE...
ONLY MEN FIGHTING AND STAINING
THE SHINE OF THEIR SWORDS SCARLET.

Another Vietnam?

Last Thursday night President Nixon pulled a "President Johnson." He was faced with the choice of either directly intervening in Cambodia or letting it fall to the Communist. This was basically the situation President Johnson found himself in on that fateful March day when he decided to "stem the tide of Communism" in Vietnam. Both were poor decisions.

Last April 2nd., I predicted in this column that Nixon would militarily put the U.S. into Cambodia. Well, that decision showed a drastic shift in our policy with regards to the war in Vietnam. Nixon seems to believe that by "flushing" the Communists out of their sanctuaries in Cambodia and by possibly resuming the bombing of North Vietnam we can achieve a military victory. I think that there is some credence to what he believes. There is a greater possibility of winning the war on the battlefield now than before.

But what will the results of this shift be? First of all, more human beings will die. Yes, President Nixon, the Vietnamese are also human beings. We will drive the North Vietnamese closer into the arms of Peking, a policy which political scientists, like Hans Morganthau, find to be contrary to what our aims supposedly are.

Internally, the escalated warfare will probably mean increased draft calls (just last week Melvin Laird had predicted lower ones). The followings of "revolutionary groups" will likewise grow and nourish off of "Nixon's blunder."

At a time when many in this nation would like to see an "unconditional" and unilateral withdrawal of ALL U.S. forces and advisors from Vietnam, the President has gone the other way. The way of the John Birchists, the right wingers, who, like Nixon, do not want to see this nation lose a war.

But doesn't a nation lose a war when the means were greater than the ends justified? And because of Vietnam, and now Cambodia, think of all the American deaths, all the resources which could have been constructively redirected and all the pain we inflicted on the Vietnamese. Does all that, plus what has happened in this nation domestically as an outgrowth of the Indo-China war give us a chance of ever winning the war? No, I think not.

At a time when peace is needed and being begged for by many Americans, Nixon has done the opposite. But he'll pay for it. Many Senators and Congressmen have announced that the budget, and especially the Department of Defense part, will be gone over with a fine tooth comb. If that part of the budget is cut, then Nixon won't have money to finance his escapades.

He reminds me of the old kinds who constantly would get their nations into wars. But unlike their poor inhabitants, we have a legislative body to protect us. And as it did by rising to the occasion when Carswell and Hainsworth were rejected, it will do so again.

"The System" works when it wants to. "Good men" or men with a "just" cause will make it work. And it is up to us to work and put "good" men into "the system". And in '72, our third-rate President will not be a second-term President.

GUEST EDITORIAL

The University Library System-Spring, 1970

"America why are your libraries full of tears? Poet Allen Ginsberg raised the question, and most UMass students and faculty stand ready to provide answers. The problems of the ghetto are in a sense also those of the library -- overcrowding, poverty, (bibliographical) malnutrition, and discrimination. Sadly enough, these are not problems of the sort that can be solved by liberation or revolutionary change.

What can be done immediately --in these last weeks of the semester as the student body walks the last mile toward the final examinations and term papers fall due at every instant? So far as AVAILABILITY OF BOOKS AND SERIALS is concerned, something has already been done -- the announcement of the annual inventory of books and serials has been sent to all borrowers and every item is due to be returned to the stack or renewed (if there has been no call for it) by the end of the semester. Furthermore, a little-understood rule is in force which enables any requester to have the library call in a book or serial from any borrower upon two weeks notice. As a further time-saver, the assistants at the circulation desk of Goodell are required to name the present borrower of any book whenever any requested (including any undergraduate) asks for this information. In response to a Student Senate demand for a shorter borrowing period for faculty, the library is prepared to establish, next fall, a basic four-week borrowing period for faculty and graduate students, with the option of a semester-long borrowing term for specially-needed works (all subject to the aforementioned two-week recall). This will reduce the sense of discrimination, perhaps, but it will not speed the circulation of books during the present semester; the recall privilege appears to be the most useful available means for getting the books and serials that are not in the stacks.

No quick solution to the problem of OVERCROWDING can be offered. Round-the-clock open hours, which have been tried during some recent examination periods, do not seem to ease the overcrowding substantially and are not planned for the approaching examination period. At best one can put down the present library experience as applied training for the jam-packed world of 2001.

This leaves us saying, "Wait until next year!" As a library we did not come in last in the league, but we missed the first division certainly. Although we qualified for membership in the American Association of Research Libraries, we could not boast of a collection comparable to those of land-grant universities like Michigan, Penn State, or even North Carolina. Basically our problem is not that books and serials are in some other borrower's possession when we need them but that they are not in the collection at all. To be on a parity with the students at Ann Arbor, University Park, or Chapel Hill, we need many more titles and, in many cases, duplicate copies of often-requested books. There has been a good deal of planning in the field of book acquisitions, and last year the Faculty Senate approved a schedule of buying that would raise UMass into the top quarter of the state universities on the American Association of Research Libraries by the year 1980. But to attain this reasonable and essential goal we must have the solid economic support of the state which we have never had. The basic assumption of recent governors and legislatures is that $200,000 annually constitutes a sufficient book budget for the state university -- a figure somewhat less than one-ninth of the book budget for Penn State in 1968/69' less than one seventh of the Michigan budget; less than one-third of the North Carolina budget. Responding to a resolution of the Faculty Senate, the UMass Administration gave as the highest priority among its current budget requests a figure of $1,000,000 for book purchases. Nevertheless, the budget sent by the governor to the legislature specifies the usual $200,000 for book purchases. It looks like the second division again next year!

The possibility remains that the legislature may be persuaded to expand the book budget, but the main hope for fiscal 1970 now lies in a "one-shot" request for a million-dollar capital-outlay appropriation, aimed specifically at providing books for the new library. Should this capital-outlay request fail to pass, the economic recession at the UMass library would bring us to the lowest level in a decade -- much lower than it has been this past year when substantial federal funds were available for the last time.

While the larger issue of academic impoverishment or momentary solvency hangs in the balance, we have at least the assurance that many much needed duplicate copies of important books will be added to the collection by our participation in the "BCL" project -- an already-funded program for providing to libraries of all Commonwealth colleges and universities copies of books needed to fill out the undergraduate collections in accordance with the standard provided by BOOKS FOR COLLEGE LIBRARIES. This is a comparatively minor area of improvement, but it deserves mention since it was made possible by the ingenuity, persistence and perspiration of the Goodell administration and staff.

Our hope has been that we would be in the major leagues next year, at least in our physical plant, but the new tower cannot be completed in time for the Class of 1971 to enjoy its benefits. By the time that it does become available, the student population will have outgrown it somewhat, and already feasibility studies are being made for undergraduate library collections to be established at each of the residence-hall clusters. Perhaps such buildings might be described as "castles in the middle of poverty" (to use the words of a recent campus speaker) but to undergraduates they might well seem to be humane attempts to make the materials of learning available to the masses of students.

As a matter of fact, the whole library effort should be seen as an attempt to make technology and physical structure serve humane ends. Undoubtedly the last step in the educational process has not occurred when the desired book is made available to the reader, but certainly one important type of learning can begin at this point and not before. The UMass library, like other libraries, is entering the age of electronics, with some technical processes already converted to computers and with plans for similar electronic application to the circulation processes. The new tower will be wired to take advantage of as many devices for information retrieval and electronic inter-library borrowing as we can at this point foresee. But this will not be gadgetry for the sake of novelty or for the benefit of electronics manufacturers. Rather it will aim always to extend the scope of the collection and reduce the physical barriers between the reader and the book (or whatever may replace the book).

Certainly the process of change will be participatory. Present advisory committees, such as the Faculty Senate Library Committee, are made up of undergraduates, graduate students, and administrators, as well as faculty. And a new organization, now being formed, will have an even wider range of participation -- the Friends of the Library. A board of faculty trustees under the chairmanship of Dean Mortimer Appley is completing the spade work for this body, which will consist of a governing body of alumni, students, faculty, and prominent citizens of the Commonwealth, and a membership that will include all who are willing to give financial support to the library. This will be in no sense an organization devoted to the negative task of raising the funds which the legislature has the obligation to provide. Instead it will represent an attempt to place students, faculty and citizens in the role of advisors and patrons of the library - no longer merely consumers of library services. It is hoped that the Friends will elicit gifts of books as well as of money and by its very nature recognize that libraries, after all, provide some satisfactions as well as tears.

Good Luck

To the editor:

As the defeated candidate for president of the class of '73 I would like to wish my successor good luck. I would also like to thank all those who voted for me as a write in. I'm sorry that their extra effort could not have been rewarded by a victory, but five votes is not a big loss. I wish that I could say that there's no bitterness in me due to my having to run as a write in, which obviously lost me the election, but there is. It's a sad thing to know that those students who so often attack a bureaucratic organization which controls them are so apt at setting up their own and making the same mistake of the "law to the letter" regardless of the "human side". Next week I will be putting on the last program of our class for this year. It will be fantastic. I'm sad that when I was finally getting into this I had to be stopped. But rest assured S.G.A., Student Senate, and the General Court. This arch criminal has been purged from UMass government and once again it is safe for apple pie, motherhood and beer.

Warning

To the editor:

In regard to yesterday's warning letter to beware of magazine salesmen, I would like to add some further remarks. I used to work for one of those companies who taught us a "line" to use when selling magazines. You were to tell the people that if they "voted" for you, you could win a thousand dollar savings bond or some other "neat" prize. You really got a commission on what you sold. In my opinion, it is one of the most crooked organizations I ever worked for, and when I told the company I was going to leave, I was almost beaten up. The company never paid me the commission I was promised, but I felt lucky to escape with my life.

These companies are the epitomy of corrupt business who work within the law to rob people. The kids themselves who actually do the soliciting are manipulated by the company to an alarming degree and are exploited to the Nth degree in the name of profit. The whole system is perfectly within the law but to me it is real highway robbery.

I would advise anyone approached by one of these sales boys or girls to call the police and complain, but to keep in mind that th actual solicitor is not the rea bandit. The kids probably don't have any idea how badly they are being exploited.

Thank you,
ROBERT CUSHMAN

Addendum

To the editor:

This is an addendum to your report on the speech given last Thursday by the Egyptian Ambassador to the United Nations, Mohammed El-Zayyat. I wish to record for the benefit of posterity an episode which occurred toward the end of the question-and-answer period, as reported to me by a friend.

Someone in the back row introduced his question roughly as follows: "Sir, I appreciated very much the broad historical perspective of your presentation. I found particularly fascinating your reference to that British intelligence officer who suggested to Lloyd George in 1919, to create, under British auspices, a buffer state between the two future dangerous centers of nationalism, Jewish and Arab, by occupying the sparsely populated Sinai peninsula. Now, it seems to me that the United Nations military force, which was stationed south of the Israeli border after 1956, played a similar role, under changed circumstances, protectin g Egypt against Zionist aggression."

The Ambassador nodded approvingly, apparently flattered, but then came the main blow: "What I don't understand," the man from the audience continued, "why, in that case, the Egyptian government had to blockade, before the outbreak of the six-day war, the strait leading to the Israeli port Elath, something that must have looked like an aggressive provocation to the Israeli; then massed tanks south of the Israeli border; and then asked the U.N. secretary to remove the United Nations forces?"

It is a pity that a large part of the audience, I was told, could not properly savor the superior sarcasm of the question because people just do not remember such important historical facts that immediately preceded the pre-emptive operations of May 1967. (Nor, for that matter, are they aware of the grave suspicion that it was the Soviet Union which maneuvered poor Nasser into that adventure.)

The Ambassador's answer was after some vacillation, to the effect that one cannot judge Egypt's actions with the benefit of hindsight, and that he didn't have the time to answer in detail. Well, I think it was a perfect checkmate.

Tolerance

To the editor:

I have just come from the Student Union after watching Mr. Nixon's television address a rather shaken person. I've been on campus for several years now and, having watched T.V. there for as many years, have become accustomed to the obscene gestures, catcalls and just general asinine remarks that emanate from members of the "Radical Left" whenever anything is said or shown that they do not agree with – in fact, this past winter, some even graduated to throwing gloves, hats and scarfs at the T.V. if whatever was being shown became unusually unacceptable and irrating. This evening, however, I watched in disbelief and astonishment as some people, supposedly with adult intelligence, went into insane fits of wild, uncontrolled ecstasy the few times Mr. Nixon stumbled during his speech, the few times he went to the map and the once he touched his handkerchief to his lips.

With intelligence like this . . .?

Worthy

To the editor:

Often the most obvious, and the most worthy, are overlooked. I would therefore like to name Sander Ross, Donald Epstein, Ina Goldstein, and Robert Twiss as Distinguished Seniors 1970, in addition to the many invisible people on this campus that are distinguished in their own right.

Spring

To Churvy P. Kilroy, c/o the Editors:

A Umie tradition is in dire danger! Spring is fast passing into summer and we have NOT HAD SPRING DAY YET. What's happening Churvy P. Kilroy? Do you need help? I helped coordinate the followers of Baccus, with the wood-nymphs and satyrs that frolicked with cloven hooves through our happy glens last year. I can still draw a mean draft and stand ready to aid this merry prankster caper if needed.

Yours with gusto,

WMUA Discusses Asian War, Draft

Tonight at 9 p.m., WMUA's "Focus" will examine "The Draft and the Expansion of the War."

Moderator Ken Mosakowski's special guests will include Mr. Richard Prunty, who is currently serving as a draft counselor in the Springfield area, and Michael Pollard and Arlen Brunson, members of the UMass Committee to Repeal the Draft.

Mr. Prunty, who has made numerous appearances on WFCR's "Dial-a-Draft Counselor" program, will comment on President Nixon's recent Executive Order cancelling occupational deferments; the President's desire to cancel all student deferments; and and the recent complaint by Curtis Tarr, General Lewis B. Hershey's successor as Director of Selective Service, that draft boards have been so "liberal"in granting deferments this year that they will have to draft registrants at a higher rate to make up a 10% manpower deficiency by August.

If time permits, Mr. Prunty will also provide analysis of the Gates Commission report, which recommends an end to the draft and establishment of an all-volunteer army.

Mr. Pollard and Mr. Brunson will recount events of their trip to Washington last week as part of a group lobbying to gain Congressional repeal of the draft.

The 90-minute program will conclude with an editorial statement by Mosakowski condemning the invasion of Cambodia by American troops and calling for the impeachment of President Nixon.

Caps and gowns for undergraduates, Stockbridge, Masters, Doctorates and, announcements and two (2) rain day tickets will be given out in the Student Union (Check Room on main floor) on the following dates:

Wednesday, May 6 - 9:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.

Course Descriptions (Continued)

Psychology

Dr. Kamil
The course will cover the various methods used in psychology, including social observation, questionnaires and laboratory techniques. The emphasis will be on learning by doing - getting first-hand experience of the strengths and weaknesses of various techniques by using them in original group experiments. 1 lecture, 1 3-hour lab per week. Several papers, probably no exams.

PSYCHOLOGY 145
Statistics in Psychology
Mr. Chumbley and Mr. Myers
The purpose of the course is to give the student a working knowledge of statistics useful in describing samples and populations and prepare him for more advanced study in psychological statistics. This preparation includes introduction to the concepts of sampling distributions, elements of probability, principles of inferential statistics, and experience in using elementary statistical tests (T and chi square).
The text which has been used and may be used during the fall is Fundamentals of Behavioral Statistics by Runyon and Haber.
The student should have a reasonable facility in college algebra. Mathmetics 111 and 112 or the equivalent would readily provide such facility.
There are typically four examinations given during the semester. Homework assignments and quizzes in the laboratory sections are also likely to be given.

PSYCHOLOGY 220
Learning and Thinking
John W. Donahoe
Topics to be considered: We will consider the principles which determine how organisms act and think the way they do. While the emphasis will be upon these basic principles, their application to abnormal and social behavior and to science itself will be examined.
Required texts and materials: As yet undetermined.
Supplementary materials: As yet undetermined.
Prerequisites and limitations: Psych 101, 60 students.
Papers required: None
Examinations: Two short answer examinations and a final examination.

PSYCHOLOGY 210
Sensation and Perception
Drs. Danielson and Dzendolet
The course is oriented towards an examination of the psychology, anatomy, and physiology of sensory organs, and a study of the processes leading to the perception of the world as a basis of the normal functioning of living organisms. The approach used considers the human being as part of the evolutionary chain and is therefore concerned with the study of lower organisms and the biological substrate of the perceptual abilities of organisms.
Other approaches such as information processing are described and utilized where applicable (e.g. in the discussion of size constancy).
Texts: Gregory - Eye and Brain; Van Bergeijk ET AL - Waves and the Ear; Assorted reserve readings.
Prerequisites: Psych 101.
No papers.
Two one-half hour quizzes, one one hour midterm, one two hour final - short answer and short essay questions.

PSYCHOLOGY 220, SECTION B
Learning and thinking
C. Clifton
Topics: The course will present a detailed examination of two contrasting modern approaches to answering the old question of how experience affects knowledge. One approach, the operant conditioning approach, rephrases the question as "what are the objective conditions that reliably affect the occurrence of behaviors?" The other approach, the human information processing approach, rephrases the question as "what are the mechanisms of the human mind that allow us to remember, transform, and react to the information the world gives us."
Required texts: Undecided.
Prerequisites and limitations: Psychology 101; Class size limit, 60.
Papers: None.
Exams: Three, partly short essay.

psychology 331 & 631
Clinical Psychology
Seymour Epstein
The purpose of this course is to acquaint students with the clinical approach to understanding people and with the kinds of activities clinical psychologists engage in.
The course is divided into the following sections: (1) clinical theories of personality, including Freud, Rogers, and learning theory, (2) diagnostic procedures, including projective and objective personality tests, (3) psychotherapeutic techniques, illustrated with tape recordings, and (4) research. There is extensive use of autobiographical case histories. A number of written analyses of case histories is required, and these, as well as written analyses of test records replace formal examinations.
A term project, consisting of research, self-study, or an autobiography, usually running to about 20 pages, is required.
While there are no formal examinations, there is a relatively large amount of report writing. The class is small (under 20) to encourage discussion in an informal atmosphere. As over-enrollment is likely, it is a good idea to keep a back-up course in mind. Selections are made by grade point average, interview and performance on a brief assignment.

Sociology

SOCIOLOGY 101
Introduction to Sociology
G. Putnam Barber, Gerald Platt, and Staff

IMPORTANT: There are now three pre-registration options for Introductory Sociology. Care should be taken to preregister for the desired combination of lectures and discussion sections.

Option #1: Pre-register using SOCIOL 101 identification. Two 50-minute lectures and one 50-minute discussion section each week.

Option #2: Pre-register using SOCIOL 103 identification. Two 50-minute lectures and one longer discussion section (up to 115 minutes) per week. Many students have felt frustrated by discussion periods which end "just as we were really getting into things." If you expect to be interested by Soc. 101, pre-register for SOCIOL 103.

Option #3: Pre-register using SOCIOL 104 identification. Two 50-minute lectures per week (no discussion section). Two required hour-examinations in addition to the regular Soc. 101 mid-semester; perhaps an additional lecture or two, on an optional basis. Many students have felt that discussion sections did not reward the time spent, or that they would rather concentrate in their own ways on the materials than follow the interests of their fellow students. New students who feel that they are likely to share one or more of these feelings should pre-register for SOCIOL 104.

NOTE: In all other respects the students taking Soc. 101 will be treated identically, and students who pre-register for SOCIOL 101, 103 or 104 will be assigned to the same lecture sections; see "papers and examinations," below.

This course provides the student with an introduction to several of the central elements of the sociological perspective by examining selected aspects of contemporary American society. Two lectures and one discussion section each week.

Topical outline of the course: Part I -- Social structure, including a comparison of primative and urbanized societies and a consideration of American class structure and ethnic divisions (6 weeks). Part II -- Individuals in Society, including an examination of conformity and defiance, especially among young people (3 weeks). Part III -- The Sociological Perspective. A more general discussion of the range of sociological concerns and the implications of sociological research (3 weeks).

Required texts: Subject to general review and re-evaluation. At this time it is impossible to say which books will be retained. There will be a new edition of the Study Guide (Wilkinson and Barber) and It's Happening (Simmons and Winograd), Community Colleges (O'Connell) and probably Impossible Revolution? (Killian) will not be used.

Supplementary materials: Films related to the course are scheduled weekly throughout the semester (in co-operation with Psychology 101).

Pre-requisites and limitations: None

A lab fee of $1.00 is charged.

Papers and Examinations: A proposal (1-3 pages) and term paper (5-10 pages) are required; a midsemester examination (short essays) and a final (short and long essays) are given to all students; some discussion section leaders may make further assignments

SOCIOLOGY 247
Social Statistics
Surinder K. Mehta

The course is an introduction to descriptive and inferential statistics. The course starts off with a general presentation of the uses and misuses of statistics, the value of nature of sampling, and the drawing of inferences about populations from samples. The student goes on to study fundamentals of the measurement of social variables, grouping procedures for quantitative and qualitative variables, and cross-classification, and graphic presentation of data. Various measures of averages are discussed, and the concept and measurement of variation are presented for analysis and discussion.

The nature of probability, and the calculation of probabilities of different types of events is presented. The normal distribution is discussed, and hypothesis testing, statistical inference and correlation analysis are investigated.

Students intending to do graduate work in any of the social sciences would find this course most useful. It is a stimulating and challenging course for some; for the students, the taking of this course is, in a manner of speaking, the learning of a language, the language of statistics, which helps them in reading and understanding research literature, and living more intelligently as persons.

I. E. 754
ADVANCED ENGINEERING ECONOMY
Richard J. Giglio

The intent of this course is to extend the (generally somewhat limited) knowledge engineers have of economic decision-making. It is an attempt to combine information found in courses in macro-and Micro-economics, engineering economy, accounting, finance and operations research so that a student can have a unified background on which to draw when he must take action on an economic problem. Ideally, a student will have done work in all the above areas; in practice, it is realized that this will not be the case. Some review is provided but a student who is familiar with none of the above topics will have a difficult time.

The structuring of this course is quided by consideration of the basic economic problem, that of resource allocation, rather than by the currently defined disciplines and boundaries. In studying the anatomy of an economic dicision one must, of course, understand the "natural" and "artificially" structured components of economic systems. Thus, the approach being taken certainly does not discard the defined disciplines but rather attempts to provide for them a unified framework from the point of view of a decision maker, as opposed to a theoretician or one who is trying to discover principles. As such, it is a practical course which draws, in an organized way, on what is known about economic behavior and systems.

Readings are assigned from diverse sources, and there is no single text. Generally, students write one paper or project and take one class and one take-home exam.

The English Epic Tradition
Mr. Cheney

This is a new course, to be offered for the first time in the Fall of 1970; it is designed to satisfy the requirement of a "genre" course for the English major. It consists of substantial readings in four long English poems (Beowulf, Faerie Queene, Paradise Lost, The Prelude) against the background of classical epic (The Aeneid), with primary emphasis on the ways in which each poet employs tradition epic motifs as a means of defining his own contemporary vision of man and society. This course will start with Virgil rather than Homer because students are less likely to have read him, and because he is combining the themes of the two Hameric poems, and himself redefining the epic tradition. There will be as much discussion as the size and disposition of the class permit; and there will be two papers, an hour test, and a final examination.

This history and contemporary use of chiches from Beowulf to Rod McKuen. Students will be asked to seek out cliches from all sources and to practice using them in frequent short papers. The course aims to bring out a greater awareness of the self and of its relation to modern society through frequent use of cliches. (This course may also be taken for major credit in government, psychology, sociology, and hotel management.)

Texts: Will be chosen from existing anthologies.

Supplementary material: Attendance at local films may be required.

Prerequisites: English 111-112 or the equivalent, or permission of the instructor.

Papers: Weekly short exercises in the organization of cliches, plus a term paper which may duplicate the research paper of another course.

Exam: Final exam, in which the student will be graded according to the number of cliches he can turn out on a given inflammatory topic.

Aspects of British Literature, Section 5
The Structure of Stylistic Revolutions

Charles Kay Smith

We will be concerned in lectures and discussions with an investigation of four periods in which stylistic changes appear to have accelerated beyond what could be considered normal literacy evolution. The four periods proposed for investigation will be: circa 1590, 1670, 1790, 1970 (?). The principal aims are: 1) To develop a rigorous method of stylistic analysis; 2) To determine if some stylistic changes profound and accelerated enough to be considered a revolution could be hypothesized by analyzing samples of writing published a decade before and after the first three periods of change; 3) To compare and contrast the first three "revolutions" to see if any general structural patterns emerge; 4) To define the structure of a "Stylistic revolutions"; 5) To investigate the possible causes of "stylistic revolutions" by correlating each of the four changes in style with any significant changes within each literary milieu and within the respective cultural, social, and political environments.

Texts: Will include several paperback anthologies of literature and much mimeographed material.

Exams: Workload will consist of two or three short papers and a final exam (questions in advance).

Aspects of British Literature, Section 3: Hardy and Gissing
David Paroissien

Comments: The "depression and ennui" in modern literature which Matthew Arnold spoke of in one of his essays was, by the end of the nineteenth century, the concern of most major British writers. The focus of this course will be an examination of two tentative solutions of the human dilemma offered by novelists Thomas Hardy and George Gissing. For the former, the apparent lack of a viable order in the universe led to an increasing emphasis on personal relationships and on what Hardy termed "the question of matrimonial divergence." Given the "immortal puzzle"--man and woman and their attempts to find a basis for their sexual relation--Hardy argued in favour of greater freedom from the crushing norms of society which seemed to destroy people rather than aid them. By contrast, Gissing's approach to the question of happiness was more political. "I attack the criminal negligence of governments," he explained in a letter to his brother, "which spend their time over matters of relatively no importance, to the neglect of terrible social evil...Herein I am a mouthpiece of the advanced Radical party." Class discussions will centre on these and related problems arising from an assigned reading list of about twelve novels. There will be no quizzes. Students may choose between two six page papers or three four page ones.

Reading List: Under the Greenwood Tree, Pair of Blue Eyes, Far from the Madding Crowd, Two on a Tower, Return of the Native, The Woodlanders, Tess of the d'Urbervilles; The Nether World, Workers in the Dawn, The Odd Women, The Private Papers of Henry Ryecroft.

George Bernard Shaw
S. Rudin

Comments: New Course. A study of fifteen to twenty major plays and selected nondramatic writings by the foremost modern British dramatist. An attempt to determine the ways in which Shaw reestablished drama as a major English literary genre in the late 19th century, and the ways in which his art developed through a career lasting more than half a century; attention to his related work as critic of the arts and society and "gadfly" to the "Establishment".

Exams: One hour exam, term paper, final exam. Discussion and (occasionally) lecture.

Twentieth Century Southern Fiction
Mr. Lyons

This course will seek not only an understanding of, but some of the reasons for, the South's tremendously disproportionate share of modern American literature. It will explore, through extensive reading in the works of writers like William Faulkner, Robert Penn Warren, Alien Tate, Flannery O'Connor, Carson McCullers, Erskine Caldwell, Thomas Wolfe, William Styron, and Walker Percy, some of the central issues and attitudes of Southern writers. Some problems might include: the uniqueness of the South in American history, and its ambivalent position in the American imagination; the image of the North in Southern fiction, and vice versa; slavery, racism, and miscegenation as themes; the image of the black man (and woman); the sense of place and the obsession with history, real and imagined; and the "Fugitive" challenge to industrial society.

Since an understanding of not only the facts, but perhaps more important, the myths of the South is so crucial to the fiction, there will be some extra-literary readings and lectures concerning books like Cash's THE MIND OF THE SOUTH, Woodward's THE BURDEN OF SOUTHERN HISTORY, and Willie Morris' NORTH TOWARD HOME. Other extra-literary ventures will include readings from books like THE KLANSMAN and other pro-Klan romances, and from other of the "moonlight and magnolia-dancing darky school, and, if possible, a screening and discussion of GONE WITH THE WIND. Lecture and discussion. Considerable reading. Term paper and Final Exam.

Laurence Sterne and the Traditions of Wit and Sentiment
Charles Moran

The course will center on Tristram Shandy and A Sentimental Journey, eccentric and technically daring novels that look backward to the works of Rabelais, Montaigne, and Cervantes and forward to Joyce, Barth, Vonnegut, and Barthelme. In addition to Sterne's fiction, we will read as much as we can of Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel, Montaigne's Essays, and Cervantes' Don Quixote. And we will look at modern fiction that shows evidence of Sterne's influence.

Texts: Laurence Sterne, Tristram Shandy (Odyssey); A Sentimental Journey (Signet); Rabelais' Gargantua and Pantagruel (Penguin); Montaigne, Selected Essays (Penguin); Cervantes, Don Quixote (Penguin); Kurt Vonnegut, Cat's Cradle, (Dell); Donald Barthelme, Unspeakable Acts and Unnatural Practices.

Class reports: At least two by each student during the semester.

Exams: No quizzes. Discussion important. A final project, no examination.

Blake and Milton
Prof. Roberts W. French

By putting these two great prophetic poets together, it is hoped, first of all, to illuminate each by the light of the other, and second, to move outward to consideration of the important issues necessarily raised by comparing the two. Among the subjects for discussion are such as the following: the uses of myth, concepts of humanism, the poet as prophet, the poet as revolutionary, the poet and the apocalyptic vision, modes of perception, human freedom and sexuality, the uses of reason, the individual and the institution, concepts of morality, and the uses of poetry.

Texts: The Portable Blake, ed. Alfred Kazin; Milton, Paradise Lost & Paradise Regained, ed. Christopher Ricks; Milton, Samson Agonistes & the Shorter Poems, ed. Isabel G. MacCaffrey.

There are no prerequisites; non-majors are welcome. Written work will consist of short weekly papers; there will be no examinations. Each student will have the option of determining his own grade.

RHETORIC PROGRAM

These are seven courses now being proposed for the new RHETORIC Program, as follows:

Group I
Rhetoric 100 - Language and Writing
Rhetoric 110 - Language and Speaking

Group II
Rhetoric 140 - Voices of Imaginative Writing
Rhetoric 145 - Criticism and the Theatrical Arts
Rhetoric 160 - Art of Rhetorical Discourse
Rhetoric 165 - Modern Public Discourse
Rhetoric 170 - Process of Communication

(Certain other proposals for Group II options are to follow shortly, including a study of modern media and a course in the rhetoric of film.)

It is proposed to change the present University requirement in Speech/English as follows:

Present requirement (Bulletin Page 9): An introduction to the basic skills of communication by successful completion of English 111 and 112 and Speech 101, 105, 107, or 150.

Proposed new requirement:
An introduction to the theory and practice of writing and speaking, and to the study of communication in our society, by successful completion of two courses in the Rhetoric Program, at least one of which must be Rhetoric 100 or 110 (i.e. Group I).

The Advisory Committee on Rhetoric suggests the above wording in order to give the various Colleges maximum flexibility in determining their own requirements. However, for the College of Arts and Sciences, it recommends requiring simply one course in Group I and one in Group II.

INFORMATION ON THE PROPOSED NEW RHETORIC PROGRAM

Dean Shapiro has recently appointed a Director and Associate Director of Rhetoric (pro tem until approved), and an interdepartmental Advisory Committee on Rhetoric. Their charge is to present for approval, and to supervise when approved, a new requirement in Rhetoric to supplant the present six-hour requirement for freshmen in Speech and English. The Directors are to coordinate new efforts by both departments to offer a fresh and innovative program for all students, and they are directly responsible to the Dean rather than to any single department. Their general guideline is to be the Report of the Dean's Committee on Rhetoric, completed in January of 1969, with whatever additions and qualifications seem appropriate. (This Report has received near-unanimous approval from both faculty and student sources).

General objectives of the New Program are summarized in that Report, but three essential considerations are worth listing here. (1) We are proposing to increase the options available to the student within the requirement, and to provide greater flexibility. (2) We are concerned with course proposals that genuinely confront problems of language for the general student, rather than offering in a parochial way traditional introductions to the study of Speech and English. (3) We are determined to construct the entire Program on an up-to-date theoretical framework that reflects changing attitudes toward language in a changing world.

The present University regulations require English 111, English 112, and Speech 101 (or alternatives). Except for the Speech alternatives, these are all 2-credit courses, a particularly ineffective schedule for freshmen. The new Program repackages these six hours by providing a series of 3-credit courses, of which the student is to select two. We divide these options into two groups: Group I, wide-ranging introductions to the nature of language and communication with much practice in writing and/or speaking; and Group II, studies of particular media in contemporary society, with continuing practice in writing and speaking. For the present, we are offering just two courses in Group I, Rhetoric 100 (Language and Writing), and Rhetoric 110 (Language and Speaking), though we shall probably recommend increasing that number in future years.

A fundamental part of the new Rhetoric Program is a proposal to rearrange the Teaching Assistant's workload so that he will be teaching one three-hour section of a Rhetoric course, plus other duties for his department (English or Speech). In the case of new and inexperienced TAs, these other duties will require his participation in a systematic and demanding training program, under supervision of senior teachers.

Director of Rhetoric

3. Title and Number of Course: Rhetoric 100, Language and Writing.

4. Complete NEW Course Catalog Description: Emphasing the written language, this course offers a discussion of how we choose words and styles to express ourselves and our world. It presents varied opportunities for written expression, on different subjects, for different pruposes and audiences. Short reading assignments, some about language, and frequent short papers. The emphasis is on responsible choice in the language we use both in our academic lives and everyday.
3 class hours, 3 credits.

5. Curricular Information: This course is designed as one alternative to satisfy the university requirement in rhetoric. It is one of several courses which emphasize information and activities calculated to improve writing and speaking and affording practice in various voices and styles.

6. Relation to Other Courses: One of a number of courses which students will choose two to meet the university requirement in basic rhetoric and communication.

7. Justification: This course is part of an integrated Program to replace the present requirements in Speech and English. This new Program offers some options to the student, and brings to the teaching of writing and speaking an up-to-date theoretical framework.

8. Proposed Instructors and their Qualifications:
Walker Gibson, now Director of Freshman English
Other professorial faculty
A large staff of Teaching Assistants

9. Special Needs:
a. Space: None beyond present requirements for English 111.
b. Staff: It is anticipated that approximately 60% of the entering class may elect this option. If so, the course can be offered with approximately the staff now teaching English 111, with the Teaching Assistants' load reduced from two two-hour section. (This reduction has been justified elsewhere). A more ambitious and demanding training program for TA's is an integral part of this course's operation, and will require additional time and effort. Frequent small-group staff meetings on practical teaching problems will be supplemented by a reading program and lectures on questions of language, style and pedagogy. c. There will be some extra costs in setting up the administration of the entire Rhetoric Program, but no special costs for this course.
d. Library: No new demands on the University Library.

10. Planned Pattern of Offering: Available in many sections for the fall semester, and in more limited numbers for spring and summer.

11. Anticipated make-up of the class: 100% lower-division students.

12. Courses with low enrollment in the Department last year: There were no courses in Rhetoric last year.

Papers on fresh-dying-dead metaphor, and on making "straight" vs ironic statements. Implications of these choices for persona and style.
V. Sources of meaning (final week)
A concluding paper on some aspect of language and meaning.
Bibliographical Statement.
This is not a conventional course, and most of the readers and rhetorics now on the market are not appropriate for it. Much of the reading materials for this course must come from the alertness and ingenuity of the teaching staff: current newspapers and magazines, mimeographed passages from any genres, paragraphs from textbooks in the students' other courses. All the language in the student's world must be considered as potential material for examination and discussion.
In practice, for the first year or so, a published collection of readings, both expository and imaginative, will probably be necessary. Thereafter it is possible the staff may wish to create its own anthology, to be published by one of the firms specializing in "custom" jobs of this sort.

A library of reference materials for TA's and other staff members, relevant to the entire Rhetoric Program, will be essential. This library should include recent scholarship on rhetoric and style, some basic works in modern language theory, works on teaching including publications of the National Council of Teachers of English, and samples of freshman textbooks.

   b. Staff: It is anticipated that approximately 40% of the entering class may elect this option. If so, there must be a substantial increase in the staff now teaching Speech 101, particularly in the number of Teaching Assistants. If, as has been proposed the course load for TA's assigned to this course must be at least double to triple the number presently assigned to the 2 hr. Speech 101. If this course load reduction was accomplished, a more ambitious and demanding training program for TA's would be an integral part of this course's operation, and will require additional time and effort. Frequent small-group staff meetings on practical teaching problems will be supplemented by a reading program and lectures on questions of rhetorical theory, language, style, and pedagogy.

3. Title and Number of Course: Rhetoric 140. Voices of Imaginative Writing.
4. Complete New Course Catalog Description: This course looks at various kinds of verbal imaginative expression in our culture - rock lyrics, modern poems, advertising, short fiction, drama -- with a view to helping students become more articulate and critical as readers and more resourceful and daring as writers. Exercises in critical reading or analysis will be balanced by frequent "creative" writing activities in various genres. By "playing" with language in different ways, the student is led to serious efforts at self-expression and self-definition. 3 class hours, 3 credits.

9. Special Needs:

   b. Staff: It is anticipated that the second-semester enrollment for this course will approximate that of Rhetoric 100 during the first semester (about 2000 students in 1970-71). If so, the course can be offered with a staff similar to that now teaching English 111-112. (Rhetoric 140 will also be made available for some 90 students during the fall semester). The Teaching Assistant's load is to be reduced to one three-hour section meeting, plus other duties including a new and systematic training program.

RHETORIC 140.
Voices of Imaginative Writing.
Course Outline and Bibliographic Statement.
Course Outline
I. 3 Weeks. The course will begin with contemporary rock lyrics and ballads, the art form closest to the students' own lives. What do they like about these lyrics, and why? What distinctions and terms might be useful in expressing their liking? What does music do to words? An exercise or two in writing lyrics for a particular singer or group.
II. 3 Weeks. Some reading in modern poetry, especially poems that express attitudes comparable to those in the lyrics just studied. Simple ironies and subtle ironies. The stock response and what to do about it. Recognizing fresh metaphor. Exercises in writing about poems and in writing poems on one's own.
III. Weeks. A study of certain kinds of advertising, with attention to "playful" Madison Avenue styles that offer turns on the cliche and ironical voices. The put-on. Exercises in composing and in analysing such ads.
IV. 4 Weeks. Intensive reading of a few short stories. Identification of voice and tone. Critical exercises in careful reading and an exercise in composing narrative writing.
V. 3 Weeks. A study of one or two modern plays, with a critical exercise in interpretation and another in creating meaningful dialogue.
Bibliographical Statement
In general the readings in this course should be no older than the students themselves -- that is, most of them will have been published since 1950. For the first eight weeks of the course, mimeographed materials should be sufficient. A collection of recent short fiction, and a paperback play or two, should be the only required texts, and these texts will change from year to year. While at least some of these materials will be of high literary quality, that is less important than the variety of styles the student confronts as he develops his own critical resourcefulness and his own imagination through language.

4. Complete New Course Catalog Description: Using as subject matter the theatrical arts (theatre, dance, film), this course will explore the roles and styles of the critic. Through initial engagement as spectators (and in some cases as participants), and through essays and oral presentations, students will grapple with such questions as: Of what use is a critic in an artistic enterprise? How does a critic come to his point of view? How can a critic deal adequately with the form of a work as well as with his subjective responses to it? To what extent can or ought a critic have an impact on other's perceptions? The course presupposes that criticism is a rhetorical activity and an examination of rhetorical principles as they apply to criticism will be an important aspect of the course. 3 class hours, 3 credits.
5. Curricular Information: This course is designed as one alternative in satisfying the university requirement in rhetoric. It is one of several courses introducing students to theory and practice of writing and speaking, and to the study of communication in our society.

8. Proposed Instructors and Their Qualifications:
   Gary Stewart, Assistant Professor
   Other Professorial Faculty and Instructors.
   A staff of Teaching Assistants with a Special concern for the theatrical arts.
9. Special needs:
   a. Space: Classrooms, perhaps some facilities for screenings and theatrical presentations.
   b. Staff: Only one section for twenty students will be offered in the fall semester, 1970-71. However, it is anticipated that approximately 120 students will be enrolled in the spring semester. This will necessitate the assignment of 4 to 6 teaching assistants to this course. The teaching assistant's load is to consist of one three-hour section meeting, plus other duties including a new and systematic training program.
   c. There will be some extra costs in setting up the administration of the entire Rhetoric Program, but no special costs for this course.
   d. Library: No new demands on the University Library.
10. Planned Pattern of Offering: Available in many sections for the spring semester, and in more limited numbers for fall and summer.

12. Courses with low enrollment in the Department last year: There were no courses in the Rhetoric Program last year.

3. Title and Number of Course: Rhetoric 160 The Art of Rhetorical Discourse
4. Complete NEW course Catalog Description: This course is a description and analysis of the rhetorical behavior pattern of a society and the individual. It begins with a consideration of the view of rhetoric from modern times back through the classical period followed by an inquiry into the scope of rhetoric including such topics as the social function of rhetoric, the rhetorical behavior of the individual, and rhetoric as an art and science related to other arts and sciences. The major portion of the course is a study of the materials and forms of rhetoric. The materials are examined from the points of view of the circumstances of the communicative situation, the audience, and the speaker. Traditional forms of rhetoric and variations in form arising in part from media are the topics that complete this part of the course. The remainder of the course is a study of logical patterns in discourse and the judgment and criticism of discourse. Five or six short papers will be written during the course of the semester on various aspects of these topics. 3 class hours. Credit, 3.
5. Curricular information: This course is designed as one alternative to satisfy the university requirement in rhetoric. It is one of several courses introducing students to the theory and practice of writing and speaking, and to the study of communication in our society. This course is currently being offered as an alternative to satisfy the university requirement in rhetoric.
6. Relation to Other Courses: One of a number of courses from which the student will choose two to meet the university requirement in basic rhetoric and communications. When this course is approved the present Speech 105 will cease to exist.
7. Justification: This course is part of an integrated Program to replace the present requirements in Speech and English. This new Program offers some options to the student, and brings to the teaching of writing and speaking an up-to-date theoretical framework.
8. Proposed Instructors and their Qualifications:
   Karl R. Wallace, Professor and Chairman of the Rhetoric and Public Address Area of the Department of Speech.
   Other professorial faculty
   Some Teaching Assistants, preferably advanced Ph.D. candidates.
9. Special Needs:
   a. Space: None beyond the present requirements for Speech 105.
   b. Staff: This course will be taught primarily by members of the professorial staff of the Department of Speech. Therefore, only a limited number of sections can be offered each semester. At a later time, after the approval of the Ph.D. program is

3. Title and Number of Course: Rhetoric 165 Modern Public Discourse.
4. Complete NEW Course Catalog Description: This course is a study of modern oral discourse to see how it works and why it sometimes fails. The course is organized into five topical units. Unit one: "Introduction" is a study of some of the basic features of the communicative act with an introduction to various critical approaches. Unit two: "The Rhetoric of War and Peace" is an examination of speakers in the act of raising essentially three questions: (1) What necessitates a declaration of war? (2) Now that a confrontation has begun, what policy should we pursue?, and (3) How did we get to the point of war anyway? Unit three: "The Rhetoric of Human Rights" considers two types of speakers; those who would enslave and terrorize, and those who would preserve and extend human rights. Unit four: "Some Interesting Debates" covers a few debates which have reached national prominence, such as "The Kennedy-Nixon Debates" and "The Debate Over the ABM". Unit five: "The Rhetoric of Justification" is a broadly conceived unit considering speakers as they justify the rationale for the country's domestic or foreign policy, or for their own specific acts. Basic assignments in the course consist of three papers of approximately 5 pages in length, and a midterm and final examination. 3 class hours. Credit, 3.
5. Curricular information: This course is designed as one alternative to satisfy the university requirement in rhetoric. It is one of several courses introducing students to the theory and practice of writing and speaking, and to the study of communication in our society. This course is currently being offered as an alternative to satisfy the university speech requirement. The basic modification is the change in title from "Speech 107 Masterpieces of Public Address" to "Rhetoric 165 Modern Public Discourse."
6. Relation to Other Courses: One of a number of courses from which the student will choose two to meet the university requirement in basic rhetoric and communication. When this course is approved the present Speech 107 will cease to exist.
7. Justification: This course is part of an integrated Program to replace the present requirements in Speech and English. This new program offers some options to the student, and brings to the teaching of writing and speaking an up-to-date theoretical framework.
8. Proposed Instructors and their Qualifications:
   Jane Blakenship, Associate Professor and Director of Graduate Studies of the Department of Speech.
   Hermann Stelzner, Associate Professor
   Other professorial faculty and instructors
   Teaching Assistants
9. Special needs:
   a. Space: None beyond the present requirements of Speech 107.
   b. Staff: This course will be offered in a lecture-discussion format. Professors Blakenship and Stelzner will be primarily responsible for the lecturing in the course, while instructors and teaching assistants will be needed to conduct the many discussion sections that will be needed.
   c. Costs: There is heavy use of audio-visual materials, such as films, slides, and recordings in this course. Five hundred dollars per semester would be a realistic estimate for film rentals and cost of materials. This would decrease to some extent in later years as a library of slides and recordings is collected. However, there will always be the need for replacement of work-out materials, and the addition of new materials in order to keep the content of the course current and relevant.
   d. Library: No new demands on the University Library.
10. Planned Pattern of Offering: Available in both the first and second semesters and in the summer as needed.
11. Anticipated make-up of class: 95% lower division students and 5% upper division students.
12. Courses with low enrollment in the department last year: There were no courses in the Rhetoric Program last year.

3. Title and Number of Course: Rhetoric 170 The Process of Communication.
4. Complete NEW Course Catalog Description: This course is a study of the basic processes and elements involved in the act of communication. After a preliminary discussion and survey of various models of the communication process, the core of the course is organized into topical units examining the elements of the communicative event; the source, the message, media and settings, and the receiver. Topics covered in the consideration of the course include the relationship between thought and language, the nature of language, determinants of meaning, language acquisition, and variations in linguistic behavior. Two formal types of messages, the speech and the drama, are examined in the unit on the message. Following the study of the characteristics and types of messages is an exploration of some of the relationships between media, settings and messages, and of the effects of media on the content and form of messages. The study of the receiver is devoted mainly to an analysis of the effects of communication and of the factors relating to comprehension and persuasibility. The course ends with an inquiry into two philosophical problems relating to communication; ethics and persuasion, and the concept of freedom of speech. Basic assignments for the course are three short papers, participation in at least one in-class panel discussion, two hourly examinations, and a final examination. 3 class hours. Credit, 3.
5. Curricular Information: This course is designed as one alternative to satisfy the university requirement in rhetoric. It is one of several courses introducing students to the theory and practice of writing and speaking, and to the study of communication in our society. This course is currently being offered as an alternative to satisfy the university speech requirement under the title "Speech 150 Process of Speech Communication." The primary modification in adapting this course to the Rhetoric Program is a slight broadening of scope particularly in the section on media to include an examination of print as well as oral media. When this course is approved, the course designation "Speech 150 Process of Speech Communication" will be retained by the Department of Speech to be converted into a course designed specifically for speech majors.
6. Relation to Other Courses: One of a number of courses from which the student will choose two to meet the university requirement in basic rhetoric and communication.
7. Justification: This course is part of an integrated program to replace the present requirements in Speech and English. This new program offers some options to the student, and brings the teaching of writing and speaking an up-to-date theoretical framework.
8. Proposed Instructors and their Qualifications:
   Ronald F. Reid, Professor and Head of the Department of Speech.
   William K. Price, Assistant Professor and Assistant Head of the Department of Speech
   Other professorial faculty and instructors.
   Some teaching assistants, preferably advanced Ph.D. candidates
9. Special needs:
   a. Space: none beyond the present requirements for Speech 150.
   b. Staff: This course will be taught primarily by members of the full-time staff of the Department of Speech. Therefore, only a limited number of sections can be offered each semester. At a later time, after the approval of the Ph.D. program in Speech, highly qualified Ph.D. candidates can be used as teaching assistants in this course.
   c. Costs: Audiovisual materials are used extensively in this course. It is estimated that approximately $250 per semester will be needed for the rental of films and for the purchase of such items as slides and audio and video tape.
   d. Library: No new demands on the University Library.
10. Planned Pattern of Offering: Available in a limited number of sections in both the first and second semesters and in the summer as needed.
11. Anticipated make-up of class: 95% lower division students and 5% upper division students.
12. Course with low enrollment in the department last year: There were no courses in the Rhetoric Program last year.

Israeli Ambassador to Conclude DVP Middle East Lecture Series

Israeli Ambassador to the United Nations Moshe Leshem will explain his country's position Tuesday night in the second part of the Distinguished Visitors Program's Middle East Lecture Series. Mr. Leshem will be speaking at 8 p.m. in Thompson 104.

Born during the last days of the Austro-Hungarian Empire in Czechoslavakia, Moshe Leshem was studying at a university there when the Nazi forces invaded Czechoslovakia and closed all universities. During World War II, Mr. Leshem organized a small group of young people undergoing training in agriculture in preparation for emigration to Palestine and led them to join the Czech Resistance Movement. The group collected information which was clandestinely transmitted to the Allied Headquarters in London. In recognition of his activities in the Resistance Movement, he received after the war the Czechoslovak Order for Meritorious Services. He returned this decoration in 1967 in protest over the Czech government's hostile attitude towards Israel.

After the war, Mr. Leshem turned to journalism. In this capacity he covered the Israel War of Liberation. This first experience in Israel in 1948 was in his own words, "sufficient to reveal where I really belonged." In May 1949, he settled in Israel and in August of that year was accepted into the Ministry for Foreign Affairs. Because of his background, he was first employed as an expert on Eastern Europe, and later as Acting Press Officer.

Following service in the Israel Legation in Burma, Mr. Leshem was placed in charge of a special information program directed towards the United States. He has also served as Press Officer and Spokesman for the Ministry for Foreign Affairs and as a commissioner at the Brussels International Exposition.

In the summer of 1959 he was appointed Consul of Israel for Southeastern United States with residence in Atlanta, Georgia. Two years later he took up the post of Ambassador of Israel to the Republic of the Congo, and in 1965 became Director of African Affairs at the Ministry for Foreign Affairs in Jerusalem. In this capacity he accompanied Prime Minister Levi Eshkol on his African tour in 1966 and undertook a number of missions to Africa as Mr. Eshkol's Special Envoy. He was appointed to his present position as Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary with the Permanent Mission of Israel to the United Nations in February 1968.

Ambassador Leshem contributes regularly to various publications and newspapers in Israel, and is the author of a study on Communism in the Middle East. He has lectured and broadcast frequently on African Affairs. He is married and the father of three children.

Blood Drive This Week

The semi-annual campus blood drive will take place Tues. May 5 through Thurs. May 7 upstairs in the Student Union.

Although recruitment took place during the past two weeks, walk-in donors will be accepted during the drive days. Anyone, in normal health, weighing 110 lbs. or over and is at least 18 years of age and is under 65, is eligible.

By giving a pint of blood, the donor becomes a member of the Red Cross Insurance program, under which if he or any member of his immediate family should need blood during the next year, it will be given to him free.

Sponsored by Gamma Sigma Sigma, Alpha Phi Omega., and the University Women in co-operation with Hampshire County Public Health, the drive gives the university community an opportunity to alleviate the problem of the shortage of blood.

Those who previously signed up to give blood should bring their appointment cards when they come to donate blood.

Parking Violators:

All parking violations incurred on the University premises must be satisfied in accordance with University policy.

Although the parking ticket issued to a violator is notice of an infraction, on a routine basis the Parking Office will notify individuals of unsatisfied parking violations.

This has been coordinated with and approved by the Dean of Students and the Administration.

All parking violations must be satisfied by seniors prior to graduation. All undergraduates, staff and faculty must satisfy their parking obligations in accordance with University policy prior to the next semester. Failure to satisfy parking obligations may result in the following action:

A. A "hold" placed on your records.

B. Parking privileges withdrawn.

C. Academic registration for the next semester may be prohibited.

It is advisable that you contact the University Police Station to obtain the necessary forms and information prior to paying the parking fines to the Clerk of District Court for Hampshire County, Northampton, Mass. A receipt of payment, of outstanding citations, will clear your records.

THOMPSON 104

What's your excuse?

You could have gone water skiing or swimming or to a dance at night. Instead you've spent the entire day moping around the house feeling sorry for yourself. And why? Just because it was one of those difficult times? How silly. A lot of girls are out there enjoying themselves under the same circumstances. They use Tampax tampons.

Tampax tampons are worn internally so you can swim or dance or do most anything you please. There are no bulky pads or telltale odor to give you away. Tampax tampons are so easy to use. Yes, even the first time. Just follow the instructions inside each package. So go on out and enjoy yourself. With Tampax tampons you have no excuse.

Jaime Brockett pleased some 2000 smiling people at Saturday afternoon's pond Concert.

A Great Saturday at the Pond . . .

By DON GLICKSTEIN
MDC Staff

What I've been saying is that there are too many talented people that go unnoticed and too many James Taylors and Led Zeppelins that keep modern music today bilge. I'm not asking that every performer be a Dylan or a Beatle; I just ask that a performer have a little consideration for his audience, and a little moral inquietude to make him exciting. I congratulate Al Sirota, the Class of '73 and the Student Union Program Council for having the courage to headline relatively unknown performers who have more than just the average talent.

PATRICK SKY, the first performer of the weekend, is certainly not the greatest folk singer. His lyrics are not universal, his voice is not very mellow, and his guitar is what one would suspect. But the audience kept growing by the pond as he sang, not only because of the pleasantness of the sun, the breeze, and the birds, but because of Pat Sky, warming the people with his humor and reflecting on the world.

"We didn't expect that," said JAMES SEALS to the standing ovation he and his partner, DASH CROFT, received after their set. I might say the same thing to Seals and Croft. No introduction was given to these west coast musicians; they merely sat down, Seals counted time for a measure, and then, the first of an imaginative, surprising and refreshing set of songs began. An electric mandolin and guitar, a fiddle, and assorted knocks and raps, accompanied by Crosby, Stills, Nash, and Youngish harmonies, different and imaginative, playing classical, blues, folk, and popular, separately and fused, and covering topics ranging from the "Cows of Gladness" and Ba'hai, messiahs (" About every thousand years, a Child is born") to love ballads -- I am confident that there is nothing Seals and Croft cannot play.

I wish I could say something nice about NANCY MICHAELS, but I can't, so I'll be brief. She sings but one type of song, one way, and damns the audience. When she could have begun a sing-along, she did nothing. She has a Judy Collins-type voice - boring, with no feeling. Ignaged performers' effectiveness at the concert by the amount of attention given stray dogs by the pond in contrast to that given the singers. The dogs won over Miss Michaels.

When I speak of James Taylor's mediocrity and Nancy Michaels' musical turpitude, I have in the past used as contrasting examples Nina Simone, Melanie, Linda Brown, and Doc and Ed. JAIME BROCKETT must be added to the list. Since I first saw him last year, he has improved. He made men shiver on a summer's day with his subdued, eerie "Black Raccoon" and "All Along the Watchtower." He played 6-string guitar, 12-string, dulcimer, and autoharp. He managed to make the 3000 people by the pond forget their inhibitions with a quarter-hour clapping, dancing, singing "You Gotta Walk That Lonesome Highway." During the concert, he was offered bubble gum, ice cream, grass, Contac pills, wine, and beds. He succeeded in refuting the English language, the Volpe Construction Company, applause, Jews, Greeks, Italians, Blacks, lovers of Jesus, Nixon, Agnew, Barry Sadler, and other assorted foundations of "civilization." He defied microphones, daring to walk into the audience singing. And of course, there was that modern Hamletian work, "The Ballad of the USS Titanic," replete with Jack Johnson, 547 feet of rope, a lost thumb pick, and a brilliant a capella adlib of shrinking fingers a little Nubians. Jaime Brockett is good. I rest my case.

I'm upset when I think of HEDGE and DONNA. Their harmonies were predictable, their interpretations soulfully lacking, their choreography staged. They are the type of singers who are capable of being professional, of writing half-decent songs, of knowing where they're at, and of capitalizing with their unabashed sentimentality. It's a shame that two people with so much talent should be so happy and contented to get into one groove and stay there. They have appeared on Ed Sullivan and I see why.

The weather was perfect, the wine flowing, and the grass heavy to complement a spring afternoon of folk. Mostenjoyable.

Hedge and Donna wrapped up the first of two free folk shows brought to UMass by the Class of '73 and the SU Program Council.

. . . A Strange Night Affair

By BETSY GOLDMAN
Fine Arts Staff

The Tim Buckley concert was a strange affair. For those of us who are familiar with Buckley mainly through his album "Hello and Goodbye," the electronic backup and jazz approach produced a response reminiscent of the one Bob Dylan received several years ago at Newport . . . except that even in the end, few really felt that this new approach seemed to be worth getting into.

By the time several friendly jugs of wine passed through the audience, though, people became somewhat more responsive. In the final half hour of solid music, a piece called "Jungle Bird" Buckley's wailing finally got to the crows. Slowly, singly and in groups, people rose and began to move with the music. In the end we were all there, into the music, into Buckley. The heavy rhythm of the piece was underscored by the audience clapping and unlike most concerts where the clapping fades after a while, we joined Buckley and remained with him until the final beat.

In the aftermath, though, the concert remained a disappointment. The crowd applauding and calling for more, Buckley refused to return, and with that refusal the initial response to the whole thing reappeared; for a while it was worth it, but no more than just that short while.

Tim Buckley headlined a paid concert Saturday night in the Ballroom with a wailing and sometimes moving performance.

. . . And A Cage Full of Sound

BILL STAINES, Sunday's first performer, was a pleasant singer with an infectious contentment. His yodels and his stories gave him a certain individuality that makes him rise above the Nancy Michaels of the world.

Rock is not my forte, but I know enough to know that SEA TRAIN is not an average group. Whether it was their spaced-out electric fiddler, the flute of Danny Coburg during "Flute Thing", or the friendliness of the singers talking to the audience, Sea Train was not entirely out of place in a folk concert. One could discern a togetherness that had people dancing in the dust of the Cage. Sea Train are excellent musicians who have not yet stooped to the "heavy" - hype crap that precedes the nausea of most groups.

I must admit disappointment at SPIDER JOHN KOERNER and WILLIE MURPHY. With the one exception of their second number, "Runnin', standin', skippin' . . ." their blues were not alive enough to make the audience feel their dancing, and not soft enough to make them think. Perhaps part of the problem is that their loud amplification, which fitted Sea Train so well, was unsuitable for the Koerner guitar and the Murphy piano. Koerner and Murphy have potential, perhaps as a Minnesota version of the sophisticated Mayall group, but at the performance, their subtleties and music went unheard as they tried to be something they were not.

It has been said that PENTANGLE has lost the excitement it once had, that it sounds the same, that they have stopped experimenting. I defy any man who saw their set Sunday afternoon to say this. Playing to a rowdy, boorish audience, Pentangle just made music the only way they knew how - great - and succeeded finally in making 3000 people in the Cage stand up, acknowledge their talent, and beg for more. Two guitars, a soprano, drums, and a bass that sounded like John Redbourn's sitar, Bert Jansch's banjo, and assorted other instruments, playing blues, ballads, jazz and classical music, succeeded in hypnotizing the audience that had earlier danced in the aisles. Pentangle is alive and well and coming on strong.

What angers me about JAMES TAYLOR is not his rabid following, but that his rabid following cannot recognize better musicians and performers. James was his usual, predictable, soothing, pleasant, happy, contented self, that delighted the audience. Oh well, I suppose all those mediocre people out there need a little representation.

The Homecoming Committee and other fun groups should learn a good lesson from the weekend concerts. For less than $20,000, free entertainment was provided for thousands of people. On the whole, it was good, quality performances, and the sponsors of the weekend should be lauded.

Frosh Stickhandlers Clip UConn, 7-6, in Thrilling Tilt

By STEVE MOSHER
Staff Reporter

Staging a last minute assault on the Connecticut goal, the UMass freshman lacrosse team won a thrilling come-from-behind, 7-6 decision Saturday on the field in front of Boyden.

Dwight Bloomquist was the hero as he put in his own rebound with just 26 seconds left in the game. Kevin Bush also shared in the cardiac comeback as he potted the tying goal on a pass from Tom Bock with only 1:48 remaining.

The game, from the start, was a closely played one, but both teams did play sloppily over the first three periods. There was no scoring in the first period as UConn had the edge.

UConn continued to control the action in the second quarter. Its persistence paid off as it put two shots past Rob Plasance in the space of two minutes. This, however, just seemed to make the Little Redmen play a better game. Joe DeRiso got one goal back at 7:30 on an unassisted shot through a screen. Then Bock also scored an unassisted goal with about a minute left in the half.

Plasance made nine saves in the half to seven for the UConn goalie.

Each team scored a goal in the third period. Both these goals were unassisted ones and DeRiso got his second to put the Little Redmen up 3-2. But the Huskies got that one back and the period ended 3-3.

Play really opened up in the last period, and the goals came in spurts. Bloomquist put the Little Redmen ahead, 4-3, but the Huskies came back forty seconds later to tie it up again. Bock scored again, but UConn came right back with another goal.

With the score, 5-5, John Sherman of UConn scored his fourth goal of the game and the Redmen found themselves down again. For the next five minutes they tried and tried, but they could not dent the UConn goal.

Then, at 10:00, UConn was penalized for hitting the bonnet and the Redmen had the man advantage they sorely needed to tie the game. Just twelve seconds later Bock passed from the right side to Bush, who was parked out in front of the goal. Bush wasted no time and he put in a 15-foot shot for the matching goal with just 1:48 left.

This goal lifted the Redmen and they surged for the rest of the game. Bloomquist took a 30-foot shot from the left side but it hit a defenseman. Following up his own shot like any good attackman, Bloomquist grabbed the rebound and dumped the ball over the UConn goalie's shoulder for the game winner.

Coach Carl Schultheis was pleased with his team's effort that brought its record to 3-3. He thought that they, "played a little tight and the wind might have affected some of their passes." But on the whole, Schultheis was more pleased with his team's determination when all seemed lost. "This one makes up for the Dartmouth loss; now we play Amherst next Saturday and hope to wind up 4-3 on the year."

The Little Redmen play their last game next Saturday at 2 p.m. at Amherst. The Jeffs are always tough and the Redmen, who have improved by leaps and bounds the past weeks, expect another close game.

Freshman Nine Rebounds, 15-14

Little Redmen Nip AIC

By BRONA SIMON
Staff Reporter

Down by eight runs, the UMass freshman baseball team tied American International in the eighth inning and won in the ninth, 15-14 behind pitcher Jerry Pohner Friday with a "never-say-die" attitude that was quite commendable.

Things looked good for UMass in the beginning of the game when it scored four runs in the first two innings, the big hit a triple by leftfielder Fred Kielbasa. Pitcher Dick Russell had given up only one hit to AIC in the first three, but ran into big trouble in the fourth.

AIC, playing their fourth game of the season, brought only 11 men with them. It seemed quantity wasn't quality in the fourth inning. AIC timed Russell's fast ball and knocked around for seven runs and knocked out Russell. Jim McColgin relieved but couldn't find the plate.

Coach Tony Williams sent in first baseman Dan Esposito to pitch in a bases loaded situation, and the inning finally ended with a strikeout and a grounder to third.

AIC pitcher Peter McGinn, realizing he would have to go most of the way with only two spares on the bench, bore down, releasing only two runs to UMass because of mistakes by his infield.

Meanwhile AIC hitters had the momentum and scored seven more runs off Esposito.

Pohner was the hero. Relieving Esposito in the eighth, AIC leading 14-6, he was the last Little Redman pitcher in the bullpen. The burst of hittting in the UMass eighth was capped by Pohner's tie-making two-run homer.

Kielbasa scored the winning run in the ninth on Esposito's single to left center, his fourth hit and fifth RBI of the game.

SATURDAY SHORTS: Pohner received his second win in two days, in a four and a half hour batting practice against the UMass JV team . . , the score of the "game" was Frosh 23, JV 10 . . . Freshman Winchester Woullard, and JV's Peter Thompson and Barry Rosen hit home runs.

Bruins Crush Blues, 6-1, Plante Hurt

ST. LOUIS (AP) - If a 6-1 hockey game can have a turning point, then the shot of Boston's Fred Stanfield that crashed into goalie Jacques Plante's mask in the early stages of the second period was the turning point in the first game of the Stanley Cup final round between the Bruins and St. Louis.

Plante, the 41 year old veteran, sank slowly to the ice, much like a fighter who has just absorbed a knockout punch.

A stretcher was brought out to take the goalie off but Plante refused to use it, preferring to stagger off with the help of teammates. He was taken to jewish Hospital for X-rays and observation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Stick close to base of operations. You gain if steady pace is maintained. Fix things around the house. Brighten surroundings. Give imagination full rein in decorating, adding color.

UMass Nine Falls to Maine Twice

Redmen Dropped, 6-3, Wisked, 2-1, as Y-C Hopes Dwindle

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

ORONO, Me. - UMass took two more Yankee Conference baseball lumps here this weekend at the hands of Maine as the Redmen were outplayed, 6-3, on Friday and were stolen blind on Saturday 2-1.

The two losses took most of the heart out of UMass' hopes of repeating as Yan-Con baseball champs. The Redmen's Conference record was leveled off at 4-4 while the Black Bears got a stronger grasp on first place by boosting their league mark to 4-0.

Maine, whose overall slate jumped to 7-0, is winning baseball games, and the Orono campus couldn't be happier about the whole thing. A crowd of around 400 students and town residents made it to Alumni Field for the Friday tilt, and an estimated 550 thronged to see the Black Bears play on Saturday afternoon.

The Maine team has a lot of spirit; it believes in itself. The Maine fans likewise have a lot of spirit; they are starting to believe in the team.

The Black Bears were well-prepared when the Redmen invaded their campus for the key two-game set.

Maine, showing off its do-it-all'er Jim Cameron, snubbed U-Mass in the first game, 6-3, and, in the wrap-up contest, swiped a 2-1 verdict right out from under the Redmen's tepee, much to the dismay of hurler Don Anderson.

On the mound and at the plate, Cameron made the visitors' first afternoon in Maine a lousy one. The 6'2-195 junior righty surrendered nine hits, but was touched for runs in only two innings, the first and fifth. With a bat in his hand, he doubled in the first Black Bear score and homered for the fifth tally.

UMass was the first to score in this game, with a single marker in the first. A Paul Sulzicki single, with runners on first and second, put the Redmen up, 1-0.

The Black Bears quickly evened things up in their half of the first; it was Cameon's double off the right field fence that brought Alan Livingston, who had walked, scurrying across the plate.

Maine gave itself a 3-1 advantage when left fielder Richard Arnold stroked a two-run homer over the 350-foot mark in right field in the second inning.

Things calmed down for the next couple of innings until the fifth frame, when the Redmen tallied two big scores to tie the affair at 3-3 only to see Maine go ahead, 5-3, with two runs in the bottom of the fifth.

A walk, a single, a bunt that forced the lead runner at third and a grounder forcing the middle runner at second put UMass players on first and third, setting the scene for Brian Martin's two-run single down the right field line.

The determined Black Bears treated this Redman comeback nastily by clouting long back-to-back homers, by Eric Hayward and Cameron, to yank the lead back at 5-3.

Martin, who was an ineffective surprise starter on the hill for UMass, was lifted after five innings to be replaced by Jack Bernardo who was later relieved by Rich Rappoli.

Maine wrapped up the scoring with one run in the eighth, which came when Jim Peterson tripled in a man from third. With the loss UMass' season record slipped to 11-7.

Saturday afternoon came bright and shiny, a good baseball day and the pitchers took it over, the Redmen's ace Anderson, on the one hand, and Maine's Jim Chaplin, on the other. Both were right handers and both knew how to scatter hits effectively. Chaplin was luckier.

Anderson hurled eight strong innings, but was lifted in a tumultuous ninth. During his stay on the mound, the stylish junior gave up seven hits and struck out seven batters. Chaplin went the distance for the home team, surrendering eight hits and setting down eight Redmen on strikes.

The visitors were the first to score in the seventh. Tom Semino singled and stole second. Joe Gugliotta rescued Semino from second with a single over the first base bag for a 1-0 UMass advantage. Anderson set down the sides easily in the last of the seventh and eighth, setting the stage for the unbelievable ninth.

Cameron, the first man to the plate, came through for Maine with a single to right. Bill West followed with a sacrifice bunt, but alas, the throw to nab West at first got out of hand and the two runners moved along to second and third.

Bergquist, at this time, made a pitching change, bringing in right hander Bernardo, who got the next man to ground harmlessly to second for the first out. The following batsman was intentionally passed, loading the sacks.

On a 3-2 count, Ken Additon drew a walk that brought home the tying run. The Redmen were still two outs away from safety when an infield popup drifted toward shortstop Gugliotta. He snared the ball at the same time an anxious Maine player was scrambling back to second base.

It looked like a double play was assured, but heavy traffic at second, with the sliding player and the tagging second baseman Hosea Kelley, caused the ball to be bobbled just long enough for the runner at third, West, to dash home with the second tally, and . . . oh yeh . . . the winning run.

Both Black Bear runs were unearned, but the loss was Anderson's nevertheless. UMass' record overall is now 11-8. Anderson's record is 2-2.

DIAMOND DUST - In other Yankee Conference baseball action over the weekend, Connecticut upped its record to 6-1 in the league by belting New Hampshire twice, 9-3 and 8-0, while Rhode Island gave itself a boost by taking two from Vermont, 11-8 and 9-2; the Rams now stand at 3-1 in the Yan-Con . . . Hayward, Maine's shortstop, made some fine plays in the field, showing good range . . . Ray Ellerbrook gypped "junior" Lou Colabello out of 35 cents . . . A Bangor newspaper called "hard to hit" UMass flinger Bob Fichera an "ace" and listed him as the likely starter for Saturday's fray . . . Rapid Robert Allen, who bussed the team up to Maine and back, broke the speed record for the Amherst-Orono trip by covering that distance in five hours flat on the way back on Saturday . . . In setting the new mark, he eclipsed the old standard of five hours and fifteen minutes, which he himself established Thursday on the way up . . . And, thanks to a former Collegian sports editor for the nickle's worth of enjoyment at Pat's Pizzeria!

Redmen vs. Ephs Today

UMass tries to get back on the winning baseball track at home at Varsity Field this afternoon at 3:30 when it entertains Williams College.

The Redmen have lost three straight games and have seen their record drop to 11-8. They will be backing starter Jack Bernardo for this one and a victory could make the day brighter for UMass, which saw its Yankee Conference hopes fade with two tough weekend losses to Maine.

The Williams College Ephs are in the midst of a rebuilding year; it has only three regulars left over from the 1969 squad that won the Little Three championship and recorded an overall slate of 7-8-1.

The three returnees are first baseman Jay McKenna, second baseman Dick Hemingway, the Eph captain, and catcher Tim Murnane. The Williams pitching staff is thin; going into the present season, not one of the six starters had won a varsity game.

Other Ephs to keep an eye on will be sophomore shortstop Wid Nelson, soph third baseman Terry Smith, junior outfielders Dave Johnson and Nick Tortorello, outfielder Bob Schwed, senior pitchers Lou Buck and Bob Groban, junior pitchers Art Bovino and Mike Krall and soph hurlers Dick Deslaurries and John Dier.

Coach of the Ephs is Bob Coombs, who is in his 24th year as head mentor atWilliams. Over that time, he has skippered more than 150 wins.

Lacrossemen Triumph, 14-3

Hiking its record to 5-1, the UMass lacrosse team crunched Connecticut 14-3, away on Saturday as Tom Malone tallied five goals and two assists and Bob Waters banged in three goals to go along with his three assists. A full story on Saturday's contest will be run in tomorrow's Collegian. The action above is taken from a previous Redman lacrosse encounter, against Tufts. (MDC photo by Gunnar Myrbeck)

Crewmen Capture Callow Cup

DRIVES IN RUN - UMass shortstop Joe Gugliotta knocked in the Redmen's only run in the second game against Maine. It appeared to be good enough for a victory as UMass pitcher Don Anderson was rolling along. However, much to the Redmen's dismay, weird things happened in the ninth inning and Maine squeezed out a victory, one of its two this weekend against UMass, crippling the Redmen's hopes for another Yankee Conference baseball crown. Fuller details are presented at the top of this page.

New Students to Face Room Crisis

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Associate Dean of Students Daniel Fitzpatrick stated in an interview last week that an all but certain crisis will exist next fall in the form of a room shortage for incoming students.

Fitzpatrick told the DAILY COLLEGIAN that due to a recent local labor strike of construction workers it now appears that "we are not going to have any new buildings in September and are now looking to January." He continued that it had been anticipated that 70 dorms would open in September and that two of three new dorms under construction would also have been completed by the fall semester to accommodate 950 to 1000 students.

As of last Tuesday, however, Fitzpatrick declared that "It is fairly obvious that because of the strike they will not open on time." He added that several other strikes are still pending and that nobody knows how long they will last. He admitted that this could put the construction schedule from eight to 10 weeks behind and push the completion dates into November.

Dean Fitzpatrick stated that there are "a lot of implications" tied to the room shortage. One area certain to be affected is that of fiscal cost to students. Medical services, Student Senate budget and anything "student fee oriented" are certain to be altered.

There is also concern among graduate students living in Prince House, as it appears they may have to be moved out to accommodate undergraduates.

The problem is presently under study by the administration but Dean Fitzpatrick did say that there were five possible solutions to be considered. These are:(1) Try to reduce the number of students coming in in the fall (The Dean said that to his knowledge the figures call for 3500 new students to enter this fall which would be an increase of approximately 1500). (2) Requesting students to triple (which he stated was a "probably solution" at present). (3) Encourage students to come under the swingshift program. (4) Discourage transfers and re-admission students. And (5) Increase off-campus living.

Fitzpatrick felt that tripling might be a very real solution because of the savings it would mean in a student's bill over a semester or year. He emphasized, however, that there was no present attempt to "force" students to triple.

Although the Dean admitted that everything had seemed to come up within 48 hours he felt confident that "with advanced planning we can probably ease through it." The new policy of room deposits which requires students to put a certain advanced amount of their room rent down in the spring should allow the Housing office to get a better picture of the situation.

Summing up Dean Fitzpatrick expressed the administration's aim to "ease through it with as little personal inconvenience as possible."

Four Killed at Kent State As Anti-War Protest Erupts

KENT, Ohio (AP) - Four students in a crowd pelting National Guardsmen with bricks and rocks were shot to death at Kent State University Monday when the troops opened fire during an antiwar demonstration. Two of the dead were coeds.

The dead were identified as Jeffrey G. Miller, 20, Plainview, N.Y.; Allison Krause, 19, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Sandy Lee Scheuer, 20, Youngstown, Ohio; and William Schroeder, 19, of Lorain all enrolled at Kent State.

Aj. Gen. S. T. DelCorso said troops began firing semi-automatic rifles after a rooftop sniper had shot at them.

Four other students were critically wounded, and eight other persons, including two guardsmen, were taken to hospitals. One of the guardsmen was treated for exhaustion and the other for shock.

The campus and the town of Kent were sealed off after the shootings, and school officials ordered the faculty, staff and 19,000 students to leave.

A spokesman said about 300 foreign students and staff remained on campus Monday night.

Patrols of armed troops and state police roamed the campus and blocked all entrances.

Buses took the students to public transportation facilities in nearby Akron and Cleveland.

Akron State University students were organizing a rally for downtown Akron Monday night to protest the shooting.

Gov. James A. Rhodes called for FBI help in investigating the disorders.

In Washington, President Nixon issued this statement:

"This should remind us all once again that when dissent turns to violence it invites tragedy.

"It is my hope that this tragic and unfortunate incident will strengthen the determination of all the nation's campuses, administrators, faculty and students alike, to stand firmly for the right which exists in this country of peaceful dissent and just as strongly against the resort to violence as a means of expression."

The shooting came after a force of 100 guardsmen, their supply of tear gas exhausted, were surrounded by about 400 demonstrators. The troops had followed the demonstrators from a rally on Kent State's Commons area near the football practice field.

Guard spokesmen estimated that 900 to 1,000 persons had been involved in the demonstration at the Commons.

Gene Williams, 21, a junior and a member of the student newspaper staff, said he was seeking refuge in a building when he saw the troops turn "in unison, as if responding to a command," and fire into the crowd.

"Bullets ricocheted off the walls beside us and students fell to the ground to avoid them," Williams said in a copyrighted story in the Dayton Journal Herald.

"A coed fell 15 feet in front of the men into the arms of a male student. A bullet had gone into her neck and lodged there."

He said he saw another youth shot in the chest.

"I saw no snipers nor did I hear any shots until the line of troops turned in unison and opened fire," Williams said. Del Corso, the adjutant general, said the guardsmen were forced to open fire.

The student senate held an open meeting in the Student Union ballroom last night. There the strike issues were debated and a general policy on the condonement of the student strike was passed by an overwhelming majority. See story on page 3. (Photo by Steve Schmidt)

Ohio?

By RON LABRECQUE
Senior Reporter

Sharp, sudden, searing pain. Hot, taking the breath away, gagging. The bullets slammed into their bodies and they were dead

Who were they? Violent, militant revolutionaries? Probably not. When their histories are later learned it should not be surprising to discover that they were your roommate, your brother, your sister, the friend from high school, your son, your daughter. They were people, part of you.

The died in a violent confrontation. They died by the bullet. The way people have been dying in the war for years.

But this was Ohio. Ohio, United States of America and four kids who hated war were killed by the National Guard. The National Guard, made up of guys lucky enough to find a unit and not have to be drafted into the war over there.

Ohio, where you find prayers on your restaurant placemats. The National Guard?

Ohio is home. Its easier to understand when people die in your back yard.

Sharp sudden, searing pain. The realization slammed into the University, gagging its breath and it was alive.

The student union television room was crowded with students and some members of the faculty last night discussing the primary intentions of the strike, possible changes in its original structure and proposals for more efficient means of communication between all concerned. Freshmen Support Strike

The seniors entered the university in 1966 and there was an unconstitutional war. They are graduating in 1970 and there is still an unconstitutional war going on. We, as Freshmen, entered the University in 1969 and there was an unconstitutional war. Must we leave this University in May, 1973, with the same or larger war hanging over our heads?

As members of the President's Council of the Class of 1973, we support the following statements:

1. We support immediate and unilateral withdrawal of all U. S. troops from Southeast Asia.
2. We support the abolishment of ROTC and military research projects on campus and will make provisions for the relocation of ROTC off campus if they still wish to exist.
3. We demand that all provisions be made for Bobby Seale and the other Black Panthers to be given a fair trial in the true sense of the phrase.

We recommend that all faculty members make final exams optional to enable students to exercise their moral obligations without academic penalty.

We strongly urge every Freshman and the members of other classes to support their personal views on the strike.

N.B. --The Freshman Class party has been cancelled in support of the strike. There will be an EMERGENCY OPEN CLASS MEETING on THURSDAY in MAHAR AUD. at 8:00 p.m. to discuss the appropriation of $1000 to the Strike Committee.

ANTI-WAR SENTIMENTS GAINING GROUND

Senate Endorses Strike, Deplores U.S. Escalation

By JOHN J. DUBOIS Senate Reporter

The recent administrative decision to demonstrate America's determination to prevail in Vietnam by broadening the American involvement into Cambodia and by resuming the bombing of North Vietnam moved the Student Senate last night by a vote of 66-1 to "strongly urge . . . all members of the University community as a matter of individual conscience and moral duty to participate in the nationwide student strike to end the war" and to "urge continued support of the strike until the following demands are met: (1) that the United States government end its systematic oppression of political dissidents (2) that the U.S. government cease its expansion of the Vietnam war into Laos and Cambodia; that it unilaterally and immediately withdraw all forces from Southeast Asia (3) that the universities end their complicity with the United States' war machine by an immediate end to defense research, ROTC, counter-insurgency research and all other such programs."

The Senate incorporated into the bill an amendment by Senator Michelson which declared this "a liberated university", devoted to education consistent with the aims of this nonviolent antiwar action. This provision is intended to provide a means for those who attend classes to support the aims of the strike by devoting class time to matters relevant to the depravity of our Southeast Asian involvement.

The amendment further provides for a strike grievance committee to investigate incidents of alleged repression, academic and otherwise, of strike participants. The amendment seeks to obtain for such a group the authority to award grades and credits.

A provision of the amendment opposing violence or coercion against any member of the community, or destruction of any University property caused the withdrawal of a bill of similar intent.

Treasurer Verrochi, one of the 17 sponsors of the original bill, introduced the bill with an historical sketch of the Vietnam conflict, from the French Indochina war to the Nixon campaign pledge to end the war. Treasurer Verrochi characterized the recent troop withdrawal as token gestures, and drew upon the experience of the French student strike of May 1968, which won popular sympathy and broadened into a general strike which brought down President DeGaulle, as an example of the potential of such an action.

Sid Finehirsh urged those present, who filled the Ballroom to overflow, to "be sure that this is not simply a student action, but that the University becomes a staging area for community action. We have to reach out to bring the community with us."

In related action, the Senate by 31-15, passed a motion by Senator Albert to appropriate $1,000 to publicize the strike and strike aim; and a motion to suspend regular Senate meetings, with the understanding that special meetings can be called to deal with urgent and vital matters.

In other action, the Senate expressed its opposition to the use of trespass orders as "antithetical to an academic community." Social Action Chairman Walt contended that the orders were used for political purposes. Eric Walgren, against whom such an order was recently issued, charged that the trespass law, which permits an officer to issue an order without reasons and without judicial process, was both characteristic of a police state and unconstitutional, the Supreme Court having held that a similar police power to order someone to "move on" was subject to requirements of reasonableness.

The Senate also appropriated $228 to send people from the University and State Communications Council to Boston to solicit legislators to participate in Friday's legislator's day, designed to promote understanding between the University and the legislature and forestall pending repressive legislation.

Wheels Move, Strike Starts Rolling

By CLAUDIA HAMBERG
News Editor

With emotion and dedication running high, but concerted planning lacking, the UMass Strike Committee yesterday brought the idea of a nation-wide student strike dramatically to this campus with spray-paint posters, dormitory teach-ins, and a great deal of rapping. Scheduled for today are picket lines in front of all academic buildings and discussions in those classes which meet on the first day of the strike.

An hour after the UMass Strike Committee meeting last night broke up for more dormitory discussion and area rallies, a group of chanting students arrived for a general strike meeting in the SU Ballroom. The overflow crowd was told of the Student Senate's decision to support the student strike and the original three demands: withdrawal of U.S. forces from southeast Asia, and end to political repression, and an end to ROTC and defense research at American colleges and universities.

The strike committee submitted a proposal to the Ballroom meeting that no University student engaged in the strike will be graded lower than a "P". Students desiring a grade should discuss it with the professor. Approved by the mass meeting, this proposal will be submitted to the four-college faculty meeting today at Amherst. Students were asked to meet this morning at 7:30 a.m. beside the campus pond to begin the UMass strike.

As the Collegian went to press last night, the thousands of students fathered in the Union were responding with cheers and applause to strike plans and announcements.

Monday's news stories gave added impetus to the UMass strike cause. Four Kent State (Ohio) students were shot to death by National Guard troops. National Guard Troops were called to the Universityof Maryland. Reports and rumors became intermeshed in the near-bedlam atmosphere of the Student Union strike headquarters. Over a hundred schools were reportedly planning strikes as of yesterday.

Strike planners have stated that today's picket lines will be non-obstructive. Classroom discussions of the national situation and the student strike will be held only with the permission of instructors.

The Student Senate, the SUG Board, and the Class of '73 have given their support to the UMass strike. Whitmore reaction is unknown. The administration is most probably awaiting results of the special Faculty Senate meeting to be held this afternoon at 4:00.

In a packed Council Chambers meeting last night, some members of the UMass Strike Committee stressed the need for discipline if the strike is to succeed here. Other members were concerned with the urgency of mobilizing student support.

Mobe Committee Meets, Plans Action

By BERNARD BLAIN
Senior Reporter

After a meeting late last night, the Mobe formulated the following plans for today's activities:

12 noon. The Mobe is organizing a community-involvement workshop in the Cape Cod Lounge. (TV Room).

1 p.m. People will begin massing on the south terrace (facing the pond). Those who have cars available to transport people are asked to park on N. Pleasant.

Meeting in the Student Union last night following the special student senate meeting, the UMC voted to support the Strike Committee's proposals and to aid in picketing and pamphleting. However, spokesman for the committee felt public feeling against the war effort calls for an emphasis on the Vietnam war within the working community.

After much discussion, the gathering of about 250 people representing the UMC voted to let the Strike Committee act within the campus community while the UMC will canvass the working community with a petition stating the following. "We the undersigned protest the war in Southeast Asia and the invasion of Cambodia and call for the immediate withdrawal of all U.S. troops. Bring all the G.I.'s home, now!"

The strategy of the Mobe is a result of a general feeling that students cannot do it alone. As one spokesman pointed out, there is a need to exert economic power; the support of a group like the Teamster's Union is the type of support needed to make the working community aware of what is taking place in Indochina. Certain vocal elements at the meeting became disgruntled with this strategy because they felt it excluded the injustice to the Panthers and the ROTC issue. However, others expressed the view that the general public would be "turned-off" by the latter demands but that they would move against the war since public feeling is high against the Vietnam war.

A workshop is planned at 12 tomorrow in the Student Union with canvassing to begin at 1 o'clock. Transportation is needed and the UMC has asked anyone with cars to park on N. Pleasant St. and come to the Union to pick up canvassers.

SPRING DAY HAS BEEN CANCELLED BECAUSE OF THE STRIKE

Javits Knocks Policy On Cambodian Invasion

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) - Sen. Jacob Javits, R. N.Y. said Monday that if the American invasion of Cambodia territory does not end in a week or so, there is likely to be a direct confrontation between President Nixon and Congress over who makes foreign policy.

Speaking at Brown University, Javits said that the current rift between the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, of which he is a member, and the President may be the prelude to an attempt by Congress to limit funds for war in southeast Asia.

If congress does pass a limited defense authorization bill and President Nixon in turn vetoes it, the nation will be facing a very grave constitutional crisis, he said.

Javits had few kind words either for the disruptive actions of student radicals or the strong talk of leaders in his own party. He warned of the threat of a "repression" that could perhaps be "more serious" than the days of the McCarthy era.

For the first time, he said repression is "tolerated, if not actually condoned" at the highest level of federal government.

Javits, in a reference that he acknowledged referred to an apparent relationship between Nixon and Vice President Spiro Agnew, said that there is "no visible leadership at the very top to restrain these short sighted counsels of despair." The rhetoric, he said, "tends to foment and to divide."

Recent attacks on mass media, the Supreme Court, and "even on the United States Senate," he said, are "couched in terms to turn people against one another, to sow suspicions among the people and to feed on their fears."

The challenge he said is to bring together a disillusioned "middle America" and radical Americans to work for social change.

To do this he said, we must first end the Vietnam war. The vote must be given to 18 year olds and the electoral college must be reformed. Businesses, labor unions, universities and other organizations must be opened to much greater citizen participation, he added.

U.S.S.R., China, Decry Invasion of Cambodia

MOSCOW (AP) - Premier Alexie N. Kosygin declared Monday the United States has created a "new hotbed of war" in Cambodia and appealed for action to stop it.

He announced the Soviet Union will re-examine its military aid commitments to North Vietnam as a result of the U.S. and South Vietnamese incursions into Cambodia in an attempt to blot out Communist command sanctuaries.

At the same time, the Red Chinese government issued a statement calling U.S. intervention in Cambodia a provocation against China as well as Southeast Asia and the world. It said China will serve as a "great rear" for the fight against the Americans and South Vietnamese.

Kosygin took the rare step of calling a news conference to express Soviet "indignation" at the events in Indochina.

Opening with an official government statement, he accused the United States of "cynical contempt" for the rights of the Indochinese people. He repeatedly mentioned President Nixon by name and questioned his logic and motives in ordering troops in Cambodia.

His remarks were more critical of the United States than any since Nixon's election. Kosygin also suggested that U.S. Soviet strategic arms limitation talks under way now in Vienna could be jeopardized. In answer to a question, he said such talks can only be conducted on a basis of mutual trust.

"But when treaties are flouted, when elementary standards of international law are violated ... this does not increase trust - the trust without which it is difficult to conduct negotiations." Kosygin indicated it would be impossible to call a Geneva conference on the Indochina situation. The Soviet Union and Britain are co-chairmen of the Geneva conference of 1954 that ended the French Indochina war and the 1962 Geneva conference which halted for a time the hostilities in Laos.

In Washington, Robert J. McCloskey, spokesman for the State Department, reaffirmed the U.S. desire to settle the Indochina war by negotiations.

Although not directly responding to Kosygin's statement, McCloskey asserted: "We do not need lectures on negotiations."

Neither the Soviet statement nor Kosygin's answers to questions at the news conference specified what actions the Soviet government might take or consider.

Reactions Across the Nation

MARLBORO, Vt. (AP) - A student faculty committee at Marlboro College voted Monday night to ask U.S. Rep. Robert T. Stafford, R-Vt., to file a House resolution for impeachment of President Nixon.

The committee is sending a delegation to Washington Tuesday to present the demand to Stafford.

The presidents of 30 colleges and universities signed a telegram urging the President to bring a rapid end to American involvement in Southeast Asia and seeking an immediate meeting with him.

The faculty of Tufts College in Medford, Mass., and that of Jackson College, the women's branch, met Monday to draw up resolutions opposing what they called erosion of congressional power by the President.

Flags at Tufts will be flown at half staff until Memorial Day "in recognition of continuing deaths due to war throughout the world," according to President Burton Hallowell.

The Williams College faculty in Williamstown, Mass., voted to authorize a two day suspension of classes so students can act to bring about a change in policy in Cambodia.

At Wellesley College, President Ruth M. Adams wrote to President Nixon denouncing his position "to expand rather than continue to reduce American involvement in the war in Southeast Asia." She invited students and faculty members to sign the letter.

MEDFORD, Mass. (AP) - Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, said Monday he cannot support President Nixon's decision to send troops into Cambodia.

He said the arguments being used for the action are the same as those 10 years ago when advisors were sent to Vietnam.

"If we are to be true to ourselves, to our highest ideals, we must be big enough to place the peace of the world and the saving of human life above saving face," he said in a prepared speech at Tufts University.

BOSTON (AP) - Rep. H. James Shea, D-Newton, introduced a resolution in the House today calling on Congress to take all "necessary steps to halt this unilateral executive expansion of the war," into Cambodia.

The resolution, if passed by the House, would put the legislators on record as deploring the President's action in sending American troops into Cambodia.

Meanwhile, in Cambodia . . .

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. reconnaissance aircraft sighted a jungle hideout with about 500 buildings Monday about two miles inside Cambodia where allied forces are searching for the headquarters of the supreme Communist command.

Pilots reported some of the buildings are two stories high and have what seem to be radio antennae strung between them. Brig. Gen. Robert M. Shoemaker, head of the allied task force of about 8,800 Americans and 2,000 South Vietnamese troops, declined to speculate whether the complex might be part of the well dispersed headquarters of the enemy's Central Office for South Vietnam.

But, he told a news briefing: "It's definitely no village." High placed officials disclosed earlier that U.S. field commanders are planning intrusions of yet untouched enemy base camps along a 350 mile section of Cambodia's border with South Vietnam. At least one operation was reported in the final planning stages.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said in Washington Saturday that all North Vietnamese and Viet Cong sanctuaries along the full length of the border would be attacked by the allies. There are at least a half dozen enemy base camp areas in Cambodia from the western Mekong Delta to the area north of Saigon which are outside the areas attacked last week by upwards of 30,000 allied troops.

The two massive allied drives, one into an area known as the Parrot's Beak and the other into an area called the Fishhook, have accounted for 1,952 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong killed, according to headquarters and field reports late Monday. Some 466 enemy suspects have been detained.

American casualties stood at 14 dead and 47 wounded. South Vietnamese losses were put at 151 killed and 598 wounded. The major aim of the twin allied offensives in Cambodia is to root out and destroy enemy base camps, storage areas and supplies. At last report more than 2,400 weapons had been seized or destroyed.

Troops of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division operating in the Fishhook northwest of Saigon on Sunday discovered 200 cases that contained 1,200 Communist AK47 and new SKS rifles. Most of them were destroyed by air strikes.

The American troops also found 121,000 pounds of rice, 23 supply trucks, 200 bicycle tires, 150 truck tires and 450 gallons of oil.

While pressing the search for enemy supplies, american forces rolled deeper into Cambodia on Monday to cut off any escape route for the estimated 7,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops who were believed inside the Fishhook before President Nixon sent in American ground troops.

Tanks and armored personnel carriers of the U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment moved up Route 7 from outside the bombed out town of Mimot northeast to within 15 miles of Snoul. They met no opposition along the road. With the roads sealed off the allies hope to have the enemy locked in.

An AP field dispatch reported that as of late Monday no major enemy troop movements had been observed in the Fishhook.

QUESTION: I am planning a trip abroad. Can my draft board stop me from going?

ANSWER: No. The draft board cannot restrict your right to travel anywhere at any time. You do not need its permission. The only requirement is that the board have your home address. For your own protection you should be sure to make arrangements to have your mail forwarded in case Selective Service notices affecting your draft status arrive while you are away. You can also fill out a form, "Permit to Depart from the United States," which more or less guarantees that you board will not do anything to force you to return early from your stay abroad. This "Permit" is like an insurance policy but is not necessary since the draft board has no authority to restrict your travels.

QUESTION: I have been classified I-A. I had been thinking about applying for I-O (Conscientious Objector) and asking for an appeal, but my board tells me I am too late because more than 30 days have elapsed since I got my I-A notice. Is this correct?

ANSWER: No. Whenever you apply for C.O. (except after you have actually received an order to report for induction) the board is required to reopen your case. You then have the right to a personal appearance before your board to state your claim for C.O. classification. If you are turned down after the personal appearance, you then have 30 more days in which to appeal to the State Appeal Board. You cannot be ordered for induction during any of this process which may take several months. Even if you apply for C.O. after you've gotten an induction order, your board may at its discretion reopen your case if they believe your claim is sincere. You may be able to put pressure on your board to reopen your case by getting in touch with the State Director of Selective Service (Col. Feeney, J.F. Kennedy Federal Building, Boston, 02203) and explaining the reasons for your late application for C.O.

QUESTION: I understand there is a deferment for farm workers. Can you explain how I apply for this and who is eligible?

ANSWER: You are too late. All new occupational (including agricultural) deferments have been eliminated by President Nixon as of April 23. Persons already holding such deferments may apply for renewals.

QUESTION: How will the situation in Cambodia affect the draft?

ANSWER: Who knows? Our invasion of Cambodia was not authorized by Congress and many Congressmen are very angry indeed at this reckless extension of the war. As long as hundreds of billions of dollars are obligingly voted for the Pentagon with no strings attached, and hundreds of thousands of men are pressed into military service, there seems to be no control over what our government does. You might let your representatives in Washington know how you feel about these matters.

QUESTION: I have been busted for drugs and want to know if this will keep me out of the army.

ANSWER: Probably not, unless your case is still before the court (for example, if you are on bail awaiting trial, or on parole). If you have a record of only minor offenses (misdemeanors), you will be interviewed during the pre-induction physical exam by an officer at the Examining Station. He decides whether or not you are acceptable for military service, and usually the decision is "yes." If you have a more serious criminal record but no felonies, you may be considered "administratively unfit" or medically unfit because of "personality disorders." If you have been convicted of a felony (a crime with a maximum penalty of more than one year in prison, regardless of how long you actually served), your case is forwarded to the Armed Forces Moral Waiver Determination Board which makes a decision about your chances of "rehabilitation" in the army. This Board usually (more than 80% of the time) gives "moral waivers" and the men with criminal records are classified 1-A and inducted.

QUESTION: Is there any way I can find out if my draft board has ever approved a C.O. application? If it hasn't, I want to ask why not at my personal appearance. If it has, I want to talk with the guys who are Conscientious Objectors in my area.

ANSWER: There is a regulation (under Section 1623.8) which requires each local board to keep a "Register of Conscientious Objectors" as a public document. All you need to do is ask your local board to let you see this Register. If they don't have one or won't let you see it, they are violating their own regulations and should be reported to the State Director of Selective Service.

Tippo's Tea Time

Chancellor Oswald Tippo, Prof. Joseph Marcus, and Prof. David Clay will be the featured guests at the Tuesday noon open coffee hour in the Colonial Lounge, today (Tuesday, May 5), from noon to 2 p.m. Their topic will be administrative reorganization of the Amherst campus. All students are invited.

Two major plans, differing in some important details, for administrative reorganization have recently been presented; and today's session is designed to elicit as much student opinion and comment as possible, before the two plans are presented for further discussion by the Faculty Senate.

Chancellor Tippo will explain and elaborate upon the plan issued by his office; and Prof. Marcus will explain the plan which his three-man faculty planning committee has developed. It is expected that the details of the procedures to be used in the filling of new and vacant administrative offices will be discussed.

LBJ Claims Kennedy Staff Created Problems

BOSTON (AP) - Kenneth P. O'Donnell, special assistant to both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, says, "Cabinet members who privately expressed criticism of President Johnson's policies to the press might have been what Johnson was driving at" when he charged that holdovers from the Kennedy staff "undermined" his efforts following the assassination.

Johnson said in a television interview Saturday night, that the Kennedy staff, of which O'Donnell was a part, "in effect, undermined the administration and bored from within to create problems for us and leaked information that was slanted."

O'Donnell, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Massachusetts, said in an interview Monday that "some Cabinet members would go before congressional committees and testify in support of the Johnson policies, but then express criticism to the press in private."

Pressed for specific names, O'Donnell declined, but added that "these cabinet officers should have told the President to his face what they were saying in private. I believe this really burned him up."

After leaving the President's staff in January, 1965, O'Donnell became an outstanding critic of the Vietnam policy. He restated the opinion, advanced by Pierre Salinger, press secretary for both Presidents, that Johnson may be confused as to periods of time.

"Some of the staff who served Kennedy later disagreed vehemently with the Vietnam policy, but we were no longer on the payroll and had no access to inside information," O'Donnell said.

O'Donnell said he was the "closest to President Johnson socially of any of the President Kennedy staff, and we had a very convivial relationship."

He said there were "no problems" with the Kennedy staff working for Johnson, "but of course we didn't have the personal relationships with Johnson that we had with President Kennedy."

O'Donnell said, too, that he was the most "politically trusted" of the former President's staff and was "largely responsible" for the 1964 Johnson campaign against Goldwater.

He said the Kennedy holdovers were "extremely faithful" to Johnson and were responsible for helping to shape the anti-involvement policy that prevailed during the 1964 election campaign.

"I guess he was overwhelmed by his landslide victory in 1964 and then had confidence that he could win a land war in Asia," O'Donnell said.

SEVERE REPRESSION: KENT

KENT, Ohio (AP) - Four students were shot to death and 11 other persons wounded, four seriously in a confrontation Monday with Ohio National Guards men and police at Kent State University. A state official said the shooting started when a rooftop sniper opened fire on the guardsmen.

The university, with an enrollment of 19,000, was closed and the town sealed off by police and guardsmen.

Gov. James A. Rhodes called on the FBI for help in probing the disorders.

The gunfire broke out as guardsmen dispersed an anti-war rally on the campus.

Adj. Gen. S. T. Del Corso said guardsmen were forced to open fire on their attackers.

In Washington, President Nixon issued a statement about the incident. "This should remind us all once again that when dissent turns to violence it invites tragedy," the President said.

"It is my hope that this tragic and unfortunate incident will strengthen the determination of all the nation's campuses, administrators, faculty and students alike, to stand firmly for the right which exists in this country of peaceful dissent and just as strongly against the resort to violence as a means of such expression."

The shooting came after guardsmen moved in with tear gas to disperse a rock throwing crowd of 400 to 500 students in the Commons area near the football practice field.

"A lot of people felt their lives were in danger," said Brig. Gen. Robert Canterbury, who was on the scene, "which in fact was the case and the military man always has the option to fire if he feels his life is in danger."

"He has the right to protect himself."

Del Corso said tear gas was used several times in attempts to disperse the crowd.

"The guard expended its entire supply of tear gas and when it did, the mob started to move forward to encircle the guardsmen," Del Corso said. "At the same time, a sniper opened fire against the guardsmen from a nearby rooftop. All guardsmen were hit by rocks and bricks.

"Guardsmen facing almost certain injury and death were forced to open fire on the attackers."

University President Robert I. White asked all students, faculty and staff members to go home "as quickly as possible."

Twelve persons, including two guardsmen, were hospitalized in Ravenna and Akron.

The university said the four persons killed - two girls and two boys - were students.

The dead were identified as Jeffrey Miller, 20, Plainview, N.Y.; Allison Krause, 19, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sandy Lee Scheuer, 20, Youngstown, Ohio; and William Schneider, no hometown given.

BROOKS

For Your Life

STRIKE! The Nationwide student strike begins today. Don't go to class. Strike for the three demands.

It's now that you must decide what you think, and where your commitment lies. Strike for a new way of life. To make the university more relevent to your life and the needs of the American and world peoples.

Strike because it may be you in that goddamned war in Asia. Strike now because you won't have a choice then. Strike to save your life and the lives of your friends. Think seriously and look at your life.

Strike because you have to struggle to get money to go to college and they raised the rent and the tuition. Strike because the people on your corridor or in your house are cynical and don't think anything will work. The strike will work. Strike because you like to be free and want to be more free. Strike for the lives of the Vietnamese and America's black colony.

Strike because medical care and housing are not free. Because doctors and the system itself is dishonest and cares only for your money. Strike for the oppressed women of the world. Strike, Strike!

Strike because America is an imperialist. Because we're in Vietnam. Because we're bombing North Vietnam. Strike because students have been killed and blacks have been killed and we're all slowly being killed. Strike for your life.

Resolutions

69-S283 - Whereas, the United States of America stands guilty of oppression, murder, and deprivation of thousands of Southeast Asians; and

Whereas, dissent against these injustices has unilaterally been crushed thru the imprisonment of the advocates of the Third World; and

Whereas, the universities of the United States are accomplices in this oppression thru their preservation of Defence Research, ROTC, and counterinsurgency research; be it

Resolved that the Senate urges continued support of the strike until the following demands are met:

1. that the United States government end its systematic oppression of political dissidants
2. that the United States government cease its expansion of the Vietnam War into Cambodia and Laos; that it UNILATERALLY and immediately withdraw all forces from South east Asia.
3. that the Universities end their complicity with the United States war machine by an immediate end to defense research, ROTC, counter insurgency research and all other such programs.

In the context of the proposed nationwide strike of American college students

Be it resolved that the University of Massachusetts be declared a liberated University the principle aims of which would be education to all consistent with the non-violent anti war motives of the Strike Mobilization committee

That the remaining time of this semester be used by students--faculty--and administrators as they deem fit with regards to the overall context of the strike.

Inorder to protect students who following their consciences must strike against the war be it resolved that the Student Senate set up an academic grievances committee to investigate any strike repression by any faculty member of department and be it further resolved

WE'LL JUST BOMB THEM, DESTROY THEIR SANCTUARIES, TORTURE CAPTIVES AND INVADE ALL OF INDOCHINA. AND IF THEY ARE STUPID ENOUGH TO RETALIATE, WE'LL BE FORCED TO ESCALATE...
Stevens

that if such acts of repression are proved to the satisfaction of the above committee that they be empowered to award credit and or grades.

and that this committee shall investigate any alleged misuse of the following weeks with regards to the principles of the Student strike

Seize the Time!

That the Student Senate as the only elected voice of the people of the University overwhelmingly reject any act of violence direct against any member of the University community or property of the free liberated University of Massachusetts

The University belongs to the people

That any complicity by the University with the U. S. government that contributes to the war effort in Indo-China be ended including the existence of ROTC on Campus because that complicity is not consistent with the principles of a liberated free University of Massachusetts

Demands

1. We believe that the present U.S. Government has a deliberate program to control the lives of all people for the gluttenous gain of those few established in power.
2. We see that whenever ordinary people take charge of their own lives the U.S. Government moves to destroy them, Vietnamese, Black Panthers, college students alike.
3. We understand that, as college students nationwide, we are being trained to function as a giant manpower pool of essential "drones" without which the repressive program of the U.S. Government cannot succeed.
4. We sense sharply that the invasion of Cambodia, the rigged trials of the Chicago 7 and Bobby Seal, and the murder of four student demonstrators at Kent College are the last straws and that our backs too will be broken and our spirits will be broken if we do not resist.
5. Therefore, we believe, for reasons of our moral convictions and our effectiveness, that it is time to move, time to strike nationwide, time to stop the "drone machine".

You are either on the bus or you are off the bus.

Why These Three Demands By Striking Students

Participants in the May Day Demonstrations have called for a nationwide strike of high schools, colleges, and universities to begin Tuesday, May 5, and continue until the following three demands are met:

1. That the United States government cease its expansion of the Vietnam war into Cambodia and Laos; that it UNILATERALLY and IMMEDIATELY withdraw all forces from Southeast Asia.
2. That the United States government and its systematic oppression of political dissidents, and release all political prisoners, such as Bobby Seale, and other members of the Black Panther Party.
3. That the universities end their complicity with the United States was machine by an immediate end to defense research, ROTC counter-insurgency research and all other such programs.

Regional caucuses have already been organized to coordinate strike mobilizations at high schools, colleges, and universities across the nation.

There will be a meeting in each dorm tonight - check your dorm bulletin board for the time of meeting.

Why the Student Union

In planning the role of the University of Massachusetts community in the nationwide student strike, it was immediately obvious that a part time effort would be inadequate. In order to initiate an effective, coordinated action, it was necessary to utilize a twenty-four hour facility. The second floor of the Student Union was chosen both for the advantages of its central location and communication facilities and for its value as a symbolic beginning for this action.

The utilization of the Student Union offices was not, contrary to some inflammatory rumors, a building takeover. Rather, it was the use by students of a student resource. The Student Union Management graciously cooperated by placing food services at the disposal of the strike committee through the night.

It is essential that we acknowledge the strike to be a full and not a part-time effort. All members of the University community are urged to come together at the Student Union to become more aware of the political emergency which necessitates this strike.

THE STUDENT UNION BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE!!!

E. F. DONNELLY
GERI LAVENTIS

SUG BOARD RESOLUTION

MOVED that the Student Union Governing Board to on record as supporting the feelings and principles of the strike committee.

And, the Student Union Governing Board gives first priority to the strike committee for meeting rooms upstairs now occupied by the group. The Student Union Governing Board asks the cooperation of the strike committee for making alternate arrangements for groups requiring space.

The Student Union Governing Board instruct management to make appropriate arrangements.

ROTC

UMASS SDS is having a meeting this morning at 11:00 to discuss with anyone from the UMass community further action to be taken to abolish ROTC from the UMass campus. SDS thinks that students must attack specific institutions of the war on and off campus. ROTC provides officers which serve in the Air Force, the Army and the National Guard, all of which are used to further the war on the people of Southeast Asia and to keep down ghetto and student rebellions around the country which protest the oppression of most of the working people around the world.

The meeting will be to discuss what action to take against ROTC within and during the context of the strike. The meeting will be held this morning in the Nantucket Room (Solidarity Room) of the Student Union at 11:00 and everyone is urged to attend.

(An example of one of the latest actions the National Guard has taken is yesterday's killing of four students at Kent State.)

Panther 10 Point Program

The second demand of the nationwide strike reads as follows:

2. That the United States Government end its systematic oppression of political dissidents, and release all political prisoners, such as Bobby Seale and other members of the Black Panther Party.

For the average UMass student, this is perhaps the most difficult point to support. The words "Black Panther Party" scare people. They think of armed guerrillas skulking about the cities, hunting for a white to shoot. This is the impression the United States government wants people to have. The government, with the cooperation of the national media, has waged an effective campaign against the Panthers and has alienated the vast majority of the American people from the party and what it stands for. The purpose of the "Platform and Program" given below is to help people understand what the Panthers are all about.

1. We want freedom. We want power to determine the destiny of our Black Community.

We believe that black people will not be free until we are able to determine our destiny.

2. We want full employment for our people.

We believe that the federal government is responsible and obligated to give every man employment or a guaranteed income. We believe that if the white American businessmen will not give full employment, then the means of production should be taken from the businessmen and placed in the community so that the people of the community can organize and employ all of its people and give a high standard of living.

3. We want an end to the robbery by the CAPITALIST of our Black Community.

We believe that this racist government has robbed us and now we are demanding the overdue debt of forty acres and two mules. Forty acres and two mules was promised 100 years ago as restitution for slave labor and mass murder of black people. We will accept the payment in currency which will be distributed to our many communities. The Germans are now aiding the Jews in Israel for the genocide of the Jewish people. The Germans murdered six million Jews. The American racist has taken part in the slaughter of over fifty million black people; therefore, we feel that this is a modest demand that we make.

4. We want decent housing, fit for shelter of human beings.

We believe that if the white landlords will not give decent housing to our black community, then the housing and the land should be made into cooperatives so that our community, with government aid, can build and make decent housing for its people.

5. We want education for our people that exposes the true nature of this decadent American society. We want education that teaches us our true history and our role in the present-day society.

We believe in an educational system that will give to our people a knowledge of self. If a man does not have knowledge of himself and his position in society and the world, then he has little chance to relate to anything else.

6. We want all black men to be exempt from military service.

We believe that Black people should not be forced to fight in the military service to defend a racist government that does not protect us. We will not fight and kill other people of color in the world who, like black people, are being victimized by the white racist government of America. We will protect ourselves from the force and violence of the racist police and the racist military by whatever means necessary.

7. We want an immediate end to POLICE BRUTALITY and MURDER of black people.

We believe we can end police brutality in our black community by organizing black self-defense groups that are dedicated to defending our black community from racist police oppression and brutality. The Second Amendment to the Constitution of the United States gives a right to bear arms. We therefore believe that all black people should arm themselves for self-defense.

8. We want freedom for all black men held in federal, state, county and city prisons and jails.

We believe that all black people should be released from the many jails and prisons because they have not received a fair and impartial trial.

9. We want all black people when brought to trial to be tried in court by a jury of their peer group or people from their black communities, as defined by the Constitution of the United States.

We believe that the courts should follow the United States Constitution so that black people will receive fair trials. The 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution gives a man a right to be tried by his peer group. A peer is a person from a similar economic, social, religious, geographical, environmental, historical and racial background. To do this the court will be forced to select a jury from the black community from which the black defendant came. We have been, and are being tried by all-white juries that have no understanding of the "average reasoning man" of the black community.

10. We want land, bread, housing, education, clothing, justice and peace. And as our major political objective, a United Nations-supervised plebiscite to be held throughout the black colony in which only black colonial subjects will be allowed to participate, for the purpose of determining the will of black people as to their national destiny.

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume, among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute a new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and, accordingly, all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But, when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security.

SPRING DAY HAS BEEN CANCELLED

BECAUSE OF THE STRIKE

The streets of our country are in turmoil. The universities are filled with students rebelling and rioting. Communists are seeking to destroy our country. Russia is threatening us with her might and the Republic is in danger. Yes, danger from within and without. Yes, without Law and Order our nation cannot survive. Elect us and we shall restore Law and Order.

- ADOLPH HITLER, 1932

Legislators to Visit Campus

Approximately 50 Legislators from the Massachusetts General Court will be on campus for a full day of activities, Friday, according to Judy Gill, Chairman of the University and State Communications Council (USCC).

"In view of the grave concern of the decision to move troops into Cambodia, this meeting will provide an excellent opportunity to express student views to a Legislature that has been the most responsive in the nation in taking positive active to withdraw American troops from Vietnam," Miss Gill said.

Citing the recent Shea bill which was signed into law which would prevent the U.S. Government from sending Massachusetts residents into Vietnam in an undeclared war, and the Donahue bill which would give the Massachusetts people an opportunity to express themselves on the war in a referendum next November and which is now on the Senate floor, she said that Legislators' day will give students a good opportunity to get their views before their legislators.

She continued, "The purpose of Legislators' Day is to give them an opportunity to see what students at the University of Massachusetts are like. Unfortunately many of them have stereotyped us. It was the feeling of USCC that we could show them through a series of meetings with students that we are serious in our goal of obtaining a degree at the State University. We have a great opportunity on Friday to put our best foot forward in action that will have a long-term effect on the future of the University."

According to Miss Gill, students have been in contact with their legislators to invite them personally to the campus, and it is the hope of USCC that students will take the time to meet their legislators and talk to them at the various events scheduled for the day.

Psych Students Will Discuss Experiments

The Council of Undergraduate Students in Psychology - CUSP - would like to invite all students who are enrolled in psychology courses to a meeting to be held Thursday, May 7, at 8:00 p.m. in the New Hatch. We will be discussing the Psych 101 requirement, in which psych majors and non-majors have been required to participate in experiments for graduate students and faculty. Such use of students has been called "involuntary servitude" and has been described as educationally valueless to the guinea pigs! If you would like to express your opinion on this issue or suggest modifications or alternatives to the present system, please attend our meeting.

Holyoke College, a specialist on Southeast Asia who will speak on United States foreign policy toward that area; Professor Franklin Houn of the Government Department at the University of Massachusetts, a specialist on China who will speak on Chinese-Cambodian relations; and Mr. Russell Johnson, Peace Education Secretary of the New England Regional Office of the American Friends Service Committee, who will speak on Cambodia and Laos.

Mr. Johnson not only has visited these two countries in recent years but has traveled extensively in North and South Vietnam making numerous contacts with their political and intellectual leaders. Moderator for the discussion will be Professor Gerard Braunthal, UM Government Department.

UMass Nabs Second in Yan-Con Tennis Meet

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

STORRS, Ct. - Finishing second in the Yankee Conference tennis meet held here on Friday and Saturday, UMass produced the individual singles champion in the person of Alan Goldberg, and the number two doubles titliests, the duo of Mike Katz and Steve Gervickas.

In competition with the five other Yan-Con schools, the Redmen scored 16 points to place second behind Conference champ Rhode Island, which racked up 22 points. New Hampshire placed third with 11, Connecticut garnered nine while Vermont and Maine were shut out.

Goldberg earned his title by defeating the number one seeded man in the whole field, Tom Sherman of URI, in the semi-finals of flight number one. There were nine flights in the tourney, the first six involving various singles matchups and the last three concerned with doubles play-offs.

Each flight consists of three rounds, quarter finals, semi-finals and finals. And the champion of the first flight is deemed the singles champion of the whole Yankee Conference. And Goldberg, fourth seeded in that first flight, faced Sherman in the semis and defeated him, 6-1 and 6-0. From there Goldberg went on to beat UNH's Goodwin in the finals, in three sets, 8-6, 6-8 and 6-1.

It was in flight number eight that Katz and Gervickas established themselves as number two doubles winners. They were second seeded in the flight and faced the Rhode Island tandem of Sherman and Shorr in the final match, defeating them in three sets, 7-5, 1-6 and 6-4.

Back in singles competition, Katz made a good showing in flight number two, bowing in the final round to Connerton of Rhode Island, in two sets, 6-4 and 6-2. In flight number five, Gervickas advanced to the finals, and took URI's Shorr to three sets, slipping in the end, 6-4, 4-6 and 6-4.

Another Redman, Jim Bornheim advanced to the finals and did so in flight number six. He surprised URI's star performer Rapelye, 6-1, in the first set, before succumbing in the clinching sets, 6-4 and 6-2.

UMass placed one more player in the finals and that was Jon Bloom in flight number four. He lost in two sets, 6-2 and 8-6, to Nesbitt of Rhody. It was only in singles flight number three that the Redmen did not place a competitor.

In the last doubles playoff, flight number nine, the UMass team of Gus Penon and Bornheim got clipped in the last round, by two guys from URI, Rapelye and Brown. Flight number seven, the number one doubles, saw the UNH combo of Goodwin and Taylor triumph over Rhode Island's pair of Connerton and Nesbitt.

UMass, which owns an overall record of 4-3, having dumped U-Conn last week, 6-3, before falling to Brown, 7-2, returns to regular team-vs-team action at home tomorrow against Springfield College at 3 p.m.

Golfers Reign as Yan-Con Champs

By TOM KROL
Staff Reporter

In a match held at Pleasant Valley in Sutton last Thursday, the Redman golf team captured the Yankee Conference championship, marking the first time U-Mass has won the title since 1966, and only the fourth time ever. Rhode Island had won the crown the last three years in a row.

Team scores ran like this: U-Mass 481, Maine 491, Rhode Island 493, Connecticut 495, New Hampshire 504 and Vermont 519. It was a really big win for the Redmen in that they had lost to URI and UConn previously this season.

Only seven of 42 golfers broke 80, and UMass had three. Medalist for the meet was Dick King of UMass with a 75, three over par, while Mike Minkos had a 77 and Langevin a 79.

Coach Dick Page attributed the victory to "team balance", and said, "They started out poorly, but finished very well. They didn't give up."

Yesterday the Redmen won a triangular match against MIT and Worcester Polytech. Medalist for the match was WPI's Jack Gale. For UMass, Ed Puzas and Mike Minkos had 74's.

Today, the Redmen host Dartmouth, one of their toughest matches, and Thursday they travel to Rutland Country Club for the New England Championships.

UMass Crushes Williams On Two-Hitter, 15-3

By DICK BACKER
Staff reporter

Williams College scored two runs on two hits and capitalized on Jack Bernardo's first inning wildness but was held hitless the rest of the way as the Redmen romped, 15-3. Bernardo pitched six innings and, except for the first inning, completely baffled the Ephs while chalking up seven strikeouts. Rich Rappoli, Lou Colabello, and Tom Austin pitched the last three innings respectively. The Redmen snapped a three-game losing streak as they banged out sixteen hits and completely humbled the Williams pitching staff.

Williams got their first two runs when leadoff batter John Murray walked, advanced to second on a wild pitch, and scored on Tim Murnane's double with one out. Cleanup batter Terry Smith fanned but the fifth and sixth hitters singled loading the bases. Murnane scored the second Eph run on another Bernardo wild pitch before settling down and getting Force Williams on a ground ball.

The Redmen bounced back against Williams pitcher Mike Krall who demonstrated three types of pitches. A slow ball, a slow slow ball, and a slow, slow, slow ball. Hosea Kelley walked on four straight pitches, stole second, and scored on Tom Semino's two out single.

The Redmen scored two more in the second when Chuck Newell walked, Kelley got his second walk with two outs, putting runners on first and second. Ray Ellerbrook then lashed a 370-foot double to left center field just narrowly missing a home run. The Redmen scored again in the third inning when Newell knocked in Steve Rogers making the score 4-2 in favor of UMass.

In the fourth inning, Krall was knocked out and his replacement, Steve Lathem, was banged around for three more runs on four hits and one of Williams' six errors. UMass didn't score again until the sixth inning. Steve Rogers reached on an error, Warren Mason and Newell hit consecutive singles loading the bases. Shortstop Joe Gugliotta hit a slow roller to the right side of the pitcher's mound, Lathem bobbled the ball allowing Gugliotta to reach first safely as Rogers scored. Jack Conroy pinch hit for Bernardo and delivered a single to right center driving in Newell and Mason. Kelley popped up to the third baseman to end the inning. After six complete, it was UMass 10, Williams 2.

Both coaches began substituting freely. The large lead gave Bergquist an opportunity to use his bullpen and give Rapoli, Colabello, and Austin some much needed work.

The Redmen jumped on Eph pitcher John Dier for five runs in the eighth inning. Paul Sulzicki, now playing right field, walked, Mike Sawyer singled to left, and both runners advanced a base as the left fielder bobbled the ball. Pinch hitter Bob Willman struck out, but Kerry Daly walked to load the bases. Jim Saracino, pinch hitting for Gugliotta, singled driving in Sulzicki. Ellerbrook then unloaded another double driving in Sawyer and Daly. Brian Martin kept the rally alive with a single to left driving in Saracino. Tim Berringer drove Ellerbrook in with a single to center but was out trying to steal second for the second Redman out. Semino flied out to end the inning.

Williams scored their final run without the benefit of a hit on a walk, a passed ball, and a sacrificed fly.

Stickers Drub Upset-Minded UConn, Malone, Waters Star In 14-3 Win

By BARRY RUBENSTEIN
Asst Sports Editor

Playing before a large crowd at Storrs, the UMass lacrosse team defeated an upset-minded UConn team Saturday, 14-3. It ran the Redmen's record to 5-1 for the year and left them undefeated for the year in the league.

Once again it was Tom Malone doing most of the damage for U-Mass. Although he was shadowed all day as usual, the senior co-captain managed to get free enough to score five goals and two assists. Sophomore Bob Waters also gave the Huskies fits as he netted three goals and had three assists.

It was actually a good game for the first half. Although UMass took a 5-0 lead in the first period, UConn was playing an aggressive game and were not giving up. Lou Marinacci opened the Redman scoring at the 0:30 mark of the opening stanza with an assist going to Waters.

Larry Diamond scored next from Malone and then a minute later Waters did the same. Malone himself tallied one at 11:40 unassisted to close out the first period with UMass ahead 5-0.

Before UConn could get untracked the lead was 7-0. Marinacci netted his second unassisted at 0:55 of the second period and Phil Sheridan got one past goalie John Santucci with help from Paul Ritch.

The Huskies tallied their first goal of the day at 5:30. Sophomore attackman Steve Turula scored an unassisted goal to break Bruce Crawford's shutout. Bill Harper followed for UConn at 7:26 after taking a pass from Joe Patorno. This made it 7-2.

But UMass came right back with two more. Diamond scored his second of the game, this time from Dana Stone, at 10:40. Malone ended the first half scoring with an unassisted goal at 14:24 to put the Redmen ahead, 9-2.

From then on, the game started to get out of hand. UConn drew a number of penalties in the second half which gave the Redmen many easy scoring opportunities. The Huskies continually protested the officiating, disrupting the game, and from then on UMass was in complete control.

UMass scored five goals in the third period without any response from the Huskies. Waters and Malone each tallied twice and Wickman scored once for the Redmen to put the contest out of reach. From then on, Coach Garber used his bench.

UConn scored once in the third period putting the final score at 14-3. The goal was tallied by Dave Sloan.

Garber thought his team played well and that it was a good game for a half. But he felt penalties were the Huskies undoing.

Although the Redmen scored a respectable total of 14 goals, Garber thought that "they missed a lot of shots." "Some of the players are trying to score themselves and they are not playing together as a team."

He singled out the work of Marinacci, John Gannon and Dana Stone for particular praise. "They have all played real well."

He also remarked that the attack was starting to play well together. "When we pass, instead of looking for the shot, the Coach continued, "we always get a lot of good shots."

The next lacrosse contest is Thursday with UNH at Durham.

Rugby Club Splits, Seconds Down Amherst

This past week the UMass rugby club split two games as the UMass second 15 outlasted Amherst's seconds, 11-9, on Thursday and a blend of seconds and firsts staged a comeback only to fall to the Hartford Wanderers, 14-8, on Saturday afternoon.

On Thursday, the UMass seconds, taking advantage of heavy first half winds, mounted a strong offense to take an 11-3 lead at halftime.

The scoring began when Craig Schiff recovered an Amherst fumble in the end zone. The conversion failed. Schiff scored again later in the half after continued penetration by the UMass backline.

Jack Hamilton kicked a virtually unbelievable out from the U-Mass five-yard line, going out of bounds on the Amherst five, a 100-yard punt. Doug Knapp scored later in the half, after Amherst scored. UMass hung on playing into a strong wind and held Amherst to six points in the second half. The heroes for the "B" 15 were Hamilton, Schiff and Steve Wyeth.

On Saturday, Wyeth played a fine game, scoring the first Redman points in the first half against Hartford. The Hartford club, featuring a splendid standoff and a fine runner in former Amherst College All-American Bill Foye, got off to a quick start, scoring three times early in the half.

Foye scored when he intercepted a pass from fullback George Duffield. The Hartford standoff, a classy Welsh back, was virtually the whole offense, scoring two of the three tries. He converted one.

UMass finally mustered its forces, passing the ball down the back line. Jack Long forced a break and passed to Wyeth, who poured on the speed and scored from 30 yards out. Jim Keating converted, setting the score at 11-5.

Just before halftime, the Hartford standoff converted a 45-yard penalty kick and the score was 14-5. At this point it seemed that, with the wind advantage, UMass was going to overhaul Hartford in the second half.

It did not happen. Ineffective kicking and poor ball-handling left the Redmen in the hole for the first part of the second half. When the UMass ruggers found themselves, they had ten minutes to get back into the ball game. On two occasions, it appeared that UMass had scored on tries, but Hartford recovered in its own end zone.

Finally Long broke through for a try, setting the score at 14-8. Despite continued pressure, Hartford played fine defense and held off the Redmen.

This week marks serious preparation for the ruggers, as they ready themselves for the New England Rugby Football Union Tournament, to be held here at UMass this weekend. Coach Bob Laurence anticipates numerous lineup changes in order to field the best possible club for the tourney.

UMass plays a big Yankee Conference game against Rhody Wednesday at 3 p.m.

Red Blanks White, 20-0, In Football Intrasquad Contest

The 1970 edition of the Redman football squad climaxed its spring practice season Saturday afternoon in the field behind Alumni Stadium when the Red team rolled over the White 20-0.

The Red, which was composed of the first unit, appeared to go ahead 3-0 early in the first quarter when Dennis Gagnon split the uprights from 35 yards out only to have the kick nullified by an offside call. He missed on the next try from 40 yards.

Later in the period, however, the Red got on the scoreboard when quarterback Ken Hughes scored on a five-yard keeper after a great fake to his fullback Dennis Cummings. Hughes's run capped a seven-play 42-yard drive which featured a 20-yard pass completion from Hughes to Walter O'Malley and a first down scamper by Pat Scavone. Gagnon then converted on the extra-point attempt.

The White meanwhile was not able to mount a serious offensive threat although they got good individual efforts from fullback Dick Heavey and quarterback Tom Holmes, and the quarter ended with the score 7-0.

Cummings scored the second Red touchdown on a 12-yard burst up the middle as the first team capitalized on a fumbled snap from center by White punter Andy Dutkanicz deep in his own territory. The wind-blown conversion attempt by Gagnon was no good, and the Red led 13-0 early in the second period.

The final score came late in the game when halfback Mark Russell scored on a one-yard plunge, terminating an eight-play, 45-yard drive directed by Mike Marchev. This drive was highlighted by a 30-yard run by Scavone and a 15-yard pass to tight end Nick McGarry. Gagnon made the conversion to make the score 20-0, the way it ended.

FOOTBALL FACTS: Quarterbacks on both teams were hampered by the strong wind and thus only a few passes were completed in the game. The Red team got superlative performances from running backs Cummings and Scavone who both look like they're ready for strong seasons. Russell also had many carries and ran well. Punter Steve O'Neil who kicks barefooted got off some fine punts despite the wind and also ran a fake punt for a first-down. On defense, John Hulecki and Bill Sroka played a fine game for the Red with Hulecki especially showing great pursuit from his defensive end position.

Although the White was not able to score, it got good offensive efforts from running backs Heavey, Art Corsaletti, and Walt Rockwell. Steve Shubert also played well at split end. On defense, White linebackers John Welch and Mark Leamy were outstanding as Welch was all over the field and Leamy came up with a key interception.

Freshmen to March On Wall St. Monday

The class of 1973 has called for a strike demonstration on New York's Wall St., Monday at 10 a.m., which, organizers say, will include striking Stock Exchange office workers. If the office workers do go on strike, it would in effect paralyse the Stock Exchange, the economic center of the country, the leaders maintain.

The freshmen decided on the action because they wanted, in the words of John Gage, organizer, "to engage in positive action that would directly affect those we wish to reach."

In gaining support, the UMass freshmen have elicited firm commitments from Columbia, CCNY, NYU, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Syracuse, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Princeton, B.U., Vermont, Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, and Maryland. All these schools have indicated that they will have students attending the demonstration.

Another organizer, Nelson Sigelman, along with freshman class President Dave Poisson, hoped that they would be able to gain funds to provide busses for any interested students wishing to picket at Wall Street.

Sigelman commented, "Our purpose is to close the exchange. The demonstration hopefully will include students going into the exchange to talk to workers and get from them the support of workers in ending the absurdity of the war."

In a related activity, the freshman sent a telegram to President Nixon expressing frustration at "the deaf ear of the President." The telegram also urged the end of the war and of the draft.

The organizers also sent a telegram to New York Mayor John Lindsay, applying for a permit to demonstrate. However, they indicated the demonstration would proceed even without a permit.

The class will learn either today or tomorrow if they can raise the necessary funds for busses.

SDS Plans 'Mill-in' At Dickinson Hall

Approximately two dozen students from the SDS-initiated Committee to Abolish ROTC voted Tuesday afternoon to stage a "mill-in" beginning tomorrow morning at Dickinson Hall. The Committee, after a 2-1/2 hour debate involving more than a hundred people, issued two major demands: 1) That ROTC be distanded at UMass, and current ROTC cadets be given University scholarships, and 2) a daycare center be established by the Administration in Dickinson Hall.

Heated discussion about ROTC began at 11:00 a.m. in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union at an SDS-called meeting. Peter Dugre, a present ROTC cadet, said that although he himself refuses to go to Viet Nam, ROTC should be kept on campus. He said that half of the people in ROTC are against the war, but "if you throw it (ROTC) off campus, you never get exposed to this (all points of view)". Another student said, "You don't liberate something by taking it over". Still another person thought that any violent tactics against ROTC this early in the strike would be bad, for it would alienate too many people.

Proponents of abolishing ROTC argued that they were not attacking individuals in ROTC, but rather the war institution. They said that eighty-five per cent of all junior officers come from ROTC. One individual said to the ROTC cadets in attendance, "Your feelings aren't really being carried by ROTC." He added that ROTC was opposed to the ideals of the University--thinking for oneself.

ROTC-proponents argued that although the Viet Nam war was unjustified, there are instances of justified violence that necessitate ROTC-type insitutions, such as the Arab-Israeli war and World War II. "Getting rid of the building is not going to change anybody's mind. It might even turn people off more", one person said. Another added that if ROTC was thrown off the UMass campus, there are many colleges in the South that would welcome it. "If you throw them off, then you have no control over them." A man doubted whether SDS and the Committee were truly democratic, and whether they had the support of a majority of the people of the University.

Individuals in the Committee said that they would like the support of the Strike Steering Committee and the University Mobe for the mill-in, but that the anti-ROTC Committee would stick to its convictions and stage the mill-in regardless of support.

Tippo Meets Students Calls For Non-Violence

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

UMass/Amherst Chancellor Oswald Tippo yesterday called on striking students of the school to "continue to respect the rights of others in any protest made" and to avoid any form of violent confrontations.

The UMass administrator made his remark as part of a 90-minute open meeting held with students in the Colonial Lounge during the afternoon. A standing room only crowd of almost 150 students attended the Tippo Tea Hour. Also present were Deans Shapiro, Appley, Provost Jeremiah Allen and Dr. Bromery.

Chancellor Tippo began the meeting by reading from a prepared statement in which he criticized the recent movement of U.S. troops into Cambodia by President Nixon as "sheer madness" and described it as "a national tragedy". He continued that U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia would be "no contribution to world peace" and that all troops "should be withdrawn at once."

Regarding the recent strike movement, on campus, however, Tippo stated his belief that "It will not shorten the war," and that opposition must be expressed in other ways. He believes that the chief hope lies with supporting Congress and informing the legislative body of opposition to Nixon's Asian policy. The University administrator is himself expressing his own opposition by sending telegrams to both state legislative and national Congressional leaders.

A lengthy question and answer period followed Tippo's opening remarks.

When asked about the possibility of calling in the National Guard to put down campus protest, Tippo said that, "There would have to exist a very grave situation to call in the Guard. I would hope to never live to see the day when I would have to call them in." Moments later he simply said, "Let's just forget the National Guard." This was met with applause from the audience.

He did indicate that final word on any guard action would come from him and not Gov. Sargent.

Many students expressed concern over the issue of grading policy in light of the strike and Tippo said the matter was in the hands of the faculty senate. He would not comment other than saying that the administration "has always followed the faculty senate action in the past and I see no reason why it should not do so now."

Dean Seymour Shapiro stated his position of favoring a situation in which "students have a chance to resolve the matter with individual faculty."

The possibility was raised that faculty members may have their pay severed for failure to teach classes during the strike. Tippo tried to dismiss the issue as a "red herring" but did admit that the matter "may be taken over by the state house" and be "out of our hands" as a last resort action.

Tippo told the students that "It doesn't make any difference what I say on the issue.

Dean Shapiro declared that "What we hear from the legislature will depend entirely on whether there is violence or not."

There was applause from the audience when one student stated that "The faculty are making the needed function of their jobs" by being on strike and therefore should not be penalized. Tippo stated he agreed with this statement.

On the issue of war related research, Dean of the Graduate School Mortimer Appley stated that "The University is not involved in war-related research. It is not an issue on this campus." He continued that he believes the strikers are making a local issue out of a national one and that the University is "clean" as far as complicity goes. He pointed out that files on University research projects are open to anyone.

The Chancellor's Statement:

It is my personal judgment that the decision to move American troops into Cambodia is sheer madness. It is illogical to argue that by expanding the war to another country, we are going of reduce the conflict. The involvement of U. S. troops in Vietnam is a national tragedy. I see no contribution to world peace in having American fighting men on the Asian continent. They should be withdrawn at once.

As Chancelior of the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, however, I must say that the current strike of classes will not stop the war.

Therefore, our efforts to change national policy must be expressed in more positive ways. The chief hope for reversing the escalation in Southeast Asia is through the members of Congress. Many Congressmen have shown that they are aroused by the unilateral action of the President in Cambodia. We can support them through an organized campaign to express our deep convictions on the war. I am voicing my own feelings of abhorrence at this recent action by sending telegrams to the Massachusetts Congressional delegation today.

In the meantime, I call upon all students at the University to continue to respect the rights of others in any protest that is made.

Campus Center Unavailable To Democrats

AMHERST, Mass. (AP0 - The $14 million campus center at the University of Massachusetts will not be available to Democrats for their state convention June 13th and 14th, school officials announced today.

Campus Center Director Warren Grinnan, reported the 10-story structure would be closed because of a strike of western Massachusetts construction workers which has delayed completion of the center by more than a month. The center was to have opened May 1.

The Democrats had planned to stage their campaigning and social functions in the new center. University officials are now talking with Democratic state Committee officials on moving those activities to Amherst hotels, motels and restaurants.

Mobe Drafts Policy; Plans Area Canvassing

The Student Mobe, led by Sid Finehirsch, met yesterday afternoon in the Student Union Ballroom to draft a policy statement and finalize plans for the afternoon's activities in Northampton.

Finehirsch took the podium before a packed ballroom and read the Mobe's policy proposal:

1. That the United States Government should immediately end its systematic violation of the Bill of Rights in denying the civil liberties of political dissidents and in particular the violation of the civil liberties of members of the Black Panther Party.
2. That the United States Government cease its expansion of the Vietnam war into Cambodia and Laos: that it unilaterally and immediately withdraw all forces from Southeast Asia.
3. That the universities end their complicity with the United States war machine by an immediate end to defense research, counterinsurgency research, and all other such programs.
4. That the United States Government gainfully employ all those seeking work, if private industry is unable to accommodate them.

These resolutions were passed by a unanimous voice vote. The meeting then went on to discuss the issue of ROTC on campus. Many of those present felt that the addition of ROTC to resolution 3 would alienate many of those students who were not sure of how they felt about the ROTC issue. But Finehursch didn't seem to think that this was so. He stated, "The Mobe has a political position that can bring out more people than any other group on campus." He went on to add that the ROTC question would not alienate people and that the only condition for supporting the Mobe was to be in favor of immediate withdrawal.

After protracted debate the meeting voted 225 to 190 not to include ROTC in resolution 3.

Finehirsch then turned to the canvassing planned for the afternoon in Northampton.

The Stockbridge Student Senate tonight voted to support the Strike by a vote of 11 to 5.

Five College Meeting Calls for Nixon Impeachment

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

A special resolution introduced by UMass faculty member Professor Joseph M. Hernon calling for Congressional initiation of impeachment charges against President Nixon and Vice-President Spiro Agnew was passed by a meeting of faculty and students of the five college area last night. UMass faculty member Sidney Kaplan served as moderator.

A crowd of arcound 1500 assembled in the Amherst College Cage cheered as Professor Hernon read his proposal which called for sending to Representative Silvio Conte (R) the following telegram:

"We the faculty members and students of the Hampshire, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Amherst Colleges and the University of Massachusetts call upon you to introduce a resolution of impeachment of President Richard Nixon for perjury against his oath to uphold his constitutional duties with the initiation of the invasion of Cambodia."

A similar resolution against Vice-President Spiro Agnew would call for impeachment for "crossing inter-state lines with intent of inciting riot."

Professor Hernon stated that he hoped to get much publicity from the impeachment move as well as to put "liberal Republicans on the spot."

In addition to the impeachment proceedings the meeting also was to decide to accept the recent U-Mass Strike Committee demands. These were: (1) U.S. cessation of expansion of the war in Cambodia, Laos and all Southeast Asia and all troops brought home now. (2) The ending of government suppression of political dissidents and release of political prisoners (i.e. Bobby Seale) now. (3) University ending of complicity with the war effort such as research and ROTC.

Chairman Sidney Kaplan noted that there were "Considerable Abstentions" in the voting of this issue.

It was agreed that grading policy for the strike should be left up to faculties at the individual institutions.

Finally a war resolution was all but unanimously passed to place the following add in the N.Y. Times newspaper addressed to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee:

"We and our students are at the moment powerless. All we can do is to consult with each other and write to you. You and your colleagues can act. We demand you to go to the limit of your Constitutional responsibility and political persuasiveness to reassert the will of a people sick of war and a people enraged over the President's pursuit of a victory as immoral as it is impossible."

We, the undersigned, support wholly and unequivocably the actions of your committee in branding the actions of the President in committing American troops to the soil of Cambodia as unconstitutional. We support completely the statement of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the President has acted without consent or knowledge of Congress, and as such has usurped the constitutional and traditional war-making powers of Congress. We demand your committee to continue unrelentingly by its assertion that the President recognize the dangerous propositions of this action and to respond to the committee's assertion of the Senate's immoral declare and wage war. We urge the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to demand an immediate and total withdrawal of all American troops in Southeast Asia."

UMass, Amherst Students Jam Pondside at Rally

By PAT KING and JOHN SULLIVAN
Staff Reporter and Sports Editor

For one hour and forty minutes last night, a crowd of about 7500 UMass and Amherst College students assembled on the No. Pleasant Street side of the campus pond to listen to speakers representing the various aspects of the National Strike Movement in what was labeled a Valley Rally.

Steady streams of students congregated on the grass in advance of the featured speakers; a folk singer was on stage to keep the attention of the audience before the first to speak, Eric Walgren of Universal Life Church got matters underway at 7:40 p.m.

He was followed, in succession by Sid Finehirsh of the University Mobilization Committee, Glenn Elters of the Student Senate, Howard Gadlin of the Strike Committee, Black Panther Cappy Penderhue and two students from Kent State, Daniel Gardner and Tom Nicodemis.

Coordinating the program was Gary Tarry, who ran down the list of speakers and then introduced Walgren, whose major topic was the United States government's program to control the lives of all people, in this country and in Southeast Asia. He offered his theory on how American Universities contribute to the manipulation of the people.

In Walgren's phrasing, a university is a "drone machine" that manufactures people necessary to keep the System intact. He demanded freedom from this machine and power, "Enough power to love people, instead of kill people."

Following up Walgren was the next speaker, Finehirsh, whose purpose was to clarify the positions of the Mobe Committee and the Strike Committee. He stated that both organizations "are going in the same direction", and that both back the three objectives of the strike. However, he emphasized that the Mobe would concentrate on the third point, the unilateral and immediate withdrawal of all U.S. troops from Southeast Asia, when "educating" the area populace.

Like the Strike Committee, Finehirst and the Mobe support the closing of UMass in order that the campus be used as a base of area operations.

He also made an announcement that, at 7 p.m. on the Amherst Common a Western Massachusetts center to bring together the on-and-off-campus activities of several area colleges will be formed.

Elters spoke next, and provided a rundown of yesterday afternoon's Faculty Senate meeting and reread the resolution passed by the Student Senate Monday night. He predicted that Thursday will be the crucial day of the strike on campus since Spring Day and Counseling Day limited student attendance at classes anyway.

Next, plans for campus-wide steering committees were presented by Gadlin. Dormitories and various campus organizations directed to elect delegates and alternates to attend steering committee meetings. Gadlin views a central steering committee as the administrative body of the strike movement.

After abbreviated recording of the National Strike Committee gathering of yesterday morning in Boston was played, the most controversial talker of the Valley Rally, Cappy Penderhue, stepped to the microphone.

Penderhue's aim, as an invited speaker, was to familiarize the gathering with the policies of the Black Panther Party.

When individual members of the audience took issue with his statements, verbal conflict resulted. Concentrating his arguments on militant retaliation by blacks to widespread white oppression, he evoked cries of discontent.

Along with such cries came supporting shouts of "Right On!"; Penderhue challenged anyone in opposition to come on stage and take the mike away from him. One person accepted that challenge, a female who was quickly shuffled off the platform.

Restlessness replaced attention, as Penderhue began to draw strength to his purpose for speaking, the clarification of the Party's stance. After a great deal of rhetoric had been exhausted, he made one point clear, "We want to educate the people."

The stage became the center of attention again when the students from Kent, Gardner and Nicodemis, recounted the events of the past several days that occurred at that Ohio university.

Gardner, who witnessed the "massacre" of the four Kent State students, made an earnest plea for nonviolence in all striking activities. It was 9:20 then, rain began to fall, and the rally disbanded.

Surrounding Area Colleges Join Strike

Amherst, Smith and Mt. Holyoke have all joined the nationwide Strike movement, and are presently exploring means to effectively protest United States expansion of the war into Cambodia.

Classes are not being conducted at these institutions for the present at least, and there is a distinct possibility that they may not resume at Amherst or Smith for the rest of the semester. Mt. Holyoke's anti-strike movement which is by far the largest and most powerful in the valley, seems to assure between 40 to 50% attendance when their two day moratorium on classes ends Thursday.

However the strike there as at the other institutions, was not based on support for Nixon's invasion of Cambodia but rather upon the use of the Strike as a tactic in expressing dissent.

Amherst College held a number of educational and political activities yesterday, and plans to continue to do so today.

At Smith College an open-ended Strike was approved by over a 3 to 1 margin of students. Course work there would presumably be made up by students at the discretion of individual professors.

Students at the taree institutions seem to be waiting for decisive faculty action before they decide how long they will strike. The results of the Amherst, Smith, and Mt. Holyoke faculty meetings will not be known until later today.

Faculty Senate Supports Strike

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

The Faculty Senate, meeting in overcrowded Thompson Hall, yesterday afternoon passed a motion supporting the "aims of the student strike" and declaring its "outrage at the further expansion of the war in Indochina."

The six proposals made in the motion are:

----We are much encouraged by the clear intent, repeatedly expressed at Monday night's student meeting to conduct the strike in a non-violent manner.

----The expression of support for the aims of the student strike; to extricate all American troops from Indochina immediately.

----The cooperation by all concerned faculty and administration in discussing with students the underlying issues of the present crisis.

----The exploration of common actions of persuasion and protest with other colleges and universities.

----No punitive measures be taken against students engaged in lawful protest.

----Each member of the faculty work out with his students an appropriate way of dealing with incompleted class work and final grades.

The meeting was overly attended by students, causing some mayhem at the beginning. But the students, after some procrastination made room for the Faculty Senate. Some of the students present feared that Faculty Senators would feel "intimidated" by the overwhelming presence of students. The students finally occupied the two adjacent auditoriums.

The vote was solid and debate fairly limited. Many expected the meeting to last far longer than one hour. Several other items, including a "substitute motion" by Mr. Betts, and an amendment by Mr. Silver were voted down.

The "substitute motion" would have deleted the "external political" considerations of the Junkins Motion. It was argued that the University in the interest of "academic freedom" should not "politicize" itself. Mr. Betts the sponsor of the motion expressed the view that " a mature society" wouldn't become "panicky in a time of distress." The political nature of the bill, Betts feared would somehow endanger the future usefulness of the University Senate as a non-political entity.

Bart Kaplan, of the English Dept. argued against "substituting" the motion. "The crisis is a crisis of humanity" said Kaplan. "To call it political is to destroy it" he continued. Kaplan noted that to talk about the University "in the future" seemed to be a poor argument. He further called for an end to "pussy footing around" concerning the entire crisis.

Isadore Silver's amendment to the six proposals called for cancellation of classes until May 8. Silver, always one step ahead of the Senate, pointed to the actions of prestigious institutions across the nation which have "closed down".

The motion to adjourn was passed unanimously.

Students Join In Nationwide Strike

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thousands of students at scores of New England colleges joined in a nationwide student strike Tuesday, protesting U. S. intervention in Cambodia.

Some used the opportunity to protest the forthcoming murder trial of Black Panther leader Bobby Seale or denounce university affiliations with "the U. S. war machine."

Added fuel to the fires of dissent was the killing of four Kent State University, students during demonstrations Monday at Kent, Ohio.

The four were killed when National Guardsmen fired into a group of students during an anti-war demonstration Monday. Kent State was evacuted after the deaths and was virtually deserted Tuesday.

1. Schools send petitions.

The presidents of 37 Northeast schools sent a petition to President Nixon criticizing his Asian policies. The White House acknowledged receipt of the communication but said Nixon has no immediate plans to meet with them.

"The President, of course, understands the feelings of many students and faculty members on the war and he respects the right to express those feelings," Ronald Ziegler, the President's press secretary, said.

A few blocks from B.U. protesting students tore down the state and American flags in front of the Commonwealth Armory, and demonstrators ripped them into shreds.

At Boston College, in nearby Newton, Mass., about 50 students already on strike in a protest over announcement of an increase in tuition - broke down two locked doors and ran sacked the offices of the ROTC program.

2. Protests spread.

The protests spread from the Cambodian situation to include condemnations of the killing of four students at Kent State University, denounciations of the forthcoming trial of Bobby Seale in New Haven, Conn., and demands that colleges cease war related research.

In Boston, about 200 young persons began a march at 8:20 p.m. from Kenmore Square to the Massachusetts State House, where a program of folk music and speeched was planned. Some carried lighted candles in mourning for the Kent State dead.

The marchers moved along sidewalks and did not disrupt traffic.

At Massachusetts Institute of Technology the faculty voted to suspend formal class schedules for the remainder of the week, but encouraged professors to meet informally with their students to continue the educational process. The insitute is to remain open.

Most of the protesting in New England was peaceful, although some windows were broken and fires set near Boston University in the early morning hours.

At Boston State College, about 100 students took over the offices of Robert J. Bond, acting president, while at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Provost Jerome B, Weisner told students: "Behave in a way that will impress people all over the country."

3. Students gather at State House.

The biggest mass gathering of the day occurred on the front steps of the Massachusetts State House, where 20,000 protesters gathered to hear a number of anti-war speakers, including Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, D-Holyoke.

Gov. Francis W. Sargent ordered the American flag flown at half staff for one hour in honor of those killed at Kent State after members of the group began chanting, "Lower that flag." Demonstrators stood by silently with clenched fists as the flag was lowered.

Sargent later told a news conference that he believed his action in ordering the lowering of the flag was "reasonable."

"No one should have the feeling that it was a surrender," the governor said, "it was a highly explosive situation and it was the reasonable thing to do."

He said he was determined that order would be maintained while at the same time preventing overreaction. He said both things were done.

"Dissent is not to be discouraged, but disorder cannot be tolerated," he said.

The governor said there were no political overtones in his action.

In Rhode Island, the president of Brown University, University of Rhode Island, Rhode Island College and Providence College sent a telegram to the state congressional delegation asking that they return for conferences with student leaders.

4. Presidents send telegram.

The telegram read, in part: "We feel it is imperative that they the students have an opportunity to convey their feelings directly to their elected representatives on a matter that has become a moral, political and economic crisis in this nation."

At Williams College in Williamstown, Mass., President John E. Sawyer said: "Any responsible person close to any American campus today must say to Mr. Nixon and to Mr. Agnew that present policies cannot be continued without tearing the country apart. The leadership of this nation must stop and listen to these young people. Students at Williams voted an indefinite suspension of classes.

Throughout Maine, hundreds of students stayed out of class. At Bowdoin College in Bruswick, several hundred students joined President Winthrop C. Libby as the flag was lowered to half staff and a silent prayer said for those killed at Kent College.

5. Vermont students arrested

At Goddard College in Plainfield, Vt., 38 students and faculty members were arrested during a sit-in on busy U. S. 2. The demonstrators were charged with disturbing the peace and obstructing traffic.

The faculty of Windham College (Putney, Vt.) voted Tuesday to make classes optional for the remaining two weeks of the school year.

A joint student faculty committee will organize workshops on the Vietnam war.

In Brattleboro, 1,000 persons marched silently with four coffins, symbols of the Kent State students. Participating were students from Windham College, Marlboro College, Mark Hopkins College, Antioch and Putney graduate school as well as private and public high school students.

On the Dartmouth College campus at Hanover, N.H., a student faculty group announced formation of an organization called Continuing Presence in Washington to act as "a national citizen's lobby against the Nixon administration's conduct of the war in Southeast Asia."

6. Group plans headquarters.

The group said it plans to establish headquarters in Washington "to bring direct pressure on congressmen to vote for an end to military involvement in Southeast Asia." Sponsors said the organization will stay in Washington until the war in Indochina is over.

Wellesley College students, faculty and administrative personnel voted Tuesday 907-416 to go on strike in a Cambodia protest.

A Wellesley spokesman said "the vote is not necessarily binding on the individual, represents more a sense of the community rather than legal action."

At Yale University in New Haven, Conn., the strike begun two weeks ago in support of the Black Panthers on trial in New Haven was reported about 50 per cent effective, with the addition of the Cambodia issue.

The National Strike Information Center at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., said about 125 colleges and universities, including 35 in New England, were participating in the strike, but that the number was increasing.

7. B.U. student arrested.

Early in the day a Boston University freshman, booked as Richard Boulware, 18, of Lynchburg, Va., was arrested when he appeared at Massachusetts General Hospital for treatment for burns of his chest and hand.

Police charged him with possession and explosion of a flammable device. He was arraigned in the hospital before Judge Philip Tracy and was ordered held under police guard for a hearing later.

Police accused Boulware of tossing a fire bomb at the admissions office building at B.U. They said gasoline spilled on his clothing and caught fire. Two policemen ripped off his flaming shirt and the youth fled.

Two fires were reported at B.U. during the night, one causing $2, 500 damage. A number of windows were broken.

8. Knowles calls Guard.

In Wisconsin, Gov. Warren P. Knowles called up the National Guard to deal with anti-war disorders on the University of Wisconsin campus in Madison. The mobilization came after a night of violence during which hundreds of students set fires and smashed windows.

The university campus was declared off limits to all persons without proper credentials and police tear gassed demonstrating students.

The National Guard was also on duty in College Park, Md., in case trouble again broke out at the University of Maryland. About 3,000 students there listened to Dr. Benjamin Spock denounce the war.

In Washington, D.C., antiwar groups called for rallies and vigils on Thursday, a national day of mourning Friday and a march on the White House Saturday.

"If there is still a campus in this country which has not yet struck against these crimes of the Nixon administration we call on them to join us immediately," said Miss Carol Lipman, national executive secretary of the Student Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam.

9. Classes Suspended

In New York, classes were suspended or rallies scheduled at most colleges and many high schools. Columbia University and New York University classes were suspended. Student pickets marcH at Hunter College.

Fire bombings were reported at some schools, with ROTC buildings being the favorite targets.

A small explosive device was set off in a building at the University of Miami, police said.

There were fires in the National Guard Armory in Lewiston, Idaho, and in the Naval ROTC building in nearby Moscow, Idaho, on the University of Idaho campus. There were two attempts to fire bomb the ROTC building at the University of Notre Dame. Other fires were reported at the University of Houston, Genesee, N.Y.,high School, Syracuse, N.Y., University, the University of Tennessee and the University of California, Davis.

10. Students seek obstruction

Some students sought to obstruct normal school function by taking over buildings or blocking campus streets.

For the second straight day, students at Stanford University blocked the entrances of campus buildings.

"The joint is ninety-nine and forty four, one hundredths per cent closed," a school spokesman said.

State police arrested about 20 students and faculty members from Vermont's Goddard College during a sit in demonstration on busy U.S. Route 2. About 150 students occupied the ROTC building at Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant. More than 200 did the same at the University of Nebraska's Military and Naval Science building. University of Virginia students held the Naval ROTC building briefly.

About 100 students seized control of the Niagara, N.Y., County Community College administration building.

And there were several confrontations with police. In Buffalo, N.Y., about 1,500 students left a State University rally and marched down Main Street chanting, "Remember Kent State," until they were turned back by police.

About 50 State University of Iowa students were arrested on charges of disturbing the peace or unlawful assembly after about 200 students engaged in rock throwing outside the Iowa city police station.

The mayor of Iowa City said he would ask the city council to impose a 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew in the city for the next several weeks.

American Troops Open Third Cambodian Front

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. troops opened a third front in Cambodia Tuesday but bad weather and heavy enemy fire limited it to a landing of 500 troops who prepared an artillery and patrol base.

About 6,000 U.S. and South Vietnamese troops in the nearby central highlands were committed to the operation when the bad weather hit. Their objective was to knock out enemy headquarters and base camps in northeast Cambodia.

The first heavy enemy resistance since American troops poured into Cambodia on Friday to open a second front came at Snuol, in the Fishhook area 200 miles south of the central highlands area.

There about 2,000 North Vietnamese dug in at Snuol and in surrounding rubber plantations prevented a U.S. armored column from occupying the town eight miles from South Vietnam's border.

The first front opened last Wednesday in Cambodia's Parrot's Beak south of the Fish hook. It is in charge of South Vietnamese troops with American advisors and U.S. air and artillery support.

Sources in the field told Associated Press photographer Charles Ryan that the operation in northeast Cambodia ran into trouble from the start.

Ryan, reporting from Pleiku - 50 miles east of the operations' target in Cambodia's jungled mountains, said the Americans' planned helicopter assault was stalled by thick mist in the target area.

When the helicopters were able to reach their landing zones, several came under heavy enemy fire. At least one battalion of some 500 men was forced to turn back to South Vietnam, field reports said.

CAMBODIA (AP) - Enemy troops, reported to be backed by Vietnamese they had freed in Cambodia pushed to within 27 miles of Phnom Penh Tuesday.

A Cambodian force of about 450 men stationed along a road southeast of Phnom Penh, pulled back Monday about two miles.

The major commanding the force said he estimated the opposing forces at about 3,000. He said it was a mixture of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars aided by liberated Vietnamese nationals and sympathetic Cambodians.

He said without reinforcements he would be unable to stem the drive effectively. There were a few minor probes against the Cambodian positions Monday night.

Some help may come from 1,500 Cambodian mercenaries, flown from South Vietnam to Phnom Penh in South Vietnamese planes without their Green Beret advisors.

These Cambodians, born in South Vietnam's Mekong Delta, came fully armed and equipped and said they expected to be used primarily for the defense of the capital. They have been trained by the Green Berets as a mobile strike force.

They estimated it would take them about a week to acquaint themselves with the roads and security problems before taking up positions.

Nixon Report Optimistic On Cambodian Operations

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon gave members of the Senate and House Armed Services committees an optimistic report Tuesday on U.S. operations in Cambodia. But critics said he failed to remove their doubts.

"The President said several times the operation would take six to eight weeks and hopefully a shorter time," House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan told a news conference, adding "The enemy would need at least five months, maybe longer, to resupply."

He added that "progress to date was described as satisfactory, up to expectations," and quoted Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as saying substantial amounts of weapons and ammunition have been captured, plus "enough rice for 600,000 plus man days."

Those attending the morning session at the White House were largely administration supporters but Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said what he heard "does little to lessen my apprehension."

Rep. Charles Whalen, R-Ohio, said Nixon's answer to one question made it clear to him that "the real reason" for the U.S. drive was to lessen Communist pressure on the Cambodian government - something which administration spokesmen have described as secondary to blocking attacks on U.S. forces in South Vietnam.

Five senators, meanwhile, formally introduced a proposal to terminate U.S. operations in Cambodia within 30 days, and in Laos and Vietnam by the end of 1970, except for withdrawal of U.S. forces which would be completed by June 30, 1971, unless Congress approved an extension.

The bipartisan proposal was assailed by the assistant Senate Republican leader, Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, who termed it reckless and irresponsible, adding "This is no time to pull the rug out from unde r the President of the United States."

The House is due to vote Wednesday - probably favorably - on a proposal to prohibit use of U.S. ground combat troops in Cambodia except as deemed necessary by the President to protect U.S. lives in South Vietnam. Nixon told congressmen he supports the proposal, an amendment to a military procurement bill sponsored by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., leader of a drive to force a Senate vote on cutting off war funds, announced formation of a Committee For a Vote on the War to rally public support for the move.

"We intend to push for a vote in the House, a vote in the Senate and a vote in November," a McGovern aide said.

Plans for a Senate debate on Vietnam and Cambodia this week, centered around the proposal to repeal the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution, went awry when Republicans on the Foreign Relations Committee objected to denunciation of Nixon's Cambodia move in the report on the proposal.

Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., backed by Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., won unanimous consent for the recommittal of the Tonkin repealer to the committee, after he asserted "the staff got a little overzealous" and wrote its views in the committee report.

Stock Market Declines

NEW YORK (AP) - A moderate decline in the stock market Tuesday pushed the Dow Jones average below its closing level the day of President John F. Kennedy's assassination. Trading was moderately light.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed off 4.82 at 709. 74, lowest since Aug. 9, 1963 when it stood at 708.39. On Nov. 22, 1963, the day Kennedy was shot, it was 711.49.

Analysts attributed the decline to continued uneasiness over developments in Cambodia, as well as continuing fears of inflation and worries over lower first quarter earnings reports.

Brokers noted that the light volume indicated a lack of buying rather than strong selling pressure, what one analyst called "a buyer's strike."

Senate Comm. OK's Blackmun

WASHINGTON (AP)- The Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously approved Tuesday the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Harry A. Black mun, President Nixon's third choice to fill a year old vacancy.

The 17-0 committee vote pointed toward early Senate confirmation of the 61 year old Rochester, Minn., judge, a close friend of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

Majority leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., said it is possible the Senate may take up the nomination Friday.

In Rochester, Blackmun said he was "deeply honored by the action of the Judiciary Committee." Referring to last week's hearing on his nomination he said "each and every member of that committee, while penetrating in examination, was most kind and considerate to me."

BU Cancels Finals

BOSTON (AP) - Boston University cancelled final examinations and its May 17 commencement Tuesday night because of student unrest over Cambodia and Kent State.

The cancellations were voted by the University Council, made up of the deans of the various schools and the university's vice presidents.

B.U. has 16,366 undergraduate students.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was to have been the principal speaker at the undergraduate commencement.

In addition to the cancellations, the University Council also decided by resolution that the dormitories be closed by 5 p.m. Thursday.

"The University Council views with great concern," the resolution said, "the fact that in our society an institution of higher learning must be forced to consider the interruption of the academic process.

"Nevertheless, the massive expression of student concern over Cambodia, Kent State and New Haven has created an atmosphere on this campus in which the traditional educational processes cannot effectively continue without endangering the personal security of students."

The council left to individual faculties the decisions on grades, credit and makeup examinations.

Flag Lowered as Result Of Boston Demonstration

BOSTON (AP) - State officials ordered the American flag in front of the State House lowered to half staff Tuesday in honor of four students killed at Kent State University as about 20,000 youths stood silently with clenched fists raised in protest.

Police said no incidents were reported as a series of speakers including Senate President Maurice A. Donahue, D-Holyoke, kept up a two hour-barrage of attacks on President Nixon's policy of sending American troops into Cambodia.

The flag was returned to full staff at 3 p.m. after the demonstrators left.

The youths, marching from various college and university campuses in the Greater Boston area, arrived at the State House about 12:30 p.m. and staged a sit down in the middle of the street in front of the historic capitol building.

Despite urgings from their leaders, the students occupied the steps of the capitol. Police locked all out a few doors.

About 90 minutes after the demonstration the chant began for Gov. Francis W. Sargent to lower the flag in honor of the youths killed at the Ohio school. Urged on by a speaker, several youths began to crowd around the base of the flag pole where four Capitol policemen stood a lonely vigil.

Apparently, at the command of Sargent, who could be seen looking from his window, Donald R. Dwight, state Commissioner of Finance and Administration, waded through the mass of people and ordered the flag lowered.

There were no incidents reported. But police closed off the corridors of the State House, Metropolitan District Police manned the inside doors and following the rally helmeted state police were seen in the rear of the State House.

Donahue, who has become an outspoken critic of American involvement in Southeast Asia, told the crowd that America should have learned that "that it is dangerous in the extreme to involve ourselves in a war people do not support."

FROM OUR SIDE

Wall Street Confrontation

The fact that only three UMass students showed up for a History 101 discussion section yesterday isn't going to have much affect on the Nixon administration and the war in Southeast Asia. And the Nixon administration, regardless of what later political consequences its actions might prompt, will ignore the nationwide student strike in the same manner as it ignored the fall moratoria.

If UMass students are intent on really doing something to end the Asian war, to end the political oppression of the Black Panthers and to end the war machine's manipulation of the educational system, action more dramatic and effective is needed. The Strike provides an initial means of protest, but strikers must move onward.

And one way to move onward, to make point to the administration and to the nation, is to lash out at the country with the intention of hurting it, to lash out in the form of joining the Wall Street Confrontation on Monday.

GUEST EDITORIAL

An End to War Complicity

The main thrust of the nationwide student strike is against the expanded war and the increased repression of black and white radicals. But our third demand is also important--and end to university complicity with the war.

There are two main arguments against eliminating ROTC, war recruiting, and war research: 1) The University must protect the academic freedom of all elements of its community; 2) the university is neutral--it permits ALL groups, all recruitment, all research, and if it eliminated certain kinds, then it would be less than neutral. These arguments seem foolish to me.

1) Freedom of speech and academic freedom are not at issue. If ROTC were a debating club or a political club--say, Young Fascists for Order--then, sure, they should be given freedom to hold meetings (though certainly not for credit). But look at the reality: ROTC is a recruitment and training agency of the U. S. war machine. WE TRAIN KILLERS ON CAMPUS: 85% of U. S. officers in Vietnam have come through ROTC training. Why should there be "academic freedom" to train killers for the official Mafia? Why should there be "academic freedom" to recruit for corporations that are helping to oppress Vietnamese peasants? Or to do research that will enable the war machine to kill more efficiently? Has anyone asked the peasants what they think about such "academic freedom"? What is at issue is not freedom o f intellect but enslavement of oppressed peoples.

2) The university is not neutral. Do we have a Che Guevara Liberation Army recruiting and training on campus? THIS, not SDS, would be the equivalent of ROTC. Do we recruit for the war industries of North Vietnam? Do we do research into weaponry which the Panthers can use to defend themselves against the police? The university is NOT neutral. The Draft Information and Counselling Center is a perfect example of the falseness of the university's claim of neutrality. Right now a Veterans Coordinator in Place - ment handles Selective Service information. His position and the pamphlet his office supplies shows that he is simply a tool of Selective Service. "Neutrality" and "academic freedom" are ideological masks to prevent us from seeing the university's profound links with a system which keeps half the world in economic and/or political bondage. We must end the complicity of the university with that system.

The Seven O'clock News

Good evening friends and welcome to the seven o'clock Empire news.

This afternoon elements of the 14th and 27th legions, combined with our Gaullic allies, under the command of Tribune Caius Abrams, moved into upper Germany in order to stem the alleged flow of barbarians. The world was shocked at this action, since both Rome and Ho Chi the Hun signed the Cologne Pact, making Upper Germany a neutral zone. Legion Headquarters at Rome defended the action saying that roving bands of barbarians use the area for a base camp for their raiding further south. Rome also said that the country should be at least occupied for a short time so that the people can be given the benefits of Rome's advanced technical society. The fact that the Huns and the people in Germany are of the same race was quickly discounted. Rome believes that these people should be shown the "Roman way." Eyewitness reports claim that many German villages have been raped and burned under staggering bombing from Roman catapults. Many thousands of civilians lie dead in the fields. Emperor Tricktus Nixus replied to these statements saying that regardless of the cost the power of Rome or of the emperor cannot and will not be humiliated, the Roman eagle will stand forever.

Reaction on the Senate was both dramatic and mixed; Senator Mendell Riverus said he backed the emperor, the sooner we wipe out these gooks the better, they ain't human. Many were against the invasion, calling for the emperor's assassination, some urged immediate repeal of the Gulf of Gaul Resolution which gave the emperor unlimited power over the military.

Students also reacted, hundreds moved onto Capitoline Hill and proclaimed it a liberated zone. They demanded an end to the war, and the immediate release of Spartacus who is currently on trial for starting a slave rebellion and inciting many Ethiopian blacks against the state vice emperor. Agnus ordered the praetorian guards to end the demonstration. Archers fired point blank into the crowd, many were arrested and will be thrown to the lions during the festival of Mars. Agnus was quoted as saying that these demonstrators were nothing but bums, and snobs, and that he would trade all of them for one company of the fine Roman boys he saw raping and pillaging in Germany.

Well, except for the usual starvation among the poor and the enslaving of thousands, that just about wraps it up for today, May 7, 189 A.D.

For The Kent Six

I offer this poem to the memory of the six students who were killed at Kent State University. THERE IS ONLY ONE THING THAT MATTERS AND THAT IS LIFE.

"Nixon, I think you're still got that infectious Pink Eye you caught on the Unamerican Committee, what with your Yahoo cohorts now conducting the nazification of California and other campuses. I heard you plainly tell them on T.V. to get a little tougher, to get a little rougher on campus and the next day they murdered one of us ---to show how tough.

THANK YOU TYRANNUS NIX!! LET HIM BE LAID AT YOUR DOOR!"

Lies and Laughter

Last Thursday night, Richard Nixon sent an invading army into Cambodia, thus pushing the war into a new phase.

On Friday, among other things, Mr. Nixon voiced the following pointed observations on the comparative character of American young men and women (N.Y. Times, 5/2/70) (sic):

" You see these bums, you know, blowing up the campuses today, are the luckiest people in the world, going to the greatest universities, and here they are burning up the books, storming around about this issue. You name it. Get rid of the war there will be another one.

Then out there we have kids who are just doing their duty. They stand tall and they are proud. I am sure they are scared. I was when I was there. But when it really comes down to it, they stand up and, boy, you have to talk up to those men. They are going to do fine and we have to stand in back of them."

Later in the day on Friday, before departing from the Capital for a weekend of relaxation with some members of the Presidential family as well as his confidant, Bebe Rebozo, Mr. Nixon, with public emotion, proclaimed Sunday a national day of prayer for all American prisoners and service-men missing in action in Southeast Asia.

This past Saturday, 128 fighter-bombers of the U. S. Air Force attacked North Vietnamese "military Targets" just north of the DMZ in a large scale resumption of the wide range bombing of North Vietnam. The Nixon administration described it's large bombing raids merely as a continuation of a long-standing policy of self-defense for American forces.

On Sunday, Vice-President Agnew vocally doubted the military capability of the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese armies, whilst reiterating the administration position that U. S. incursions into Cambodia are necessary to insure that U. S. forces can continue to withdraw from Vietnam.

Mr. Agnew continued with some parallel criticism of those who dissent: "The lawbreakers always like to attribute their illegal and criminal actions to some cause that will gain sympathy for them. I don't think many are really honestly sincere about the cause. I think they're simply utilizing this as a vehicle to continue their anti-social, outrageous conduct, and I think when the war is over they'll find something else to use as an excuse for throwing firebombs."

Thus, with frightening familiarity, all the tragic errors, all the anxious immoralities and mistakes of the past are being resurrected for further employment in this sorry war. Fanaticism, said Santayana, is redoubling your effort when you have forgotten your aim. To assert that Mr. Nixon, Mr. Agnew, the various secretaries of the Cabinet, and the controlling corporate structure of Amerika are fanatics, is, in truth, complimenting them. They are far worse than fanatics. They appear to me to more closely resemble paternalistic gangsters, at best, and, more accurately, imperializing racist vampires.

Mr. Nixon's maudlin appeal to patriotism was nothing less than insulting to me. His definition of patriots as those who believe that in time of a war, constitutional or not, legal or not, moral or not, the United States Government is always in the right reeks with the stench of a foul decay (what is decaying is a function of your individual judgement). His pandering allusions to religious sanctioning sadden the soul. And his disguised totalitarian repression of political and racial dissent and freedom anger me. I cannot and will not buy this load of crap.

The truly free men of this land are those who will dare to speak out against the madness; who will dare because they care. If you don't dare, you really don't care, for a committment in action is essential; and the student strike is an opportunity . For your own sakes, please neutralize your dehumanizing static inertia, if you haven't already, and do something. Words are cheap, real cheap. But unspoken words are totally useless. This I know.

It's sad in some ways. Quite sad, really. I view alienation as that feeling one gets when, in instance after instance, myths about what a great thing being an American supposedly meant and supposedly means, myths initially believed, are proven false in various ways. For me, alienation is being an American and feeling more sincerity and solidarity for a Vietnamese, a Cuban , and my closed generation of human young,, than for the country, it's systems, and the majority of it's people, that I just happened to be born in - this country - Amerika.

Lies. Lies. Lies. Laughter.

Speak out. You've got to speak out against the madness. You've got to speak your mind, if you dare. At least I think that I should.

True Law

To the editor:

The war-related items on the University Referendum should, I think, be set in their current constitutional context.

What special obligation to the State and Federal Government does a State University, also a land-grant institution, owe? Ought a University to profess and exemplify less than the Truth to the Government (or the current majority-elected administration) whose charter and funds support it? In history, of course, rulers have been notorious for indiscriminately cutting off the heads or the budgets of their most honest and clear-seeing counselors. Yet no state, no people, no ruler can survive without those who will dare to say, when it is the case, "Emperor, you are as naked as any other poor forked creature, and that's the truth."

As patriotic citizens, we of the University, in fact, have no need to fear to do our duty to the State honestly and clearly. Listen to the Supreme Court of the land, in its March 8, 1965 draft-decision (U.S. V. SEEGER AND JAKOBSON: PETER V. U.S.): "There is a higher loyalty than loyalty to this country . . . an obligation, superior to that due the State;" the court also quoted favorably former Chief Justice Stone: "All our history gives confirmation to the view that liberty of conscience has a moral and social value which makes it worthy of preservation at the hands of the state . . . and it may well be questioned whether the state that preserves its life by . . . violation of the conscience . . . will not in fact ultimately lose it by the process."

Now, our students are enduring conscription for an undeclared and (it therefore appears) unconstitutional war. They are not informed by their current government or by their University's draft - liaison - agency of what their Supreme Court constitutionally regards as a citizen's "higher loyalty," "an obligation, superior to that due the State": in short, the Court recommends that they follow their own conscience and respect liberty of conscience generally (the very fount of the democratic idea). The fact that the present Defense Department and war-related industries provide the University with funds for research and with jobs (or military service) for our graduates ought not to keep a University community from declaring opposition to unconscionable "official" activities which, along with the "silent majority," could lose the country, its constitution, and its democracy. How difficult is it to believe conscientiously that mass-slaughter and -defoliation and -destruction are utter madness in so tight a spaceship as Earth 1970? If one believes this, it is his duty to announce his belief to any State which murderously, suicidally engages in it. "Emperor, you're bare!" Turn, rather, to the honest counselor and clear judge, The Supreme Law of the land urges U.S. citizens to be honest, clear, conscientious. Let's be, at our University.

Campus Comment

I Deally

To the editor:

Because of the uncertainty about the meaning of the Referendum question on Residential Colleges, I have been asked to attempt a brief explanation.

The April 10 session at Orchard Hill ran from 9:30 a.m. until 5:45 p.m., and was attended, all told, by about 200 persons, both faculty and students, a great many of whom were lively participants. Because Orchard Hill has in the past worked out its own flexible proposal, now being studied by a Faculty Senate Committee, we addressed ourselves not so much to our own problem but to that of the university at large, trying to see how specific programs or goals we had found successful, meaningful, or promising could be extended to other areas of campus.

During the session we touched upon almost every issue being discussed throughout the campus that day. This breadth was inevitable since, after all, we were talking about the installation of small colleges within the larger university. What lay behind our discussions were the original reasons for setting up Orchard Hill: the necessity of combatting the growing sense of student anonymity and impotence at a large university, the need to bring faculty and students together in a more natural and meaningful way, and the desirability of bridging the gap between social and academic activities. In short, we discussed ways of enriching and personalizing higher education and giving it a carry-over quality, a more obvious "relevance." The ultimate goal was the striving for individual self-realization within the larger society.

Our proposal to the Referendum Committee was that, recognizing the variety of student backgrounds, needs, and aims, provisions be made for the installation of more Residential Colleges throughout the campus, offering increased opportunities for student-faculty contact and as great a variety of structure as possible. Ideally such small units would allow a great deal of experimentation in the realism of course offerings, division of the school year, the number of courses per semester, independent study, student-centered majors, and the like.

We did not advocate dividing the whole university into Residential Colleges, realizing that to many students and faculty the present arrangement is compatible. We did, however, ask for greater flexibility in allowing individual sections of campus to arrive at their own arrangements. Our belief throughout was that there are more ways than one of slicing the educational bread.

Sincerely yours,
LEON BARRON
Master, Orchard Hill

Taxes

To the editor:

We have picketed, leafletted, written our congressmen, debated and marched. Now a nation-wide student strike has begun but the war in Southeast Asia and military priorities will continue. Now that the "conventional" channels of protest have all been attempted, the conscientious refusal to abet the war effort belongs to all of us, and should not be restricted merely to draft-eligibles. WARS ARE FOUGHT WITH MEN AND DOLLARS. Draft resisters refuse to fight, similarly, tax-payers should refuse to pay. The payment of the telephone tax is a form of complacent agreement with the way. Those who refuse to pay the phone tax are becoming part of a growing movement, and The Wall Street Journal estimates that there are now about 18,000 people in the U.S. refusing to pay the 10% telephone excise tax. This tax was due to be reduced to 3% in the spring of 1966 and due to be discontinued altogether in 1969. In response to a presidential request for the extension of the tax, House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Wilbur Mills said, "Vietnam and only Vietnam operations makes this bill necessary." (Congressional Record, Feb. 23, 1966). The tax was approved and it exclusively supplements the war effort.

How do you refuse? (1) Start off with a clean slate: pay off any previous unpaid balance. (2) Figure your payment by subtracting the federal excise tax from the amount totalled at the bottom of your bill. (3) With each monthly bill submit your payment along with a personal letter stating your reasons for not paying the 10% excise tax. Keep careful record of the deductions that you make; the phone company may lump refused taxes under "balance due" in your next month's bill. If so, subtract the amount once again along with an explanatory note. Retain all bill stubs and cancelled checks. After the telephone company reports to the Internal Revenue Service that the tax isn't being paid, the IRS will send you several written demands and finally a man from your local office will pay you a visit. If at this time you do not explain the situation, he will attempt to seek out a bank account or salary check from which he can deduct the unpaid amount. All of this will take anywhere from six months to three years which will give you plenty of time to consider and reconsider, co-operate or not co-operate as your conscience and determination dictate. STAND FIRM! For further information, call (617) 332-6507.

These Noble Men

To the editor:

It is rather ironic that the University-wide strike and Spring Day ran concurrently yesterday. There was considerable effort on the part of some of the organizers of U-Mass's traditional bacchanalia to cancel (postpone) the events by means of Collegian notices and WMUA announcements. However those organizers who felt that there should be a Spring Day beer bust, eventually succeeded in creating one.

When queried about how appropriate a celebration was in light of Nixon's escalation of the war and the repression that resulted in six deaths at Kent State, the Spring Day leaders were able to defend their decision eloquently, with the following compelling and cogent rationale.

"I have a lot of money invested in this thing and I can't afford to lose it. Besides we spent a great deal of time planning this event."

We are all aware of course that the beer which had been bought in quantity would have spoiled or lost its potency if it aged for a few days. Because of this, these noble men might well have incurred an unbearable financial loss.

They might have, but they probably wouldn't have. It is not difficult to comprehend and despise the interdependence of business and the instruments of repression in American society, when economic interest and a poor sense of priorities permeates the allegedly idealistic University community.

Seize The Time

Within a week President Nixon resumed bombing of North Vietnam, invaded Cambodia and stepped up repression at home by arresting Baltimore Black Panthers. Surely this is more than a coincidence. Governor Reagan has stated that if a blood bath is necessary to end student disorders, he welcomes it. Nixon, Agnew, Reagan et. al. are girding themselves for a battle: the first showdown between the death culture and the life culture.

The fascist state is upon us. Bobby Seale has been chained and gagged in a Chicago courtroom, Fred Hampton was murdered in his bed, the McClellan camps have been renovated (all it takes is a presidential order), Bobby Seale is being held for conspiracy to commit a murder that occurred while he was on the other side of the country, lawyers are arrested (Weinglass and Kuntsler), bombings occur and bodies disappear (Rap Brown).

And now five white students have been shot down at Kent State because they attended a rally. Being white didn't help them: being female was no protection (is it ever?). Being unarmed and non-violent was no protection. Our elected leaders make no apologies; their answer to judicial murder is unjudicial murder. Spiro Agnew (the old Nixon) says that the events at Kent State justify his attacks on violent demonstrations and revolutionary politics. They masqueraded in respectability; the big lie camoflage their crimes in Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, Berkeley, Kent, New Haven, Chicago, Orangeburg and Baltimore.

The Panthers have said "Seize the Time" meaning that we volunteers of America should organize our communities before the repression came down. There is no time left to seize. Nixon has chosen the hour, but our spirit is greater than his technology.

STRIKE!

The Strike Committee at the University of Massachusetts has been centering most of its energies on two main areas. First, we are striking to "shut down the University, to stop business as usual, in order to open it up to the community." Secondly, we are setting up workshops all over campus. The purpose of the workshops is to bring people together to discuss and learn together about all of the ramifications of the three demands. Beginning on Wednesday, the workshops will give people the opportunity to ask questions about any of the demands they don't understand, and also give people an opportunity to plan future actions dealing with the demands.

The hope is that the workshops WILL NOT be a one day thing, but WILL evolve into Action Labs where people can continue meeting, discussing, EDUCATING, and then ACTING.

All Worksho p leaders are urged to use the time on Wednesday to establish communication lines with people who attend their workshops, and to attend a meeting on Wednesday night at 7:00 p.m. in the Council Chambers (Student Union) to discuss tactics for turning the workshops into Action groups.

Also, anyone who would like to set up a workshop on some area not covered by those below should see Terry Tirrell in the Strike Headquarters (S.U.) on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday.

Emergency Shutdown

There is existent in this country a political emergency which demands the immediate attention of the nation's University communities. Racism and the tacit approval of the American people regarding the racist policies of its government are based on a lack of straightforward information and a plethora of misinformation. The resolution of this dilemma in American society can be found only in education; and the universities, as centers of education, must act. It is the responsibility of the academic community to focus its full attention on the policies of the Nixon Administration, both domestically and abroad; policies which are, at best, implicitly racist.

Extraordinary situations do require extraordinary measures. The closing of regularly scheduled classes in the various disciplines is not a substantive statement, but rather, it is a means necessitated by the gravity and urgency of the strike issues.

The strike is not an attempt to denigrate the University as an institution or as a concept nor is it a statement of disdain for the value of the ordinarily scheduled classes. It is a viable and highly justifiable attempt to utilize the facilities of the University as an educational institution. The University must confront and effectively respond to the need for education in dealing with the completely (morally, legally, and intellectually) unacceptable policies of the present Washington Administration. Workshops (i.e. discussion oriented classes in which INTERESTED students participate) are being chaired by faculty members. They bring with them from their particular disciplines specialized knowledge and highly developed ideas on the topics they have chosen. The University offers vast resource s which can be tapped for an increase in political awareness of all members of the academic community. There is no intention of ending "business as usual" and then sitting back. On the contrary, there will be a consolidation of the efforts of the University community in a close scrutiny of this urgent political situation.

E. F. DONNELLY

Dinosaur

The dinosaur of Amerika has just stepped into Cambodia. It has thrown 18 more Black Panthers in prison in Baltimore, and has killed 4 students at Kent State University.

I find it hard to understand how anyone can be indifferent in the face of this. At the university, I think, most people would say they are "against" the war and "concerned" about injustice, BUT!!!: "You can't fight city hall, there's nothing you can do about it, any more opposition invites repression, it might not work, after you stop imperialism and racism what will you replace it with. Besides who wants to hassle on Spring Day." Bullshit.

Woodstock Nation is in labor. There are people trying to build a world in which it will be meaningless to set aside only certain days to celebrate spring and where everyone will eat at least as well as astronauts. It is happening now, and this nationwide strike is part of it. There is no way to be "for" the strike except by supporting it through actions which are for each person to determine for himself.

But people are still cynical. The strike sounds like it will be as ineffective as the moratorium protests and is just the same old quixotic-we-shall-overcome business that never works and just frustrates everyone. It doesn't have to be.

As I see it, the purpose of the strike is not to convince Nixon to become sane, but rather to retake a part of this Nation that has somehow gotten under the control of terrified-blue meanie-dinosaurs. We are not competing with Nixon for the silent majority's approval. We are striking to use the university. There exists a great potential at the university for people to educate themselves about things like the wars that Amerika is fighting, racism, sexual hysteria, political organ-verkity for three main reasons now: Students don't want to live with their parents, men don't want to be drafted, and women don't know what to do with themselves until they get married. This is absurd. People should learn about their lives and about the world they live in.

The university can also be used as a vehicle to reach the silent majority which is becoming ripe for facism. They are accepting more and more absurd contradictions and are being silenced by bigger and bigger lies. We should use the university to expose the silent majority to political realities and to themselves.

Nixon is trying to intimidate us. He is trying to stifle all dissent. That is why we must strike and remain on strike until we build a new country. You still think it might not work. Maybe not. But you are either for this or against it. It is impossible to do nothing.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY - 1500 students met in Hayden Hall Monday night and voted to support the demands. They also decided to set up obstructive picket lines Tuesday morning at 8 a.m. to stop exams which begin this week. A mass meeting was planned for Tuesday at noon.

BOSTON COLLEGE - The Law School voted Monday to go out on strike. The rest of the college is already out on strike over a tuition increase.

A rally has been scheduled for Tuesday noon to protest the continued presence of ROTC on campus and this may expand into a strike call around the demands.

NORTHEASTERN - 900 students attended an open student Council meeting at which the Council voted by 44 to 3 to support the demands. Later, 1400 jammed Alumni Auditorium to organize workshops that would plan various aspects of the strike.

LOWELL STATE COLLEGE - A few hundred students met Monday afternoon and decided to strike around the three demands. They'll work to expand the strike on Tuesday.

BOSTON MUSEUM SCHOOL - Students decided Monday to strike but to keep the school open so that students from all over the city can come to make posters in support of the strike.

HARVARD - 5000 students met on Monday night and voted to strike around the 3 demands. The first two were voted overwhelmingly without debate. The demand that the university immediately terminate ROTC, defense, and counter-insurgency research met with some debate, but after it was pointed out that it had been student actions against ROTC and related institutions which had built the student movement to the point where it could call a national strike in the first place, the demand was approved 1800 to 900.

At the end of the meeting a motion was passed that fifty per cent of the Harvard Strike Steering committee be women. After that, the meeting broke up and more than 500 people marched on ROTC headquarters. After some talk about whether to burn it down or not, it was decided that strategically it was too early in the strike, and sufficient support for this kind of action had not yet been built at Harvard.

BRANDEIS - Students voted 1100 to 300 on Monday night to begin a strike Tuesday in support of the 3 demands.

MIT - Several thousand students filled three halls Monday afternoon at a meeting which voted to strike for the three demands. Rosa Luxemburg SDS and NAC then held a meeting to plan community actions and leafletting.

UMASS AMHERST - 3000 students met and decided to strike around the three demands. Specifically included in the demand about defense ties is abolition of ROTC and project Themis, an underwater warfare study.

AROUND THE COUNTRY

U. OF RHODE ISLAND - A ROTC building at the U. of Rhode Island was firebombed Monday and several cars and trucks were set on fire. Over 1000 students have promised a boycott of classes until at least Wednesday.

MARYLAND - Thousands of students at the University of Maryland moved onto a major highway Monday morning to block traffic moving into Washington. They were later dispersed by police using tear gas and on Monday night the National Guard moved into the campus.

SAN FRANCISCO - 1500 people stormed into City Hall, Monday night, to demand that the city support a move to impeach Nixon. Tactical police were called in to disperse the demonstrators but 100 were allowed to stay in the meeting.

BERKELEY - An army truck was burned during the day on Monday, and a rally drew 4000 students. A strike is to begin there Tuesday.

CLEVELAND - 75 students took over the ROTC building at Case Western Reserve Univ. on Monday. They plan to stay until a faculty meeting on Tuesday, and have called for a general meeting of the University to discuss the strike.

No Distortion!

The people have a right to know the TRUTH, but the press and "our" government have systematically distorted and suppressed THE TRUTH about the BLACK PANTHER PARTY. You are told to see it as - vicious - violent - a threat - racist, which in truth is the nature of the government. Here is THE TRUTH - read and be FREE.

The truth is that the primary Panther goal is "institutions which serve the needs of the people." The poor people - blacks, whites, Mexican-Americans - to whom repression is a reality, who, like the Panthers, are systematically denied the profits of a capitalistic state, are forced to live in substandard houses, are denied food for their children, are unable to receive proper medical care because they have no money, are denied their rights under the law and are subjected to continual harassment by the police.

YOU are a part of these people. Whatever happens to the Panthers happens to the oppressed peoples and happens to you. To support the government, to stand behind the "law" enforcers is to sanction the annilihation of man.

"Black Racism"

Despite the myth of "Black Racism" sedulously nutured by the press, Black Panther leaders have, each in their own way, always emphasized the relation of class and race, of economics and culture, of the need for a common struggle in which Blacks and Whites would participate as allies.

Huey P. Newton expressed this understanding by saying that of course the struggle is a class struggle but in the United States inevitably class wears the mask of race. In an early pamphlet, "Huey P. Newton Talks To The Movement", he discusses at some length black and white relationships. He said:

"We don't suffer in the hangup of skin color. We don't hate white people; we hate the oppressor. And if the oppressor happens to be white then we hate him. When he stops oppressing us then we stop hating him. And right now in America you have the slave-master being a white group. We are pushing him out of office through REVOLUTION IN THIS COUNTRY. I think the responsibility of the white revolutionary will be to aid us in this country. I think when we are attacked by the police or by the military then it will be up to the white mother country radicals to attack the murderers and to respond as we respond, to follo w our program . . ."

Blacks and Whites Together

One of the demands of the nationwide student strike is an end to the repression of political dissidents. It is essential that we understand this not only to mean an end to the repression of Panthers or freeing Bobby Seale; but also, we must change the institutions and judicial and legislative systems which are perpetuating these racist injustices. As long as one man is oppressed, then we are all oppressed.

Yesterday, five students at Kent State and two at the University of Pennsylvania were shot to death. It is apparent that we are entering a new stage in our struggle. White students have made the decision to join with Black, Vietnamese, and other oppressed people. Now, we too stand to be shot down and so the American people must make their decision - will we join the struggle or stand by and allow the murder and oppression of people both in and outside of America to continue.

NPC Announces 2,000 Sign Petitions

More than two thousand signatures had been obtained by mid-morning Tuesday on petitions protesting the American invasion of Cambodia according to the New Politics Coalition. The NPC, along with the Valley Peace Center and the UMass Faculty Group on Peace and War, will send the petitions collected at the Student Union to Senators Kennedy and Brooke and Representative Philbin. Philbin is the second ranking member of the House Armed Service Committee. The petition states that if "the immediate and unilateral withdrawal of all United States forces from Southeast Asia" is not implemented, Philbin will be "actively" opposed in his Democratic primary election.

Telegrams, according to the NPC, are also being sent to all members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, urging the repeal of the Tonkin resolution.

By 4 p.m., the NPC had run out of petitions, getting an estimated 3000-4000 signatures.

Impeach Nixon Meeting Tonite

As a result of the recent invasion of Cambodia, an ad-hoc committee of students at the University of Massachusetts has organized a movement for the impeachment of President Richard Nixon. The case for impeachment centers around Nixon's commitment of American ground troops to invade Cambodia without the consent of Congress, and for his willful violation of the 1954 Geneva Accords.

The committee will hold an organizational meeting tonight at 6 p.m. in the New Hatch, S.U. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss organization and tactics.

Oomph Missing from Spring Day

A small gathering of 350 UMass persons celebrated "Spring Day" today at the south end of Alumni Stadium. This estimate was the result of an observation of the affair yesterday at 2:15 p.m.

Most of the people who attended confined themselves to small groupings, usually around a blanket or a motor vehicle. Some were on their feet; two footballs were seen being tossed around and there was a small scattering of frisbees in the air.

The atmosphere was not one of gaiety, nor one of relaxed nonchalance. A disturbed feeling prevaded the atmosphere as the crowd, representing 1.8% of U-Mass' student population, found it hard to divorce themselves from thoughts of the anti-war strike, which was ever-present on the campus.

A small band added little excitement to the picture. The ride back to the center of campus witnessed students lounging about on the lawns outside of Southwest; some were playing softball. Back in the vicinity of the Student Union, the only thing "Spring Day" brought to people's minds was an activity they took part in a year ago, when it meant something.

Strike Provokes Student Thought

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Assistant News Editor

A low flying single engine Piper Cub bombed the University last night with three inch square announcements proclaiming Tuesday May 5, 1970 "Spring Day" . . . but there were more pressing matters in the air.

As the leaflets fluttered to the ground, littering the campus, thousands of UMass students were getting together searching their souls, looking for answers to what many consider "genuine crisis" for each individual in this nation.

Thousands did respond last night to dormitory meetings and gatherings in the Student Union. Many for the first time seriously considered the depth of the problems facing us today.

"You can get the feeling that we are running out of time," said Dan Martin at a dorm meeting.

That particular dorm meeting was enveloped in a very serious atmosphere. People learned about what happened at New Haven; the repressive legislation pending in Congress; the vague plans for action at the University.

A number of students stood at the entrance to all the major buildings on campus. The Strike Committee called them "picketers." They might be better named "The Passive Conscience."

Just about half of the people passing by stopped, at least briefly, to speak with the students. Pretty girls pleaded with the hurrying students and faculty members with great success. The "picketers" were earnest. They were painfully convincing to many of the students who had not committed themselves to any strike day activities.

"Do you care about what happens to the world?" questioned one of the students on the picket line.

"The way the world is going, it won't make much difference," replied the young faculty member hurrying into the building.

One student, after some discussion, added, somewhat dejectedly, that his parents were opposed to the strike and would cut his tuition money if he participated.

The faculty senate passed a middle of the road motion yesterday afternoon. The meeting hall was crowded. The students were awkwardly stubborn; those who didn't want to make enough room for the Faculty Senate to meet were finally shamed into making room.

After the meeting was over the crowd dispersed. The day had been full of crowds. The Student Union was continuously mobbed. The amount of discussion and being together that any group can stand seems to be limited.

If the rally last night had been built around music, rather than rhetoric, one could have unwound. As it was people were for the most part mentally depleted. A group, 10,000 people strong, after the strain of yesterday, could under the right circumstances become an ugly thing.

The rally last night was the largest gathering that any cause at UMass had ever attracted, outside of the football stadium.

The rhetoric of the Black Panther speaker, almost blew the crowd apart. There were people circulating throughout the crowd calling for a march downtown for an alleged rock throwing party.

The fear of violence was met with the utter frustration of knowing that what the two students from Kent State were saying was inexplicably true.

The crowd dispersed quickly, after the Kent State students finished and the list of directions about the elections to the Strike Steering Committee was read.

The rains came when when the rain was needed. What UMass needed was a thunderstorm.

At the moment the University has a large number of people who are strongly against the foreign and domestic policies of the present administration. The University is shrugging its role as passive servant to the nation. The nation needs activists. The nation needs a soul.

What was accomplished during the first day of Strike at the University of Massachusetts is a beginning.

The Strike Yesterday at UMass

All over campus spray painted fists symbolize the strike. Signs and posters are tacked up inside and outside buildings, off campus as well as on. As the first day of the strike dawned, strikers positioned themselves outside the academic building, with no intentions of physically barring non-strikers from going to classes. As the day progressed, this is the way the situation looked.

Dickinson Hall

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

Officers of both the Army and the Air Force met about 45 students on strike yesterday morning at both the front and rear entrances of the ROTC building.

During the night the front door of Dickinson Hall had been smashed and the word strike had been painted on the side building. The strikers hung a sign on the front entrance calling for non-violence and discouraged those who advocated the destruction of the building.

ROTC classes were cancelled for the day and the building was quiet on the inside. When asked whether cadets would be punished for participating in the strike and not going to class, Captain Kleb of Army ROTC responded saying, "No one will be punished for not going to class." He also pointed out that the ROTC department is bound internally by the University and that University policies must be adhered to by the ROTC personnel.

Answering a question about his moral obligation, Air Force Captain Robinson said, "If I believed that my role as a military man was contrary to my conviction, I would resign my commission."

Col. Friedman in answer to students' questions said, "Older people are not willing to give up what they've lived for." When asked about the objectives of the Vietnam war, he replied that as in any war the objective is to "Win." However, he added, "There is a special definition of 'winning' in this (Vietnam) war.

Students coming to class were told by officers that they should get involved in what was taking place since according to one officer they would learn more than by participating in any class that day.

Whitmore

Whitmore Administration Building was very quiet yesterday, the activities inside of which were described by one of the secretaries as "usual, normal." The only students who ventured into Whitmore were those who had specific business there to attend to. Strikers, who concentrated their efforts on class room buildings, steered clear of the administration building.

Morrill, Hasbrouck

Groups of picketers numbering about 50 greeted those who attended classes yesterday in the two largest science buildings, Morrill and Hasbrouk Lab. Only a few students entered the buildings, most of them saying that they had an exam or a compulsory class but that they did support the strike.

At times lively dialogue did develop between the strikers and those who were opposed to the strike. Though the discussions sometimes became rather heated, there was no violence and no one was prevented from entering.

By three o'clock in the afternoon the crowd had dwindled to about ten or twelve who sat enjoying the sun and the music from the singers at the pond. One striker said that he'd spent a "very educational" day arguing the Strike's validity and that he was looking forward to the chance to go into the streets and "bring it to the people."

Actual picketing ended about three-thirty when the strikers left their posts to attend the Faculty-Senate meeting.

Bartlett, Machmer

Many Classes were held in Herter, Bartlett, and Machmer halls, although attendance in many of these classes was low, Goodell library reported that activity was down about 75%.

Pickets in front of buildings asked non-striking students why they weren't striking and tried to hold discussions with them. The non-striking students generally expressed the feelings that the strike would be ineffective.

A senior in the library, when asked about his feelings on the strike, stated, "the demands are unrealistic." He said that he didn't like the war "but withdrawal would hurt our image." To let Seale go, he went on, defeats justice. Ending ROTC would leave our country defenseless." "There does exist communist aggression," he stated. "Some speak of influence as if they were the ones who were going to speak to Nixon."

Several maintenance men said they were behind the students, but were praying for non-violence. "After all, you can't argue with the kids when they are right. This is a rich man's war."

Many students opposed to the strike said that it was worthless. One girl in Herter Hall said "It doesn't make any difference. If I stopped going to classes, it wouldn't change anything." One teacher said she would leave it up to her students; if they wanted to strike, she'd cancel classes.

Some students and faculty would not reply to picketers' questions concerning the strike.

By mid-afternoon, picket lines were falling off although there were still some students at the entrance to most buildings.

The director of the language lab at Bartlett, where up to 75 students at a time were picketing, said that attendance in the morning was low, but "that is not indicative of the strike" since not many people show up at the lab in the morning anyway.

Boyden

The situation at Boyden Physical Education Building yesterday could best be described as "business as usual" but at a much slower rate than normal. Strikers and picket lines were present throughout the morning but dwindled to nothing by early afternoon. But on the other hand, some classes were called off and at others attendance was considerably less than usual.

By 9:15 this morning approximately 50 students had formed picket groups in front of the three main entrances to Boyden. Many were carrying "Strike" placards. One picketer stated that as of that time no students to his knowledge had attempted to cross the lines, only faculty and staff. He reported no confrontations and was optimistic that "everything is running well so far." He also indicated no attempts would be made to physically stop those students from going to class who wanted to.

Inside there was some confusion as students walked through the halls attempting to find out whether or not their classes were to meet. There was activity in the weight room and the gymnasium. One instructor showed a film to 20 students and told the DAILY COLLEGIAN, "I had full attendance. These are good kids."

Elsewhere a few picketers also milled in the halls and occasionally stopped in someone's office to argue their points.

Dean of Physical Education David Bischoff stated that until official word came down from Whitmore or the faculty senate activities would be conducted as usual. As his secretary stated, "we are paid to teach and will continue to do so."

By 2:15 yesterday afternoon the picketers had all but vanished from the building. A few signs and placards had been left behind and six students continued their vigil along the sidewalk. Two small labs and one lecture of a dozen students were in progress.

The tennis courts were in full use and play continued throughout the hot afternoon as on so many spring days.

Ballet Theater To Be Celebrity Series Last Program

The American Ballet Theatre Players will appear at the Bowker Auditorium tonight and tomorrow at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the Fine Arts Council Concert Association. The concerts are the final events of this season's Celebrity Series.

The American Ballet Theatre Players grew out of a concert group of dancers from the American Ballet Theatre that was formed to fill the need in this country for a small classical ballet company to perform in communities where a large group could not. Since its founding in 1969, the group performed across the United States and in Venezuela, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The company of twelve exciting young dancers will perform two entirely different programs during the visit to the University. The repertory will include many classical pas de deux as well as two brand new workds which will be given premiere performances. Both new works were choreographed by dancers of the American Ballet Theatre Players, Keith Lee and Robert Gladstein.

In addition to the two evening performances, the American Ballet Theatre Players will participate in an informal coffee hour with students, faculty, staff and dance enthusiasts in the University Art Gallery in Herter Hall on Thursday, May 7 from 2 to 3 p.m. Members of the players will be joined by Miss Lucia Chase, co-director of The American Ballet Theatre. The coffee hour is open to all interested persons.

Grand Jury Indicts Chevron Oil

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)— A federal grand jury indicted Chevron Oil Co. yesterday on charges of willfully violating government regulations which resulted in a massive oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico earlier this year.

The 900 separate offenses alleged in the indictment - announced jointly in Washington and New Orleans - could result in fines totaling $1.8 million if the firm is convicted on all counts.

U.S. Atty. Gerald Gallinghouse said in New Orleans that he hoped to try the cases within six months. He said an investigation of another oil company operating in the Gulf of Mexico would begin next Tuesday, and added that still other firms will be investigated in the future. Gallinghouse declined to name any of the firms.

The indictments were the first brought under the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act of 1953, which provides a maximum $2,000 fine for each day of each violation.

The grand jury said Chevron knowingly and willfully failed to install and maintain storm chokes or similar subsurface devices on 90 oil wells in the gulf off the Louisiana coast.

Gallinghouse said the storm choke regulation also has been a state requirement since 1946, but said to his knowledge there had never been a prosecution for a state violation.

In Washington, Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel said his department would "continue to prosecute as vigorously as possible" those who pollute the Gulf of Mexico in offshore drilling operations.

Astrological Forecast

by Sydney Omarr
One of the world's most renowned psychiatrists — DR. CARL JUNG — made an extensive study of astrology. He found that knowledge of a patient's horoscope was an invaluable aid in diagnosis. Many Jungian psychiatrists today follow in his footsteps. Freudians, however, are prone to hotly dispute the value of this astrological technique.

Two Kent Students Give Own Account

DENISE MAGNELL
Monday Issue Editor

Two students from Kent State University who were present at that school's recent demonstrations visited the Collegian office yesterday to give a first-hand account of the incidents that occurred there over the weekend.

FRIDAY:
The first of the demonstrations was a noon rally with student speakers from Ohio State. The crowd spread to downtown Kent where the city sheriffs used tear gas for the first time on students throwing bricks at store windows. After the students were forced onto campus property, the sheriffs left the area.

SATURDAY:
Thousands milled tensely around the campus all day. One of Kent's ROTC buildings was burned by demonstrators that night.

Daniel Gardner, one of the students interviewed, contends, "If anything warranted any shooting, it was Saturday night and there was none."

SUNDAY:
The atmosphere was calm during the daytime. An attempt to stage a march was made that night, but halted as National Guardsmen applied tear gas to the crowd and marched the students back to their dormitories.

MONDAY:
Classes were scheduled as usual, but bomb scares occurred in the Education buildings. A rally was arranged for noon with faculty speakers and students were hesitant in grouping. The National Guardsmen warned the crowd of approximately 5000 (almost 1000 sitting in the center of the campus commons with the rest spread over the surrounding hills) to disperse.

The other visitor from Kent, Tom Nicodemus, denies newspaper reports of Guardsmen being surrounded by students. He reports the crowds were again tear gassed and marched down on by the troops and in response the students threw empty tear gas cans and rocks.

"Troops that moved the kids up the hills and did the actual firing numbered about 40 or 50," Tom added.

Both students agreed there were several hundred troops total. Those shooting were observed to fire into the air, towards the ground, and waist high.

At this point, students became aware that people had been shot and as Gardner put it, "The Guardsmen, the students, nobody knew what was going on."

The troops started to back away and for about fifteen more minutes students wandered around the commons. Ambulances and a convoy of about 14 police cars came to clear the area. People were ordered off the streets by 3 p.m. and students were starting to be bussed out of the university soon after.

Reflecting on the shooting incidents, both students insist they recollect no command given to shoot and no snipers. "I could almost bet my life there wasn't a sniper," said Dan Gardner.

However, both tried to understand the position of the Guardsmen.

"Most of them were only about our age, 21 or 22. I try to picture myself in their place," added Gardner.

Nicodemus concluded, "Students did start to riot, but the troops' actions were totally uncalled for. I think now we have to show some form of action to express our concern. When they re-open the school next week, there 'll be more bomb scares and more threats against ROTC. People aren't going to forget fast."

Del Corso: 'Self—Survival'

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Adj. Gen. S.T. Del Corso said yesterday he had no evidence to support his earlier assertion that a sniper fired at National Guards men before the troops shot and killed four demonstrators at Kent State University.

But he called the shootings "a self-survival incident" motivated by the individual Guardsmen, members of a force of some 100 troops who had been pelted by rocks and concrete chunks thrown by demonstrators.

Del Corso had said Monday that a rooftop sniper had fired on the troops. Guard officials said the sniper had been spotted by a police helicopter, but a state highway patrol official yesterday said no such report had been logged.

The adjutant general said yesterday: "No one gave an order to fire." He said "32 to 36 rounds" were fired and that a cease fire order was given seconds after the firing began.

Del Corso said he had heard reports that a rooftop sniper had fired on the Guardsmen, but that he had no evidence.

Brig. Gen. Robert H. Canterbury an assistant adjutant general, told newsmen yesterday that each of the Guardsmen had been bruised by thrown objects and said, "I felt I could have been killed out there."

Canterbury said there had been no general announcement telling students that the Guard rifles were loaded, but that it was standard procedure for Ohio Guardsmen to carry loaded weapons at the scene of a disturbance. He said the Guard felt it "generally is not a good practice" to fire warning shots.

Canterbury said demonstrators had closed to within 10 or 12 feet of Guardsmen when the shooting began. Asked if troops could not have used bayonets to defend themselves, Canterbury said, "They could have been overrun."

FBI and Guard investigators clamped tight security restrictions over the Kent campus as they began piecing together events which led to the deaths of the four students and the wounding of 10 others, three of whom remained in critical condition.

The small, grassy valley where the shootings took place was cordoned off.

FBI investigators, working from an Air Force ROTC headquarters moved about without comment. An FBI spokesman in Cleveland would say only that there were "sufficient numbers of agents on the campus to determine if there had been a violation of federal law."

A National Guard lieutenant who refused to identify himself was asked why his troops would not answer questions about the shootings.

"I'm giving them a direct order not to talk," he said.

Meanwhile, the bodies of the dead were released to their parents after an autopsy.

They were:

Miss Sandy Lee Scheuer, 20 of Youngstown, Ohio; Jeffrey G. Miller, 20 of Plainview, N.Y.: William K. Schroeder, 19, of Lorain, Ohio, and Miss Allison Krause, 19, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

BU, Harvard Law Strike

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)- The majority of students at Harvard and Boston University Law School voted yesterday to strike for the remainder of the academic year.

Egypt Set for Escalation

(AP) - Egyptian Vice-President Anwar Sadat declared yesterday that Egypt is braced for an escalation of the Middle East conflict involving round the clock Israeli air raids against civilian and military targets.

Sadat's statement came as a military spokesman in Cairo claimed that an Egyptian commando force crossed the Suez Canal early yesterday and carried out a two hour assault against Israeli positions on the northern coast of Sinai.

In an interview with the editor of Beirut's pro Egyptian news paper, Al Moharrer, Sadat suggested that the coming month may see major military developments in the area.

Department Statements Concerning Strike

ANTHROPOLOGY DEPT - Chairman Woodward has established the policy of leaving such issues up tot to the decision of each individual professor. Several of the professors of the department have announced that they will hold their classes, however, class discussions will focus on the Indochina situation and the students strikes throughout the country.

ENGLISH DEPT - Tomorrow in Thompson 104, the department is planning a faculty meeting to discuss their position on their strike policy. Until then however, strike policy will be an individual policy among the professors.

PHILOSOPHY DEPT - Chairman of the department has been away from campus for some time and has just recently returned. Department policy is up in the air at this moment. Presumably, policy is up to each professor.

GOVERNMENT DEPT - A canvass of the faculty seems to indicate that most are simpathetic with the strike . The department itselfhas not established a positive policy. Chairman of the department, Professor Havard said that the department would probably abide by the faculty senate that meets this afternoon.

HISTORY DEPT - Faculty vote: 19-11-3 - No student will be penalized for support of present strike. A lot of debate.

* * * * *

In a special department meeting yesterday, the Department voted unanimously that:

The faculty of the Department of Sociology adopts a non-punitive position with regard to the academic behavior of striking students. Non-punitiveness is here defined as suspending the normal academic requirements for completion of course work. Such suspension is a matter of definition by the individual instructor but may, for example, take the form of:

Giving non-penalty make-up finals and accepting papers after stated deadlines but before the end of the next regular semester in which the student is enrolled;

At student request, submitting final grades based on work to date; and/or

Asking the registrar to accept P-F as a grade across the board, while allowing students who wish it the option of normal grading.

Interested parties are reminded that some of the provisions of the above require the suspension of University Regulations; in the absence of such suspension, more limited options may be made necessary.

Policy for Sociology 101

The following guidelines are offered to students who are considering participation in the strike:

1. Classes. Individual discretion will govern class attendance as in the past. Some sections may be cancelled; students should attend in the absence of specific instructions to the contrary.

2. Term Papers. Should be handed in. In lieu of a term paper, section leaders will accept a signed statement indicating participation in the strike.

3. Final Examination. Will be given. Students may write and sign a statement indicating participation in the strike ON THE BLUE BOOK at the exam and submit it in lieu of answers to the questions.

NOTE: Two signed statements are required, one for the paper and one at the exam; one cannot be used for both.

Students who submit statements will be graded on the basis of work actually received; if neither statements nor work is submitted, the announced policies apply and omission of paper or exam will result in failure.

EDITORIAL ON SPORTS . . .

What is the relevance of sports to the anti-Asian War, anti-American racism and anti-ROTC strike that got under way at the University of Massachusetts on yesterday? The answer from this desk is that sports is not relevant "at this time".

On a routine day-to-day basis, sports, and the watching, participating, reading and reporting of such, serves the purpose of taking one's mind away from the pressing issues and problems that beset him in his particular role in society. That's good. People often need something consistent and optimistic to look to for a break from the routine. And sports, the world of sports, is usually pretty consistent and often times optimistic.

However, the events of the past couple of days have broken people on this campus away from their usual routime. One thing is central in most everyone's mind. The strike. The questions that the strike raises in the inner thoughts and outer expressions of people leave no place for sports, nor the discussion thereof.

"At this time", sports just doesn't have meaning, and, with this in mind, this section of the paper and its editor have decided to limit UMass sports coverage to brief descriptions of events just past and notices of events scheduled in the future. Until that time comes when some semblance of a return to routine is recognizable, the policy for this sports page will remain as such.

How to Impeach Public Officials

By BRIAN WHITE

The courts have ruled impeachment to be the only way to remove officials subject to impeachment and legislative removal, including the President. No sort of private action against such officials has yet been successful, although ten cases of impeachment have actually been prosecuted.

Some parts of the U.S. Constitution regarding impeachment:

"The President, Vice President, and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, and other High Crimes and Misdemeanors." (Article II, Section 4.)

("Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid or Comfort." Article III, Section 3.)

"The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments . . . When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present." (Article I, Section 3.)

"In case of the Removal of the President from Office . . . the Same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of Removal, Resignation, or Death of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President . . ." (Article II, Section 1.)

(The law currently provides that the heads of executive departments, in order of their coming to office, will succeed to the Presidency. Right now, McCormick is first in line to succeed.)

The only time impeachment proceedings have been initiated against a President was a century ago, in the case of the man who succeeded Abraham Lincoln.

In 1868 Congress was seeking some way to remove President Andrew Johnson from office; he stood in the way of Radical Reconstruction, since he followed the generous policies Lincoln had drawn up before his assassination. Finally Congress passed a law Johnson was sure to violate, and acted against him when he did violate this law.

As the necessary first step to impeachment, two-thirds of the House recommended charges be brought. When impeachment proceedings were conducted in the Senate, however, the vote came one vote short of a two-thirds majority, and in the end, a total of thirtee . charges were dropped.

'Thinking Majority' Plans Nixon-Agnew Impeachment

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Professor Joseph Hernon of the UMass History Dept. last night announced plans for national organization to be called "The Thinking Majority for the Impeachment of Nixon and Agnew." According to Hernon the aim of the group is to spread the idea of impeachment to as many Congressmen and college campuses as possible across the nation.

A press conference is to be called by Hernon and his organization Friday to make public further details.

Hernon announced his plan while meeting with 25 students in the Student Union New Hatch. The Nixon-Agnew impeachment plans follow an earlier resolution made by Hernon at an Amherst College rally calling for faculty, students and citizens of the five college area to submit signed statements to Rep. Silvio Conte (R) initiating such procedures.

The UMass faculty member told the DAILY COLLEGIAN that he notified Conte's office of the latest impeachment move yesterday morning but was only able to speak with an administrative assistant. The assistant had no comment to make at that time.

The UMass faculty member stated that thus far there have been collected an estimated 1000 signatures on impeacement statements. He stated that aside from the original five college involved he has only heard from Williams and Suffolk colleges. One student present at the meeting stated that Marlboro College of Vermont has also called for impeacement proceedings to begin.

How successful this latest anti-Nixon move will become depends on "how serious the crisis gets," according to Hernon. He added that an effective way with dramatizing impeachment efforts might be to send an area delegation of faculty and students down to Washington next week with as many as 10,000 signature on the statement and present them to Congressman Conte of Massachusetts and other legislatures. If Conte or others would not meet with the delegation, Hernon said that a press conference might be called to bring attention to a lack of Congressional concern.

Hernon also pointed out to the students that an important part of the impeachment plans calls for "actively working against any Congressman (such as Conte) who does not support the impeachment charges."

The whole issue of impeachment proceedings raises "fantastic questions" according to Hernon. As proof he pointed to how "nebulous' the Riot Act of 1968 is which has become the basis of Hernon's impeachment charges against Vice President Agnew.

When asked by one student whether the impeachment move was aimed at just Nixon's latest foreign policy move or a general dissatisfaction with his whole administration, Hernon stated that the impeachment calls specifically for "perjury (or violation) against his constitutional duties in regard to the Cambodian invasion" and "violation of international law."

Another student present at the meeting expressed his hope that the impeachment move might "consolidate" anti-war efforts and "provide one central issue to concentrate on instead of going off in several different directions." He continued that the move will bring public attention to Nixon and Agnew as "criminals" and will also "lessen their chances of re-election."

Hernon's group is collecting money to pay for an ad in the New York Times to advertise the campaign, and announced yesterday that anyone wishing to help pay for the ad should contact Paul Jenkins in the English Department before Friday afternoon.

U Wisconsin Denies Bombing at Madison

By HASTINGS C. LUM
Staff Reporter

The Strike Committee at the University of Wisconsin at Madison last night denied reports that a hijacked army plane had bombed several areas of that city. However, Committee spokesmen did say that the school was "completely shut down for ann intensive purposes."

They said that two days of sporadic violence and the 1100 National Guardsmen on campus gassing "any large group of people they see," had left the campus "in a complete state of tense confusion." They said that this confusion had made it virtually impossible to attend classes even though the school was still open.

Five buildings on campus were fire bombed, Committee members said, and 58 arrests had been made on campus as of 9:30 last night.

More than 50 persons have been injured over the past two days, 23 of them Guardsmen and police.

The Major of Madison is reported to be considering imposing a curfew on Madison, but Committee spokesmen say this would only cause "all hell to break out."

On The Second Day . . .

By RICHARD C. HANSON

Six rhododendron bushes will grow and flower near the UMass campus pond for many years to come; sign of grief of people for people, the victims of man.

Four of these symbolize and memorialize the four young students slain one Spring day at Kent State, deep within the heartland of America; Kent, Ohio. One shrub was representing all those who have died in the violent turmoil of Indochina. The sixth was an offering to all people who have suffered under man's inhumanity to his fellow man.

"Life, vitality and particularly trust." Simple words to express a complex emotion gripping the people standing close together on a cold, blustery day.

People embraced each other. Even those they didn't know. It seems that man so often creates situations that leave little choice and even less understanding. This is our situation today. There was little else one could do or say after embracing your fellow man.

"Let us depart with peace, love and joy."

If only we could.

The crowds last night sat for two hours, huddling under blankets, listening to the speakers and the "important announcements" by Sidney Finehirsh, the moderator (in more than one way).

"Right On!" shouted many when rumors of serious bombings and destruction in Madison, Wisconsin were read.

Finehirsh hesitated when he began to read the report which had allegedly been received over the telephone from informed sources in Madison. He was challenged to read the whole announcement. He did.

The crowd near the platform continued to shout "Right on!" Finehirsh reacted:

"Anyone who says 'Right On!' to this is fuckin' crazy!" screamed Finehirsh. He knew the power of a rumor on a group looking for something to act on.

According to a Strike Committee Marshal there is a "group" of people who have been threatening to bomb Dickinson Hall, the ROTC building, for the last three days.

The Strike Committee, committed to protecting all people and property on campus during the strike, placed Strike Marshals around the building throughout the night and early morning.

There were no incidents as of press time.

The marshals, men and women, stood two hour shifts in the unusually biting, cold wind. Their instructions were to "split" if there was any chance of actual bombing.

One of the female marshals, shivering with hands shoved into her pockets, showed concern for the building. She didn't want to see it fire bombed. After ROTC leaves, it will be converted to a day-care center, hopes the girl.

There seems to be an evolving direction for the Strike Committee and the people on the UMass campus.

The move to Wall St. next Monday will be an effective move; one that might hit hard at a nervous center of this nation.

There were calls today for positive political referendums, impeachment of the President and Vice-President, moving out to the communities surrounding Amherst. Most important, the campus is peaceful. The people at UMass seem to be too insecure to participate in violent acts. People fear they will be unable to react to violence.

The Counseling day activities kept the crowds of people in the Union smaller than Tuesday. But the strike is firmly entrenched at the University. Today, the picketers will once again be at the entrance to academic buildings.

After listening to threats of firebombs, rumors of extreme violence, and the continuous drone of "Strike activities" I found a note from home in my mail box.

Mothers don't seem to be too responsive to the mood of the young people across the nation. The note read: "Just thought you might be interested in entering this."

Included was a small blue paper explaining the rules of a contest sponsored by Brockton, Massachusetts local radio station, WBET. It began:

"IN TWENTY-FIVE WORDS OR LESS, EXPLAIN WHY 'I BELIEVE IN AMERICA' AND RETURN BEFORE SEPTEMBER 1970."

Excuse this personal note; I hope that America is here during September 1970.

For those interested in the contest, the prize is a trip to our nation's capital.

Don't forget Mothers' Day this year.

5000 Rally on Common Froines Highlights Speakers

By DAVID WILLIAMS
Tuesday Issue Editor

A mass rally of 5000 people on the Amherst Common heard John Froines of the Chicago 7 urge the striking area colleges to move on Amherst College if it doesn't join the strike. The unseasonable cold didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the crowd which turned to anger at the end as Sid Finehirsch of the University Mobe read a statement, unconfirmed at this writing, describing the violence in Madison, Wisconsin.

John Froines of the Chicago 7 speaking last night at Amherst Common urged the Five Colleges to "get together" with the strike. (Photo by Al McArdle)

Froines, after saying that he should be careful of what he says because he has a "slight bail problem", urged the Five Colleges to "get together" with the strike and to support all the demands, "particularly" the one dealing with the Black Panther Party.

He spoke about last weekend's activities in New Haven and said that what happened there is the "most important thing to happen to the 'movement' ". He compared the Revolution to present day happenings, citing one historical parallel after another. Lobsterbacks and pigs, the Boston Massacre and Kent State, the people in the streets - these are the things, according to Froines, that will determine the destiny of this country. Froines claims that 20,000 people gathering to support the most radical group in the country is indicative of the support that the Movement has.

The mood of the crowd was markedly different from that of the rally held Tuesday by the pond. John Fitzgerald, a Vietnam veteran, got the crowd stirred up by saying, "The war we're protesting is not just Vietnam because Richard Nixon, in his idiocy, has decided to expand this war to all of Indochina."

He spoke at length on the three strike demands and gave considerable attention to the Black Panther Party. He said, "We have to see that his cause is our cause....There isn't anything they (the Panthers) could say in public that a white man couldn't say and get away with it." On the matter of University complicity he had this to say, "We are sponsoring research and cooperating with the Department of Defense in the systematic destruction of thousands of people."

A member of the International Electrical Workers Union who spoke at the stadium April 15, Carl Chiaritto, addressed the crowd and came up with the conclusion that "something is radically wrong in this country." He outlined how the American economy thrives on war and said that students and young people have the power to stop the war if they do it the right way.

The incident at Kent State he described as "murder, pure and simple, to protect the work of those who run the war...and when students endanger the profits of big business they will be shot down like dogs and don't you forget it."

The sponsor of Referendum '70, a state-wide referendum on the Vietnam war, John McAnn, spoke and said, "The only way we'll ever have peace in this country is when the people decide that the question of war is too important to be left to the goofs in Washington."

Professor Joseph Hernon of the UMass History Dept., read the proposal of "The Thinking Majority for the Impeachment of Nixon and Agnew" which calls for representative Silvio Conte to call for impeachment proceedings to begin in the House immediately.

The beginning of the rally was marked by a memorial service for all those who have died by U. S. oppression. Four black coffins were carried through the crowd and laid on the stage. Three of them were marked: "Cong Dead, GI Dead, and Kent State". The fourth was unmarked.

The rally was organized by the Connecticut Valley Anti-war Coalition, which is made up of The Valley Peace Center, the University Mobe, and the New Politics Coalition from Northampton.

At the end of the rally Finehirsch was asked to read a statement concerning the alleged violence in Wisconsin. He seemed reluctant to do so but gave in and began to read. At every stop in the reading people shouted "Right On!" and cheered.

Busses for N.Y.C.

Ten busses will leave Hagis Mall 6:00 a.m. Monday for New York City to carry students who plan to march on Wall Street. Organizers hope that they can get stock market workers to back the national strike.

The planners ask students to dress neatly and address workers and businessmen as sir in order to gain respect and cooperation.

David Poisson, Nelson Sigleman, and John Gage, new and old Freshman class officers, have been coordinating the movement for the busses. Tickets will be available at a table in the Union. All they need now is official confirmation from the classes of '71 and '70.

David Poisson said that since the presence of National Guard would stop stock market operations, the trip will be called off if the Guard are called out.

National Student Strike Continues

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Demonstrations in protest of American involvement in Cambodia kept most New England college campuses in turmoil Wednesday and began to over flow to a few high schools.

High school students from Brockton, Mass., and several surrounding communities joined with students from Bridgewater State College in a 10-mile march to the Brockton Selective Service Headquarters.

A less peceful demonstration was held by high school students at Haverhill, Mass., where at least four students were injured when fighting broke out among the demonstrators. Police were called to quell the disturbance.

President Nixon was hanged in effigy in Providence, where hundreds of students gathered for a rally at the downtown area, and in Springfield, Mass., about 200 high school students joined with some 600 college students in a rally at the Army induction office.

Police said 10 persons were arrested at the Springfield rally. All were charged with breach of the peace. Three were additionally charged with assault on a police officer. Patrolman Philip Kane, who was injured in a rock throwing incident. The rock throwing occurred three blocks away from Court Square, the location of the rally.

High school students also staged a walkout at Portsmouth, N.H. high school.

Students called strikes at nearly every college in New England, but few were shut down entirely. A spokesman at Brandeis, where the National Strike Information Headquarters is located, said classrooms were about half filled.

Boston University, however, saying that the climate was "unreasonable to expect students to prepare and take exams," announced cancellation of final examinations and commencement exercises.

Shortly after that announcement Tuesday night, about 600 demonstrators invaded the "castle", a building on the BU campus formerly the home of university presidents. They were driven out by police after shattering windowns and damaging some furniture.

Anti-war activities at most New England colleges Wednesday took the form of meetings, teach-ins and planning sessions.

An outgrowth of one such meeting at Williams College was the "Pause for Peace Coalition," which issued a call for a one hour strike nationally by all American on May 20.

A spokesman at Harvard Business School said students wearing ties and suits would demonstrate at the Prudential Center in Boston Thursday morning.

Other students were seeking use of Harvard Stadium Friday for a rally.

Recitals and public appearances by New England conservatory of Music students were cancelled along with classes and exams by a vote of more than 700 students and faculty members Wednesday. The Conservatory will remain on strike pending a decision by the National Strike committee to end it.

The dean of Harvard Medical School set Friday as a day of mourning for the four Kent State University students killed Monday Dr. Robert H. Ebert said "we also mourn those senseless deaths in Southeast Asia and lament our country's participation in such tragic events." Dean Ebert suggested that all members of the medical community who have no "patient care" responsibilities Friday participate in the mourning.

Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis of Maine told 200 college students who converged in Augusta at the State House Wednesday afternoon that he would proclaim Friday a day of mourning over the four deaths at Kent State University in Ohio.

Curtis called the killings of the Ohio collegians "the tragedy of a nation blinded by the illogic of a foreign policy that events have made outmoded and obsolete."

The students came from Maine state university campuses at Orono, Portland and Gorham and Colby College in Waterville and Bowdoin College in Brunswick.

Undergraduates at Suffolk University in Boston voted 938 to 281 Wednesday in favor of a strike Thursday and Friday. A faculty vote of 52-9 supported the student position and also denounced the widening of the war into Cambodia.

Students at Babson Institute in Wellesley, Mass., voted to hold a three day strike through Friday. The Babson faculty drew up a letter describing their "abhorrence" of the Cambodia action, and their approval of the three day strike. The letter was addressed to President Nixon.

About 300 Tufts University students plan to campaign Friday in Medford and Somerville to get residents of the campus neighborhoods to sign a petition favoring an antiwar referendum for state voters. More than 200 Tufts students have signed papers saying they will visit Washington during the weekend to lobby against war in Southeast Asia.

Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., organized other schools in Vermont and New Hampshire for the purpose of a student canvass to "talk to citizens about war and get them interested," according to one student organizer. A printer turned out 50,000 "fact sheets" for the canvassers.

Members of the Department of Bacteriology and Immunology at Harvard Medical School voted unanimously to request Congress to censure President Nixon for his position in Southeast Asia.

Many students across the country, backed in some cases by administrators and faculty, continued antiwar strikes, marches and sit-ins Wednesday. Most of the widespread activities were peaceful but scattered violence did occur. Many schools closed.

The protests against President Nixon's Indochina policy multiplied after the deaths of four students by National Guardsmen during an antiwar demonstration at Ohio's Kent State University.

The President conferred with six Kent State students Wednesday to discuss what can be done to prevent other fatal confrontations like the one on their campus.

Meanwhile, colleges began shutting down to demonstrate opposition to the war. In many cases the shutdowns were made by officials who said they agreed with students calling for campus strikes.

Charles Palmer, president of the National Student Association, estimated that his organization knows of more than 300 schools which have closed down.

A group at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., billing itself as the National Student Strike Information Headquarters, said it counted more than 150 schools, mostly in the northeast, where students had voted to strike.

Gov. Ronald Reagan asked all state colleges and universities in California to close down Thursday through the weekend for reflection "on the grave sequence of current events and to consider their responsibilities to themselves and society."

At Princeton University, the faculty voted to cancel or postpone final examinations and term papers at the discretion of students and teachers. At New York's Hunter College, President Jacqueline Wexler suspended classes through Friday. Providence, R.I. college closed for a day of "mourning and prayer for peace.'

"By our action at Providence College," the Very Rev. William Paul Hass, college president, said "we are pleading, begging and demanding that all our fellow citizens, our governmental representatives and national officials bring to bear all conceivable force for the immediate termination of the action in Cambodia and the end of the war in Vietnam."

At some schools, student strikes, unsanctioned by administrations, kept class attendance levels down. Stanford University was in its fourth day of such a strike.

There were many campuses, however, which did not have antiwar demonstrations. The University of Arkansas was the only one of the state's 15 colleges and universities reporting a demonstration. Only five schools out of 170 in Texas were reported having protests. No demonstrations were reported in any of South Dakota's 13 colleges.

The demonstrations took many forms. At Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., students began a hunger strike directed at Senate Minority Chairman Hugh Scott, R-Pa. for his support of Nixon's policy. It was started by members of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity of which Scott is a member.

Haverford, Pa., College personnel plan to go to Washington to protest the deaths and the war. Fifteen buses of students, faculty administrators, college employes are leaving Thursday for discussion and classes with congressmen.

At Oklahoma State University, 250 to 300 students held a quiet memorial service for the Kent State dead, and the university president, Dr. Robert B. Kamm, ordered the school flag lowered to half staff.

"We all mourn the Kent State tragedy," Kamm said. "Hopefully, out of the tragedy will come new insight that violence is not the answer."

In isolated cases, students took over campus buildings. Seton Hall University in South Orange, N.J., remained closed as about 30 students continued a sit-in at the administration building. Several hundred University of Oklahoma students jammed into the college administration building and closed it briefly.

Students from Mankato, Wis., State College blocked the city's main intersection Tuesday night for over an hour. Wednesday they burned effigies of Nixon and Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

About 40 University of Arizona student ended a sit-in at the ROTC building in Tucson under the threat of fines and jail terms.

There were scattered reports of violence.

National Guardsmen marched to the University of Wisconsin campus again Wednesday and faced about 2,000 student demonstrators, some chanting and shouting obscenities at the troops. Tear gas was used to break up the crowds of students who were blocking traffic on campus area streets.

Otis Singletary, president of the University of Kentucky, placed a ban on student meetings after 5 p.m. on the school's Lexington, Ky., campus where a demonstration ended early Wednesday with the burning of the Air Force ROTC annex.

The University of California at Berkeley was hit with sporadic violence and 45 were arrested. There was an attempt to burn the naval ROTC building there.

Ohio National Guardsmen were still at Ohio State University, but they began to leave Kent State campus, now almost deserted after the four deaths. Guardsmen were also withdrawn from the University of Maryland campus.

Other campuses reported incidents of rock throwing, window smashing and confrontations with police, but in the main the demonstrations took peaceful forms with students marching with black armbands, lowered flags and candlelight vigils.

Many students, particularly in the Northeast, were reported preparing to travel to Washington later this week for a mass demonstration there Saturday.

House Votes Non-restriction On Asian Troop Movements

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a surprise turnabout, the House voted down all efforts Wednesday to restrict use of U.S. troops in Cambodia - thus taking no stand for or against President Nixon's military penetration into that country.

An administration favored proposal by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., backing the President's decision to send troops into Cambodia to protect lives of U.S. troops in SouthVietnam was approved 171 to 144 and then immediately voted down in a parliamentary switch, 221 to 32.

Opponents said the Findley amendment would have given the President congressional authority to wage open-end war. But supporters said it would have endorsed the President's effort to bring the Vietnam war to an early close.

The approval of his amendment - and then its immediate defeat - brought a look of open astonishment from Findley, cheers from House members who had argued Congress should take no action on the Cambodia drive and a stunned silence from the packed House gallery.

Members urging no action on Cambodia included Chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., of the House Armed Services Committee, who led the march of members voting down the Findley amendment after approving it.

The Findley amendment was a substitute for one by Rep. Ogden R. Reid, R.N.Y., to prohibit use of combat troops in Cambodia, Laos, and Thailand with no exception.

The object of approving the Findley amendment at all was to prevent a vote on the Reid amendment. That done, the Findley amendment was killed as well.

Opponents of the Findley amendment argued that it amounted to another Gulf of Tonkin resolution, the 1964 action on which the Vietnam escalation was based.

Both the Reid and Findley amendments would have barred use of U.S. troops in Cambodia, Laos or Thailand but Findley would have permitted such use to protect American troops in Vietnam. Reid's would not have allowed this latitude.

Atty. Gen'l Charges UNH Pres. with Contempt

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) - U.S. Atty. David Brock announced Wednesday that he has filed an application in U.S. District Court charging student president Mark Wefers with criminal contempt in connection with an appearance of three members of the "Chicago Seven."

Brock said Wefers will be ordered to appear at a May 15 hearing to show cause why he should not be held in contempt but that the student would not be arrested. If convicted, Wefers would be subject to fine or imprisonment.

Also, Brock said there is "no present intention" of taking action against the speakers - Jerry Rubin, David Dellinger and Abbie Hoffman - because they were not "subject to the court."

Brock said the application charges Wefers with "willful violation" of orders issued by U.S. Judge Hugh H. Bownes Tuesday when the judge amended a time limit for the speeches set by the university trustees.

The trustees limited the time for the appearance to 2 p.m.to 5 p.m. but Bownes adjusted that to 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Wefers' petition.

The speeches came more than an hour and a half after the 6:30 p.m. deadline. Bownes specified that any speech afterwards would have to be made with the approval of the trustees, who declined to extend the time limit.

Earlier Wednesday, Gov. Walter Peterson charged that the students leaders did not act in "good faith" and recommended "appropriate disciplinary action" by the university.

He instructed Atty. Gen. Warren Rudman to examine the events "in light of the court order to determine what action might be taken."

Nixon to Hold News Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) – President Nixon will hold a television radio news conference sometime Friday the White House announced Wednesday.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, announcing this, said he hoped to have word Thursday on the precise timing of the question and answer session.

Asked whether Nixon would have an opening statement, Ziegler said he believed the chief executive would immediately begin taking questions.

Nixon's last broadcast news conference was Jan. 30. He had an impromptu, nonbroadcast press conference in his office March 21.

Cong Boycott Peace Talk

PARIS (AP) - North Vietnam and the Viet Cong boycotted the 66th session of the Vietnam peace talks Wednesday but said they would be back next week. The United States and South Vietnam said they had not decided whether they would return then.

"We will notify the other side of our decision and you will be notified," U.S. Ambassador Philip C. Habib told newsmen.

A spokesman for the North Vietnamese told a news conference that his delegation refused to attend the session because of what he called continued U.S. bombing raids on North Vietnam.

Nguyen Thanh Le said U.S. planes bombed his country as recently as Tuesday and added that the raids were "barbarous acts of war" which violated a U.S. pledge to stop the bombing.

Habib said cancellation of the session was Hanoi's responsibility.

"This is further evidence of the intransigence and unwilling ness to engage in meaningful negotiations which have characterized their attitude here," he added.

Czeks Sign New Treaty

PRAGUE (AP) - Czechoslovakia bound itself Wednesday in a new 20 year treaty to pursue joint foreign policy with the Kremlin and to provide military aid if the Soviet Union is attacked on any front.

Communist party leaders and premiers of the two countries signed the pact which appeared to confirm the deepest fears of many Czechoslovaks that their soldiers

Exceptions Misapproved Flag Lowering

BOSTON (AP) - The Massachusetts House, on a 126-103 roll call vote, refused Wednesday to admit a bill requiring that the legislature approve any exceptional lowerings of the American or state flags which fly in front of the State House.

Rep. Richard W. Daly, R-Wellesley, filed the bill which he said was in reaction to the half-staffing of the American flag Tuesday by Gov. Francis W. Sargent as 20,000 demonstrators chanted in front of the State House "lower that flag."

The vote came after more than two hours of debate in which all shades of opinion were voiced on the correctness of the governor's action. Some said the governor illustrated solid judgement while others said he gave in to threats.

Sargent characterized his action as "reasonable."

U.S. Launches Drives

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. and South Vietnamese troops launched three more drives into Cambodia Wednesday, but savage North Vietnamese attacks in South Vietnam's far north raised the threat of a new enemy offensive there.

North Vietnamese struck Fire Base Henderson, a 101st Airborne Division position 16 miles south of the demilitarized zone, killing 29 U.S. soldiers, the greatest number of Americans slain in a single action in 20 months.

Field commanders feared the North Vietnamese might push three divisions poised just above the zone into the northern part of South Vietnam, which is thinly defended by allied forces.

The three new operations raised to six the number of fronts opened in Cambodia. Informed sources said 20,000 to 25,000 U.S. troops and the same number of South Vietnamese were overrunning enemy bases along 230 miles of border, capturing great stores of munitions and food.

The U.S. Command said that in one area, which was not named, more than 4,000 weapons, 64 trucks and 426 tons of rice have been seized.

U.S. troops opened two drives north and south of Cambodia's Fishhook about 70 miles northwest of Saigon where American forces first moved into Cambodia on Friday.

The third operation is along the northern fringes of the Fishhook, where American armored forces and South Vietnamese troops entered Cambodia to link up with a U.S. armored column that seized the highway town of Snuol on Wednesday.

Heavy enemy ground fire still plagued a U.S. operation in Northeast Cambodia which was begun Tuesday from central highland bases 200 miles north of the Fishhook.

About 1,000 more Americans were landed by helicopter seven miles inside Cambodia to join 500 U.S. troops who got through Tuesday. But this is only a fraction of the 6,000 U.S. and South Vietnamese committed to the operation. Four U.S. helicopters were shot down, one of them a command ship.

The sixth operation is in the Parrot's Beak 40 miles west of Saigon, where South Vietnamese troops with U.S. advisors opened the first big drive into Cambodia last Thursday.

Allied headquarters claimed more than 2,700 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops were killed, mostly by air strikes, in the massive sweep operations.

American losses were put at 24 killed and 69 wounded. Government headquarters reported 176 South Vietnamese troops killed and 71 wounded.

A brigade task force of 3,000 men of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division launched the operation south of the Fishhook into an enemy sanctuary about 80 miles west northwest of Saigon.

This operation ran into delays when a bridge was not built in time, holding up a column of 200 U.S. personnel carriers. Other elements that had flown in by helicopter were hit by their own artillery barrage and 10 Americans were reported killed.

It would appear that with the murder of four defenseless students at Kent State University in Ohio, we have seen clearly just how far Nixon is willing to go to suppress legitimate dissent in this country.

Looking back on the incident, it could hardly be called new or even surprising. Afterall, Nixon has been killing Black Panthers ever since their revolutionary party came into existance. His policy of 'suppressive murder' has merely moved to where his attorney general tells him the new threat has arisen - the college campus. The rape and murder of the Kent State campus is just an indication of where Nixon is now training his repressive forces.

Yes, it is true that four kids died at the hands of Nixon. But it is far from the truth that these young patriots died in vain, as Nixon and Agnew would have the American people believe. Their deaths have moved a nation of kids just like them to action, but to action which I deem is irrelevent!

Many people from this campus went down to New Haven last weekend in support of the Black Panthers who are currently being railroaded there. Many people stayed away from fear of violence, and some went down only to return almost immediately from this same fear of violence.

It is more than obvious that Nixon is not afraid of violence. It is also more than obvious that John Mitchell is not afraid of violence. So, how in God's name are we going to fight these men if WE are afraid of violence? Nixon doesn't give a damn if we crawl back into our little ivy-covered play pens, throw tantrums and ravage our toys. Nixon is probably laughing right now at how the streets got too tough for some of us, and how we are all so willing to run back and ravage our own houses.

You might ask yourselves why the Panthers are so maliciously raped and murdered by the Nixon Administration. It is because they have no play pen to crawl back into when the streets get a little rough. The streets are, in fact, the Panthers chosen battleground because they know that that is where they are most effective in fighting Nixon, and also because the streets are what they are fighting to liberate from the rule of Nixon's gestapo, the police.

It is past the time when we could throw ourselves down on the bedroom floor and throw tantrums, for they no longer have any effect. It is time for us to move out of our warm, soft play pens and into the cold, hard streets. It is time for us to meet the enemy face to face in battle territory rather then by shouting "pig" from within our protected sanctuaries. I can't call a policeman a "pig", because I see him as an equal, as very much the enemy, and I dare not underestimate him! So, hide if you will and look out through the bars of your play pen at the battle that is about to change a nation.

Time for Departure

Tuesday's Faculty Senate action, like Monday's Ballroom gathering, was yet another example of the extraordinary current situation. It was testimony to the conviction that the Vietnamese insanity calls for departures from traditional concepts: the Senate's action was a bold departure from the previous and long-standing reluctance of the Senate to politicize itself by taking, in Senator Beth's words, "an explicit political position on an issue external to the University." The Senate rejected such an internal - external dichotomy, finding in the words of Senator Junkins (sponsor of the adopted motion), that "events in Southeast Asia are directly related to the internal affairs of the University." Senator Kaplan reacted to accusations of politicization of the University by contending that "This is not an issue of politics. The crisis is seen as a crisis of humanity. To call it a political crisis is to trivialize and distort it. Let this Senate "politicize" itself if the crisis is sufficient."

The Senate by its action supporting the strike aims and opposing punitive action against strikers concluded that the crisis was indeed sufficient. It is clearly a case, here and on campuses across the country, of academicians compelled by the genocidal insanity of Vietnam to collectively desert postures of judicious reservation, to cry out in outrage against the blatant chauvinism and false pride which is the stated (and indeed only) justification for our doomed attempts to prop up with American arms the repressive government of South Vietnam, decimating ("pacifying") the population in the process.

For the academic community to collectively take a stand on a contemporary issue is clearly at some variance with requirements of historical scholarship. There ought to be, in Senator Conolly's words "a presumption against such stands." Yet, as he further contended, such a presumption is not an absolute prohibition: there are rare instances when the times call for adeparture from that principle.

I have often heard invoked the politicization in the 30's of the German universities to the Nazi creed as an historical analogy, an object lesson demonstrating the desirability of preserving the neutrality of the university. But I would draw from that era another comparison which I regard as infinitely more appropriate to the current situation. Ha d the German universities conceived of themselves as guardians of sanity and fundamental civilized values, and spoken out early and vigorously, in word and deed, by resolution, protest and strike, against the irrationality and moral depravity of the Nazi anti-Semitic genocide, might not the German government have been convinced to desist? That genocide would have been an extraordinary contemporary issue justifying abandonment of the policy of withholding of scholarly judgement.

It is the correct judgement of the Faculty Senate that the Vietnamese genocide, typified with ghastly and terrifying clarity by My Lai, recently expanded into Cambodia with the razing of five Cambodian villages suspected of aiding the North Vietnamese, similarly represents such an extraordinary contravention of fundamental human values that the traditional presumption against an institutional stand must be voided in favor of an assertion that our military involvement in Southeast Asia must end forthwith. Consistent with that belief is the Senate's further conclusion that students who feel compelled to suspend normal activities to work full-time towards that end shall not be penalized.

The Senate's failure to logically extend their reasoning to include a suspension of classes, as Dartmouth has done, is a keen disappointment; its recognition of the extraordinary nature of the current crisis is refreshing, and it is to be fervently hoped that the faculty and students at large will follow the lead of their elected legislatures, recognize the extraordinary gravity of the situation, and individually suspend business as usual to devote the totality of their energies to the termination of the continuing inhuman insanity of Vietnam.

Solidarity and Education

There are currently several bills before Congress which are part of President Nixon's attempt to "combat crime"! These various bills advocate suspension of the Fifth Amendment, preventative detention, twenty years sentences for possession of marijuana, creating a criminal category of "special offender," under which those so designated win thirty years in prison without trial, suspension of the writ of habeus corpus, and many other, similar measures. These are merely threats of the future.

All of the above measures evoke clearly the intentions of the Nixon Administration. Yet we need not wait for their passage. Ever since his inauguration, Nixon, along with Attorney General Mitchell, have consciously followed policies with the express intent of stifling dissent: this is POLITICAL REPRESSION.

Perhaps some students at this University are unaware of political repression. This seems unbelievable considering the coverage given the Trial of the Chicago Eight. It seems harder to understand when running out of tear gas constitutes a valid reason for opening fire on a crowd of peace marchers. That was on Monday of this week.

It so happens that the Black Panther Party is hardest hit by this political repression. For this reason they are named specifically in the demands. The Panthers are being unjustly persecuted for their political beliefs.

How many students on this campus are aware of the extent to which this repression has spread? How many of you could begin to talk intelligently on the subject?

Many students are hesitant to support the strike because they say they are opposed to the Panther's politics. There are two major things inherently wrong in such an attitude. Firstly, the demands do not ask you to favor or oppose Black Panther Policy. They merely ask that the Panthers, as well as white radicals, dope smokers, long haired students, peace people, and liberals, be treated fairly by America. Secondly, I do not believe that more than one hundred white students on this campus had any idea about what the Panthers actually stand for.

Knowledge of the present situation is crucial to everyone today. It is considered wise to know one's enemies. That might be the Panthers, it might be Richard Nixon. You might just like to know who your friends are.

Everyone seems happy about striking over Cambodia. Perhaps Cambodia is simple enought to grasp intuitively without bothering to learn details. There are other issues, less well publicized, that are as important as the war in Southeast Asia. They are before us now, each considered equal.

The purpose of the strike at this stage is to create solidarity and to educate. The future of the country notwithstanding, your lives are at stake. You own it to all your brothers, as well as to yourselves, to find out exactly what the hell is going on in this world.

There are workshops organized on this campus for the purpose of educating students on these issues. It seems absurd to ask people to attend. Believe me, you will learn things that may keep you and the country alive. If that means anything.

Strike for solidarity, strike to express your concern about the issues, but while you're striking, do something. The mind you open may be your own.

The Way Men Live is a Lie

The way men live is a lie.
I say that I get so goddamned sick
Of all these pigs rooting at each other's asses
To get a bloodstained dollar - Why don't
You stop this senseless horror! this meaningless
Butchery of one another! Why don't you at least
Wash your hands of it!
There is only one truth in the world:
Until we learn to love our neighbor,
There will be no life for anyone.

The man who says, "I don't believe in war,
But after all somebody must protect us" -
Is obviously a fool - and a liar.
Is this so hard to understand!
That who supports murder, is a murdered?
That who destroys his fellow, destroys himself?

Force cannot be overthrown by force;
To hate any man is to despair of every man;
Evil breeds evil - the rest is a lie!

There is only one power that can save the world -
And that is the power of our love for all men everywhere.

To the Editor,

Yesterday, by the pond, I passed a young man sporting the traditional army fatigue jacket (with optional beard). I noticed various buttons displayed on his coat -- some of which proclaimed the imminent demise of our civilization as a consequence of pollution. Just as I passed him, he tossed his empty candy wrapper on the grass. I guess this just demonstrates once again the age-old maxim that you can't judge a man by his buttons.

Who Is The Real Criminal?

I want to express a most profound disgust at your actions in regard to the Black colonized people in this country and all poor people of color in the world.

There are a lot of White people in America and there seems to be no direct road to the majority's heart. We have made many attempts as a people to seek out your sense of morality and in each attempt we have paid in our blood.

For most of my life I really believed that people were basically good and that Christianity was the leading force in America. But after being both a victim and a witness to so much oppression, Brutality, and outright murder by this country I know now that Christianity in this country is but a myth, as is the Constitution of the United States.

How can you, the so-called 'majority' lick the apple pie off your lips and fall upon your knees with hands folded trying to play human and then pay with your taxes for napalm that is used to burn the flesh off of the poor people of Africa, South America, and Vietnam? We have to look deeply into the morality of a people that accept the outright murder of other people as a natural phenomena.

The programming of American White people started at this country's birth. In order for the greedy avaricious businessmen to propagate his madness, to make his millions, to make an empire, it was necessary that he manipulate the people. In order to do that, they (the people) had to be fed lies from the highest level, and they were. In order to wage genocide on the Red man, he had to make you believe that the Indian was a savage, a beast, and that it was right and necessary that you kill this menace -- and you did. Now some say "I had no part in this" and go on to say how they would not "stoop to genocide or support the enslavement of other human beings", finishing with a speech on how they "support the underdog". But then why do you allow this government to grp the Indian nations that did survive, to be kept in concentration camps and subjected to the most inhumane treatment? Why not show good faith, why not demand that they have equal rights, you, the "silent majority "? I won't bite my tongue -- it's because YOU DON'T CARE and we both know it!

Fred Hampton was shot to death in his sleep by the Chicago Law and Order Movement and you said nothing. People are constantly getting beaten unmercifully at the hands of the American policeman, and you say nothing. Just as you said nothing about the Red man, about slavery in South Africa, and about Vietnam, you'll say nothing about it when the beastly McCarran Act is implemented in the Black Community.

So with each stage in the process of genocide, we see you more and more programmed to accept our death and imprisonment.

In a functional definition of people, I don't see anywhere that the "silent majority" fits in; what I do see is not people, but machinery, an ultra-patriotic piece of machinery that is being molded into that which pays for and puts together and morally supports a warmonger. It doesn't seem that there is much logic or sanity left for the silent majority. That's why 'muddle Head Adolph' Nixon depends on you.

The American flag has turned into a swastika and the eagle a buzzard that preys upon anything that will ensure its beastly survival.

The Black Panther Party is in direct opposition to this system because it has enclaved, oppressed, and is planning mass murder of our people. For this, we have been designated to die by the 'protectors of that which oppresses us' -- the power of finance capital.

The fascist forces of this country, mainly the CIA, FBI, and trained gestapo type police have put together machinery that is designed to ultimately destroy all progressive people. The reason is simply that we, by exposing the true nature of this decadent American society, have shaken its already weak foundation. We have shown this country to be a haven for every unclean thing and that it is sinking deeper and deeper into the muck of the misery and blood of the poor peoples of the earth.

We must all understand so that we can make up our minds as to what direction we will take; Babylon is falling, it is dying and it is taking as many with it as possible. We must know just who is the real criminal -- is it those who are trying to have their constitutional rights respected or is it those who disrespect those rights?

We are telling the people the same as a bible would tell you: "Come out of her, my people, that ye be no partakers of her sins, and that ye receive none of her plagues, for her sins have reached the heavens. Reward her as she has rewarded you, render to her as she herself has rendered, and double to her according to her works." We must become dislocated now from this disgusting system of misery and barbarism, of exploitation and murder. We must stop supporting, aiding and abetting in her crimes against the people. We must have too much respect for ourselves and too much love for humanity to allow these buffoon pigs to do what they want to do in our name. BABYLON IS FALLING, THIS IS THE YEAR FOR ARMED STRUGGLE. Fire and brimstone is the destiny of this monster, America. ALL POWER TO THE PEOPLE!

To The Editor:

I have a few statements to make in relation to the National Student Strike at UMass and Tuesday's rally at the campus pond. This strike is one of the most blatant exposures of what really constitutes the U.S. student movement. Never before has there been such strong and widespread reaction by students as there is for this strike.

There is no doubt that this strike was brought on by the invasion of Cambodia and the murder of four students at Kent State in Ohio. There is no doubt that the participating students are striking because they have no desire to fight in the Southeast Asian war and out of the hysteria surrounding the deaths of four WHITE students. These same students have discussed for years the immorality of the Vietnamese war and have never moved beyond their rooms on this issue except to salve their consciences in a Moratorium march.

Monday night, in the T.V. room of the Student Union, these students actually argued on whether or not to include the second of the three strike demands - the end of political repression against the Black Panthers and the freeing of all political prisoners. Those against the inclusion of this demand stated that it would prevent the formulation of a mass movement. My question is what do you want in a mass movement? Hitler formed a mass movement too! To create a mass movement on the commission of this demand is to create a mass movement composed of racists. If you are against black people defending themselves and trying to provide for themselves, as the Panthers are doing, you are exposing your own racism. I say that the people in the midst of the movement need to ask themselves where the train is doing -- especially for those who are driving the train. When you talk about peace you must understand that there is no peace without justice - no justice without a change in the power structure and no change in the power structure without a change in yourselves.

Some of you are asking why there are few black people in the strike movement. Do you need to ask when you have to debate the inclusion of the Panther demand? To demonstrate the degree of racism under which most of you operate, on the radio the other night, a student said that the incident at Kent State would probably go down in history as the worst act committed by the government against student movements. What about the Orangeburg Massacre? Black students were killed there. Where were you during all of the atrocities committed against black people in the South? Where were all of you when the Panthers were subject to open genocide?

The white student movement seems to have merely transferred Amerika from one orientation to another. You are still racists - you showed your color Tuesday night while the Panther speaker was attempting to communicate. You have not changed yourselves and cannot possibly change anything until you change yourselves. The time is short, examine yourselves and deal with it - or expect no more patience from black people.

Solidarity

The Black Panther party stands for revolutionary solidarity with all people fighting against the forces of imperialism, capitalism, racism and fascism. Our solidarity is extended to those people who are fighting these evils at home and abroad. Because we understand that our struggle for our liberation is part of a worldwide struggle being waged by the poor and oppressed against imperialism and the world's chief imperialist, the United States of America, we - the Black Panther party - understand that the most effective way that we can aid our Vietnamese brothers and sisters is to destroy imperialism from the inside, attack it where it breeds. As for the Vietnamese people, for the peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America as well.

The aims of the Black Panther party are manifest in our 10-point platform and program. We demand the right to self-determination for all third-world peoples and we can for a United-Nations-supervised plebiscite to be held throughout the black colony in which only the black colonial subjects will be allowed to participate for the purpose of determining the will of black people as to their national destiny. Our program is not much different from any liberation front's program in the third world. Because we are victims of U.S. imperialism (community imperialism) just as the people of the third world are, we see our struggle as one and the same.

History has shown that while the nations of Asia, Africa and Latin America were shackled in colonial bondage, black people in the U.S. were bound by the chains of racism and forced with its special brand of murder and terror. We see our revolutionary position vis-a-vis this evil as directly derived from the actions of liberationists like Nat Turner and Toussaint L'Ouverture. We must emulate the actions of these black heroes, combine them with the socialist perspective the party's 10-point program gives us.

In the words of the party's chairman, Bobby Seale, we will not fight capitalism with black capitalism; we will not fight imperialism with black imperialism; we will not fight racism with black racism. Rather we will take our stand against these evils with a solidarity derived from a proletarian internationalism born of socialist ideal-

Comrades, Supporters, Friends

I am reading this for the Connecticut 9, and I wish to dwell on the trial and some of the particulars surrounding it. They wanted me to relate to you, first of all, that they wish they could be here with you, demanding that injustice be stopped, that fascism be overturned, that all political prisoners be freed, but since they cannot be here, the people must take it upon themselves to speak for them. Right on? Right on!

However, certain black organizations are attempting to turn away potentially sincere support by making racist statements. The Connecticut 9 feels that the argument that white radical "outsiders" overshadow the issues is untrue. Not only do we need Black support, but we need support from all the poor and oppressed people and the alienated children of the ruling class. As Black Panther Party members and political prisoners, they realize that not only is Amerika rampant with racism but capitalism is the disease that has caused racism, all of America is affected by it. All we have to do is look at the Chicago 8 trial and Judge Julius Hoffman and see how the line of demarcation was clearly drawn between the ruling class and and cause of liberation on all levels, politically, racially and spiritually - in terms of the war and Amerikan imperialism, poor and oppressed people and the creation of a generation of free-thinking human beings. What we must all realize is that is not radicals and students who are our enemies, it is the various agencies of the government that have continually murdered and harassed the people and the Black Panther Party.

A pig is a pig is a pig - no matter what shape, size or color he may be. If we are to form a united front against destruction, of the party, of the people, then we must go into the communities and communicate to educate to liberate. It is the lackeys, pigs and informers in the Black community, in any community, that will destroy us - not the Weathermen, the Black Panther Party of the Chicago 7.

It is apparent that since October 1967 with the bogus arrest of Huey Newton, that the fascist agencies of Amerika have continually stepped up their aggression against the Black Panther Party and the people. The jailing of the Connecticut 9 is another link in the plot by the pigs to rid the nation of the revolutionaries who want food, housing, clothing, education, justice and peace for the people.

The isolation of all political prisoners in jails across the country shows us that they are all being tried for their political beliefs rather than the alleged crimes. The situation in Connecticut is no different. This trial not only affects the party and the struggle, but it affects the very soul of Amerika. What is happening now, if let alone, will eventually touch the homes of those who feel that they are secure. So it is time for all people who want to see justice in Amerika to fight for it. Not just talk about it but DO something about it! As Jose Marti, the Cuban revolutionary said, "the best way of telling is doing." This does not mean arbitrary confrontation, rampages through the streets, and knocking down old women - we can't be anarchistic and emotional, we have to be clear headed and organized. An example of this type of clear-headedness is the fact that Yale students cut their hair and took the time, to go into white middle-class communities to rally support for this trial and for the cause of justice in the United States. Breaking windows and snatching pocketbooks will never lay a foundation for the long, hard struggle ahead; politicizing and educating the various segments of the young, the open-minded and the concerned will. It is not the Party's place to tell supporters what to do or what to say, but our duty is to tell all of you about what is necessary for survival in Amerika.

Break Out

A lot of you may be beginning to wonder whether or not you are being true to yourself in supporting the current STRUGGLE. You may have sincere doubts concerning the Black Panther Party, Woman's Liberation and other groups which have been "taught" are bad, evil, blah, blah. DIG:

the shit they put down is TRUE these people are free AS INDIVIDUALS (within themselves) and like, that's where's it got to happen first.

You've got to free yourself before you can free others. Free of the bullshit the BIG LIE, the MYTHS, this country perpetuates on those who never got the chance to see what really is happening. You never have a chance to learn the TRUTH not because you're stupid, rather because you are "managed"; shipped into institutions of propaganda to learn what AmeriKKKa wants you to know in order to maintain its racist pig mother fuckin' MANAGEMENT CLASS. The class (pigs) that tells the PEOPLE (you and me) what to do, and what will be done if we don't...

Well people, black, brown, white yellow red but not gold the time is NOW. Seize the time. Move to turn those idealistic childhood dreams-Brotherhood, Equality, Freedom - into reality.

Black Panther Political Program

Following is the 10-point program of the Black Panther party, adopted in October 1966.

1. We want freedom. We want power to determine the destiny of our black community. We believe that black people will not be free until we are able to determine our destiny.

2. We want full employment for our people., We believe that the federal government is responsible and obligated to give every man employment or a guaranteed income. We believe that if the white American businessmen will not give full employment, then the means of production should be taken from the businessmen and placed in the community so that the people of the community can organize and employ all of its people and give a high standard of living.

3. We want an end to the robbery by the capitalist of our black community. We believe that this racist government has robbed us and now we are demanding the overdue debt of 40 acres and two mules. Forty acres and two mules was promised 100 years ago as restitution for slave labor and mass murder of black people. We will accept the payment in currency which will be distributed to our many communities. The Germans are now aiding the Jews in Israel for the genocide of the Jewish people. The Germans murdered six million Jews. The American racist has taken part in the slaughter of over 50 million black people; therefore, we feel that this is a modest demand that we make.

4. We want decent housing, fit for shelter of human beings. We believe that if the white landlords will not give decent housing to our black community, then the housing and the land should be made into cooperatives so that our community with government aid, can build and make decent housing for its people.

5. We want education for our people that exposes the true nature of this decadent American society. We want education that teaches us our true history and our role in the present-day society. We believe in an educational system that will give to our people a knowledge of self. If a man does not have knowledge of himself and his position in society and the world, then he has little chance to relate to anything else.

6. We want all black men to be exempt from military service. We believe that black people should not be forced to fight in the military service to defend a racist government that does not protect us. We will not fight and kill other people of color in the world, who, like black people, are being victimized by the white racist government of America. We will protect ourselves from the force and violence of the racist police and the racist military, by whatever means necessary.

7. We want an immediate end to police brutality and murder of black people. We believe we can end police brutality in our black community by organizing black self-defense groups that are dedicated to defending our black community from racist police oppression and brutality. The Second Amendment to the Constitution of the United States gives a right to bear arms. We therefore believe that all black people should arm themselves for self-defense.

8. We want freedom for all black men held in federal, state, county and city prisons and jails. We believe that all black people should be released from the many jails and prisons because they have not received a fair and impartial trial.

9. We want all black people when brought to trial to be tried in court by a jury of their peer group or people from their black communities, as defined by the Constitution of the United States...

10. We want land, bread, housing, education, clothing, justice and peace. And as our major political objective, a United Nations-supervised plebiscite to be held thoughout the black colonial in which only black colonial subjects will be allowed to participate, for the purpose of determining the will of blackpeople as to their national destiny . .

Black Panthers. Serving People, Fighting Repression

Along with the internal changes, a renewed emphasis was placed on the party's original "serve the people" programs in the black community. Four programs were specified: free breakfast for children, free health clinics, liberation schools and petition campaigns for community control of police. Every branch was required to implement at least the breakfast program and the police petitions.

The first breakfast program started in Oakland, Jan 20, 1969 and spread to dozens of cities within a few months. The breakfasts - cooked from donated food obtained by the party from local businesses and served in local churches or community centers - were soon feeding thousands of hungry children every day.

While immensely popular, the program was criticized by some radicals as "reformist." Seale answered: a reformist program is one thing when the capitalists put it up and it's another thing when the revolutionary camp puts it up."

In addition to its own merits, the breakfast program was also an aspect of the party's political defense. The media-created image of the Panthers as a "black mafia" was still widely accepted by whites and even among some blacks where they were not known. The nationwide practice of serving the people by feeding hungry children was a great help in shattering the false stereotype.

The political reaction to the party's new turn was even more severe and was now being directed by the Nixon administration through the Attorney General's Office and the Justice Department. Panther offices across the country were raided. Food supplies for the breakfast program were destroyed. The New York 21 and the New Haven 14 were framed, along with a number of smaller cases. On March 20, Seale, along with 7 white antiwar activists, was indicted on conspiracy charges stemming from the demonstrations at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Faced with this onslaught - which decimated the party's leadership, placed hundreds in jail, tied the rest up in court cases, and resulted in at least 19 deaths - Seale and the remaining functional leadership called for a national conference in mid-July to establish a "united front against fascism."

As far as the Panthers were concerned, fascism was not only a theoretical possibility in the U.S., it was something they felt the brunt of everyday. "People have to realize," said Seale, "that fascism is right in front of their very noses in new garments."

The UFAF meeting was open to anyone - liberal, radical or whatever - who opposed fascism and had the sole purpose of approving and implementing one program: a nationwide campaign for community control of police.

Interview With Seale

The Black Panther party has been criticized for its rheteric. What is your reaction to this?

When we use the term "pig," for example, we are referring to people who systematically violate peoples' constitutional rights - whether they be monopoly capitalists or police. The term is now being adopted by radicals, hippies and minority peoples. Even the workers, when the pigs supported strike-breakers like they did at Union Oil in Richmond where 100 local police came in and cracked strikers' heads, began to call them by their true name. But I think people, especially white people, have to come to understand that the language of the ghetto is a language of its own and as the party - whose members for the most part come from the ghetto - seeks to talk to the people, it must speak the people's language.

With regard to the Chicago Conspiracy trial, defendant Rennie Davis has said that the single most important issue dramatized by the trial was racism, as symbolized by your gagging and chaining. How do you see that?

Well it's symbolic in that sense that judicial racism is as old as Dred Scott and it shows that very little has changed since 1857 in the courts. On the other hand, my . . . aining and gagging points out the fact that in America nobody has justice, I mean the white cats in that trial are treated similar to the way I was treated. The racist mentality can also be applied to people other than blacks. This is the most important point raised in my treatment in that trial. I mean the fact that they had black marshals in the trial didn't really stop the racism of the trial itself. The use of the black marshals was a diversionary tactic on the part of the court. The court could then claim as it did that the presence of black law enforcement in the courtroom made my claims of racism inapplicable. Well, I say that if a black judge was going to use the same fascist, racist tactics as Julius Hoffman, I would have acted no differently. You see an important thing to understand is that the system itself is white.

The self-defense aspect of the party does bother a lot of people in this country. Could you clarify the Panther position?

First of all, no Panther can break a gun law unless his life is in danger and the party recognizes this. If he does so we will expel or suspend him depending on the seriousness of his offense. Panther party training in the area of self-defense includes a study of gun laws, safe use of weapons and there is a strict rule that no party member can use a weapon except in the case of an attack on his life - whether the attacker be a police officer or any other person. In the case of police harassment the party will merely print the offending officer's picture in the newspaper so the officer can be identified as an enemy of the people.. no attempt on his life will be made.

Recently Jerry Rubin remarked that although the judge in the conspiracy trial has complained about the language of the defendants, the real obscenity in the case was the willingness of the court to use violence in the courtroom to prevent the defendants from asserting their constitutional rights.

That's typical. It shows the system's preoccupation with words rather than the more basic question of how people relate to one another. For example, in lower class terms, motherfucker doesn't necessarily mean a sexual taboo. It can be used five times in one sentence by a brother in the black ghetto and each time it will have a different meaning and connotation. In any case, research indicates that the origin of the term comes from the slave master's rape of a slave's mother. We see the taboo concept as being closely linked to racism. At the same time the party sees the need to stop using the term just so we can get a segment of the white population to understand the aims of the party. When we talk about obscenity in the courtroom, I think the most obscene thing is the ruling class' refusal to relate to the life, liberty and pursuit of happiness of those who culturally refuse to go along with its norms. We say human beings have a right to live and survive. The obscenity in the Chicago courtroom is the violation of human and constitutional rights.

Do you expect any changes in the structure or direction of the Black Panther party in the future?

Our objective is the education of the people. I don't think we'll make the same mistake that the Communist party made in the 1950s as a result of the repressive measures the government took during that time. You have to go out and fight the battle for the oppressed people - white, black, red, brown - wherever they may be. The party's recent formation of the National Committee to Combat Fascism represents a change, a good one, in that it creates an organization in which movement groups can come together and coalesce to fight the oppressor. In any case I don't think there is any way for the party to stop doing what it's doing and I don't think it will undertake any significant policy change in the near future.

Strike Comm. Proposal

The first meeting of the Strike Steering committee yesterday morning in the S.U. Council Chambers produced three major policy resolutions. They are as follows:

—The elected strike Steering Committee members support the three points of the National Strike Committee as a basis for discussion and education in the workshops, both University and Community and urges anyone who does not agree with all three points to attend the workshops on those that they disagree with.

--The Strike Committee guarantees protection for persons and property on the University. Nobody on the University will be permitted to carry a gun. Guns on campus will be deposited with a Non-violence Committee, composed of Administrators and Strike Committee members. And no official, regardless of office shall call any outside police, soldiers or National Guard to the Campus for any reason.

--All members of the Strike Committee will be marshals and wear distinctive armbands. Members of the Non-violence committee will take a full pledge for non-violence. (All marshals will either have experience or training)

Other proposals included a request to keep the flags at halfmast for the duration of the strike and in mourning for those who have died at home and in Indochina: a finance committee was set-up: a Grievance Committee on Grades was established: Temporary chairman Howard Gadlin was elected to head the Steering Committee: the members present will be considered the official representatives of their respective groups.

Tippo States April 10-11 Status

I have been asked by many faculty members and others for a clarification of the status of the April 10-11 poll. It is not an official survey; it is neither sponsored by the Administration nor the Faculty Senate. Rather it is a sampling of opinion by an independent group of faculty and students. It should be noted that the so-called ballot carries this statemen:: "This ballot is designed to measure the campus community sentiment on pro - posals prepared by April 10-11 committees. The tabulated results will be useful information for discussion and action by the three representative senates."

Retraction

The Collegian would like to apologize to both Sidney Kaplan and Barton Kaplan for the mix up in yesterday's article "Faculty Senate Supports Strike".

The reporter, Richard Hanson, was unaware that there were two Mr. Kaplans in the English department.

The quotes attributed to Bart Kaplan were made by Sidney Kaplan. A top ranking administrator informed the Collegian of the distinction between the two gentlemen.

Communiversity Concept; New Type Academic Vista

Communiversity - the university and the community.

This new concept, only four weeks old, arose out of the April 10-11 weekend and combines the great raw material of the University with the needs of the nearby communities.

George Child, one of the organizers of the Communiversity describes the new project as an "Institutional link between the University and the community. We are trying to bring the University back to its service role. That's the way it started as an agricultural school. We feel the University should be at a service position besides the role of job training which is all that it does now."

Communiversity, which can be described as a type of academic Vista, is still very much in the planning stages and doesn't expect to be in working order until September; doubtless after many ideas have been discussed and tested; accepted and rejected. The group working on the project has developed ideas for five programs that they hope will aid the communities. These programs will educate in all areas ranging from technical assistance to balancing diets.

One program, street academies, which are now in operation in Springfield, bring the education process to the streets of the community. Already established programs like NES Tutorial Program, the Community Action Foundation, and the ABC Program are incorporated under the street academies. Such academies have already met with great success in New York City.

The other programs will consist of expanded tutorial programs, technical assistance programs, ecological action, and continuing education.

Child hopes that the Communiversity can set up as a "clearing house" of information. It is presently housed in a small room on the 19th floor of Coolidge.

Communiversity hopes to involve students, faculty, and administration. It hopes to create an interdepartmental setup to furnish credits for work done in the program. By next September it expects to have a catalogue of teachers, credits and the programs where assistance will be needed.

The frantic attempt to put together concrete proposals now, is designed to allow the Communiversity to apply for funds from the Federal government and hopefully receive them by the beginning of the school year. Communiversity will ask Washington to have UMass set up as a regional branch of the Office of Economic Opportunity. An example of possible additional aid would be having the individual communities match the funds that Communiversity supplies.

Another immediate problem besides that of financial is that of recognition. The Administration must recognize the program but Child feels there won't be much problem there. However, he said, "I have a feeling we will have trouble with the faculty."

Ballet Theater Players Offer World Premieres

The American Ballet Theatre Players will offer two world premieres during their performance in Bowker Auditorium this evening at 8:00. The Players, a group of twelve exciting, young dancers are appearing here under the auspices of The Fine Arts Council Concert Association as the final event of this season's Celebrity Series.

Tonight's performance is attracting wide attention due to the fact that two works will be given premieres. "Way Out" choreographed by Robert Gladstein and the 'Pas de Deux' from "Us" as choreographed by Keith Lee are the new works. Both Mr. Lee and Mr. Gladstein are dancers of The American Ballet Theatre Players. In addition, the Players will offer "Caprichos" and "Huapango" on tonight's program.

Reserved tickets for The American Ballet Theatre Players will be available at the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall until 4:00 p.m. From 5:00 p.m. on remaining tickets will be available at Bowker Auditorium Box Office. Both box offices may be reached by dialing 545-0202.

The Concert Association will sponsor an informal coffee hour this afternoon at 2:00 p.m. in the University Art Gallery in Herter Hall in honor of The American Ballet Theatre Players. Members of the Players and their co-director Lucia Chase are expected to meet at this time with students, faculty/staff and others interested in the dance. This event is open without charge.

Four-College Faculty Votes Grade Policy

The Four College Faculty voted Monday evening that "if, during the coming days, positive activities interfere with regularly scheduled classed and meetings, each member of the Faculty should decide in consultation with his class whether to hold, reschedule, or cancel class." To do so was to approve a departure from "the regular schedule of classes (Petition by Concerned Students of Amherst College). The faculty took this action in order to make possible the combined faculty and student action toward a change in national policy in the United States.

In order to focus, organize, and direct further specific action for the balance of the semester, the Faculty proposed that the following members of the Faculty join with students designated by the newly-elected assembly to establish a steering committee, Professors Birnbaum, DeMott, Kateb, Levin, and Rozwenc.

The Faculty believes that each student should be free to decide individually where he will put his energy during the days ahead and voted: (1) A student who chooses, for reasons of engagement in persuasion and protest, not to complete the work of a course by the end of the semester may: either (a) with the consent of the instructor request a Pass/Fail option, or (b) request a grade of Incomplete and arrange with the faculty member to complete the work by a date acceptable to them both, but no later than September 1, 1970. In addition (c) any student may with the consent of the instructor take the letter grade which he has thus far earned in the course. A student must make his choice of (a), (b), or (c) clear to the faculty member in writing by May 11th. (2) Faculty members will make arrangement in person that student who chooses to complete the work of a course by the end of a semester may do so.

Borrelli Speaks For Sierra Club

The Sierra Club's recently appointed Field Representative for the Eastern United States, Mr. Peter Borrelli, will be speaking in Amherst at the Regional Junior High School Auditorium on Chestnut Street on Thursday, May 7th., at 7:30 p.m. His general topic will be the "Sierra Club and its Conservation Work" - not only in the West where the club's work centered for many years, but in this part of the country as well.

Mr. Borrelli came to the Sierra Club from TIME magazine's Washington office where he was a general correspondent. He started his work for the Club last December with headquarters in New York.

He was invited here by the Continuing Education program in conservation that they could learn how a successful large organization accomplishes its goals.

Student - Faculty talk session for all WOPE majors on the strike will be held at 8 p.m. tonight in the Student Lounge. You are involved. Please come and talk.

Class of '72 Statement

As members of the President's Council of the class of 1972, we support the following statements:

1. We stress the recognition of the personal convictions of each individual student and urge the Strike Committee to respect those rights and opinions. We also urge the individual to express his ideas and follow his own convictions.
2. That the U.S. stop all aggression against dissenters and that all political prisoners currently being held be released.
3. We support the immediate and unilateral withdrawal of all troops in Southeast asia.
4. We feel that ROTC has a place in the academic community but be unaccredited by the University. It is important to recognize the individual right to choose between ROTC and non-ROTC academic career.
5. We feel military research should be abolished on all campuses.

We feel that the above goals cannot be reached by violence and the destruction or defacement of property, but rather by individual dedication of those who support these goals.

Stanford Prof to Speak Here

Dr. Donald Kenn dy, chairman of the zoology department at Stanford University will lecture on the topic of "Nerve Cells and Behavior." The program, sponsored jointly by the Sigma Xi chapters of UMass., Mt. Holyoke, Amherst and Smith, will be held in SBA 120 on Wednesday, May 6, at 8:30 p.m.

One of the newest weapons available to the neurophysiologist studying behavior is the ability to deal with small systems of individually unique nerve cells. Such networks are available in a number of invertebrates, where it is often possible to identify most of the neurons participating in a given behavior and to specify the connections between them.

This lecture will outline some of the principles discovered so far that appear to govern the construction of such circuits, particularly in arthropods.

Kennedy received his A.B. in Physiology and Zoology from Harvard in 1952, his A.M. as a National Science Foundation Fellow two years later, and his Ph.D. in 1956. He served as assistant professor in zoology at Syracuse University before going to Stanford, where he has been professor and department head since 1965.

He is a member of the American Society of Zoologists; Society of General Physiologists; American Physiological Society; and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The initiation of new members into the Massachusetts Chapter, The Society of the Sigma Xi, will precede Dr. Kennedy's lecture at 7:30 p.m.

Committee To Rally At ROTC Hall

The Committee to abolish the draft decided in a meeting closed to the press last night to talk to picketers, leaflet around the campus today and hold a rally in front of Dickinson Hall tomorrow.

The decision was reached after it was decided that not enough was know about ROTC by most students.

The committee also decided to hold a workship on ROTC today in the Norfolk Room in the Student Union from 1-3 p.m. The rally tomorrow will be at 9:30 a.m. in front of Dickinson Hall. The committee urged everyone to come.

Approximately two dozen students from the SDS-initiated Committee to Abolish ROTC voted Tuesday afternoon to stage a "mill-in" beginning tomorrow morning at Dickinson Hall. The Committee, after a 2-1/2 hour debate involving more than a hundred people, issued two major demands: 1) That ROTC be disbanded at SMass, and current ROTC cadets be given University scholarships, and 2) a day care center be established by the Administration in Dickinson Hall.

Faculty Group To Hold Panel On Asian Crisis

Tonight, the UMass Faculty Group on Peace and War will hold a panel discussion on "Cambodia and Laos; Crisis in Southeast Asia" in 104 Thompson Hall.

Holyoke College, a specialist on Southeast Asia who will speak on United States foreign Department at the University of Massachusetts, a specialist on China who will speak on Chinese-Cambodian relations; and Mr. Russell Johnson, Peace Education Secretary of the New England Regional Office of the American Friends Service Committee, who will speak on Cambodia and Laos.

Mr. Johnson not only has visited these two countries in recent years but has traveled extensively in North and South Vietnam making numerous contacts with their political and intellectual leaders. Moderator for the discussion will be Professor Gerard Braunthal, UM Government Department.

Mr. Johnson is one of the few people in the New England area to become well acquainted with Prince Sihanouk, the deposed leader of Cambodia.

WFCR will re-broadcast the discussion at 11:00 p.m. tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Show of affection on your part could correct misunderstanding involving one close to you. Area of chart related to marriage, permanent ties is emphasized. Nothing halfway today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Work surroundings become more interesting. Those you take for granted could come up with some surprises. Routine changes. Associate makes announcement which could result in travel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Emotional reactions dominate. Express yourself. Romance is highlighted. You may also have to deal with young persons who have some definite and unusual ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20) Environment is lively; home base could undergo transformation. Day features plenty of variety. If you've been bored, today provides compensation. You have more than you can handle.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are really a serious thinker. Introspective, even though many could be surprised at this description of you. In June, your status changes — financially and emotionally.

Students Canvass Local Area

Yesterday afternoon, several members of the Student Mobe canvassed the Northampton area in order to educate members outside of the University concerning the national strike and the recent escalation of the war. Students circulated fact sheets on the economic effects of the war, urged citizens to attend last night's town meeting on the Amherst Commons, and gathered signatures for immediate and unilateral withdrawal from Southeast Asia.

While those students who participated were successful in gathering some signatures, their main accomplishment seemed to be an ability to communicate with the working class people of these communities, to express their opinions on the strike, and to gain a measure of favorable support for a peaceful and non-violent expression of their beliefs.

UMass Athletic Council Takes Stand On Strike

At a meeting held Tuesday morning, UMass' Athletic Council established its stand as regards the involvement of UMass athelitic teams in the strike movement.

The Council realizes that UMass athletic teams have contracts with athletic teams from other schools, stating that the two teams are to play at a certain place on a certain date. If the opponent school's athletic department has suspended all activities in sympathy to the strike,, then obviously UMass and that school will have to break the athletic contract.

As for UMass' athletic department, it will continue to operate in its usual fashion. However, the Council has granted freedom to coaches and their players in that they can decide among themselves whether they wish to meet a scheduling agreement or not. Should a UMass team and its coach decide not to play a certain opponent, they should notify that opponent and the Council will back their action.

As far as an athlete striking, by refusing to participate in his sport, such action has been deemed "up to the individual" by the Council. Council chairman George Richason has stated, "Whether an athlete wants to play or not is up to him." Richason pointed out that, should the University decide to suspend all functions, then it would be the Council's duty to go along with this and do the same.

To The Sports Editor:

In view of the importance and urgency of events concerning the strike at the University, the Sports Department of WMUA has decided to cancel all sports broadcasting for the present time. There will be no play-by-play broadcasts, special events or Sports Talk programs on the air. WMUA's 6:20 and 11:15 sports reports will continue with scores and reports of UMass athletics and all other sports news. We hope that, by utilizing our sports air time for broadcasting campus strike events, the students will have the most complete and up-to-the-minute news and information during these important days.

Peace! HAL DASH

Faculty Senate Motion

1. On Tuesday, May 5, 1970, the Faculty Senate passed a motion including the following statements:
   a) No punitive measures are to be taken against students engaged in lawfulprotest.
   b) Each member of the faculty will work out with his students an appropriate way of dealing with incompleted class work and final grades.

   The Facuty Senate respects the relationship between teaching and the creation of a more decent social order. If, therefore, during the coming days other positive activities interfere with regularly scheduled classes and meetings, each member of the faculty should decide in consultation with his class whether to hold, to re-schedule, or to cancel classes.

   An amendment calling for suspension of classes was defeated.
2. Within the framework of the Senate motion, the administration, in consultation with the Faculty Senate Emergency Advisory Committee, has developed the following guidelines:
   a) The University is obligated to provide students who wish to do so with the opportunity to complete their courses, including the scheduled final examinations.
   b) If, in the judgement of the instructor, there is at this time sufficient evidence to justify a grade in the course, he may offer to give that grade. The student then may exercise the following options:
      1) He may accept that grade.
      2) He may complete the work of the course, including the final examination, as scheduled, and accept the grade so earned. or
      3) He may take an Incomplete and make up the work by Nov. 30, 1970.

      If the instructor is unable to give a make-up (for example, if he is leaving the University), the student may, if he is passing, elect to take a grade of P (passing) in the course; if he is not passing, he may elect to receive a grade of W.
   c) In those cases in which the instructor does not have sufficient basis for awarding a grade at this time, he may if he is satisfied that the student is passing, award a grade of P. Otherwise the student should be given the following options:
      1) He may complete the work of the course, including the fianl examination, as scheduled, and accept the grade so earned.
      2) He may elect to receive a W in the course.
      3) He may take an Incomplete and make up the work by Nov. 30, 1970. (In cases like this, if the instructor is unable to give a make-up, the department should make every effort to enable the student to complete the work of the course by Nov. 30, 1970.)
   d) Under special circumstances, the instructor may, with the agreement of the student, assign the grade of P or W.

Cops Bust Spfld Protest; Students Clubbed, Arrested

A Springfield anti-war rally yesterday resulted in the arrest of eleven students and the hospitalization of one student and a policeman. Among those arrested were one student from UMass, six from American International College, three students from Springfield College, and one high school student. Ten of the eleven arrested were released on bail while one student and a policeman lie in a Springfield hospital.

The rally which started at American International College at noon was termed the best anti-war rally ever held in Springfield. Students marched over State Street to Court Square where a girl from Kent State was featured speaker.

From there, the students went to the induction center located at the Federal Building. Having no permit for a march, students walked in the streets and stopped traffic. A crowd of 1000 or more marchers made the three-quarter mile march from State Street.

One student was stopped by a tions in the Capital said they were setting their sights on bringing 30,000 demonstrators right to the doorstep of the White House Saturday to confront Nixon with their "outrage and shock." They rejected the government's offer to let them use the Washington Monument grounds.

Hundreds of colleges across the nation were shutting down or suspending classes, scores of them with the concurrence and approval of faculties and administrations, as demonstrations of protest against the Kent State slayings and the Cambodian intervention.

police when he attempted to lower the flag outside the building to half mast. Students linked arms in a circle around the flag pole while another student tried to lower the flag and was met by plain clothes policemen with black jacks.

Students tried throwing rocks at the windows of the Federal Building unsuccessfully, as bullet-proof glass resulted in the rocks bouncing back toward the students.

When a bomb scare brought paddy wagons to the building, participants decided to leave and return to the A.I.C. campus.

Again they filled the streets and sidewalks, linking arms and blocking both traffic and pedestrians. Paddy wagons followed behind the marchers as they made their way on State and Pearl Streets while lines of police faced the front of the marchers.

Bunches of students were grabbed by police at a given signal. However, following one arrest, the marchers began to fight back. One policeman was shoved to the ground and hit in the face by a sign taken off a pole.

Of the eleven arrested, ten were released on bail while one of the students lies in the intensive care unit of a Springfield hospital. Nine are charged with breach of peace and were released on $50 bail each. Charged with assault and battery were two students, one hospitalized who was released on $500 bail and a second, a 17 year old high school student, who was released on $1000 bail.. Arraignment will be today in Springfield Court.

Greenfield Votes to Strike

Approximately one hundred students held a meeting at Greenfield Community College last night, expressing sympathy for the student strike.

A rally in support of the strike will be held tonight at 8 p.m. on the main campus. In the past, there had been no involvement in the strike and students were attending classes as usual. This is the first time that Greenfield students have been involved in any major political movement.

Discussions will be held all day today on the Greenfield campus, and literature will be distributed. If any UMass. student or faculty member wishes to speak at the rally, they should contact Brian McKenna at 665-3316.

Academic Picketing Resumed Yesterday

By DAVID WILLIAMS
Tuesday Issue Editor

Yesterday was a crucial day for the strike since it ws the first full day of classes after the Spring Day and Counselling Day lapse. The Strike Committee felt that it was imperative that the picketers get out and keep the classes shut down.

According to the people sitting on the south terrace of the Student Union, who are "more or less coordinating the picketing", "No one has really reported to us." They didn't have too much of an estimate on how effective the picketing was. One guy sitting on the ground painting posters said he had been picketing all morning and that everyone he had talked to was on strike but going to classes just to see the professor. The only people he saw actually going to class were mostly engineering students who, according to him, "are going to classes and even booking between classes."

The pickets near Morrill were also enthusiastic about the effectiveness of the picketing. But there were some reservations expressed. One girl said that a lot of people were going to classes and that things are going to get "really tense for the engineering students, especially the ones who are graduating."

The front door of Hasbrouck was the scene of some rather spirited picketing by a small group. When asked if many people were going in, one guy said, "It was really good this morning. This afternoon has kind of slacked off. People are just going in to check with profs. There are very few classes."

Goessman was a major target of the picketers in the early part of the afternoon. A large crowd had assembled to hear a professor outline the Chemistry Department's grading policy for freshmen. While this was going on people came from strike headquarters and urged the crowd to move on to the School of Education and Arnold Hall.

Wall Street Details Set

Bus tickets for Monday's trip to Wall Street will be available for UMass commuters this morning at 9 a.m. in the Student Union ticket office on a first come, first served basis.

Th money for transportation was appropriated at a Wednesday night meeting of the Commuter Assembly. Three buses and medical supplies for the Strike-motivated demonstration are to be paid for from the $1000 allotment. However at last night's Commuter meeting one person who declined to identify himself stated that some people might have to at least partially pay their own way.

Previously the Freshman Class government had pledged whatever funds which remained in their treasury to support busing to Wall Street, next Monday. Although the class officers were unsure about exactly how much money would be available, the tentative figure given was $6000.

It was expected that at least ten buses could be supported and if more could be chartered the people on the waiting list would be notified.

Resolution Adopted by Ed.

The following petition, signed by 16 non-professional staff members of the School of Education, has been endorsed by that department's School Council:

As non-professionl employees of the University of Massachusetts we, the undersigned, strongly support the strike effort on this campus and plan to use our worktime not for business as usual but for participating actively in those workshops designed to give us an opportunity to join nationally with others who want to make our voices heard to stop the widening war, political repression at home, and the university's complicity in the military-industrial establishment.

We feel that the university has an obligation to allow for the opinions of those employees who join the strike and not to take repressive action.

We urge the students to support our action.

Community Action Groups Set

A committee for Senate Action met on Thursday to organize canvassers, community action groups, and speakers to go into high schools.

The committee supports the goals of the strike and is cooperating with Mobe. Specific committee programs are being organized in each of three major activity areas.

The specific programs include:

1. A canvassing campsign to convince New England voters to press key New England U. S. Senators to take positive action concerning the possible violation of the constitution with respect to the invasion of Cambodia. Contact Karen O'Brien or John Howe.
2. A broad community action porgram in cooperation with MOBE. This program focuses intensive political education. Specific information can also be obtained from MOBE or by contacting Gail Gleason
3. A program to arrange for speakers to explain the strike and related issues to high school audiences in various parts of the state.

Students interested in any of these programs should come to Room 414 in Thompson or call 5-0581.

Dickinson Taken For Workshops

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

Dickinson Hall, the headquarters for R.O.T.C. at UMass, was left open last night. Someone started a pot of coffee. Strike marshals and students, with the approval of the University administration, sat around and talked. A group debated and passed motions, concerning the building, to be brought before the Strike Steering Committee.

The proposals which were to be brought before the Steering Committee were as follows:

--Dickinson Hall will be the location of a massive teach-in for the entire community and workshops to be conducted twenty-four hours a day.

-- Strike Marshals will have control of the building in order to maintain order.

The evening of activities at Dickinson began when Put Barber and Mark Hinkle went to the building and asked the Janitor if there were any guns or ammunition in the building. The answer was no; allisuch things had been removed.

Barber and Hinkle then proceeded to contact the Head of the Strike Marshals. The building was open. Medics decided to set-up a medical center. Dean William Field was informed of plans to keep the building open and he agreed to the plan. The Lieutenant of Security was informed and clearance for the building confirmed.

Strike Steering Committee leadership was not told of the action till later in the evening.

Putnam Barber made the announcement over the Student Union P.A. that the building had been "liberated." Members of the anti-ROTC Committee misconstrued this announcement to mean that the building had been taken over. Some time was spent at Dickinson just clearing up the correct story.

During the discussions it was stated that ROTC has cancelled all activities and classes for the rest of the semester and that on the first day of the strike, members of ROTC announced their support for the Strike.

Chancellor Tippo arrived at the building and was asked about the status of ROTC on campus. Tippo claimed no knowledge about what was happening at Dickinson and restated the fact that the Faculty Senate had voted to "renegotiate the ROTC contracts" along the new guidelines of all ROTC courses for credit being taught by University personnel. Tippo stated that the appropriate way to approach ROTC would be through the Faculty Senate. He left after a brief time.

Many people in the meeting at Dickinson agreed to converting the building into a medic center and a Day-Care center for children of local workers and faculty, after ROTC was abolished.

The Strike Marshals are charged with the responsibility of maintaining order at the building. During the week, marshals had been assigned to building twenty-four hours a day to act as a deterrent for any people wanting to damage or take over the building. The Marshal in charge of Dickinson security told the people present that much discussion with ROTC personnel and cadets during the week. The culmination of this type of dialogue is the Teach-in, being sponsored by ROTC in Dickinson today at 9:30 a.m. The entire University community is urged to attend.

MILLING STUDENTS gather at the entrance of Dickinson Hall, the ROTC building, that was peacefully entered last evening by approximately 40 students. They plan to make the building into a 24 hour learning workshop. (Photo by Steve Schmidt)

Late last night the University Student Strike Committee overwhelmingly passed the following motion not to accept the administration's proposals on the possession of firearms by campus police.

1. The Strike Steering Committee does not accept the proposals of the University Administration to the Sub-committee on Non-Violence.
2. The Strike Steering Committee directs the Sub-committee on Non-Violence to take back to the Administration its proposal that no person be allowed to possess fire-arms on campus.
3. The Strike Steering Committee shall act as if the administrative proposals were in force during the period of further negotiation with the Administration; and directs the Sub-Committee to obtain from the Administration written commitment to these proposals at once.

Last night the Strike Steering Committee, of over 100 representatives, and three campus policemen, Colonel Marchant and two others, argued the question of whether campus police should carry guns. No agreement was reached on that point, but concessions were made from both sides which will help to maintain a non-violent campus. Pat Barber, of the sub-committee on Non-Violence, presented the Administration today with the Strike Steering Committee's proposal on Non-Violence, which requested that all firearms be put in charge of joint committees, composed of members of the administration and the strike committee. The Administration made the following proposals, which were accepted by the Strike Committee as a temporary basis for campus security, until further agreement could be reached.

The Administration motion was as follows:

1. In response to the proposals of the Strike Committee (May 6, 1970) the officers of the campus police pledge themselves to support the basic principles of non-violence in every way possible.

2. It will be the policy of the University Police to continue to cooperate with the Marshals by having the Marshals assume total responsibility for all group strike activities. Officers will not enter the areas of group strike activities, unless requested to enter the areas by the Marshal Chairman. Under these circumstances he will be escorted by Marshals and will not carry a loaded weapon.

3. No officer will enter the Student Union, even in response to a specific call, without advance notice to Strike Headquarters to permit Marshals to escort him.

4. Police officers will continue to respond to individual complaints of crimes against individual students in other campus areas in formal fashion. Marshals will be invited to escort officers in such assignments.

5. We would encourage further discussion with members of the Strike Committee to further clarify and extend the areas of agreement.

Class of '71 Allocates $9000 to Strike Fund

By JAN SLICKMAN
Staff Reporter

The Executive Committees of the Classes of '71 and '73 voted last night in emergency sessions to allocate up to $9500 to several organizations concerned with the nationwide student strike.

After a stormy session in Mahar Auditorium in which more than 150 freshmen participated, a vote of 82 to 60 pushed through a motion to allocate up to six thousand dollars to the Wall Street Confrontation Committee (WSCC). This roughly parallelled the junior class motion to give five hundred dollars to the WSCC only minutes before.

The money will be used to transport UMass students by bus to New York City to protest the war in Indo China. The students will hold a rally in Battery Park, where Mayor Lindsay is expected to speak.

Two thousand dollars was later slated by the freshmen to help the University Strike Committee keep functioning as a vehicle to carry out the strike on the Amherst campus.

15,000 Called In Next Month's Draft

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pentagon announced today a draft call of 15,000 for the month of June, the same as in May.

All inductees will go to the Army.

Monthly draft calls so far this year were the highest in February March and April, with 19,000 called for induction in each of those months. The January figure was 12,500.

Draft calls for the year now are expected to total between 150,000 and 180,000, compared to the previously estimated total of 200,000 to 250,000, according to the Pentagon. In 1969, the draft took 290,000 men.

Guard Reaction

"Happy to Leave Kent"

KENT, Ohio (AP) - "I'm not sure myself what happened," it came so fast, but why should we be condemned for it?" asked one Ohio National Guardsman Thursday who said he was "damn happy" to be leaving the barricaded Kent State University campus where four students died Monday.

"Who wanted to come here?" said another.

"Yeah," popped still another, climbing into a jeep with a loaded M1 rifle slung over his shoulder. "We do our job and we're the bastards."

"Most of the guys who actually did the shooting walk around in a daze," a guardsman from Canton said. "They are in shock. It's going to be heck of a thing for them to live with."

"But what is even worse is that everybody gets down on them - the public, the newspapers - for only doing their duty. That's unjust."

This is the general sentiment among the temporary soldiers mobilized last week by Gov. James A. Rhodes to handle strife growing out of a Teamsters' strike and then dispatched to quell disturbances on the campus of Ohio's second largest college.

Nixon Explains War Rationale: Gain More Time for Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon is reported to have told visitors Thursday that destruction of North Vietnamese bases in Cambodia would gain eight to twelve months of time before enemy troops would be able to rebuild the bases for use against South Vietnam.

Nixon spent about an hour meeting with members of the Citizens Committee for Peace with freedom in Vietnam, including some who recently made a fact finding tour of Indochina.

The seven man fact finding team completed its three weeks trip April 20 and submitted its report to Nixon on April 29.

That was the day before Nixon announced he was sending U.S. combat troops into Cambodia to destroy the sanctuaries but was after he had made the decision to do so.

The committee report which was released at the White House after the Thursday meeting with the President had recommended that Nixon "take firm, immediate steps to secure the safety of American troops in Vietnam which, with mounting concern, we see as seriously imperiled by current developments in Cambodia."

It also recommended that in any negotiations for a peace settlement "proposals for the withdrawal of foreign troops apply to Cambodia and Laos as well as to South Vietnam."

According to persons present in the meeting with Nixon, he laid heavy stress on the limited nature of his decision to send in American forces, saying that it provided only for operations against the sanctuary area and was of limited duration.

Its importance, he said, lay in the fact that the United States and South Vietnam would gain 8 to 10 or 12 months of time before the bases could be ready for enemy use again.

Nixon called that a "precious year" in which the South Vietnamese military force could be further developed "from boy to man" so that when the United States removes its forces from South Vietnam that country will have an army, navy and air force able to defend it.

Nixon was also reported to have said that given the conditions in Cambodia the consequences of his failure to move against the Communist sanctuaries would have been very severe and he felt after considering the problem that he had no real choice except to take the action he did.

The committee recommended that the United States should welcome efforts by Asian nations "to act on the new dimensions of the Indochina war created by the invasion of Cambodia and Laos by the regular troops of a foreign power."

It also proposed that Nixon "dispatch a high level official fact finding mission to the capitals of selected Asian states."

Former ambassador Edmund A. Gullion, a retired former envoy to the Congo and now dean of the Fletcher school of law and diplomacy at Tufts University served as spokesman for the group which met with Nixon. He was also a member of the team which went to Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos.

Tufts Prexy Statement

At Tufts University, Medford, President Burton C. Hallowell issued a statement in which he said "Unequivocal action to withdraw without delay from Southeast Asia is desperately required. I strongly urge the President to pursue this course of action."

"The student action at Tufts, affirmed by faculty and administration, is a positive step," Hallowell said. "It is not an early vacation, nor a flight from responsibility. It is an effort to educate ourselves and others."

3,000 Gased in Va.

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) - Riot trained State Police lobbed a barrage of tear gas and in turn were pelted with bottles and rocks Thursday in dispersing a crowd of more than 3,000 student demonstrators and onlookers at the West Virginia University campus.

The situation remained tense in the evening even after student leaders met with troopers to agree that both sides would leave the scene.

Police were armed with pistols and shotguns, but it was not known if the weapons were loaded.

The police left aboard buses, but students later gathered again in front of Woodburn Hall at 7:30 p.m. Police had not returned.

Students had cleared the area by 8:30 p.m. and all was quiet.

It was the second straight day the 17,000 student campus was embroiled in demonstrations, attributed to the slaying earlier this week of four Kent State University students by National Guartsmen.

Led by Sgt. R.L. Mozingo, 100 troopers quick stepped in a flying wedge through hundreds of students in the street in an effort to disperse them. But students fell in behind the wedge and continued to block the street.

Troopers then began to lob tear gas cannisters into the crowd, and hundreds quickly fled.

Protests Shift To D.C. This Weekend

WASHINGTON (AP) - The voice of protest swelled in Washington Thursday as war dissenters tried new methods to press their peace demands and prepare for a massive rally Saturday.

Students, educators, clergymen and other sympathizers combed the national capital talking to congressmen, Cabinet members and even President Nixon.

Plans went forward for a rally near the White House Saturday to protest U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia and the slaying of four students by National Guardsmen on the campus of Kent State University in Ohio.

Student leaders were calling for a non violent demonstration and adding: "We really mean it."

Almost the entire population of Haverford College in Pennsylvania - about 675 students, faculty and staff - came to town for a day of seminars and talks with congressmen about their concern over the war and campus unrest.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R--N.Y. held an open meeting in a Senate hearing room for any New York constituents who wanted to talk to him about Cambodia and campus problems.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., reserved the auditorium of the New Senate Office Building to give students an opportunity to carry on a dialogue with senators. About 1,000 attended.

A number of students attended a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing and broke into cheers when Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., suggested that colleges and universities release students three weeks before the November elections to work for antiwar candidates.

Students from eight graduate schools of international affairs announced plans for congressional canvassing. Other students were out on the streets passing out leaflets.

In contrast to the hippie garb that marked last fall's demonstrations, many young protesters conventionally clad.

Nixon met with eight university presidents to explore the causes of "student frustrations and unrest." A presidential spokesman later said the group had "a very full and worthwhile discussion."

Secretary of State William P. Rogers met with a group from Grinnell College. He is scheduled to meet Monday with another from his alma mater, Colgate University.

Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch met with students and faculty from Stanford University and called the campus unrest "a national crisis."

America's involvement in Cambodia and the Kent State killings "have created a whole new ball game and the President knows it," Finch said.

At least 100 colleges have been closed down across the nation in the wake of protests which erupted after Nixon announced a week ago that South Vietnamese and U.S. troops were entering Cambodia

To those who seek an alternative way to halting the expansion of the Indo-China conflict; we propose a positive, massive demonstration from your parents and relatives to help indicate the depth of concern and frustration over the ever widening war in Southeast Asia. Campus demonstrations and strikes will not be enough. Universities and colleges are clearly not President Nixon's constituency.

One of the reasons the October 15th moratorium had impact is that it involved Americans from diverse backgrounds. Before it is too late, before the Strike is written off by its critics as nothing but the ranting of "bums" who wish to destroy American institutions, we must act to involve people other than ourselves.

We propose to begin this involvement by urging our parents and relatives to wire their Congressional representatives expressing their concern over the recent actions of the Administration. Once "middle America" begins to express its concern to its Representatives, the President will no longer be able to brush off criticism as coming only from student "dissidents."

For example, 15,000 students on this campus have the power to influence 30,000 parents, and their telegrams cannot fail to have significant impact on Congress. Here's what you can do:

1. Call or write your parents tonight asking them to wire each of their Senators and Congressmen. For $1.00 they can wire a "Public Opinion Message." The text might read as follows:

As parents we urge you direct President withdraw combat and support forces Cambodia, Laos immediately.

2. If possible, ask them to convince two of their friends or relatives to send a similar wire.
3. Show this ad to two of your classmates and encourage them to call or write their parents as well.
4. After doing the above send a copy of this ad to Box 82, Conway, Mass. 01341.

Convincing your parents may be a real challenge, but it may be one of the most important things you've ever done.

FROM OUR SIDE

Strike, Three Directions

In order for the Strike to increase its effectiveness and support, strikers must intensify their convictions within and extend their voice outside the university.

We offer three methods of strengthening the foundation of the strike here in Amherst, and bringing the objectives of the Strike to the majority of uninformed citizens.

First, approximately 70 Massachusetts Legislators will be coming to UMass today and it could be a good opportunity to find out where these legislators stand on the issues of the Strike, the War in Southeast Asia and the Nixon Administration's repressive action. And it is perhaps a good opportunity to convert a few influential men to the strikers' cause.

Second, if the Strike is to replace enthusiasm with power it must reach into and effect other power sources in the country. Labor is a massive and vital part of the American machinery. And labor unions constitute extremely strong entities that can, when they choose to work together, shut down the country. The students and the unions should attempt to find a common base from which to correct the decadence in this country.

Third, a nationwide referendum should be held on the issues incorporated in the three strike demands. The public feeling on these issues will have a lot to do with the ultimate success of this strike, our ultimate position in Southeast Asia, and our final attainment of justice and equality at home. If the people of this country are with us, we can expect success; if they are not we can expect more and more people to opt for violence or leave altogether.

GUEST EDITORIAL

A Means—Not An End

I suspect that many have stopped reading such articles as this, regarding them as strike propaganda. If I am correct, that is tragic, for all at this institution have a great deal to learn and a long way to go if this institution is to begin to fulfill its obligation to be an articulate critic of society. The strike is a means to move this university toward that end by sharply questioning our daily routine and the presumptions upon which it rests. This and similar articles are simply feeble, groping attempts to share with others our definitions of the ends for which we ought to strive, and the means to attain those ends. None ought to be so smug that he can afford to insulate himself from the continuous self-examination which is the essence of education.

From the time the strike was declared until Tuesday's Faculty Senate meeting, I, like many others, questioned how closing the university would help end the war. That reaction proceeded from a fundamental misunderstanding which regarded the strike as an end, and not a means: the strike is a means to transform the university into an instrument which will, by the nature of its processes of inquiry, hinder such situations as Vietnam and the oppression of American poor and coloreds. It is not mere rhetoric to affirm, as strike leaders have, that the aim is not to close down the university, but to open it up. That is the essence of the action: to rechannel the resources of the university, to transform it from an institution which is the servant of the status quo, producing middle-echelon bureaucrats and junior executives, to an institution which produces sensitive human beings, sharply critical of existing presumptions, acutely aware of the ongoing dehumanization of our technocracy, of the competition-success value system which measures success by one's quantity of material possessions instead of by the fullness of one's humane concern for the suffering of one's fellows.

We are, as Dean Field affirmed invoicing his support for the Junkins resolution, "a teaching and learning community." But we have heretofore not devoted ourselves to the teaching and learning of those societal and interpersonal forces which separate ourselves from our essentially humanity, those forces which cause us to be callously indifferent to the indiscriminate havoc and agony which this nation is wreaking in the name of self-determination upon the Southeast Asians; indifferent to the daily oppression of black America by police agents of white America, and the brutal extermination of the only organization with the guts to actively resist that oppression with self-defense and community organization.

The resources of this teaching and learning community have not heretofore been utilized to instill an awareness of the moral bankruptcy of a system which places American power ahead of people in Southeast Asia, and profits ahead of people in America. This institution has plainly not taught us to be articulate critics, but rather unquestioning participants, reaping the considerable material benefits to be had from mindless participation.

Our critical capacities can be developed in a multitude of ways, in and out of class: a history class on McCarthyism is as relevant as a workshop on Panther oppression; a Latin class on the life and death of Socrates is as appropriate as a workshop on dissent; a speech class that teaches techniques of communication is as useful as a workshop on learning to listen and educate. Classes ought not to be struck indiscriminately; we should be guided by the ancient concept of citizenship: what activities will help us most to educate ourselves to the nature and the shortcomings of the society in which we live, will teach us the means to tear down the walls which selfishness, callousness, and sloth have erected between us and that humane concern for our fellows which ought to be the guiding principle in all that we seek to accomplish.

As evangelical as it sounds, we have a mission, one which we are only beginning to be dimly aware of ; it is a full-time one, and an urgent one: not a single moment of our time should be spent, not an ounce of our energy should be expended on any activity which cannot be in some way meaningfully related to the end of bringing about through our actions a society in which we empathetically relate to one another first and foremost as human beings, with human fallings; a society in which our overriding concern is no longer to complete with each other for monetary gain, but rather to compete with each other in our capacity to love.

If that had been the predominant societal concern of the generation now in power, we would not be decimating South Vietnam in the name of democracy, for even democracy is not worth the suffering that we have brought to that nation. We would not be competing in the name of the sanctity of the search for knowledge for defense contracts to devise more efficient ways to kill; and we would not have permitted in the name of rugged individualism the grinding, self-perpetuating poverty of black and white, for that charity which is the heart of the Judaeo-Christian ethic does not allow us to be complacently idle in the face of such suffering.

We must address ourselves to these and similar concerns and demand an education that does likewise.

Refuses Support

I am against the strike. I refuse to support or condone it. I shall continue to attend my classes. These are my reasons:

(1) The University is an institute of higher learning providing facilities for teaching and research and authorized to grant academic degrees. A university is apolitical. To wit:

(from a proposal by Prof. Vaclav Holesovsku of the Economics Department)

Since the University community -- students, faculty, staff and other employees-- has NOT been established as AN ORGAN OF POLITICAL REPRESENTATION but as an institution of learning and research;

since TRUTH CANNOT BE DETERMINED BY TAKING A VOTE, gaining majorities, or conducting public opinion polls;

since the members of the University's self-governing organs and administration HAVE NOT BEEN CHOSEN TO ACT AS POLITICAL REPRESENTATIVES of the University community vis-a-vis the outside world;

since the political constitution of the United States allows many alternative channels and methods for expressing political opinions and wishes, as well as for organizing political will of the citizens through voluntary associations and representative machinery;

since, therefore, there is NO JUSTIFICATION in using educational institutions as substitutes for the regular democratic political process, as may be the case in non-democratic countries, let it be resolved that the self-governing organs of the University and its administration REFRAIN FROM SERVING AS VEHICLES FOR POLITICAL REPRESENTATION AND ACTION, or allowing the University to be used for such purposes; . . .

A standard rebuttal is: the University is a place for education, and that this involves more than just classes. This may indeed be true, but what I pay the University for is classes. All other activities are my own prerogative. I resent being forced to support someone else's idea of an important activity. (today, two of my classes were cancelled due to the strike). Also, I believe that entering the "system" as an educated person will do more to change it then a strike now.

(2) Concerning the specific demands, whch are:

(a) the freeing of all political prisoners,
(b) the immediate withdrawal of all troops from Southeast Asia, and
(c) the abolishment of ROTC on all campuses.

In response:

(a) I did not notice any widespread student protest over the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia. I believe it would be difficult to find a more blatant example of repression. Or perhaps it only applies to Ameria, e.g. Bobby Seale. The one question that I have not heard raised is whether or not Seale is guilty. One response is that he cannot receive a fair trail. But instead of formulating plans around this objective, it appears radicals want no trial at all.

(b) I am in total agreement with those who contend that the United States should never have entered Southeast Asia. But until we can guarantee the safety of all those who have supported us, we must remain. Further, treason is defined as giving aid and/or comfort to the enemy. The U. S. has men in South Vietnam. Student protest can only bolster the morale of North Vietnam. Draw your own conclusions. The U. S. is pictured as the sole villain in Vietnam. Have you seen any pictures of the Vietcong atrocities? (Certainly not in the NEW YORK TIMES, LIFE, etc.) Try the NATIONAL REVIEW, 18 October 1966.

Some theories on why the U. S. is in South Vietnam:

(a) collusion between the Military and Industrialist, the Military-Industrial Complex, war profiteering, etc. Check out the NEW REPUBLIC, 20-27 Dec. 1969. There is an article which proves the defense contractors profit more on their commercial enterprises v. their military business. It also suggests that contractors are moving away from military business for this reason.

(b) U. S. Imperialism. Imperialsim may be defined as the policy, practice, or advocacy of extending the power and dominion of a nation, especially by direct territorial acquisitions or by gaining indirect control over the political or economic life of other areas. First, foreigners are not allowed to own property in South Vietnam, Second, total U. S. profits from investments in all of Eastern Asia (including Japan–) amount to $248,000,000 annually, hardly enough to warrant a $30 billion defense expediture. (figures from NATIONAL OBSERVER, 20 April 1970) Third, the war really gains nothing for the "imperialists". Fourth, U. S. "imperialism" most often results in a symbolic relationship rather than an exploitative one. (I refer you to Latin and South America).

(c) contain the spread of Communism. There is an interesting contradiction in those who hold this is why we SHOULD BE in Vietnam. They also say Communism cannot work, e.g. Soviet Union. So, then, if the Communists do take over, they should not last. However, it seems that radicals do not view this as a 'why' we're in Vietnam.

(d) racism. This position is not really held as a cause, but rather as an aspect of the war. I heard one Professor say that that saturation bombing as has occurred in Vietnam would not have happened if we were fighting our own race. Rebuttal: see Berlin, after WWII. Probably racism per se is not a prime factor in U. S. propaganda, but simple vilification of the enemy (which might be construed as racism if one was looking hard enough).

I must admit that I do not know why we are in Vietnam. But my position is this: that we turn the war over to the South Vietnamese. Further, since we are a nation committed, or at least founded on.

Campus Comment

Two Issues

To The Editor:

I think the attempt of some writers in the COLLEGIAN to identify the race issue with the Vietnam issue is harmful to both causes. They are related but they are not identical.

True, in the long run, the elimination of racism is more important than withdrawal from Vietnam, which is inevitable sooner or later regardless of the strike. At the same time, it is my view that until Vietnam is settled, nothing else can be settled. We simply do not have the physical and moral energy for a simultaneous attack on other evils. And after all, more black men are dying in Vietnam than are being shot by police.

As for the Black Panthers, I think it quite probable (without studying the evidence) that those members of the party now on trial in New Haven were framed; and there seems to be good evidence that a campaign to exterminate the party is now being waged by the FBI and local police. But the demands by the strike leaders that Bobby Seale (whose comments were the only rational statements on the issue that I could find in the COLLEGIAN) and the other defendants be freed without trial will not help them and will harm the peace movement.

First, guilty or innocent, the Black Panthers now on trial have been legally indicted for murder. To free them without trial would be simply to throw our whole judicial system out the window; and despite its imperfections, nobody has proposed an alternative. (Power to the people is a resonant slogan but is empty of meaning.) If the defendants' rights are violated, appeals are possible. (The conviction of the Chicago 7 will certainly be overturned by the higher courts). A fair trial is one thing; an end to all law is another.

A second matter for concern was the speech given Tuesday night by the Black Panther representative. Granted that a feeling that one's group is being hunted down like animals does not make for objectivity, it has to be said that Mr. Pendernue's comments were so incoherent, so self-contradictory, so slogan-ridden, and so repetitious that the audience was no better informed about the Black Panthers at the end than at the beginning. That nothing was said about the war lost some of the support for the whole movement.

In the batlle against unreason, as represented by the Nixon administration and its supporters, not "the government", nothing is gained by being like the enemy -- by abandoning reason, embracing empty slogans, ignoring stubborn facts, calling people dirty names, and indulging in the self-righteous hatred of one's opponents.

As one who considers racism and the Vietnam war to be the two transcendent evils of our time, I appeal to the strike leaders to ask themselves calmly whether the elimination of these evils, which all men of good will are seeking, will be aided by identifying the two in the present movement.

Voting Power

To The Editor:

Has anyone really taken a look at themselves lately and asked what they are trying to accomplish? All around we hear angry voices yelling "Strike!" Pamphlets are being passed out in unmeasurable quantity, but what is it going to accomplish? Is President Nixon really taking note of all this and seeing it as a serious effort to end the war or guarantee civil liberties? The efforts of students across the country, to voice their opinion on the President's recent actions are quite praiseworthy, yet did you ever think that the President is not going to be influenced one way or the other by students who are able to make a lot of noise and raise much commotion, yet who, in the long run, do not present a direct threat to his administration.

A positive course to take would be to put ourselves up as a direct threat to him and his congress by demanding that the voting age be lowered to eighteen. This is where the real power could lie, if the demonstrations were being carried out by a body of students who had the power of the vote, and could decide whether or not a Richard Nixon could get into office, instead of a Eugene McCarthy.

If our efforts could be aimed in this direction, then our efforts would be sounder and would not be viewed quite so passively.

Commencement

To The Editor:

We the undersigned, as members of the class of 1970, feel that it is imperative to make the following statement concerning OUR commencement.

During this period of national crisis, we believe that holding commencement as now planned would serve no useful purpose.

We urge that commencement be either dramatically altered to better relate to the present situation or else be cancelled completely.

We call for an open class meeting as soon as possible to discuss this matter.

Clean Up

To The Editor:

We are undertaking a responsibility. The University, its buildings, and its grounds are ours and are our responsibility. It is not our goal to alienate the administration, the legislators, etc. We want to win them over to our side. They don't appreciate painted buildings. There is no need for it. Posters can be just as effective. They don't appreciate papers littering the grounds. There is no need for it. There are disposals all over campus.

More important, the non-professional staff are our brothers. Let's ease their load and help them out by cleaning up so they won't have to do it.

Clean up. Keep the campus clean. There will be a meeting for all those interested in joining the clean-up force at 12:30 in the Union Lobby.

Just Bubble Gum

To The Editor:

The past several days have created much excitement throughout the nation, especially on college campuses and no less on the UMass campus. The butcherings at Kent State have contributed no small amount to this feeling. The following letter is offered not merely to fan the flames of this emotion but to shed light on the truth, because this is the sort of thing that is happening more and more in this country; it is what has been happening for years in the ghetto, and perhaps it may benefit the comfortable white middle-class students of this university to listen to the details.

"Wednesday morning I set off from this campus planning to join in a peaceful anti-war rally in Springfield. Before I returned to UMass Thursday, I had been harassed, beaten, and jailed. It began, as the crowd marched down State Street linked arm in arm in peaceful procession. Without warning, we at the rear of the march were cut off from the rest by unmarked police cars cutting diagonally into the marchers. If someone had not pulled me away in time, I might have been hit.

"Trying to flick away a piece of bubble gum, I was suddenly grabbed from behind by a plainclothesman and asked what I had thrown. Surprised, I answered, 'Bubble gum,' and was immediately dragged to the rear of a paddy wagon where I was clubbed. I did not even resist. Had it not been for a steel helmet which I was wearing, I would have been seriously injured. When it was noticed that the clubbing did not have very much effect because of the helmet, one plainclothesman held my hands behind me while another slugged me in the face. I fell to my knees whereupon I was kicked in the sides.

"Picked up and thrown in the paddy wagon, I found myself in the company of seven other marchers who had also been clubbed and beaten. (It should be noted here that there was no violence on the part of the marchers when the police interferred; the assault charges which were pressed on two people resulted after the police had already begun beating us). I noticed that the wagon took a roundabout route to the station, out of the way of the march, apparently to keep the incident unknown to the bulk of the marchers.

"When we reached the police station, we were jailed, uniformed of our arrest. All articles on our person had been removed (even my glasses), and we were each placed in separate cells. An hour later, while we were being fingerprinted, we were subjected to such verbal harassment as, 'You're lucky you're not niggers,' and, 'He must be a fucking Jew.'

"Bail was set at fifty-three dollars, and after about seven hours, was paid by a dean of the American International College. Fortunately, I was put up for the night by AIC students. There is really little more to say except that I have been charged with breach of peace and am scheduled to go on trial May 19th.

People's News

"First they came for the Panthers, but I was not a Panther, so I did not defend them; Then they came for the student activists, but I was not a student activist, so I did not defend them; Then they came for the Black people, But I was not a Black, so I did not defend them; Then they came for the trade unions, But I was not a Trade Unionist, so I did not defend them; They they came for the teachers, But I was not a teacher, so I did not defend them; And when they came for me, there was no one left to defend me."

The guilt or innocence of the Black Panther defendants is not at issue; when the government fails to protect the civil liberties of the Black Panthers and other politically repressed groups, it endangers the civil liberties of all Americans. Two years ago in Orangeburg, S. C. at a sit-down demonstration over desegregation of local lunch counters, four black students were killed and many injured when fired upon by the National Guard. This week four white students were killed, one paralyzed, and several wounded under similar circumstances at Kent State in Ohio.

The press have created a monster image of the Black Panther Party. The real facts are:

- The Black Panther Party stands for self-reliance. Through programs like free breakfasts for school children, free community health clinics, and day-care centers, free clothing distribution, and through organizations aimed at education of political and constitutional rights, at employment information, and at recreation for teen-agers, the Party seeks to help the community help itself.

- The Panthers do carry guns - for self-defense, a right guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. They refuse to be passively and systematically eliminated as were the Jews in Hitler's Germany - they want freedom and the power to control their own destiny; they do not want to die. "I think that they (students) must understand that the gun is for self-defense which is a right and a human revolutionary necessity." (Bobby Seale, PEOPLE'S NEWS SERVICE, Jan. 25, 1970.)

- Nearly every important black leader has been assassinated, jailed, or forced into exile. Those who remain have been systematically and consistently deprived of their civil liberties:

1. At the Chicago trial of Bobby Seale, his attorney was ill and Bobby asked to either have his case continued or to be allowed to defend himself. This was denied. This is illegal!

2. All Panther defendants in New Haven are being held without bail. The American Civil Liberties Union has formally challenged conditions of the pre-trial detention.

3. In New York, 21 Panthers have been held for over a year awaiting trial.

4. 28 Panthers, including Fred Hampton and Mark Clark (shot in their beds), have been killed by police.

We urge you, the members of the community, to learn the facts. Come to workshops on the Black Panther Party being held on the UMass campus daily. For times, call Student Union Information (545-2351).

ROTC Questions

The majority of people at the anti-ROTC workshops on Wednesday were in favor of some action to abolish ROTC. But there were two objections to abolishing ROTC that were the most frequently expressed:

1. Isn't it better to have some college trained officers in the army rather than officers who have not been exposed to liberal campus ideas?

2. Won't the military simply use other places (like Southern campuses) to train its officers if we kick it off the UMass campus?

The first objection assumes that the military is responsible for the war in Vietnam; therefore a liberalized military would not fight an imperialist war like Vietnam. We feel this assumption is false. We think the military (liberal or conservative) is bossed by big corporations that want to make super profits off Third World (Asian, African, South American) people. ROTC graduates, who make up 85% of the junior officers in Southeast Asia, have been unable to bring the troops home. In fact, officers liberally trained in sociology, anthropology, and psychology are better able to coordinate the aims of the military and its boss, big business, in "pacification" programs. These "pacification" programs are not kind-hearted, good will programs; they are developed from ideas gotten from university sociology researchers (like the Center for International Affairs at Harvard). Prof. Ithiel Pool of MIT wrote:

> "In the Congo, in Vietnam, in the Dominican Republic, it is clear that order depends on somehow compelling newly mobilized strata to return to a measure of passivity and defeatism from which they have recently been aroused by the process of modernization. At least temporarily, the maintenance of order requires a lowering of newly acquired aspirations and levels of political activity." (CONTEMPORARY POLITICAL SCIENCE: TOWARD EMPIRICAL THEORY, P. 26)

Colonel Pell (head of EX-ROTC at Harvard) has made it clear how much ROTC is needed by the U.S. military. If we kick ROTC off the UMass campus the military will try to set it up in other universities especially in the South. How many southern university students look eager for a new ROTC unit on their campus when we've seen attacks on ROTC all over the South in the last few days at such places as U. Tennessee, Houston, Virginia, and Miami. The military is going to find itself in the position of "provocateur" at every campus it tries to INVADE with a new ROTC unit. KEEP ROTC ON THE RUN!

We're Striking!

The strike is working, and working well. I can hardly believe what is going on. Everywhere I look people are talking to one another or working on some aspect of the strike. People are opening their minds and setting their hands to work. Perhaps more encouraging than anything else is the response to workshops. Students have stopped going to class and are showing up at workshops ready and willing to really learn. In all my experience at this university, I have never seen so many relevant interesting crucial subjects being studied. This campus and I imagine many others, has been transformed and it's beautiful to see. It will never be the same, and even the people who don't support the strike, the cynical and the bitter, must admit things will never again be the same.

We must, however, understand that this can only be a beginning. These same institutions that we are all oppressed by are still with us, both materially and mentally. Not a few or a hundred workshops on the Black Panther Party can erase the racism that we as whites having grown up in a racist culture carry with us. So long as there exists any human problem, we should be on strike from a routine existence and from ignorance of injustice and suffering.

The most important thing is how you feel. You should know why you're involved and what you want for yourself and for others. Change, however it occurs - violently or non-violently, is a great responsibility. Don't just fool around for a few days, skipping classes or painting signs, commit yourself to what you feel. Strike for your life.

Non-Violence

Many people refuse to support the Black Panthers claiming that their own non-violent philosophy makes it impossible for them to support any group advocating violence. They interrupted a speech by a Panther by singing "All we are saying is give peace a chance" and demanding to hear something about the war. They forget that there is a war being waged against Blacks in America and that to merely advocate peace without working to change the social conditions which cause violence is naive as it is dangerous. It is dangerous because it indicated to many Blacks that white people have no understanding of the desperate situation within the black community. If we do not show an understanding and support to the black people in America, the next war will probably be a race war fought in our own cities.

A person who believes sincerely in non-violence must recognize that it is the black community and the Panthers in particular which have been systematic victims of violence. Almost every important black leader has been assassinated, jailed or forced into exile. It is not surprising therefore that the panthers advocate self defense since they do not want to die. Moreover advocate of non-violence must be willing to place himself between the aggressor and his victim, whether or not the victim is armed in self defense and engages in what could be considered inflammatory or even violent rhetoric. David Dellinger, a pacifist, threw himself over Bobby Seale to protect him from the blows of the federal marshals at the recent Chicago conspiracy trial; he did not ask himself whether or not Bobby Seale advocated violence.

Condemning the Panthers for their alleged violence and their philosophy, one reveals a lack of understanding of the black situation in America. The blacks are a subjugated minority in America, forced to live under laws which were made neither for nor by them but for and by a small white ruling class. The constitutional right of trial by peers is denied blacks; juries are almost always all white. The experience of black people in America is so different from that of white people that white jurors simply cannot be the peers of black defendants.

Many people do not understand the ten points program of the Black Panther Party. They say that they do not understand why black people should be granted special privileges such as exemption from military service, release of all black prisoners, and full employment for their people. White people must understand the Black panthers are not saying that these privileges should be granted to blacks exclusively. They are working for these things within their own community and hopefully whites will also work for these rights within their own community. The Black Panther preaches neither race hatred nor violence. Rather it advocates solidarity with all oppressed people including poor whites and revolutionary self defense. Read the ten point program and the list of rules for Black party members.

ALL POWER TO THE PEOPLE. FREE THE PANTHERS. SEIZE THE TIME.

After The Strike?

The world, our world, is often filled with irony and paradoxes... Being in the world of the UMASS Strike is no exception. For, as I walk with and amidst students, into this meeting, out of that conversation, through hallways, I see contradictory moods, frustrated action, restlessness, arguing. And the question which looms ever present continually screams at me . . . What are we - you - I doing HERE?

How many organizational meetings have we gone to . . . been involved in, and seen impatient ego-tripping arguing? How many students have we seen milling around waiting for their leader to emerge? How often have we heard someone ask-demand . . . "Which side are you on.? These are the questions which keep shouting. And I see again how we might, through ego-tripping, preempt those goals which we are trying to affirm through decisive action.

Why do we become confused and frustrated in this intense situation? To me it seems that we do not see that what we are doing BOTH begins to reach AND prevent us from reaching our goal... The abolishment of war, freedom for the oppressed, both within and outside of this country . . . OUR country. We seem caught in a limbo between cleaning up our "home", that is, our own minds, emotions and the University we spend so much time in, and the situation of imperialism and political repression. And so we do a little of each, but neither well. Why? Because students, faculty and administrators do not see how their minute by minute actions, daily lives, are so intricately yet subtly both part of the solution and the problem. If we did see how our daily lives related to the war, how our habits perpetuate the problem we SAY we want to solve, then actions would be precise, decisive, continuous, and consistant.

On the one hand, meetings are bogged down with waiting for group decisions, while on the other, much of our emotions and habits are the very result of groupieness. We have been so often told, "You can win what's never been won, . . . do what's never been done" (make your life, do your thing), and yet live in buildings which we never helped build, accept curriculum we never helped create. These are emotional contradictions which pervade our university and which we must come to see as contradictions which prevent continuous and consistent action, without which the strike will become muddled and transitory. So as we go about each minute of our day, do not avoid seeing these contradictions, but ask ourselves . . . "What is it that I am DOING?" Is milling around being together? Was that ego-tripping rhetoric? Was that a double message from the faculty senate? Has the administration publicly supported the Strike? Am I aware of how I might be perpetuating the very thing I feel, and say I'm against. Where are my values . . . NOW? What am I afraid of? What am I doing here? Am I frustrated and therefore impulsive and eager to be violent? Am I intense, consistant, yet relaxed in my action?

If more students confronted themselves, their habits and attitudes, if more students saw these paradoxes in their action, then maybe some very central issues and problems in our "home" would be SEEN, acted upon, and resolved. And perhaps just as importantly, we would more clearly see how this past year has done much to contribute to the problem. The Student Senate spending money ineffectively, while baby's/families are burned/killed. Orchard Hill publicized as a residential college while it remains little more than a carpeted zoo. And throughout the year, we lived with these contradictions . . . and acted not.

If the Strike is to be valuable, then each student must see how he contributes to perpetuating these paradoxes which, it appears, only crisis makes manifest. Stop milling around, stop waiting for leaders to follow, become aware of how relaxed you are, how together we really are. Know that "the politics of summer" means that next fall, things will be "back to normal." Know that to some degree, we all perpetuate the very problem we are trying to solve. Are students now and still being intimidated by finals and faculty demands? Then how important is it that we be protected against such tyranny? How can We protect OURSELVES and the strike from the syndrone of "the GRADE?" Know that these "little" problems can be dealt with, and are part of taking care of "home," and the effectiveness of the Strike . . . BOTH. Know that "the revolution" must be consistant, and needs healthy people, not speed-spent bodies. It needs a strong and efficient organization for power and consistancy of expression. For if our dilemma is as serious and as deep-rooted as we "know it to be," then we must also continually remind ourselves that our work will be demanding of consistancy, energy, and unselfishness. Or, will we be here this summer to carry on our work, and arrive next fall, "home" again, having a strange feeling that it all looks the same?

Allen Explains Policy For School oe Educ

Dwight Allen, Dean of the School of Education, made public his views of the strike yesterday at a meeting of the Educational Assembly.

On the questions of cancelling business as usual in the School of Education, substituting talks on racism and the war for these usual activities, and insuring that no student in the School will be penalized for taking part in the strike, Dean Allen replied that the situation was entirely up to the individual and that he would abide by the university's position on strike matters.

Regarding his support of the three demands, he said he feels compelled "to support legally constituted government" on the first two demands, but Dean Allen maintains that he cannot at all support the third demand ending ROTC and defense research.

In Texas a statue of Jefferson Davis provided students with a bill board to advertise their distaste for President Nixon. Meanwhile, the UMass-initiated drive to pressure legislators into initiating impeachment proceedings against the President was moving ahead yesterday. Any students or faculty wanting to contribute to the purchase of an ad in the New York Times should see Paul Jenkins in the English department today.

Area Canvasing Plans Released by Mobe Leaders

Last night the University Mobilization Committee held a workshop in the S.U. ballroom for the purpose of coordinating all community activities. The main thrust of the Mobe canvassing effort consists of a three-pronged approach for the furtherment of the anti-war movement into the community:

1) Contacting high school students and initiating workshops in local high schools.

2) Canvassing factories and eliciting support from factory workers.

3) Soliciting for the support from registered voters for the withdrawal from Vietnam Rederendum.

Civil liberties lawyer Isadore Silver covered the legal aspects of the canvassing effort and specific instructions regarding effective canvassing approaches were discussed in detail. During the meeting committees were organized for taking immediate action in the surrounding communities.

The total community involve - ment effort now centers on a new organization called CONVAC (Conn. Valley Anti-War Coalition) CONVAC consists of the Univ. Mobe Comm., the New Politics Coalition at Northampton, and the Valley Peace Center in Amherst. It is an extensive umbrella organization for the continuing anti-war effort.

The MOBE headquarters is now located at the Nantucket Room of the second floor in the Student Union.

Kent Dead Buried Yesterday

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) - Two more of the four students killed by National Guard gunfire during an anti-war demonstration at Kent State University were buried Thursday amid appeals for peace.

William Schroeder, 19, who was on an ROTC scholarship and who friends said was drawn by curiosity to the demonstration Monday was buried here. About 300 persons attended. The motorcade to the cemetery stretched for nine blocks.

In New York, about 300 persons, including Dr. Benjamin Spock and Mayor and Mrs. John V. Lindsay, attended services for Jeffrey Miller, 20, of Plainview, N.Y. Several thousand of his contemporaries massed outside the chapel in silent mourning.

In Senate Action

Strike Approval Finalized

By DENISE MAGNELL
Monday Issue Editor

The establishment of UMass Amherst, as the New England Strike Headquarters was given Student Senate support in a specially-called Senate meeting Wednesday night.

Up to $5000 was appropriated for the regional strike center, with the binding clause of having a committee (composed of senators) oversee the spending of the fund.

An additional $300 was also appropriated to the Strike Committee.

The Senate passed a motion recommending complete disarma - ment on campus, including University Police, for the duration of the strike.

Also, a resolution was passed insuring that the Student Government Association will not be held responsible for any damages done to university property (defacing buildings, etc.)

The Class Government Act was amended to allow present Executive Council members to remain in their positions until new members can be selected when new officers take office. Newly appointed nembers must be named to the Council within three weeks after elections.

Anti-ROTC Plans OK'd

An afternoon meeting of the Strike Steering Committee unanimously passed a resolution supporting the demands of the Anti-ROTC Committee yesterday.

The Anti-ROTC Committee demands that the ROTC be abolished from the campus and asks that Dickinson Hall be converted to a Day-Care Center financed by University funds. They also demand that the ROTC cadets be given University scholarships in lieu of ROTC stipends.

This moring at 9:30 the Committee will begin non-violent action against ROTC in the form of a rally outside Dickinson Hall to be followed at 10:00 at a mili-in.

The Anti-ROTC Committee, made up mostly of SDS people, has stressed that any action taken against ROTC will be non-violent.

In case of rain, the speeches will be held in the Cage. The four will be here through the weekend and will lead discussions and workshops.

Education Council Passes Bill In Face of Striking Picketers

By BERNARD BLAIN
Staff Reporter

Yesterday in the presence of about 100 strikers, the school of education council passed a motion by a vote of 11 to 10 calling for a week of mourning and a curtailment of business as usual.

Proceeding on a false rumor that the school of education had refused their support of the strike, strikers entered the education building attempting to stop normal business activity.

However, after crowding the entrance of the building for 30 minutes, the strikers were invited to an open meeting of the school council. In expressing the feeling that the integrity of the student and the instructor should be maintained, the council passed the following motion: "It is the policy of the school that no punitive action will be taken against any individual. In such a case as any member of the community encounters any punitive action, he may seek redress from the ombudsman or judicial committee. We (the council) hope that student teachers and interns will follow guidelines set down by the student teachers office."

A motion asking that the school lead a march of death Sunday night from the education building to the Amherst common was voted down when strikers voiced their opinion that they did not seek leadership from the school, only their support. Spokesmen for the strikers asked the school to join the rest of the campus community in the strike instead of breaking off on their own.

ROTC Petition Aim Clarified

The organizers of the Day Care Center petition wish to inform signers that although the Center is now connected with the ROTC building issue, the Center is not unconditionally tied to the ROTC building.

The petition table was set up two days before the strike began, with the intent of checking student feeling toward the establishment of such a center. Whether the ROTC building is opened for this use or not is irrelevant leaders say. The building would make a good center; the Center will hopefully be established elsewhere if that building is not available, according to organizers.

The organizers say they do not want signers to feel that signing the Day Care Center petition commits a person to the abolition of the ROTC program. The establishment of a Center, not a particular building, is the petition's concern, they maintain.

Graduate Senate Passes Academic Resolution

The following resolution was introduced, debated, and adopted by an open meeting of the graduate students.

1. That final exams be cancelled.
2. That all students receive a minimum grade of "P", a letter grade, or an incomplete as they choose and each student be required in writing to state his choice of one of the above to his professor.

2A. A "P" grade be recognized as fulfilling university and/or departmental requirements.

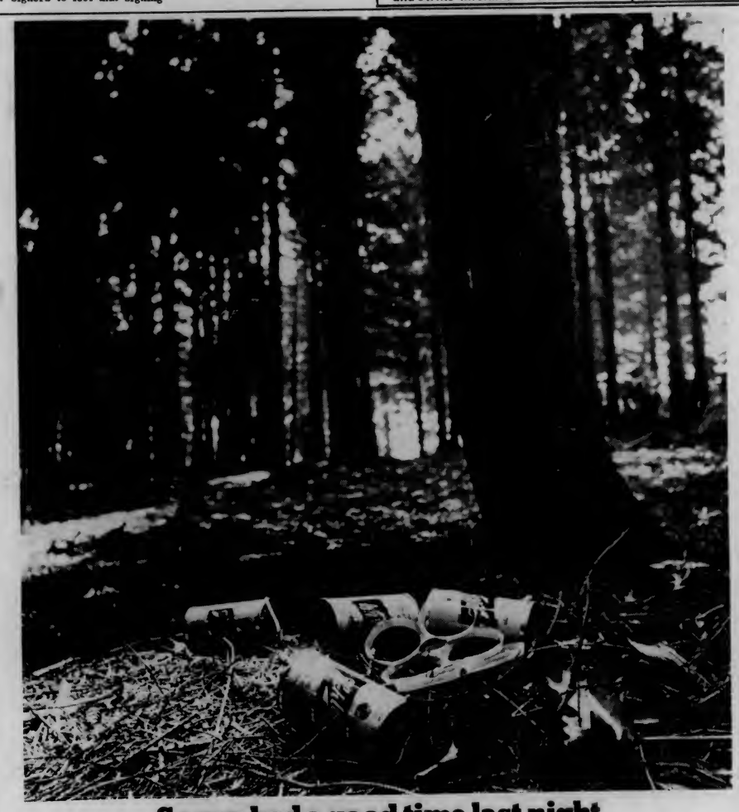
2B. To waiver the present criteria of incomplete grades by extending the incomplete grades indefinitely until resolved satisfactorily by that student and professor involved.

3. That in place of finals, students participate in workshops and related activities set up by the strike committee.
4. That grades not be turned in until the strike is over.
5. That a grievance committee be formed to protect students, teaching assistants, and faculty from any punitive measure taken against them for exercising any of the above points.
6. That all points of this resolution apply to undergraduates, graduates, teaching assistants.

IFC Statement on Strike

At a recent meeting of the Interfraternity Council it was unanimously decided that the University's fraternities should support the student strike. We have donated funds to the Strike Committee and urge all students to attend the workshops to become educated on the proposals of the Steering Committee.

The Student Senate will hold a special meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. Budget act and Strike Information will be acted upon.



So you had a good time last night.
Does everybody have to know?
Took us for a ride in the boondocks.
Led us down the garden path.
Drained us of our promise and pleasure.
Used us. Used us.
Loved us and left us.
Well, we want you to love us.
And don't really mind being used.
But did you have to leave us?
Society never blames the guy.

Why A Student Supports Nixon

By ELLIOT EISENBERG
Staff Reporter

"SUPPORT NIXON" read a sign at one of the many booths in the Student Union Wednesday. Manned by one student, the booth displayed similar cardboard signs reading "U. N. RULE FOR VIET NAM" and "INVITE A RUSSIAN TO THE MOON."

Richard Amoroso said that he set up the booth because he did not like the revolutionary tones of the strike. "Revolution in this country would be a disaster," he said.

Amoroso expressed reservations about several of the demands of the strike. "Bobby Seale," he said, "whether or not he did in fact murder someone, should have his trial."

The move to impeach Nixon and Agnew, he said, was not warranted just 'yet'.

Dressed in a navy blazer and blue sport shirt, Amoroso fended questions from the people gathering around his booth.

What did he think Nixon's aims were?
"I think that Nixon is trying to pull out," he replied. "To maintain the U. S. balance of power, to maintain our ideology, we must maintain the neutrality of Cambodia."

What was that ideology?
"To make the world safe for democracy; to protect the position of the U. S. in world affairs - to make sure that the next time we make loud noises, other countries will listen," he said.
Is there democracy in Viet Nam now?

"Sometimes during a war," he said, "the very things you're fighting for don't exist; they hopefully will exist afterwards."

Amoroso said that there might be some truth to the position that the United States is an imperialistic power, in Viet Nam for her resources. "We might have gotten infor economic reasons," he said.

"I've been called most of the names there are," Amoroso told a reporter. "Some people laugh; some just walk away in disgust."

UMass Staff And Strike

The non-professional employees at UMass are now being represented on the strike committee. The committee has made a proposal on behalf of the staff stating that non-professionals who wish to take part in, or show their support for the strike be given time during the working day to do so, and also that no punitive action be taken against any staff member participating in the strike.

There will be a meeting to discuss our position on the strike tomorrow.

Anyone having questions, or proposals, or who is interested in participating in the strike, come to room 212 Bartlett at 12:15 tomorrow.

Scholarship Fund Established For Kent State Dead

A scholarship fund to be awarded a high school senior in memory of the students killed by National Guardsmen at Kent State University has been established by students and faculty of Salem State College.

Assoc. Prof. John Fox, president of the Faculty Senate proposed establishment of the fund yesterday during campus services for the slain students. Sparked by the professor's donation, $75 was collected within minutes from student, faculty, administrators and clergy.

The scholarship will be awarded to the high school senior best displaying the principles of the Declaration of Independence, the First Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, truth and integrity.

Michael Cerullo of Peabody, Junior Class senator in the Student Assn. Congress, is chairman of the committee set up yesterday to handle the scholarship fund.

Donations from interested citizens may be sent to Kent State Memorial Scholarship Committee, Student Union Building, Salem State College, Salem, Mass. 01970

Senator Says Kent Shot "Accident"

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stephen M. Young (D-Ohio), said yesterday that the first shot at Kent State University was fired accidentally by a National Guardsman who was hit by a tear gas canister thrown back by a student.

"There was no sniper," he said. The Guardsmen, he added, "just lost their heads."

Young said:
"Some young hurled back a partically empty tear gas canister. It struck one of the Guardsmen in the front line on the shoulder or arm, and his gun discharged. Instantly the front rank kneeled and fired into the crowd."

Young called the guardsmen "trigger happy" and said he was amazed that they carried live ammunition in their weapons when they advanced on the students.
"There was this accidental shot and almost instantly a volley," he said.
"No order was given at all."

Action-Lab Leads City Program to Help Dropouts

According to the Springfield School Board, 19% of students in the public high school system either drop out or are forced out before graduation. In response to this problem, Street Academies are being organized in the community through a combined effort of Action Lab, NES, dropouts, parents, and community organizers.

In the belief that the "drop out problem" is due to flaws in the educational system, rather than the individual, Street Academy presents an alternative in education for these students. It is an educational and recreational center for drop-outs, aiming for community involvement and an atmosphere of individual freedom.

The program deals with specific study areas, such as study techniques, math and reading skills aesthetic appreciations, morality and philosophy, scientific principles, human civilization, experience outside the academy, and human prejudices. Students may be given high school equivalency exams upon completion of the program.

The present goal is to establish eight Street Academies enrolling 160 students in all, plus a prep school with 80 students, by the end of the year.

To tell the President how you feel on the Viet-Nam War, call this number: 202-456-1414, a number which will put you in touch with the White House switchboard. When they answer say, "I'd like to register an opinion." The switchboard will then put you in touch with a gentleman who will say, "This is the office of the President."

Within the framework of the Senate motion, the administration, in consultation with the Faculty Senate Emergency Advisory Committee, has developed the following guidelines:

A. The University is obligated to provide students who wish to do so with the opportunity to complete their courses, including the scheduled final examinations.

B. If, in the judgment of the instructor, there is at this time sufficient evidence to justify a grade in the course, he may offer to give that grade. The student then may exercise the following options:
1. He may accept that grade.
2. He may complete the work of the course, including the final examination, as scheduled, and accept the grade so earned, or
3. He may take an Incomplete and make up the work by November 30, 1970. If the instructor is unable to give a make-up (for example, if he is leaving the University), the student may, if he is passing, elect to take a grade of P (Passing) in the course; if he is not passing, he may elect to receive a grade of W.

C. In those cases in which the instructor does not have sufficient basis for awarding a grade at this time, he may, if he is satisfied that the student is passing, award a grade of P. Otherwise, the student should be given the following options:
1. He may complete the work of the course, including the final examination, as scheduled, and accept the grade so earned.
2. He may elect to receive a W in the course.
3. He may take an Incomplete and make up the work by November 30, 1970. (In cases like this, if the instructor is unable to give a make-up, the department should make every effort to enable the student to complete the work of the course by November 30, 1970.)

D. Under special circumstances, the instructor may, with the agreement of the student, assign the grade of P or W.

the idea of individual freedom, that we supply arms (not men) to any nation under invasion or repression.

(3) Miscellaneous comments

(1) I do not see how the events at Kent State and the protest here at UMass are logically related. Except, of course, Kent State does indeed provide much emotional fire.

(2) alternative to Strikes: devote the energy of the strike to the election of candidates who support your position. Sen. Yarborough and Sen. Fulbright will soon be up for re-election--and their chances do not look so good.

(3) "The history of mankind is the history of ideas" (von Mises, PLANNED CHAOS) Such concretes as Vietnam, student revolt, etc. are part of a broader scheme of things, with definite philosophical underpinnings. These must be identified before one can think for oneself. Check it out.

UMass Governance Report Released

By DAVID WILLIAMS
Tuesday Issue Editor

On Wednesday of this week the Joint Commission on Campus Governance released its Interim Report which calls for a restructuring of the governing bodies on campus. The Commission, made up of members of the three existing Senates, proposes that the Senates be replaced with a University Senate. This Senate would deal with matters of joint concern to three Conferences. These conferences would more or less correspond to the Senates as they are now.

The three conferences, the Undergraduate, Graduate, and Faculty Conferences, would have, in the words of the Commission, "exclusive responsibility" for dealing with matters pertaining to their respective constituencies. Matters of joint concern to all three conferences would be dealt with by the University Senate.

The Commission was established in Mid-March 1970 to examine the present system of campus governance and to make recommendations for a New Charter of Governance. They centered their research on governance to four areas: 1. The strengths and weaknesses of present campus government; 2. The principles upon which a sound governmental structure can be built; 3. The parameters within which a campus government should operate; 4. The various forms of governance which might be suitable for this campus.

As a basis for considering various forms of campus government the Commission examined the educational and national issues involved in recent campus tensions. Prolonged and repeated disagreement with fundamental policies, according to the Commission, leads to questions concerning how these policies are dealt with. The Commission states that the confidence of people who are unable to comprehend the decision-making process is undermined by the present system. It claims: "The specific remedies (for restoring confidence) within a university's control are changes in policy or the methods of governance." The Commission therefore, proposes changes in the current University governance system.

As the Commission sees it, the present system is "inherently unstable" and encourages action by each Senate on matters that concern all members of the University community. The result is that a bill adopted by one Senate is sometimes enforceable on the other Senates only by coercion.

Interested in finding an equitable governance structure for all segments of the campus, the Commission believes that it would be wise to avoid reactive changes in government.

The commission proposes to replace the Senates with a system where "the norm is to be areas of separate responsibility with matters of joint interest to be treated exceptionally." What this means is that the Conferences would deal solely with matters relevant to their electorate. The University Senate in turn would deal with matters concerning the Conferences, its electorate.

As to the procedures involved in the workings of the University Senate, the Commission has worked out a tentative plan that will be spelled out in detail in the final report which it expects to issue shortly after the fall term begins. The proposal must be then ratified by the existing Senates, expected to happen in mid-November 1970. The system would go into effect at the start of the spring term and would carry a two year limitation before it would be reviewed and amended if necessary. An open meeting will be held Tuesday, May 12, in the Colonial Lounge from noon to two to hear comments and suggestions to the Commission's proposal.

War Report

Big Bunker Blasted By U.S.

SAIGON (AP) - U.S. forces in Cambodia reported they probed Friday through a bunker system described by the White House in Washington as "a major sophisticated base complex" that might be the supreme Communist headquarters.

Field officers said they had no evidence that the headquarters itself had been found.

This discovery of the complex, called by air cavalrymen "Bunker City," was first disclosed last Monday.

There have been reports that the area, two miles long and a mile wide, is the headquarters of the supreme Communist command for military and political operations in South Vietnam. The command is known officially as the Central Office for South Vietnam - COSVN.

"We have not found COSVN headquarters per se," said a spokesman for the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division. "I think the headquarters is scattered throughout the area in which we are working."

The U.S. Command declined to comment on Thursday's White House announcement about the base complex, without specifying why.

The White House press secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, said he could not say for certain that this was the supreme headquarters designated as the goal of the American attack in Cambodia.

Eight Americans and 24 North Vietnamese troops were killed Thursday in a heavy exchange of machine gun and rifle fire five miles inside Cambodia and 24 miles northwest of a South Vietnamese provincial capital, Phouc Vinh. This is about 100 miles north of Saigon.

The area is about 18 miles north of the Fishhook region. American forces probing through North Vietnamese base camps elsewhere in Cambodia suffered their heaviest casualties in a single battle since operations began there a week ago, but the enemy lost three times as many troops, the U.S. Command said Friday.

In other developments, the South Vietnamese Foreign Ministry announced Thursday it will send a flotilla up the Mekong River to the Cambodian capital, Phnom Penh.

Nixon's Number Busy

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some one or a lot of someones - have the White House's telephone number and the White House is not overjoyed.

It isn't the regular telephone number as published in the directory or given out by information operators.

It's a telephone number that reaches the Executive Office Building next door. The callers who use the number somehow all seem to be against widening of the Indochina War.

Ronald L. Ziegler, presidential press secretary, said he understood the number had appeared in a series of advertisements. Some of the ads, he said, were sponsored under the slogan "Dial a Dissent."

"The ad and number were not put out by the White House," Ziegler said. "Neither the White House nor anyone else at White House direction has placed ads to make phone calls to the White House," Ziegler said.

Seven of UMass' Ten Spring Coaches Give Play, No-Play Strike Stands

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Seven out of ten UMass spring sports coaches made available yesterday their and/or their teams' stands as concerns the strike movement, as pertains to team participation in upcoming scheduled athletic events.

The ten coaches represent the 11 sporting activities the UMass athletic department takes part in during the spring. Those sports and their coaches are as follows: varsity and freshman tennis is coaches by Stephen Kosakowski, varsity baseball is coached by Richard Bergquist varsity crew is coached by Michael Faherty, varsity golf by Richard Page, varsity lacrosse by Richard Garber, varsity track by Kenneth O'Brien, freshman golf by Edward Vlach, freshman baseball by Tony Williams, freshman lacrosse by Carl Schultheis and freshman track by Gideon Ariel.

Faherty could not be reached for comment; he and his team have traveled to Philadelphia, Pa. to participate in the Dad Vail (crew) Championships. Vlach could not be reached before press time as was also the case with Schultheis.

As for those who were contacted, the following are their stands. Some coaches consulted their teams before stating their positions, some didn't. Here are their stands:

Kosakowski, varsity tennis - He explained that his team has already completed its season and thus cannot make a play, no-play decision. Kosakowski pointed out, however, that, in a varsity match held Tuesday, all the UMass varsity players appeared and played. No meeting was held in advance of this decision to play. As Kosakowski put it, "We didn't have to meet, everybody just came."

Kosakowski, freshman tennis - He said that the freshman team will continue to play, as things stand now. It has one more meet, on May 13. As with the varsity, no meeting of player and coach was held. There was one person on the freshman team who decided to strike; he did not participate in a match held on May 6.

Bergquist, varsity baseball - He stated that the baseball team will continue to play its schedule, a decision which was arrived at when Bergquist and his players met to discuss the strike. The position arrived at during the meeting was that "it's an individual's right" to play or not to play. One UMass player has chosen not to play, and missed games on May 6 and 7.

Page, varsity golf - He and his players have mutually agreed to play. In fact, the team will participate in the New England Golfing Championship on May 8 and 9. Forty-two colleges are entered in the field for this affair, which will be held, as it is anticipated that a majority of those schools scheduled to participate will do so. No player on the varsity golf team is striking.

Garber, varsity lacrosse - He has met with his players on Monday and Tuesday. They have decided to continue play, but have declared themselves in agreement with the aims of the strike movement. Presently, Garber and the team members have come to the concensus that letters to Senators and Congressmen will prove the most effective form of protest.

The team itself issued the following statement yesterday morning:

"We the undersigned members of the University of Massachusetts lacrosse team support the student strike in its present context.

O'Brien, varsity track - He has not met with the players on his team but is planning to do so today at 4 p.m., at which time they, coach O'Brien and the tennis team, will decide on their position to the strike.

Williams, freshman baseball - He has not had a meeting with his players, feeling that the concensus atmosphere is one that the freshman baseball team will continue to play out its schedule. One player has decided not to play.

Ariel, freshman track - He has held no meeting with the freshman track team. He believes that the general mood is one that play comes ahead of the strike and feels that the team, and all its players, will continue to perform.

Parents' Day Workshop A History of Vietnam

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

A standing room only crowd of over 500 students and parents gathered in Mahar Auditorium to listen to UMass English professor John Nelson present a 90 minute background lecture on Vietnam yesterday afternoon.

Nelson received a standing ovation as he summed up his remarks by declaring that "We must think and communicate together as human beings. We have to re-educate, re-awaken and re-sensitize ourselves to this situation. We must abandon these kind of policies (that have involved us in Asia). The world will not stand it. I will no longer support it!"

A plea was also made by a member of the audience at this time for every parent present to call in to his or her employer as being "sick" and not to report to work this next Friday. The point of this would be to conduct a one day strike and show opposition with President Nixon's latest Cambodian policy, according to its advocate. The plea received applause from the dispersing audience.

Professor Nelson stated that the reason for his lecture was to get at "truth and reason" on the issue and because the government "has not been giving us the truth at all," on Vietnam.

Nelson described the Vietnamese people as "very simple, very primitive" and Vietnam as a "very non-Western country." He also stated that originally Communist influence in that nation was very light.

The UMass faculty member went on to say that the Indo-China began for the United States when it supported the French and their attempt to reassert their rule in 1946. "Perhaps this will change the whole course of history, I don't know yet," he added. Nelson also termed the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin the "worst American moment in terms of politics" and said it gave former President Johnson a "carte blanche to escalate the war."

The U.S. "agreed to lose the war" in 1968, according to Professor Nelson, when President Johnson refused to sent in 200,000 more troops on request of General William Westmoreland.

Nelson termed the Vietnam war "brutalizing and inhumane" in terms of the technological advances that have been applied to the Vietnamese by the military (such as saturation bombing and germ warfare). He spoke of a "moral onus" which is upon the American nation and asked, "How much moral violation are we to put up with in order to win?"

The present student strike at the University is an attempt at "intellectual honesty" and a "viable discussion of the issues, an attempt to get at the truth," according to Nelson.

"People are hit in the guts by this thing," Nelson declared. By what right do we (the U.S.) bomb civilians. Who do we think we are to do this kind of thing to other human beings?" He added that he feels "enraged" by the whole war issue.

He told the crowd that he is convinced that the only real interest of the United States in Southeast Asia is for "some abstract principle of foreign policy" that calls for "controlling the soft underbelly that surrounds China. We still believe in the Monroe Doctrine and the domino theory," he concluded.

The Food Science Department supports the striking students of the nation and sympathizes with their concerns. Furthermore, the Food Science Department encourages students to participate in non-violent dissent and commends the students at the University of Massachusetts for keeping protest non-violent.

In condemning all forms of violence, we must express our concern, and strongly deplore the inexcusable actions taken by armed national guardsmen at Kent State University.

The Food Science Department, in acknowledging the right and responsibility of individuals to petition for change, cancels all formal classes and formal final examinations for the spring semester. Final grades in courses will be based upon performance prior to the strike, or, if sufficient criteria for grading does not exist, the student will be given a P. If, after consultation with his professor, a student is not satisfied with the grade (or P) given he may, if he wishes, take a final exam. In all other cases the Provost's memo of May 7, 1970 will apply.

Fear of Violence Cancels UMass Support of NY Rally

In response to a request from a Strike Committee member of Pace College in New York City, the rally scheduled to be held near Wall St. today has been cancelled, Nelson Sigelman was contacted and told that the chance of violence was too great a threat to the non-violent goals of the rally. New York has been tense in the aftermath of a clash between demonstrators and construction workers on Friday.

During the lunch-hour rush an irate mob of construction workers broke up a peaceful demonstration by New York area college students. After the students were driven down Wall St. the workers continued to City Hall, where they forced an aide to raise the flag from its half-mast position in mourning for the four students killed at Kent State. Demonstrators were beaten by the workers' helmets, resulting in 70 injuries. Two Wall St. employees who watched the melee from their office window raised the question of whether or not the confrontation was planned, since they observed some possible organization on the part of the workers. The police concentrated on the defense of City Hall because they were greatly outnumbered by students and workers.

The rally may be rescheduled at a later date when the atmosphere will assure a peaceful gathering. Sigelman personally feels however, that the rally would be a waste of manpower since it would only "provide an audience for some speakers." The 1,000 students who expressed interest in the rally would accomplish more for the Strike by attempting to educate the community than by listening to a few speeches.

Hundreds of Vietnamese Board Boats For South Despite Cong Pressure

PHU SEREI, Cambodia (AP) - Despite Viet Cong pressure for them to stay, hundreds of Vietnamese streamed into this Mekong River village to board boats returning to South Vietnam.

The offer to the Vietnamese to return home came from the government in Saigon.

In a strategy apparently intended to induce them to stay, the Viet Cong - wearing black pajamas and shoulder patches of the "New Sihanouk Army" - marched scores of villagers away into the woodlines as hostages.

Some women whose husbands had been taken pulled their children and belongings together and left anyway, sobbing quietly as they huddled in the ancient landing barges.

These people were among the estimated half million Vietnamese living in Cambodia for whom life recently has become a terrorized existence.

First it was the fear of Cambodian troops. Now, with the Viet Cong moving into their villages, there are new fears of the Communist-led guerrillas and American and South Vietnamese bombs and guns aimed at the Viet Cong.

The offer to bring Vietnamese back home from Cambodia came as part of a U.S. - South Vietnamese naval operation up the Mekong.

"Many families wanted to come but the Viet Cong would not let them," Nguyen Van Dac, 29, said. "When the Viet Cong came this morning some people ran away. The Viet Cong took others - men, women and children. They told us the government was coming to get us and we should not leave."

Nguyen Van Hue, 40, and his sister, Le Thi Huong, 35, lived a mile from the river, and the Viet Cong were in their village when allied helicopters flew over, broadcasting instructions for all those who wanted to leave to assemble at the river.

When the Viet Cong saw the helicoptor, they went in one direction and many of the villagers, including Hue and his sister, gathered their most important belongings and went in the other.

It appeared in the early stages Saturday that the refugee withdrawal had exceeded expectations.

About 1,200 Vietnamese came out of Cambodia aboard U.S. - supplied World War II landing craft.

The gunwales of the landing barges virtually overflowed with people as they pulled into the middle of the Mekong, were lashed together, and remained there through the night.

Before dawn Sunday, the convoy got under way and by day break the first of what South Vietnamese officials predict will be some 4,000 refugees had crossed the border.

Weekend Happenings

Pond All-Nighter and Legislators

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

The campus turned to itself this weekend, past. The memory of long hours spent organizing the strike at UMass dimmed as people gathered 'round the pond all day Saturday, , Saturday night, Sunday morning, and Sunday afternoon.

By Sunday afternoon, most of the plastic boxes which served as racing flotilla Saturday, were being used by local high school and Junior high students.

That Saturday afternoon. . . will probably occupy a corner of many memories for many years. It was all part of "The Cultural Revolution" says Reverend Eric "the rat" Walgren.

* * * * *

Legislators from all over the litical spectrum, wandered around the University. Some were responsive to what UMass was doing in relation to the strike, one described this movement as "almost nihilistic."

At the Butterfield House meeting for Legislators, there was some talk about UMass budgeting. The State Senator from Springfield told the students that "anything" that can be justified will be funded. He hit the people who made the budget presentations for the budget cuts last year. "They couldn't justify the funds." said the Senator.

* * * * *

The longer the strike lasts, and it is going to last for the rest of the year, the more the anti-war movement is going to need grass roots support.

Many people are leaving the campus. They have their grades settled. Finals aren't mandatory. There doesn't seem to be anything else to do.

A small group of people, who became disallusioned with theburaucracy of the Strike, are trying to spread a new concept in where the movement is going.

The idea is simple; "Do your own thing!" What it means is that a small group in a dorm or on a corridor can start there own thing. They could start a specialized letter writing campaign to hometown newspapers, can - vass a small town on your own, or use your imagination to do something.

There has to be more small group action, possibly to carry into the summer. The strike Steering committee must serve as the buraucracy. The people must create the movement.

* * * * *

Two fortunate aspects of the UMass Strike movement have been the lack of violence and the Strike' committee's ability to maintain some semblance of order within the vehemently anti-war University community. Reason and flexibility have predominated on the part of both the Administration and the Strikers, and thus far they and the strikers, and thus far major flare-ups on potentially incendiary issues such as the liberation of Dickinson, have not occured.

Sociology Professor G. Putnam Barber who was present at Thursday night' s occupation of the ROTC building stated, "I think that it is quite remarkable that the students on this campus were able to work out an agreement with the administration which allowed the building to be used as it has been."

* * * * *

There was a motion on the floor of the U. S. House of Representatives to stop the funds used for the Vietnam war. The motion was defeated. The Massachusetts delegation voted against the motion 10-2.

The realization that our war in Vietnam won't be stopped until our congress has the strength to do so, prompted a group at Princeton to start a movement; the New Congress to End the Old War.

Princeton has done extensive research on potential candidates for public office next fall; they are looking for people to support the end of the war. Student support for these candidates could mean he difference between a peace oriented congress and the one we have now.

Princeton has already arranged for no classes, two weeks before the November elections. (The Collgian in an editorial today is calling for similiar action at UMass.)

On campus, there are people organizing the New Congress to End the Old War. There will be a workshop to discuss this today at 3:00 p.m. in one of the auditoriums on the second floor of Herter Hall.

Several people are organizing a Cape Cod headquarters for the summer. The purpose will be to campaign for several very important primary elections, during the summer.

Princeton will be distributing more information later in the week.

Two UMass Students Relate Account Of Washington Strike Rally

By DOUGLAS J. MCKINLEY
Staff Reporter

(Ed. Note. - The following is an eye-witness account given by former Class of '73 President Nelson Sigelman concerning the weekend's rally held in Washington, D.C.)

Friday afternoon at 3:30 Nelson and his frat brother Bob Malchiorri began their long journey to our nation's capital via "the thumb." The two UMass pilgrims arrived in the city at 2:30 a.m., greeted by students peacefully reposing around the Washington Monument, and still others wandering around waiting for the action to begin. Later in the morning the city began to stir as innumerable crowds began to present themselves to the watchful eyes of our national leaders.

Nelson observed that from the beginning the demonstration was pervaded by an air of frivolity and togetherness, despite the grave concern felt by all participating students. Many numbers of the so-called "Establishment" going about their daily business were quick to confront demonstrators with signs or hand signals of a more derogatory nature. A small number of uniformed people made their presence known during the rally's early stages which seemed to eliminate the crowd's anticipated tensions to a significant degree.

One National Guard truck plodded its way through the gathering. Marshalls and medics were ample in numbers: their services were much in demand. Marshalls labored at channeling people into the Ellipse and directed busses to encircle the White House.

The Ellipse was jammed from early morning till late into the hot and humid afternoon. People were quick to escape the heat by jumping in and out of the Capital's many plush fountains, while chanting slogans appropriate to the rally's purpose. One very popular slogan, coined by one of the fountains nude inhabitants, was "If you're not part of the pool, you're part of the problem." Students were quick to follow one naked guy who sprang from a reflecting pool, manned an American flag and began to sing "God Bless America."

Increasing concern over the Coca-Cola Company stand on the Vietnam war was symbolically dramatized early in the afternoon when a threatening crowd surrounded a parked Coke truck and liberated its canisters to quench growing thirst. Regardless of various camera and film companies political stand, the rally was extremely profitable for them. Polaroids, Instamatics and movie cameras were the most popular weapons of the day. Students evidently wished to bring back momentos of the rally as, most assuredly, government people did.

A few of the police there merely relaxed, observing various activities from around the Labor Dept. building. The rest of the forces remained stiffly on alert. Upon the completion of planned activities at three, the majority of the crowd jammed the street for about a mile - hoping to reach the Labor Dept. peacefully. Nelson stipulated that a minority of "Hard-core radicals" began the usual verbal abuse on "the pigs." However the rally's marshalls and medics were quick to advise the crowd to keep order and sanity. Water containers filled with rags were brought out to assist those who might be overcome with gas. At one intersection a small group of people began running between the busses to cause trouble directly near the White House. The marshalls managed to fill the gaps between the vehicles and half of the would-be invaders. Some retaliated by smashing bus windows and fist-fighting student officials. When some of the more violence-prone participators began rocking several busses to-and-fro, the police let loose with a round of tear gas which affected innocent people as well as the troublemakers.

Here the medics came into their own, and began washing the eyes of the victims hit with tear gas. Since there was little left to be accomplished in Washington, students just milled around till Saturday night when the crowd slowly dispersed.

When asked what had been accomplished by the Washington rally Sigelman replied that students had once again quietly demonstrated to the nation their feelings concerning the Vietnam and Cambodian issues, as well as other thoughts on political oppression.

Sigelman then mused that if the rally had no other effect, at least Nixon didn't spend the day watching football.

Whereas the Strike Steering Committee recognizes the Strike as not merely a student strike, but as involving the entire community, we feel that it is important to implement this involvement.

Therefore we demand:

That the University employees be in no way penalized for supporting and/or participating in the strike:

1. Employees will not be required to do extra work due to the strike.
2. No loss of pay will be suffered by any employee for participating in Strike activities.
3. No employee shall lose this job as a result of participation in the Strike.

In addition there will be no lay-offs of any employees due to slow-downs as a result of the Strike.

The striking community resolves to support whatever non-violent actions are taken by employees of the University in supporting the strike and that the Grievance Committee will handle any claims of punitive action taken against an employee for participating in the strike.

Paris Rally Caps Week of Demonstrations

200,000 in Paris, W. Berliners Bomb Firm, Hanoi Raps Nixon

A peaceful rally by more than 200,000 leftists and trade unionists in a Paris park Sunday capped a week of demonstrations around the world against U.S. military action in Cambodia.

In West Berlin, some unidentified persons fire bombed a German firm called General Leasing early Sunday apparently thinking it was American because of its English name, police said.

Hanoi called on Americans against the war to "combine their struggle" with that of the people of Indochina to "stay the bloody hand of Nixon." It broadcast a message by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, deposed Cambodian chief of state, urging his supporters to topple the new Cambodian government of Premier Lon Nol and "defeat U.S. imperialism."

Andre Vieuguet, secretary of the central committee of the French Communist party, called the Paris rally "the largest expression ever seen of the French People's determination to bring an end to American aggression .. in profound solidarity -- against the odious massacres ordered by Nixon."

Xuan Thuy, head of Hanoi's delegation to the Paris peace talks, delivered his familiar denunciation of "American aggression."

West Berlin has been wracked by antiwar protests all week. Outbursts Saturday left 261 policemen injured. Twenty four policemen and 30 demonstrators were hospitalized, officials said, and 49 protestors were arrested.

An editorial in the North Vietnamese party daily Nhan Dan said Nixon's news conference Friday showed his administration was "bewildered and isolated" because of opposition to his policies.

The Viet Cong's Liberation news agency labeled Nixon's claim that the U.S. action in Cambodia would end the war more quickly and reduce American casualties "an arrogant piece of deception."

Top College Officials Support Campaigning

Want Students to Get Time Off To Take Part in Politics

NEW YORK (AP) - A proposal to give college students time off to participate in political campaigns next fall received support Sunday from three major college officials.

The proposal was adopted by Princeton University last week. President Kingman Brewster of Yale and Notre Dame University's president, Father James Hesburgh, said they were considering putting the "campaign vacation" into effect in the fall.

Chancellor Albert Bowker of New York's Board of Higher Education, which runs the 165,000-student City University, said he will recommend a two-week period of free time before next November's elections so the students can play an active role.

"Student activity could be the dominating influence in next year's election," Bowker said in a televised interview.

Brewster, Hesburgh and Roben Fleming of the University of Michigan spoke with reporters after taping a separate television interview.

Fleming said, "We are just alienating a whole generation of young people" if the universities do not speak out and he agreed with Brewster that "constructive moderates" have taken over campus leadership.

Brewster said he thought strikes were "irrational" but said he understood them because they were "the one way students have of being visible. It's a shame."

Bunker Says Present Cambodia Campaign Will be Only One

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ellsworth Bunker, U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, said Sunday it will not be necessary for American troops to go back into Cambodia after the present campaign.

Bunker estimated it would take the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong up to 10 months to rebuild their Cambodian bases so "they can begin to get functioning in the same magnitude" as before the allied invasion of Cambodia.

"I think the South Vietnamese can handle whatever develops at that time," Bunker said.

Bunker appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Elliott Richardson, undersecretary of state, said that despite worldwide demonstrations against the U.S. action into Cambodia, U.S. friends and allies supported the move.

Richardson was interviewed on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

"There has been expression of support, for example, by Prime Minister Sato of Japan, President Marcos of the Philippines, who has written the President in support of his decision," Richardson said.

"The Southeast Asian countries have in general communicated support to us," Richardson added, "the government of the Netherlands, among others in Europe.

"And in general they are certainly anxious to be certain that the course we followed does have the military results predicted for it and that we do follow through on the basis of the withdrawal of U.S. forces from the Cambodian occupied areas within the timetable the President announced," Richardson said.

Bunker said the decision to go into Cambodia was necessitated by sudden Communist efforts to build up Cambodian bases which had been limited in size and area previously.

Protestor Badly Burns Himself

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) - A student war protester burned himself critically Sunday when he doused himself with gasoline and ignited himself at the University of California campus here, officials said.

A spokesman at Scripps Hospital said George M. Winne, 23, LaJolla, Calif., had second and third degree burns over most of his body. His condition was described as critical.

Witnesses said Winne carried a sign saying "For God's Sake, End the War."

News in Brief

PELLSTON, Mich. (AP) - Walter P. Reuther, leader of 1.6 million United Auto Workers and a giant of American labor, his wife and four other persons died Saturday night when their chartered jet aircraft crashed and burned.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, Maine, commented on Reuther's death: "I was shocked and saddened by the tragic and untimely death of Walter P. Reuther. For more than a generation Mr. Reuther had been a courageous and responsible spokesman for creative and humane programs to benefit his workers and other working men and women across the country . . . Mr. Reuther's understanding spanned the gaps that divide Americans, and he had gained respect from both sides.

In these unstable times, Mr. Reuther's leadership and wisdom will be sorely missed."

Department Heads Comment On Academic Strike

PROF. FREEMAN, LINGUISTICS:

Professor Freeman stated that he had genuinely mixed feelings about the strike. As a Department Chairman and as a teacher he has obligations towards his classes and towards his discipline.

He moreover feels that closing the universities is exactly what President Nixon would like to do--in a final way; that Nixon's attitude towards learning has always been to try to stamp it out. Nevertheless, the situation has created makes it impossible for Prof. Freeman to carry on his life's work without reacting; he feels he cannot conduct "business as usual" in this crisis.

Prof. Freeman leaves the decision on how his classes are to be conducted to his students, who usually decide to hold a kind of workshop during class time.

PROF. HARTSHORN, GEOLOGY:

Prof. Hartshorn is concerned about the effect the strike will have on his professionally oriented students: while missing a few lectures at the introductory level may not affect students willing to do the reading involved very much, upper-level students who choose to observe the strike and thus miss 8-10 hour labs may be done some real harm.

Prof. Hartshorn is not sure the strike will change things--it may make Nixon look at the alternatives again, but it seems likely that he has already examined them very carefully already; it may prove beneficial by penetrating the isolation of the President, provide an influence beyond that of his advisors.

As a scientist Prof. Hartshorn does not approve of the rhetoric and the emotional pressures that have been brought to bear: the problems the strike concerns are very complex, and are not matters of black and white. He is certain many students would show up if it were not for organized rhetoric and picketing outside classes; he does not believe students should have to run this kind of emotional gauntlet to get into a class.

Hartshorn believes that the rhetoric of the three demands made by strikers has tended to alienate many faculty members. For instance, to state flatly that political prisoners should be freed does not sound reasonable; to comply with the demand as stated implies breaking down the judicial system. To call for an end of the universities' "complicity," to speak of a "war machine," is more rhetoric, and does not fit in with an atmosphere of reason.

DR. IRVINE, ASTRONOMY:

Dr. Irvine supports the aims of the strike and agrees with the Faculty Senate resolutions that no student will be penalized for participation in the strike. He is now more optimistic than he originally was regarding the strike's national effect, its influencing legislators and hence government policy.

He has met with his class to decide class policy regarding the strike, and will meet individually with students who are concerned with loss of course material because of the strike. Dr. Irvine urges that participants in the strike make effective use of time for constructive political action.

PROF. WOODBURY, ANTHROPOLOGY:

Professor Woodbury feels the aims of the strike are worthy, but he is unsure that the strike itself is a good way to achieve these aims.

He believes the best way to change things with respect to South east Asia is to influence Congress by both writing and phoning Congressmen now, and by making sure that Congressmen who will help end the war now will win forthcoming elections. Very valuable Congressmen will soon have critical elections against heavily organized and financed opposition.

The Only Revolution

James Shea is dead. His revolution was the only revolution – achieving Peace by being peaceful, understanding by listening, acting, not because it was politically expediant, but because it was morally right for him. We did not know him long, indeed we knew him only because of one great, symbolic action. As more and more of our generation's heroes die by violence, we can honor them in our futility, only by living up to their ideals. Peace, Representative Shea. Godspeed.

A Living Memorial

The majority of students, here at UMass and across the nation reacted to the movement into Cambodia. Growing numbers of people are beginning to feel totally frustrated with the nation as a whole. Possibly, the best example of this frustrated cynicism is the "failure of college students to organize at the grass roots and to lobby in Washington for the right to take part in the electoral process. . .": to fight for the right to vote at 18. In a GLOBE article, Williams College professor, James Burns called this the "biggest political. . .non-event of the year."

Burns noted in the article that most college students are "a long way from home" and have little opportunity to participate in the campaigns and elections.

"Before student apathy and cynicism spreads further, we should make every effort to enable young people to relate to the democratic electoral process. . . . .it would be tragically ironic if college students rejected democracy before they had the opportunity to take part in it."

Burns called upon university and college faculties to "suspend classes for at least a week before the November elections, 1970."

If the students in colleges and universities organized to elect the candidates who will best support the issues students everywhere are reacting to, then possibly the nation will seek a more enlightened course in the future. And just possibly the democratic principles, now facing their greatest test, will survive.

The Collegian calls upon the governing bodies of this University to suspend classes for a week, before the November, 1970 elections. This move would give students the opportunity to act politically. The student could help shape our national destiny, not violently, but peacefully.

To Dean Shapiro, c/o The MDC:

The Strike is about the building of a new society, of a humane one, where the individual is recognized and respected. Although we are participants in the Strike, we feel that building a new society involves more than destroying a war; it involves planning the new institutions.

We are among the over 60 students who have submitted proposals for the Moore House Program of Supervised Study. Our proposals have ranged from working in VISTA to tutoring the underprivileged to individual self-evaluations. We are disturbed over the fact that this program has not yet been approved. We urge the approval and rapid implementation of the Program.

On behalf of the members of the Amherst Housing Authority and the residents of Chestnut Court, I want to extend my warmest thanks to the pledges of Delta Chi Colony Fraternity.

On May 5, 1970, a number of pledges from Delta Chi made a visit to the elderly of Chestnut Court. A long stem rose was presented to each tenant and I understand many interesting discussions took place about the nation and local current events. I also understand that other visits are planned.

I personally feel that the elderly in our society are so easily forgotten.

The pledges from Delta Chi made an effort to visit, talk and listen. On May 5, 1970, some elderly people felt important.

Delta Chi Fraternity hasn't forgotten.

To the editor:

There is at last on our campus a Birth Control Center. Women's Liberation has set it up because we are disturbed that so many women do not have information about their bodies. I can quote a statistic: 10% of the women on this campus have unwanted pregnancies each year.

But that statistic is cold and unreal sounding. What is horrible to me is the knowledge that the lives of my sisters are being hurt, even ruined. I have had a child. I am not married. I had very little choice about what to do or where to go. I had to give my child for adoption. It was extremely painful and I spent two years of my life in misery. This 10% is not a statistic to me. I know the confusion and hurt that exists in every woman about having or not having children.

Women's Liberation is trying to set up the Birth Control Center so that students may get information, counseling and referral service. The Student Senate voted $1700 in December for the purposes of creating this Center. However we have been through hell trying to actually GET that money. It seems that Birth Control is not a popular idea. Many people are afraid of "the law". Know what "the law" is? Male legislators, male doctors, male psychiatrists. Men have always run the government in Amerika. Women have always suffered because of their ridiculous and heartless laws. (Like the War, like discrimination, etc., etc.). How can a man possibly decide about pregnancy and abortion when he never experiences them? I have a right to a clean, safe abortion if I want one. My body is not the property of the STATE of Amerika. I suffered a long time because I could not get an abortion. My child is lucky. He has a good home, I think. (I really don't even know where he is.) But there are so many children who need love and shelter and food right NOW.

I hope that you, women and men, will use the Center. I hope that the Student Senate will not reneg on its promise of money. I hope that women will not have to suffer in silence because they feel afraid and alone. We can help each other.

Winning People

The MOBE's Sid Finehursh spoke at the Rally in Washington Saturday, and he told the people there the kind of direction the strike has to assume.

"Spread the strike," he said. "Turn the universities into engines of anti-war activity. Organize in the communities, in the factories and at Army bases. And bring it all together today through May 30th (The next major rally) and beyond with mass actions in all the towns and cities of America...The people have power. We must help organize that power."

The power he speaks about is political power, the power to change the way in which the government handles certain people and situations, the power to change the government. This is the only kind of power that really matters now.

All aspects of American society are ordered to produce political power. In economics, in business, in the military, in education and in labor, gaining effective political power in order to then gain specific goals is the primary way in which anyone can seek to make any significant changes in life or in life styles.

Because of this, the student strike must direct itself toward political action. The host of workshops held last week at UMass were valuable educationally, and we probably were more valuable than the classes they replaced. But while education, this kind of education, is a very good thing, by far the most impressive strike activities last week were those with direct political involvement.

Canvassing was one of these. UMass students trudged the streets of Amherst and Northampton and had doors slammed in their faces and epithets shouted at them from passing cars. But they also talked with middle America and told the middle Americans who would listen why they were on strike. This was political. It may have changes some minds. It at least opened others.

Another group of students began speaking to town high schools about the strike and the war and the Panthers. This is educational and it is political. High school youths are leaning toward political action and college students talking to them during these weeks amounts to recruiting an army of high school political workers for the summer.

Still another group at UMass last week opened the possibility of impeaching the President and the Vice-President. And while one organizer of the impeachment movement confessed that there is little hope of actually dumping Nixon, he did say that his movement would at least involve politicians in the strike during the summer before an election.

These were concrete actions, actions which may make political progress. Another form of political action being considered by strike leaders include an economic boycott of non-essential commodities. This is very promising politically, for it affects the business world, the group which has more say in the electing of public officials than any other single group in the nation. It is the business world that has now lost all confidence in the Nixon administration. If an effective economic boycott were staged, business would surely turn from Nixon and his political family in this election year.

"The people have power. We must help organize that power."

This must be the direction of the strike for the remainder of the semester. Keep the University open as a center for politicizing the people who have let their power sleep for too long. This is the way in which the strike can succeed. For, as in labor, a strike must be won, and just staying away from classes without doing anything really political instead will not win anything.

People must be won, not made enemies of. Political action must be seized, not ignored. If the strike succeeds, change will be possible. It cannot win if the strikers do not become politicians.

Parents' Workshop

Yesterday at 3:00 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium, a crowd of students and their parents expected to hear some explanations on the strike that has dominated many of our lives in the past few days. Instead we were presented a lecture for over an hour on the history of Vietnam. Most of it was very informative, and the last fifteen minutes in particular, were superb.

However, I brought my family to that workshop so the strike could be explained to them more convincingly than I had been able to do myself. We stayed for the duration of the talk only because I thought a question period would follow, concerning the strike.

To the woman from the sociology department who was to speak on black problems, I apologize for myself, my family, and anyone else who left before you spoke. But I could not bring myself to sit through another topic I was not prepared to listen to.

The next time parents are invited to our campus to understand why their children express themselves the way they do, I hope the posters they read when they get here will not be so misleading as the May 10th Parents' Workshop Schedule.

Campus Comment - The Strike

To The Editor:

In regard to your article on Friday, May 8, entitled, "Allen Explains Policy for School of Ed," I feel that you have grossly confused both the School of Education policy and my personal views of the three demands of the University Strike Committee.

In the first instance, I was quoted as saying that I would abide by the University's position on strike matters and further that this represented the School of Education policy. What I did say was that as Dean of the School of Education, I would support whatever strike stand of the Education Assembly as determined through referendum. On May 6 and 7, members of the Education Assembly voted to endorse the following referendum:

Moved:

a. The expression of support for the aims of the student strike.

b. The cooperation of concerned faculty and administration in discussing with students the underlying issues of the present crisis.

c. The exploration of common actions of persuasion and protest with other colleges and universities.

d. No punitive measures be taken against striking students.

e. Each member of the faculty work out with his students an appropriate way of dealing with incompleted class work and final grades.

We respect the relationship between teaching and the creation of a more decent social order. If, therefore, during coming days, other positive activities interfere with regularly scheduled classes and meetings, each member of the faculty should decide in consultation with his class whether to hold, to reschedule, or to cancel classes.

At the Education Assembly meeting of May 7, I was asked to state explicitly my personal opinion with regard to the three demands set forth by the University Strike Committee. Again, in this instance, I was quoted out of context in the Collegian article. While I did not that I felt compelled "to support legally constituted government," I also said that all of our efforts should be channeled towards making government as just as possible. Further, I stated my personal opposition to the extension of the war into Cambodia. With respect to the second demand, I feel that legal due process should be guaranteed to every citizen regardless of political views. I know that many instances of oppression can be documented. If Bobby Seale and other members of the Black Panther Party are victims of systematic oppression because of their political views or whatever reason, then I support their immediate release and redress.

Essentially, I cannot support the third demand which calls for the arbitrary ending of ROTC and defense research on this campus. Universities, in my opinion, should be forerunners for the expression of all points of view and represent the full diversity of opinion of the communities they serve. I believe that the abolition of ROTC would deny to a minority a right which exists in society. A University cannot possibly benefit by selectively precluding certain freedoms guaranteed to members of the society at large. Defense Research has been solely linked with the Vietnam war and aggression. This view is too simplistic. University support of diverse research activities - including defense-related activities -- needs further discussion. Basically, however, I believe in the right of individual scholars in conjunction with their faculties and student bodies to determine the scope of their research.

DWIGHT ALLEN
Dean, School of Education

To The Editor:

One of the three main issues in the nationwide campus strike is the presence of ROTC and war related research on campus. It was therefore not surprising to find windows broken in the physics building recently. What is surprising, and somewhat distressing, is the misunderstanding among a large fraction of students concerning the true nature of the research on this campus. Perhaps some facts and distinctions are in order.

Research work in the Physics Department varies from the extreme microscopic domain to the vastness beyond the galaxy. Most of the traditional fields of physics are represented in the department. These include: elementary particle physics, nuclear physics, atomic physics, solid state physics, astronomy and astrophysics. It would be tempting to draw the conclusion that these must be war related. However, the distinction between "pure" and/or "basic" research and "applied" research needs to be understood. Research which is at the very forefront of man's knowledge of the universe is termed "pure" or "basic" research. It is exciting because it probes the unknown and explores the wonders of Nature. Applied research on the other hand is a term given to research into the solution of specific technical problems, for example, military, social, environmental, or other problems. The Physics Department houses basic Physics Department only and has resisted the temptation to engage in applied research, even though such research is very lucrative. Another distinction which must be made is the difference between classified and unclassified research. Most all military applied research is classified, as such it retains secret status and can only be read by people with security clearance. Unclassified research is generally published in scientific journals and available to the general public in libraries throughout the world. It should be obvious that war-related research would always be classified. The Physics Department conducts no classified research and recently turned down a grant offer for classified work. To my knowledge there is NO classified research work being done on this campus. I would claim, therefore, that war-related research is not an issue on this campus.

To The Editor:

THERE IS ANOTHER SIDE:

Why R O T C on campus? Because we need to have it close enough to feel our influence; so its members can hear both sides and use more discretion when making future decisions.

Why not Black Panthers? The large part of the crowd who left the Pond rally Tuesday night during the Panther "destroy and kill" speech will answer -- there's been too much racism and violence, we must keep cool -- Peace through Love.

Why Cambodia? Cambodian students demonstrated against VC-infiltration and when their Prince went to placate the communists, they showed him and the world they meant business by ousting the Prince and ordering the VC to get out. The VC answer was full scale invasion to where the Cambodians called for world help (sent personal pleas to Nixon) and the Thais and Laotians and others warned of spreading danger so Nixon moved (unlike Poland who went helpless). People don't remember that VC have infiltrated Laos, Cambodia, Thailand and Vietnam every day for years. Flags at the rally tell all - Panther, VC, Cuba - the same. The U.S. needs love, Love begins at home - let's demonstrate for POSITIVE change

GEORGE HAILE

To The Editor:

Oh look out!!! There is an inside agitator lurking within this campus and trying to undermine the goals of all of our hard work. This slithery, slimy, gluttonous pig will sneak up on us, swallow our minds and leave us useless without our even realizing it. This tyrannical monster answers to the name of "EGO".

Our power lies in our ability to work together by keeping a clear, rational, open head on our shoulders in order to make and keep this strike a success. There is NO ROOM for heroes or martyrs here. If this is what we want then we should join a military or religious war!

In other words, before we speak or act we must make sure that it is ONLY in the genuine interest of helping ourselves to secure our goals. It is imperative for us to suppress the desire to satisfy our ego. This will be a difficult thing to do, especially in times of STRESS -- and we ain't seen nothin' yet!!

Our potential to see this thing through rests on our ability to work with each other. No matter how much our personal beliefs and opinions may differ the important thing to remember is that our goals are the same. Then we can make the success of this strike our PRIMARY motive.

Also, we have to avoid knocking ourselves out. A bunch of anemic, frustrated insomniacs will soon crack up and will be of very little use now or in the long run. We OWE it to the success of our strike to eat, sleep, keep our sense of humor and, especially, to remember how to relax and enjoy ourselves every once in a while. We cannot be tense and frustrated within ourselves and expect to deal rationally with outside problems as they arise.

I know how easy it is to let my ego get in my way without even realizing it at times. But, if we are aware of it and ADMIT it to ourselves we will have an easier time controlling our actions. In order to work together as a successful unit, we must have control of ourselves.

CLAIRE MINISI

To the editor:

I am sick of hearing how bad the National Guard treats the students. They did not kill the four students at Kent State, the RADICALS did. Mr. Nixon apparently does not listen to student protests; we already know this. If people would go to their own homes and get their families and neighbors and friends to write to their representatives or men who want to stop the war, like William Fulbright or Edward Kennedy, then I believe we could stop our foolish President . He doesn't listen to student protests. The violent protests at places like Kent State just turn the older generation away from our side. They picture us all as freaks itching for a riot. Tricky Dick will only understand the voting age people. If we put all the energy we put out at that rally last night into trying to talk to people we are acquainted with, then we will bring them to our point of view and make them put the only pressure that will help on our government. I'm thankful for our National Guard because I wouldn't want to be attacked by a mob of rock-throwing people. We are heading towards the very violence we are trying to stop. We fought against England supposedly so we would have a country free from conflict. We have had no choice in defending ourselves in many places like Berlin and Cuba. We have made a mistake in Vietnam.

I am withholding my name for fear that my room will be bombed by the people who are supposedly working the hardest for peace.

Name Withheld by Request

To the Editor:

Everybody wants to strike! This, the latest form of protest against the system, is what last Monday's editorial calls an "action capable of making an impression on the vast belly of sleeping Amerika." For some reason, many people feel that we have finally stumbled over the right plan to end all our troubles. We are a little skeptical though, and here's why.

First, we find it hard to accept the possibility that a significant number of students, who are really sincere and willing to sacrifice a few credits, can be mustered. It is more than likely that most strikers do not feel this way, and will soon return to classes and take their finals.

This kind of two value philosophy is upsetting. It makes one feel that this is just the latest in a continuing series of anti-establishment protests. It is like the great Phoenix of mythology. It springs to life, quickly dies, and then comes back to life later. Recall the protests of two weeks ago when people voiced their concern about pollution. That movement not only died, but pollution took a back seat Monday as "concerned strikers" freely polluted the environment to promote their cause. Nothing is more ugly than the hundreds of painted fists, the multitude of unsightly posters, and the specter of crumpled pamphlets lying in heaps on the ground. Sight pollution is not the only harm. There are harmful dyes in the paints used, which was a topic of great anguish to people a few weeks back. In addition, the equipment which will have to be employed to clean up the mess will pollute even more. Again, this is very upsetting, as there is an obvious double standard in operation.

Furthermore, note that these students call for world peace. Yet, they use the time honored symbol of hate and violence, the upraised fist.

But we're still told that this strike will solve all our pressing problems. Once again let's try to differentiate between a solid solution and an art work of sensationalism. Last year, the thing to do was to protest the draft. This year that movement folded up and we find ourselves caught up in the principle of striking against "Amerika." Consequently, those groups involved in the strike (i.e. UMC, Strike Committee) are given funds by the Student Senate to continue and publicize. Yet, an equally meritorious organization, the Committee to Repeal the Draft, is refused any funding, on the basis that it is a politically oriented group. Really, the underlying reason is that it is not a facet of the present strike.

Yes the strike! It supposedly will bring an end to world strife and bring the administration to its knees. We are supposed to accept this, yet we feel oppressed while being forced to accept the dictates of this movement without question. We doubt the sincerity of the Strike, and we don't want to hop on the band wagon.

MICHAEL T. KAVANAGH
EDWARD J. BUTTERWORTH

To the Editor:

On April 27 a group of concerned University women publicized in the MDC their intent to petition the University for the establishment of a day care center in the Student Union on May 4 and 5. In order to avoid misrepresenting those who support our petition, we hereby declare that we are in no way affiliated with the SDS proposal to disband ROTC at UMass and establish a day care center at Dickinson Hall.

Nancy Brauneis, Diedre Lannon, Nancy Authelet, Gerry Templeton, Judy Krimsky, Chris Sellers, Sharon Burg, Cheryl Ashton.

To the editor:

In your Monday editorial last week you proposed that . students who are sincere about changing their country should go on a class strike. You characterized this as strong action. To me, this test of sincerity seems to be shamefully trivial and characteristically weak.

I would like to propose a more demanding test. Those students who are sincere about changing their country should stop going to concerts and buying records that contribute to air pollution and help to enrich a few individuals. After all, what have the Beatles and other assorted groups done with their money? Helping Ken Mosakowski feed and clothe the poor in Dorchester County would be one way to change the country.

But, it WOULD be easier just to stop going to classes knowing that there will always be a roof over one's head and three good meals a day, wouldn't it?

EDWARD CHENG

To the editor:

New forms of protest are needed but hard to find. I'd be interested in what reaction might be to the following suggestion:

In many civilizations, some type of self-disfigurement is used to express deeply felt rage or mourning.

HAIR is a major recognizable feature (even Spiro Agnew recognizes it) of many of those who disagree with the US war policy. It's easy to observe that SIDEBURNS especially are almost universal among us - or rather among those of us who are male - and that they usually represent some cultivation, care, and ego involvement.

What about sending our sideburns to the president to express our outrage and to mourn the dead? Women could participate by organizing the barbering.

I'd offer my full beard as a starter.

JAMES HOXENG

To the editor:

Tuesday night was one of the biggest rallies since the one before the NIT game, surprisingly this one was not for a sporting event. All who were there accepted the idea that they were striking to end the senseless killings on both sides in the Southeast Asian War, but the panthers who were there received some harassment. Maybe this was somewhat isolated from what the majority of strikers feel, but because it happened I'm left skeptical.

Just a few months ago, I recall the uproar over the Mills House incident. Seemingly the majority of whites on campus reacted in a racist way. Even though the blacks were promised a cultural center two years ago, many whites felt, that by the takeover, they were moving too fast. Moving too fast toward something like a chance at equality that should be guaranteed. Why should they "earn" it when it is easier to seize now. Well now we're confronted with a situation where supposedly the majority of the campus is for the Black Panthers and is yelling about the racist motherfucking pigs. I find it extremely difficult to believe that so many people have changed their ideas in such a short time. Or is it that they embrace the first point about the Indochina War, but don't see the point about the Panthers and political prisoners. Genocide is genocide whether it be black, yellow, or heaven forbid WHITE! But maybe because four whites were killed in Kent, or because more white soldiers or possibly some UMass whites will be endangered; does this sound closer to the truth. I hope not, for the sake of those who are genuinely involved in all the strike proposals, and for the sake of all the black people when the war comes to an end. End my skepticism and give equal emphasis to all the demands, if not we'll go from one Vietnam to another.

PAUL A. SYLVAIN

WATCH OUT FOR LEADERS

Any movement for social change should be personally liberating especially a movement such as the strike which has as one of its main goals education. We should remember that education is both implicit and explicit: explicit education is the kind of thing you can take notes on, information. Implicit education is subtle--you have to look closely to see it and it is absorbed sub-consciously.

The explcit education of the strike has been good. The worlshops sound interesting; the Pather workshops have been especially successful.

But what about the implicit educatin the strike offers? The workshops are the most important and democratic institutions of the strike but even they show the signs of elitism, authoritarianism and male chauvism. The workshops are often LED by MALE FACULTY. There is a lot of implicit education in that. 1. Why does a small group of people (or a large group of people) have to be led? Are human beings so stupid that they cannot run their own workshops co-operatively without a big daddy to supervise them? 2. Why are our leaders male? It is as ridiculous to assume that a small group of men sat down and plotted to exclude women from leadership roles as it is to assume that there are no intelligent or competent women in the Amherst area. The lack of women in leadership roles is a reflection of the larger culture which we can ill afford. 3. Why should workshop leaders so often be faculty? The implication in this is that non-faculty have less to say to each other because they are not "experts". But we are all experts on our own humanity and it is our humanity (the way we think of ourselves) of each other, the way we relate to eseperience) that the whole American system has degraded. We should discuss Southeast Asia less and how Amerika comes down on us more. We cannot afford a strike that ignores our fundamental brotherhood and sisterhood in the same way the official culture does.

THE STRIKE BUREAUCRACY

The strike bureaucracy came into existence with the strike. This bureaucracy tells people the y can't go up stairs in the liberated union unless they're "important" or "have business" (some are more equal than others); it monopolizes competence and information; it makes some people essential and others inessential; it puffs some up into leaders and turns everyone else into followers; it is conducive to egomania, competition and separation as X battles Y for a superior position in the hierarchy. It even sets up its own police force to guard its policies!! It is a replica of the state that alienated us in the first place.

Do you feel alienated from people who go for three days without sleep while working on the strike and then stumble toward the medic complaining of exhaustion? The problem is that they feel that no one else can do what they can, so they make martyrs of themselves and spend so much time in a position that they become as essential as they hoped because of the information they have accumulated. Their commitment is not toward community but toward competing and winning.

The implicit lesson of a steering committee meeting is that it is impossible for people to work together to change their lives. People listen only to men who have achieved power in the hierarchy (look for battle scars); parliamentary procedure is rigorously enforced by those who have status and power on those who don't, while they ignore it for themselves; issues are not debated but screamed. Personal spite is evident as are personal alliances; cliques and factions replace community feeling. Ego trips flourish.

Our problem is that we REFLECT the larger culture. We never saw or heard of anything that was run co-operatively so we don't know how to BE co-operative. We associate efficiency with a top-down power flow even though all our practical experience shows us otherwise. We must have the faith and the imagination to create new ways for people to relate to each other especially in a mass movement.

We don't know how to relate co-operatively anymore than anyone else but as a first step we can abolish leaders in the workshops and work to abolish our servile need for leaders. Let's lower our voices and remember that we are sisters and brothers: it's up to us to bring our humanity into the strike.

There is a time when the machine becomes so odious, makes you so sick at heart that you can't take part; you can't even tacitly take part, and you've got to put your bodies upon the levers, upon all the apparatus and you've got to make it stop. And you've got to indicate to the people who run it, to the people who own it, that unless you're free the machine will be prevented from working at all.

Mario Savio, 1964

300 Schools Out On Strike

Revolution

REVOLUTION is the creation of new living institutions, new groupings, new social relationships, it is the destruction of privileges and monopolies; it is the new spirit of justice, of brotherhood, of freedom which must renew the whole of social life, the moral level and the material conditions of the masses by calling on them to provide, through their direct and conscious actions, for their own future.

REVOLUTION is the organisation of all public services by those who work in them in their own interest as well as the public's;

REVOLUTION is the destruction of all coercive ties; it is the autonomy of groups, of communes, of regions;

REVOLUTION is the free federation brought about by a desire for brotherhood, by individual and collective interests, by the needs of production and defence;

REVOLUTION is the constitution of innumerable free groupings based on ideas, wishes, and tastes of all kinds that exist among the people;

REVOLUTION is the forming and disbanding of thousands of representative, district, communal, regional, national bodies which, without having any legislative power, serve to make known and to coordinate the desires and interests of people near and far and which act through information, advice and example.

REVOLUTION is freedom proved in the crucible of facts-and lasts so long as freedom lasts, that is until others, taking advantage of the weariness that overtakes the masses, of the inevitable disappointments that follow exaggerated hopes, of the probable errors and human faults, succeed in constituting a power, which supported by an army of conscripts or mercenaries, lays down the law arrests the movement at the point it has reached, and then begins the reaction.

are your contact lenses more work than they're worth?

If you're tired of using two or more separate solutions to take care of your contact lenses, we have the solution. It's Lensine the all-purpose lens solution for complete contact lens care—preparing, cleaning, and soaking. ■ Just a drop or two of Lensine before you insert your contacts coats and lubricates the lens surface making it smoother and non-irritating. Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. ■ Lensine is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic making it ideal for storage of your lenses between wearing periods. And you get a removable storage case on the bottom of every bottle, a Lensine exclusive for proper lens hygiene. ■ It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and could seriously endanger vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine. ■ Caring for contact lenses can be as convenient as wearing them with Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

Economic Boycott Against Coke and Phillip Morris

An economic boycott against products of Coca Cola Inc. and Phillip Morris Inc., has been put into effect by the National Strike Committee. The purpose is to put pressure on these large corporations so that they in turn, will put pressure on Washington, D.C., to bring all the troops home from Southeast Asia.

Products of these corporations are as follows: Coca Cola: Sprite, Fanta, Fresca, Tab, Tekoe Tea, Cope Aspirin, Real Gold, Hi C, Minute Maid, Snow Crop. Phillip Morris: Parliament, Virginia Slims, Clark Gum, Alpine, Paxton, Burma, Persona.

Students are urged to boycott these goods and switch to substitute products, at both stores and restaurants.

These two corporations were chosen for four reasons:

1) They can be seriously affected by a nationwide consumer strike because they are in narrow, youth-oriented markets.

2) They can in turn affect public policy because they have large lobbies in Washington.

3) This boycott would not unfairly hurt the small businessman because he can sell comparable products.

4) The boycott requires no undue sacrifice because there are comparable substitutes.

Petitions are being circulated on the UMass campus to gather visible student support for the boycott. In addition, stores in Amherst, Hadley and Northampton are being leafletted in order to inform the consumer of the boycott.

All those interested in aiding the boycott are urged to attend a meeting Monday, May 11, at 11:00 a.m, in Bartlett, B-15, where student support will be organized and the feasability of other economic actions will be discussed.

In addition, an economic boycott workshop will be conducted by Prof. George Treyz of the economics department, Monday May 11, at 2:30 in Machmer, E-13.

EC Action Strike Committee Advises Bank Withdrawals

The Economic Action Strike Committee "Stop War Dollars" effort is presently organizing group withdrawals from the three Amherst banks, for Tuesday, May 12. According to the Committee, every dollar taken out now removes five dollars from war resources.

A planning meeting will be held today i n Mahar from 4-5 p.m. Preparation for the bank account withdrawals will be held Tuesday from noon t i n Mahar. All persons planning to make withdrawals will meet at the Amherst common at I p.m. Tuesday.

The Committee asks all depositors to "help us change the present war recession economy into a peace and prosperity economy for all Americans." Deposits will be renewed when the war ends.

Chancellor's Suggestions For Campus Non-Violence

The following guidelines for maintaining campus order during the current strike have been issued by the Chancellor:

1. In response to the proposals of the Strike (Steering) Committee (6 May 1970) the administration and officers of the campus police pledge themselves to support the basic principles of non-violence in every way possible.

2. It will be the policy of the University Police to continue to cooperate with marshalls by having the marshalls assume total responsibility for all group strike activities. Officers will not enter strike activity areas unless requested to do so by the marshall chairmen. Under these circumstances they will be escorted by marshalls and will not carry loaded firearms.

3. Police officers will continue to respond to individual complaints in other campus areas. Marshalls will be invited to escort officers during such assignments.

The guidelines above are issued following extensive consultation with the University Police and the Non-Violence Sub-Committee of the Strike Steering Committee. They will remain in force, subject to continuing consultation, for the duration of the strike under the following conditions.

1. The negotiations leading to the guidelines were undertaken with a group pledged to non-violent action. This implies that participation in the strike is a matter of persuasion and that those who do not wish to take part will be able to go about their normal business.

2. The marshalls are expected to maintain order in strike areas and during strike activities. It is the Chancellor's responsibility to take reasonable and prudent steps necessary to the safety of persons and property. Therefore, the guidelines can remain in force only as long as order is maintained.

3. Marshall Chairmen are expected to call the police whenever the exercise of police powers, such as the power of arrest, is required. Marshalls Chairmen are expected to notify the Chancellor if they cannot maintain order.

4. The Chancellor will meet with the police, the marshalls, and an Emergency Advisory Committee of the Strike Steering Committee before suspending, or acting contrary to, the guidelines.

'Educational' Advice for Marshalls

Marshalls Magnificent, Points Given Here in Spirit of Education

By DON ERIC LEVINE
Dept. of Comp. Lit. & Grievance Comm.

I think I am speaking for the great majority of the university community, strikers and non-strikers alike, when I voice my pleasure and amazement at the effectiveness of the marshals up until now. They have performed magnificently, and I hope they will accept the following remarks in the spirit in which they were intended - one of education, not recrimination.

According to the marshals themselves (I am perfectly willing to describe the sources of my information to anyone who is interested):

1 - they are committed first and foremost to non-violence (and by first and foremost they mean before their commitment to the Strike, and before their commitment to any of the demands of the Strike):

2 - they feel that they have correctly interpreted the attitude and mood of the overwhelming majority of students in this their primary commitment:

3 - while they interpret violence to mean physical harm to people, they have extended their policy to include situations which they feel might LEAD TO violence:

4 - they have instructed themselves that in any case where they think that their primary commitment may be overruled by their feelings or emotions they must then remove their armbands and, IPSO FACTO, they are no longer marshals:

5 - they feel that in some sense all members of the Strike Committee are marshals (what 'sense' has never been made quite clear):

6 - they realize that the situation on campus is in a state of constant flux and that they must ultimately rely on their faith and trust in each other, rather than on theoretical positions or policy-making discussions, to react properly to each new situation as it occurs.

My primary objection to points 1, 2, and 3 is that I do not know whether the Strike Committee or the larger group of striking students that this committee represents is aware of the fact that the marshals are committed to an ethical position rather than to any political position such as the Strike and its demands (I certainly was never made aware of this).

But even if most of us are aware of the marshals' position, there is an extraordinary danger here. This danger is that the marshals, and not the elected body representing the students, are NOW formulating policy by directing the 'mood' of the Strike. They are doing this by keeping subtle but nonetheless firm control over the means through which this Strike is working.

Originally the marshals may have correctly interpreted the 'mood' of the majority of strikers (and I use the word 'may' advisedly, since the marshals were already pre-conditioned to wanting to find a certain 'mood' at work in the strikers). Now, however, after the first week of the Strike, the marshals are working at maintaining this 'mood'. The Strike is no longer being left to find its own means and direction through its own momentum (a momentum which should be the result of reactions to events, based upon the goals of the Strike).

Instead, the marshals are now setting the tone of reaction, which is to say that it is now the marshals who are EFFECTIVELY controlling the direction of the entire Strike. This is implicit in point 3, for instance, where the marshals may now feel at liberty to interpret the attempted take-over of a building as possibly conducive to violence, and therefore they might physically block that take-over. It is also, I think, implicit in point 5, which I understand as meaning that the marshals feel that their right to interpret the "mood" of the strikers and then to act upon that interpretation is based upon their mandate from the Strike Committee which is "in some sense composed of marshals."

We may agree with the tone of the strikers 'mood' and the direction of the Strike as the marshals have interpreted them, but we must be aware who is now setting and guiding what is in effect policy. We must be aware of the primary commitment of these people - non-violence, not the Strike.

Point 4, as I see it, means that the marshals do, however tacitly, admit that there is a difference between being a striker and being a marshal, and that the marshals admit that their supposed primary allegiance to non-violence may be overridden by their committment to the Strike. If this is true, even for marshals, shouldn't the rest of us be thinking about and discussing where we stand?

Finally, with regard to point 6, I see an issue that is often raised and, unfortunately, usually in all too acrimonious a fashion - the issue of discussion, and of the need for a proper and adequate strike theory from which our actions should spring, and which should underlie all our actions.

Even though we are not in a truly revolutionary phase, it is unfortunate for our hopes of ever reaching such a revolutionary moment that we still need to be reminded that "there is no revolutionary action without revolutionary theory." For the present moment, however, there is something even more pernicious in point 6, and something that pertains to far more of us than to just the marshals.

Many people at open Strike Committee meetings have objected to the lengthy discussions of theoretical stands and issues. Some of them (and the marshals too, I fear) are against all theory as being unnecessary, as being just so much rhetoric. They also object to it as being too similar to what goes on in the Establishment.

This is an old argument - old to the Left as well as to the Establishment. At heart it is nothing but a form of anti-intellectualism (however well intentioned). One of the great founders of the movement for true qualitative social change, Rosa Luxemburg, has answered this position: "No coarser insult, no baser aspersion, can be thrown against the workers than the remark: 'Theoretic controversies are only for academicians.' The entire strength of the modern labor movement rests on theoretic knowledge."

The marshals and others like them claim that one must deal with situations not theories. However, the only way one can at all be sure that one is dealing correctly with a situation is not by 'interpreting a mood,' but by having well thought out and fully and freely discussed theory as one's basis for action." ...theories are only the images of the phenomena of the exterior world in the human consciousness..." (R. Luxemburg).

I am not, really and truly not, blaming the marshals. What I am trying to do is point out the need for a theory of action in this Strike. Once actualized, such a theory would end all discussion and possibility of running a strike through the interpretation of a mood. The Strike is, let us face it, not a moral issue, but a political one. If non-violence is the best way (as I think it NOW is) for achieving our political goals (the ending of the war, the ending of repression of the Black Panthers, and the ending of campus military involvement) then let us be non-violent - but let us be POLITICALLY non-violent.

Grading Policy Subcommittee Meets Administration . . .

Newly-Negotiated Proposal Retains Most of the Original Points

A grade policy subcommittee of the Strike Steering Committee met with members of the Administration Saturday and negotiated a Grading Policy proposal that was agreed to by all members, and retained nearly all of the points contained in the original proposal.

The administrators were Dean Seymore Shapiro, Provost Robert Gluckstren, David Clay, and Professor Dean Alfange of the Faculty Senate Emergency Advisory Committee. These members pledged their personal support of the Grading Policy proposal.

The Grading Policy proposal was presented to the Strike Steering Committee meeting Sunday at 10:30 a.m. by the subcommittee and two representatives from the Administration, Dean Shapiro and Clay. After discussion of the points of the proposal, the Strike Steering Committee voted unanimously to accept the proposal, and expressed their thanks to these members of the Administration for their support in this issue, and for their support of the general aims of the Strike. The proposal must now be presented to the Faculty Senate and ratified before it can become the official Guideline policy.

Grading Policy Proposal

1. Each student may choose among the following grading options:
   a. To receive either a 'P' or a 'W' (A student choosing this option will receive a 'P' if he was passing the course as of 4 May 1970).
   b. To receive a letter grade, based on his work through 4 May 1970.
   c. To receive an 'Incomplete'
2. Final examinations will not be taken by students electing options 1-a and 1-b. The usual final examination policy of the course, or a mutually agreeable alternative will be followed for those electing option 1-c.
3. The grade of 'P' is recognized as fulfilling University, college and department requirements.
4. The period for removing 'Incomplete' is extended indefinitely, subject to further discussion.
5. Grades need not be turned in until the strike is over, unless a student specifically requests his instructor to turn in his grades as soon as possible.
6. A grievance committee will be formed to protect students, teaching assistants and faculty members from retributive (punitive) measures.
7. Points of this resolution will apply to undergraduates and graduate students, teaching assistants and faculty members.
8. During the period of final examinations, all members of the University community will be invited to participate in workshops and other activities related to the aims of the strike.

UMass' varsity baseball team won one game and lost one over the weekend. On Saturday UMass lost to New Hampshire, 7-4. On Sunday, UMass defeated Boston University, 8-1. UMass' overall record is now 13-11. UMass was scheduled to play Amherst today but that game has been called off because Amherst's athletic team is cancelling the remainder of its schedules.

All undergraduate and graduate students should turn in their physical education and intramural clothing and equipment by 4 p.m. Friday, May 15, 1970.

UMass varsity and freshman lacrosse teams were to have played games against the Amherst varsity and freshman teams on Saturday but both games were cancelled for the same reason that the baseball team will not play Amherst tomorrow.

A pause to think of Bruins' great win . . .

Bruins Snatch First Stanley Cup In 29 Years, Tip Blues, 4-3, in OT

BOSTON (AP) - Bobby Orr's goal after just 40 seconds of overtime gave Boston its first Stanley Cup in 29 years Sunday as the Bruins defeated St. Louis, 4-3, completing a four-game sweep of the Blues.

A capacity Boston Garden crowd of 14,835 exploded as Orr beat Blues' goalie Glenn Hall from up close, bringing the Bruins the cup for the first time since 1941.

It was the 10th straight National Hockey League playoff victory this season for the Bruins, and one of their toughest. They had to battle from behind twice to tie the score against the inspired Blues.

St. Louis desperately trying to avoid a third straight sweep out of the final round, checked the Bruins tenaciously in the nationally televised game and led them 3-2 with less than six minutes left in regulation time.

But the Bruins, determined to win the cup on their home ice, pressured Hall continuously until veteran Johnny Bucyk, who celebrates his 35th birthday Monday, deflected a shot in for the tying goal with 5:32 left in regulation time.

Then, with the crowd in a frenzy, the Bruins took the opening faceoff of the overtime into St. Louis ice and never let the puck back over their blue line.

First Derek Sanderson shot wide but Boston controlled the rebound and Orr grabbed the puck at the right boards and skated in on Hall. He took a tremendous check that sent him flying through the air in front of the net but still managed to nudge the puck home.

That set off a spectacular celebration climaxed by the presentation of the cup by NHL president Clarence Campbell to Bucyk, the 15-year veteran and assistant captain of the Bruins. Bucyk skated happily around the ice with the cup held high in his arms.

Sanderson, Boston's hard-styled center, was the architect on the Bruins' opening goal which was scored by defenseman Rick Smith.

Twice Sanderson sweep-checked kept the puck in the Blue's zone and the second time Smith grabbed it and fired a rising shot that gave Boston a 1-0 first period lead.

Red Berenson evened it for St. Louis with just 43 seconds left in the opening period and then the Blues took the lead on Gary Sabourin's goal early in the second period. Phil Esposito tied it for Boston with his record 13th goal of the playoffs midway through the second period. It was his 27th point, also a record. That tie lasted only 19 seconds into the third period.

The Blues buzzed Gerry Cheevers and the Boston goalie was sprawled after a save when Larry Keenan flipped the rebound over him for a 3-2 St. Louis lead.

The Blues fell back into a defensive stance after that, trying to protect the edge and hold the Bruins off to force a fifth game. But Boston was having none of that and the Bruins perseverance paid off in Bucyk's goal to force the overtime.

The final round victory was worth $3,000 per man to the Bruins, added to the $4,500 each of them had earned for earlier victories over New York and Chicago.

The Blues got $1,500 each as losers in the final

Faculty Senate Passes Grading Proposal

By DAVID WILLIAMS
Issue Editor

After almost two hours of heated debate, the Faculty Senate, by an almost unanimous voice vote, passed the grading policy which was hammered out over the weekend by the Grading Policy Subcommittee and the Administration.

The meeting was called to order by Secretary Glen Gordon and a motion was immediately entertained on whether to conduct business in the normal manner. After some short debate the Senate voted to make all business conducted at the meeting binding.

A few members of the Senate were rather irate because of the short notice the meeting was called on. Gordon explained that the meeting was an emergency meeting and called on David Clay, Director of Libraries, to clarify the issue. Clay rose and said, "It's hard for me to imagine that anyone on campus doesn't realize that there is an emergency."

Clay outlined the discussion leading to the proposal before the Senate. Over the weekend the Strike Steering Committee met with four members of the administration to develop a new grading guideline. The proposal which was formulated was one which, in Clay's words, "We all felt we could live with." According to Clay, the Strike Steering Committee was deeply concerned over the grading issue and wanted to get it out of the way as soon as possible so that students could get on with the serious business of striking.

The Strike Committee was particularly worried about reports of punitive grade action taken by certain professors against students participating in the strike. Under the grading policy issued from the Provost's office on last Thursday, it was possible for this to occur. The Strike Committee also felt that the May 7 policy was not realistic for those not striking and wished to work out a more equitable plan.

Clay went over the new proposal point by point and explained how each differed from the May 7 proposal. The major difference between the two proposals is that students have the option of choosing what their grades would be under the proposal adopted yesterday. And, more important, in Clay's mind, "It does not require a faculty member to certify any student further than he has progressed."

At this point amendments were proposed. One of them provided that if a student does not indicate to the teacher before the last class his wishes concerning the options open to him under No. 1, then the teacher will choose which option to apply. This was itself amended to read that if a student does not choose an option by the time of the regularly scheduled final, then the teacher should exercise option 1 (a).

Morton Sternheim of the Physics Dept. then moved that the Senate consider the May 7 proposal instead of the one on the floor. Associate Provost Gluckstern stood to state "I appreciate Mr. Sternheim's allegiance to my original document. I'd like to speak against it. . .The motion that we have before us now is the one for us to take at this time."

William Connoly of the Government Dept. then voiced a new amendment to be entitled "1 (d)." The amendment reads "To take a final or the equivalent and be graded on the whole semester's work." It was passed unanimously.

Dean Alfange of the Government Dept. moved to add a whole new section to the proposal. It would be entitled "9" and would read, "The grading system for Spring 1970 will in no way be looked upon as a precedent for future grading systems for the University." This motion also passed. Cries from the floor were heard to close debate and vote and this was passed unanimously. The vote for the Grading Proposal as amended was passed by a voice vote with few dissentions.

Grading Proposal

1) Each student may choose among the following grading options:
   a) To receive either a 'P' or a 'W'. (A student choosing this option will receive a 'P' if he was passing the course as of 4 May 1970. If the student does not indicate his choice of option by the time of the regularly scheduled final, the faculty member will exercise 1a.)
   b) To receive a letter grade, based on his work through 4 May 1970.
   c) To take a final or the equivalent and be graded on the whole semester's work.
2) Final examinations will not be taken by students electing options 1-a and 1-b. The usual final examination policy of the course, or a mutally agreeable alternative, will be followed for those electing option 1-c.
3) The grade of 'P' is recognized as fulfilling University, college and department requirements.
4) The period for removing 'incompletes' is extended indefinitely, subject to further discussion.
5) Grades need not be turned in until the strike is over, unless a student specifically requests his instructors to turn in his grades as soon as possible.
6) A grievance committee will be formed to protect students, teaching assistants and faculty members from retributive (punitive) measures.
7) Points of this resolution will apply to undergraduate and graduate students, teaching assistants and faculty members.
8) During the period of final examinations, all members of the University community will be invited to participate in workshops and other activities related to the aims of the strike.
9) The grading system for spring, 1970, will in no way be looked upon as a precedent for furture grading systems for the University.

Why A Grade Issue

(Ed. note - The following is the Steering Committee's statement, written by Steve Portuges and Howard Gadlin, concerning the political implications of the grading issue. It was presented to the Faculty Senate after a voice vote passed the Grading Proposal as an argument favoring the adoption of the Faculty Senate Grading Proposal. It is felt by the Strike Committee that the use of grades as a punitive measure against students participating in the strike is a form of political oppression which the strike is attempting to overcome.)

During the past five days, the strinking community has been engaged in heated debate over the relevance of the grading polcy to the aims of the strike. It must be understood that the attempt to get the administration and faculty to suspend present grading policy is an attempt to fight the repression leveled against strikers.

It is clear that open threats as well as veiled intimidations to flunk strikers are attempts to break the strike; Such retributive promises are instances of the repression of our political dissent. As we will show, these punitive measures are specific examples of what we fight against by striking.

The nature of this opposition is twofold. For some, the strike is an unnecessary or undesireable mode of registering political dissent; for others, the strike is to be broken because of its clearly political aims. In other words, opposition from faculty and administration is directed toward either this particular form of protest or toward the content of the protest. Those who oppose the strikes content, have not explicitly stated the political basis of their opposition; they are using their academic positions as a vehicle for their opposition to the strike aims. Those who oppose the form of the protest (i.e. strike) do so to avoid recognizing the political issues involved.

We do not pretend to deny the right of ANYONE to voice their opposition to the strike's aims; in fact, we implore them to do so. What we are attempting to do in for form of a liberalized grading proposal is to eliminate the use of grades as a form of political opposition. We must understand the significance of the grade issue. Because grade decisions can disrupt or destroy the life plans of students, faculty and administration have the power to weaken the strike even when they support the current grading procedure on academic rather then political grounds.

We urge the faculty and administration who are genuinely anguished about the possibility of a degeneration of traditional academic standards and procedures to recognize that grading decisions based solely on academic considerations can have the same disastrous effects on the life plans of the students. Therefore, it must be understood that adherence to the current grading policy will functionally serve to weaken the strike. It is urgent that these people recognize that the request for suspension of traditional grading procedures is not a mindless attack upon their academic freedom. It is rather an urgent cry, a plea for help so that individuals may be freed to follow the dictates of their consciences in what can only be seen as a period of individual and social crisis, as well as a period of unprecedented education. Such recognition is totally concordant with the principle of academic freedom.

Changes Proposed in Senior Activities

A movement has been started by some members of the Senior Class to make significant changes in the Commencement and Senior Day activities. These Seniors feel that holding celebrations like Senior Day contridicts the principles of the National Student Strike and propagates the "Business as Usual" policy. The Commencement would be modified to make it more relevant to the current issues.

There will be an open meeting of the Senior Class on Tuesday in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union to argue the issues. Balloting will be held in the lobby of the Union from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday. Then on Sunday night a meeting will be held to determine action based on the results.

The following ballot will be presented:

COMMENCEMENT
1. I want commencement as traditionally planned.
2. I want commencement as traditionally planned with appropriate protest.
3. I want commencement cancelled completely.
4. I want commencement cancelled, but I want an alternative program.

SENIOR DAY
1. I want Senior Day held.
2. I do not want Senior Day held.
3. I want a modified program.

The Civil Engineering Faculty and student s share the concern of the University in the problems now confronting our society. It encourages students and faculty to study these problems and to seek solutions, and welcomes their efforts to develop awareness of these problems.

CONCERNED FACULTY

There will be a meeting in Memorial Hall Wednesday, May 13 at 4 p.m. for concerned faculty in support of the current crisis of the student strike.

School of Ed Declares "Mourning Period"

In a meeting last Thursday, the School Council of the School of Education, the policy-making body of the school, passed a resolution which "declared a period of mourning to last at least a week, during which business as it has been conducted within the school will not be conducted."

The situation at the School of Ed was somewhat clouded when the Dean and executive committee interpreted the above statement to mea n that "during the coming days other positive activities interfere with regularly scheduled classes and meetings each member of the faculty should decide in consultation with his class whether to hold, to re-schedule, or to cancel classes."

A spokesman for the policy council, stated yesterday that the council is the policy making body of the school and that individuals are protected by the policy statement. He further stated that the comments by the dean and executive committee do not negate the policy statement.

Anti-ROTC Committee Plans Dickinson Blockage

by JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

They came to Dickinson Hall to deal with effective measures to be taken against the presence of ROTC officials who, this morning, will enter Dickinson to conduct "business as usual." In a non-violent way, they want to prevent these officials from working in Dickinson today or any day in the future, turning the building's purpose into one of a day-care center.

They are members of the anti-ROTC Committee and, after two and a half hours of meeting in Dickinson 209 last night had elapsed, they had worked out three decisions; another was in question and one person was in the process of constructing a theory he thought would amplify the effects of non-violent actions now and in the future.

The meeting got underway at 8:15 and was still going on as of this writing. About 25 persons were in attendance when the meeting was initiated; ten to 15 more were there when coverage of the meeting was terminated.

The most important agreement reached came as the result of a vote taken on three proposals set forth to deal with the best method of confronting ROTC officials when they arrive at work this morning.

The first proposal was not to allow the officials to get into their offices or, at very least, to make it extremely hard for them to do so. The second idea was to let them into their offices for the expressed purpose of removing all of their papers and equipment, entities felt by the Committee to be contributing to the United States war effort in Southeast Asia.

The last idea was for the Committee , with as much student support as possible, to take overthe whole building, not letting in any officials whatsoever.

The first proposal received the greatest support, hailed by 25 votes as compared to proposal two's two votes and proposal three's seven votes; more people had filtered into the room, thus upping the number to about 35.

With this decision intact, those present then looked for the best means of carrying out this proposal. At this point, affairs got bogged down, although two proposals were called for vote.

Acknowledging the fact that there are 16 offices in Dickinson deserving blockage, a member of the Committee proposed that two volunteers be placed in front of each office. Their duty would be to sleep there through the night, organize student support whenever possible (to help them block the door) and to finally block that office when the ROTC occupant arrives this morning.

The alternate proposal was to split up the members of the Committee into two groups, each to take care of its floor. Each group would also accept student support and would unite to block the incoming officials this morning. However,the meeting got hung up in rhetoric and confused theories for about an hour. Vote was taken on each of these proposals, but some members deemed these voting procedures irrelevant and the voting was made unofficial. At the time of departure, another vote on these proposals had not been taken.

On person, in particular, was the most successful in disrupting the proceedings of the meeting. He disrupted proposals. He interrupted persons who had raised their hands to speak. And he took subsequent abuse.

However, after having affected the crowd to his liking, he exposed his little antics as having a purpose. He wanted to create tension in the meeting, and he did. After he had, he put across his point: "When you start to think in non-violent actions, you have to start thinking in non-violent terms." He stated that such meetings as this one, to propose tactics of non-violence, must be non-violent themselves.

He spoke of rationality and said that the members of the Committee must themselves be rational before attempting to deal with ROTC in a rational manner. After creating tension at the gathering, he went about trying to create unity. At the time of this writing, his success or failure in doing so was unknown.

Two other proposals gained acceptance earlier in the meeting. At the very beginning of the affairs, it was decided that no dope be smoked in Dickinson Hall by those who would be conducting anti-ROTC action within the building.

The other proposal was written up as follows:

"The Anti-ROTC Committee will occupy Dickinson Hall until the following demands are met by the administration of the University.

1. All ROTC contracts be terminated.
2. The University must replace ROTC stipends and grant scholarships to all students affected by the cut.
3. Establish a day care center financed by the University for the children of,
   a. Faculty
   b. Staff, workers
   c. Students.

To become effective immediately after the demands are met."

Upon leaving the meeting, the mood was still one of discussion and plans yet to be formulated, although certain members of the Committee had left the meeting to drum up student support at various points around campus.

Eric the Rat addressed last night's meeting in Dickinson Hall to decide on appropriate action to be taken against the ROTC officers who will return this morning.

The Strike Committee marshalls assigned to guard Dickinson Hall held a "House-warming" party for the new tenants, the Anti-ROTC Committee. Beer was passed out and a good time was had by all.

Preparation for the bank account withdrawals will be held Tuesday from noon to 1 in Mahar. All persons planning to make withdrawals will meet at the Amherst common at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

The Committee asks all depositors to "help us change the present war recession economy into a peace and prosperity economy for all Americans." Deposits will be renewed when the war ends.

The Nation and The World

Funds Barred from Use in Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved overwhelmingly Monday legislation barring funds for all future U.S. military action in Cambodia - on the ground, the sea and in the air. The panel also acted to limit the Defense Department's freedom of action under a military sales bill and voted to plug what one senator called "a loophole big enough to drive the whole Pentagon through."

The actions came as Senate Democratic leaders scheduled a month of debate on a series of foreign policy measures, most of them centered on the President's constitutional power to deploy U.S. combat forces overseas.

The Cambodia amendment was sponsored by Sens. Frank Church, D-Idaho and John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky.

It would forbid specifically the use of funds to retain U.S. forces in Cambodia, the supporting in any way the presence of U.S. advisors in Cambodia, and the conducting any air combat activity in support of Cambodian forces.

It also would forbid the spending of funds to provide military instruction to Cambodian troops "or to provide persons to engage in any combat activity in support of Cambodian forces."

The amendment would not bar the use of Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, unless they were directly supported by U.S. funds.

Spiro Speaks

WASHINGTON (AP) - Vice President Spiro T. Agnew says today's young people are fascinated by demonstrations and "enjoy confrontation because they were brought up on television instead of books." Writing in TV Guide's May 16 issue, the vice president said: "They see action, violence, confrontation on television and they are naturally more conditioned to action than logic."

He called on the television industry to do something constructive for the nation's children - rich and poor - who are "a captive audience for thousands of hours" of the formative years of their lives.

Agnew raised the question how many illegal demonstrations would ever take place if the television camera were not present.

He said it is clearly time that the industry, its critics and parents "give some hard and original thought to use of that critical block of prime time in a child's life that now belongs exclusively to commercial television."

Students Learn Lobbying Tactics

WASHINGTON (AP) - About 500 Brandeis University students opposed to the American role in the Southeast Asian war packed a House hearing room Monday for rep talks by sympathetic congressmen and a cram course on how to lobby for legislative antiwar action.

Charles I. Schottland, acting president of the university at Waltham, Mass., said the young people from 35 states would concentrate on senators and representatives who have not taken a stand on proposals for cutting off the funds for the war effort.

"We may be able to make some converts," he said. Student organizers prepared voting records which were distributed to the young men and women along with information on various proposals for withholding funds for the war.

"Your job is to turn the minority into the majority," said David Cohen, lobbyist for the Center for Community Action. "Congress is in mid term exams and being graded," he added. "You have to know facts and how he voted. You have to know parliamentary procedure. You have to educate yourself about what the legislative business is all about."

"All that's important," he said, "is the power of the purse to put this war to an end." Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, told the students the moves in Congress to end the war are bipartisan efforts.

"It is not an irresponsible act," he added, "Congress is reasserting its constitutional authority. It is a correct way to approach the problem."

"We must take steps by law to bring the war to an orderly end," he said.

When a student asked if he thought president Nixon would veto a measure calling for an end to the war, Hughes said he felt that "if the people express their will, the President would abide and not veto it."

Rep. Edward I. Koch, D-N.Y., urged the students to press their congressmen on "the issue of what they are doing in terms of closing out this war now - and tell them if they continue to support the war you are going to oppose them in their districts" when they seek reelection.

Koch called the student drive a "crusade to bring morality back to the capital - we need that, believe me, we need it."

David Silberman, 19, of Mount Vernon, N.Y., a student leader, broke in during some of the speeches to call the list of state by state delegation meetings with congressmen.

Soldiers Refuse Orders in Cambodia

SAIGON (AP) - Six American soldiers are under restriction pending an investigation of refusal to make a combat assault into Cambodia, a spokesman for the U.S. 4th Infantry Division said Tuesday. They are obtaining legal counsel, he said.

The men were identified as Spec. 4 Thomas C. Dean, 21, of Belton, S.C.; Pfc. Hugh D. Richardso., 21, Enid, Okla.; Pfc. Danny E. Powell, 21, Johnsonville, S.C. Pfc. Samuel B. Palmer, 20, Bridgeport, Conn.; Spec. 4 Carl Simmons, 19, Philadelphia, Pa., and Spec. 4 Marvie L. Youngblood, 22, Glenwood, Ala.

The spokesman said the men have been restricted to their company at Camp Radcliffe, the central highlands headquarters of the 4th Division.

In a statement, the 4th Division said:

"The investigation is a result of two incidents that occurred at fire support base Meredith. The first took place at 7:30 a.m. on May 7 and involved the five members of Bravo Company. The other incident took place May 8 and involved only Youngblood...."

So he went from jock to rock and split to New York.

And then a brassy producer crowned him with a mohawk and some kit from Pittsburgh to speak English and called them Lord Alan and Sir Richard. Yeeth.

N.P.C. Points Weaknesses In Organized Crime Bill

The Federal Organized Crime Control Act contains provisions that violate the Constitution and threaten the liberties of all citizens, according to the New Politics Coalition, 25 Main St., Northampton, Mass. While the Act is purportedly aimed at destroying organized crime, it revises the entire system of criminal law in ways that are irrelevant to the stated purpose.

An analysis of the bill points out numerous drastic defects, among them:

- A Title I provision allowing federal grand juries to publish criticism of public employees when they haven't enough evidence to indict. The grand jury need not reveal the basis of its allegations, and the "accused" employee is not permitted a due process hearing to challenge the allegations.

- A Title II provision scuttling the Fifth Amendment's protections against self-incrimination. An individual may be compelled to testify or produce documents. Though the compelled evidence itself may not be used against him, he may be prosecuted for matters which he has been forced to reveal.

- A Title III provision allowing imprisonment of a recalcitrant court or grand jury witness until he is willing to testify. The witness is not provided a jury trial.

- A Title IV provision allowing perjury convictions based on circumstantial evidence. A witness may be convicted for "contradictory declarations," whether or not one of his statements was "knowingly false."

- A Title V provision allowing the possibility that a government witness may be unwillingly confined for his own "safety and security." (The ACLU finds no fault with the government's offering safe facilities to its witnesses on a voluntary basis.)

- A Title VI provision expanding the use of pre-trial depositions without substantially expanding the defendants' right to pre-trial discovery. The defendant's right to cross-examine is impaired by the substitution of depositions for "live" testimony.

- A Title VII provision weakening the right to challenge admission of evidence that was obtained illegally. A claim of inadmissibility is barred if five years elapsed between the unlawful obtaining of evidence and the event for which the individual is prosecuted.

- A Title VIII provision prohibiting any "scheme to obstruct" state criminal laws in order to facilitate illegal gambling. The terms of the provision are so broad and vague that they could be applied to "two men who park illegally on their way to an all-night poker game."

- A Title IX provision allowing the Attorney General to issue a "civil investigative demand" for documents that may later be used in criminal as well as civil proceedings. The privilege against self-incrimination is destroyed.

- A Title X provision permitting 30 year imprisonment of "dangerous special offenders." The term is so broadly and vaguely defined that it might include political demonstrators and civil rights activists.

This bill has been passed by the Senate 73-1. What can you do? The New Politics Coalition recommends that you write to House Judiciary Committee Chairman Emanuel Celler, 2136 Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, D.C., and ask for a copy of S-30 while registering your opinion on the legislation. Always refer specifically to S-30.

Also, write to your Congressman (1st District: Silvio O. Conte, House of Representatives, Washington D.C.). Ask him for a copy of S-30. Express your disapproval of its dangerous features and ask him to support a move to have the Bill re-written.

Committee Formed On Status of Women

A University Committee on the status of women is presently being formed. It will be composed of representatives from all part of the university community: administration, faculty, professional and non-professional staff, graduate and undergraduate students, and perhaps the larger town community as well.

The committee seeks to gain a broader understanding of the realities and the particular problems that women encounter in attempting both to complete their educations and to establish or maintain themselves in careers. If you would be interested in serving on this committee in the fall, please send your name, address, and any special interests or qualifications you may have to: Prof. Lee Edward or Prof. Arlyn Diamond, Dept. of English, Bartlett 262, University of Massachusetts, 545-2520.

Conscription Corner

This is the final Conscription Corner for the current school year. If you have questions concerning your draft status, visit the Valley Peace Center (Cook Place, Amherst) and talk with the draft counselors on duty there every weekday afternoon.

QUESTION: I have heard a good deal about Conscientious Objectors, but I have never met one. Who are they? What backgrounds do they come from?

ANSWER: The rate of men getting C.O. classification has tripled since 1960 and is growing all the time. In earlier days it used to be mainly Mennonites and Quakers who applied for and received C.O. status, but now any religious or moral convictions against participation in warfare, if these convictions are sincerely held, make you eligible for C.O. Many present day Conscientious Objectors are not "religious" in the traditional sense; they simply believe that organized violence and bloodshed go against their deepest ethical values. They are willing to help their fellow men by doing two years Alternate Service as civilians but cannot in good conscience participate in the war.

In answer to your second question, then, the C.O. comes from the same background as most of the rest of us: the Judeo-Christian heritage which proclaims a brotherhood of all mankind and which teaches that human life is to be cherished, not wantonly destroyed. The main difference between the C.O. and most of the rest of us is that he has taken these principles seriously and put them into action in his life.

QUESTION: What do you think of people who go to Canada to avoid the draft?

ANSWER: The more than 50,000 young Americans who have sought exile in Canada have taken a very big step. They are political refugees. I admire their courage, but I wish some of them were still here to work in the Movement for peace and freedom. I have heard reports that life in Canada is not entirely rosy. Some of the relatively unskilled young Americans are having trouble finding jobs, and some have been arrested and deported for minor offenses (drugs, traffic violations, etc.). If you are thinking of going to Canada, my strong advice is to visit and talk with people there before making a final decision. You can get information at the Valley Peace Center on such matters as these: how to gain admission to Canada, citizenship requirements, the job situation, colleges, etc.

QUESTION: I have noticed that there is not much opposition to the draft among older people. Don't people my parents' age recognize the evils of conscription?

ANSWER: I'm afraid many of them don't. They tend to accept "The System" in ways that younger people don't. Most of them are not eligible for the draft and can view military service as a remote, impersonal, inevitable social institution. It is very instructive to realize that middle-aged citizens would be outraged if their property or their income were conscripted or even if their taxes were raised very much. Yet they seem to accept with hardly any qualms that young men, including their own sons and neighbors, are pressed into killing and being killed. It is an indication of how warped American values are that money and property are almost sacred - for instance, businesses are not limited in the profits they can make from war contracts - while young human lives are felt to be expendable and draftable. Can you imagine the hostile reaction there would be if the government drafted cars, homes, businesses, and stock dividends!

QUESTION: I recently joined the National Guard in order to avoid being drafted. What do you think of this? Can I get out of the Guard if I want to?

ANSWER: You are probably aware that many young men are now having second thoughts about joining the National Guard because of what Guardsmen are being required to do. You may find yourself called up for duty in riot control, forced to tear gas and shoot poor people in city slums and fellow students on college campuses. But getting out is not easy. The standards for discharge are much stiffer than the standards for entrance (the same is true of military service in general). A medical-psychiatric condition which might have kept you from being accepted into the service will probably not get you out once you're in, and an action which might have made you "morally unacceptable" before entrance into the service will now probably put you into the stockage. The best advice is: avoid getting in, don't count on getting out.

QUESTION: If I become a C.O., will this hurt my chances of getting a job?

ANSWER: Probably not. Conscientious Objectors are not considered "subversive" nor denied security clearance. They have the same rights and privileges as anyone else. Some employers are glad to hire men who stood up for their principles instead of conforming to government pressure. But of course there may be other employers who are paranoid about hiring a C.O., even though it is illegal to discriminate on these grounds. In all likelihood no C.O. would want to work for such an employer. And if your decision about accepting or rejecting military service is based on which job you may get in the future, you are probably not a C.O. anyway.

FROM OUR SIDE

The Strike, Part II

The Faculty Senate's passage of the grading proposal yesterday cleared up the last of the administrative hangups which have thus far prevented the strike from directing its full attention to the problems which prompted its establishment.

Students have had to worry about grades. The various strike committees have had to worry about coordination between themselves and communication with the rest of the campus. But all of this is over now and no more explanations and rationales need to be pounded out by the various committees.

In short, we have all been "brought together." Now the task facing all the strikers is the strike itself – what happens now?

Specific plans must be made and carried through, and these plans must be both short and long range. Several attractive short range programs are now underway, such as tomorrow's "bank withdrawal day", the high school lectures and the town canvassing.

But students should also be thinking about programs which they can man through the summer, they should be conscious of not letting the strike die at the end of this week.

All the administrative details are past, and all that is now left is winning the strike itself.

EMERGENCY ACTION UNANIMOUSLY APPROVED
By UMass
Strike Steering Committee

The diffuseness of student action and lack of clear response by government is causing increased frustration. There is danger of extremist action to bring troops onto the campus. And there is even more danger of apathy. The strike effort needs a focus.

We don't have to wait for November to elect a Congress which will cut war funds. We don't have to wait for the present Congress to use the power of the purse regarding Cambodia. To end the war we can show that students have economic power to STOP WAR DOLLARS! Help us show this power to change the present-war-recession economy into a peace and prosperity economy for all Americans.

Every DOLLAR taken out of a bank savings or checking account removes FIVE DOLLARS from war resources. Cashing bonds helps even more. Help American workers. Continuing this war will surely lead to a depression - History proves this. Use your economic power to stop the war.

Final planning meeting at Mahar today, Monday, May 11th 4-5 p.m. March from Mahar and Haigis Mall to Amherst Commons begins Tuesday, 1:15 p.m., May 12th.

This will be fast, effective ACTION and first in the U.S. Coverage by all three national T.V. networks and important newspapers if we can get at least 500 - 1500 to march - you don't have to have an account, bring your friends.

Don't close account completely. Funds will return when war ends. This action is approved by economic advisors, working class advisors, and experts in social psychology and public relations. We ask Steering Com. Meeting end Tues. at 1:00 to lead march.

ELLIOT EISENBERG

The Old Nixon

The world in 1970 is in greater danger of being destroyed by nuclear war than it has been at any other time in the history of man. Even the Cuban missile crisis of 1962 does not parallel the danger of mass destruction.

Since the Second World War, the administrations of the United States have gradually come to the conclusion that a war between their nations would mean the virtual end of our world as we know it. What has developed is a DETENTE in which the US and the USSR respect the "spheres of influence" of each other.

The reasons that the world's safety has taken a turn for the worse lie in Moscow, Washington and Peking. Kruschev has been replaced by harder-line Russian leaders; China has developed a nuclear striking force; and the United States, too, has tuned to a hard-line administration.

Everything in Nixon's career suggests that he will be more willing to listen to the military than to the voices of more moderate advisers. Indeed, he has in the past few days rejected the advice of Hickel, Finch, Rogers, and even Laird, for the counsel of Mitchell and the Joint Chiefs.

Nixon first gained national prominence as a young congressman on the House Un-American Activities Committee. As chairman of HUAC's legislative subcommittee, he authorized the Nixon Anti-Communist Act in 1948.

"We are seeking to strike a body blow at the American cadre of the Soviet-directed Communist conspiracy," Nixon said in support of his bill.

Then, as now, he was concerned with internal conspiracy. While he claimed that the definition of "conspiracy" in the legislation was narrow, the New York Times commented that a conspiracy could be accomplished "by any means." It would no longer be necessary, said the paper, to prove that force and violence were contemplated to overthrow the government.

A search for Communists in the State Department, culminating in the Alger Hiss case in 1948-49 brought the young California congressman almost daily to the pages of the national media.

"Mr. Nixon's fight against domestic communism as reflected in the Hiss case," said the Times in 1952, "became a springboard, in 1950, for his plunge into the Senate contest in California."

Only two years after his successful campaign for the Senate, Nixon was nominated for the Vice-Presidency. He was put on the Eisenhower ticket to placate the conservative forces of defeated Senator Robert Taft.

As Vice-President, Nixon continued his virulent anti-Communism. "If in order to avoid further Communist expansion in Asia and particularly in Indochina;" said Nixon in 1954, "if in order to avoid it we must take the risk by putting American boys in, I believe that the executive branch of the Government has to take the politically unpopular position of facing up to it and I personally would support such a decision."

Last week, President Nixon ordered an invasion of Cambodia. He sounded dangerously like the Old Nixon, seeking to expunge the Communists, at home and abroad.

In a world whose very existence depends upon rational action by and at least minimal cooperation of the major nuclear powers, the recent Nixon policy has placed the lives of all of us on the line.

Boycott

WORCESTER, Massachusetts - Student representatives from over 200 colleges in the United States have agreed to boycott the products of two major American companies in an attempt to pressure the firms to take a stand on the Vietnam War. Alan Gummerson - an assistant professor of economics at Clark University - says that Clark will act as a national clearing house for action against the Coca Cola Company and Philip Morris Company. Gummerson said the companies were chosen "because they depend heavily on the youth market." In a statement the clearing house said the purpose of the boycott "is to use the framework of the American economic system to pressure individual corporations to exert political influence to stop the southeast Asian War and strengthen the peace movement."

Add to the list: Fresca, Sprite, Tab, Fanta, Marlboro, Parliament, Virginia Slims, Silver Thins.

To the President of The United States

We the undersigned denounce your recent expansion of the war in Southeast Asia. By your actions this week you have resumed pursuit of the long-discredited and morally bankrupt policy of American military victory there.

The domestic implications of your address to the nation April 30 are as ominous as your escalation of the war itself. To justify your invasion of Cambodia you have distorted, diluted, and conceded the essential facts of the Asian situation. By evoking images of terrifying and nameless forces of anarchy operating at home and abroad, you have sought to create a climate of public fear and to stifle dissent in the United States.

We reject your twin policies of military adventurism in Asia and social discord at home. We likewise reject your effort to reap partisan political advantage at the expense of countless American and Asian lives. We pledge our unyielding opposition to your war, and demand the immediate withdrawal of all American troops and military assistance from Southeast Asia.

Baha'i Faith

Institutions are the means for transforming ideals into social realities. Our present day institutions are, at the least, under scrutiny and are, at the most, under attack. Everyone does agree that things need to be changed, but no one agrees on HOW or to what extent.

There are various repair plans offered, and a violent few would burn the whole thing down in the hopes that something better would be built from the ashes.

When a new movement begins, or a new organization is formed, whether political, religious, or racial, the founders seek out others who hold similar beliefs and ideals, and amongst whom a certain frame of reference is agreed upon. However, this system has one major defect: what do you do with what cannot be agreed upon? This temporary isomorphic situation results in an arena for contests that divide and put men against one another.

Since the beginning of time, there has not existed an institution that has had a large tolerance for diversity. For a while one group of men rules, and then another. In politics it is the ins and the outs; in society, the haves and the have nots; and in religion, the saved and the damned. Decisions are made by a system of competition, advocacy, and subtraction. War is a natural outcome of this system.

What is needed is a system that is all-encompassing and free from the defect of "what cannot be agreed upon". The Baha'i Faith brings the foundations and structure for just such an institution.

The institutions of the Baha'i Faith operate under a new principle: Unity from diversity. Decisions are not made by a process of competition, advocacy, and subtraction. Truth is one and each man recognizes a part of it. By adding together different opinions (rather than subtracting to find what's common) the frame of reference in which each man operates is expanded. This is handled by simply giving ones' opinion in a spirit of openness and love. Once uttered your opinion belongs to the group and not one single individual.

This principle of unity from diversity is a direct growth from the spiritual realization that mankind is one. The different classifications into which man has divided himself are in reality false and superficial. All are under the care and protection of one God, and it matters not whether He is called Allah, Yahweh, or Lord. Because there is only one God, there is only one religion: THE WORSHIP OF GOD. All are His children and all partake of His care and loving kindness.

The principles under which the institutions of the Baha'i Faith operate and their structure were not constructed by the process of a founder seeking out those men with similar beliefs and ideals. The Baha'i organization was constructed to include all of humanity.

Moreover, the founder of the Baha'i Faith did not arrive at the organization of the institutions by human means. He is the Bearer of God's Words and speaks with God's knowledge, power, and authority. In this way the Baha'i Faith is not constructed from a limited frame of reference, but rather it is all-encompassing.

This is the basic difference in Baha'i institutions. They are run by men, but not man-made. They are free from the basic defect of not being able to incorporate what cannot be agreed upon because the Baha'i institutions are part of the new revelation from God for today. They are perfect and all-inclusive.

Poets In The Street

I persist in thinking
That the place of a poet at this moment
Is in the street
That you ought to take by assault
The ivory towers Raze them
Proclaim
A state of emergency

When I let myself go
Whimpering about my troubles
If those troubles are not also
Yours
Reader
Strike me hard

That there be no more
Absent poetry

To the editor:

I am moved to write this letter by a condition that has been developing since the student strike began. First, I am a faculty member supporting the strike because I firmly believe that this country is in the grips of a cultural and constitutional crises characterized by a paralyzed "leadership" pursuing policies without a policy for making policies; engaging in crises management rather than leadership; and generally indulging in continuous re-election charades at the expense of a sane national course, by purposely pitting one group against the other with vitriolic rhetoric for political gain. In short, something is wrong and I feel compelled to act.

However, actions have consequences for which I am responsible; to myself and to the society in which I exist, be it perceived or imagined. The issue involves the consequences of the strike action.

I wish to comment upon two consequences of this strike. First, education at the University of Massachusetts will never be the same.

More learning and real interdisciplinary dialogue has occurred in the last week on this campus than has perhaps occurred during the whole of last semester. Some students for the first time have been confronted with the task of relating to other persons with whom they do not agree, and to whom non-verbal dues and jargon phaseolgy has no meaning. Students have responded to this problem by attending numerous workshops with the genuine objective of learning about that which they have little or no knowlege. The campus has approached the principle of Goodman's elusive "community of scholars". Such a favorable consequence must be pursued and sustained.

However, another consequence of the strike is viewed as being essentially unfortunate, given that this view is biased and tainted green by one who has been trained as a landscape architect.

In brief the issue centers around people, machines, green, and space; namely the campus common or pond. People spaces are not for machines! Cars, the very symbol of a life style that vocarciously consumes out natural resources and human lives, intrudes upon our cultural space at every turn. The music of human voices gather together is continuously shattered by the blatting of motor cycles racing thru the crowds. Cars, parking everywhere (as if McLuan is literally correct in that we really do see the automobile as an extention of our legs) invade the green, severly damaging the turf's natural regenerative capacity. Police action prohibits cars from over-running our cultural landscape, but at the moment this police action is relaxed true enculturaled values are expressed in the ugly and hazardous mingling of that abortion of technoloby, the automobile, and human beings who of late are having a rather rough time of it consolidating those humanizing elements of reality that at best is becoming more surrealistic with time.

I wish to conclude with one question and a parting thought.

If the social and physical consequences of the new life style are essentially no different or perhaps more destructive and exploitive than the one which is being protested, then what price revolution? In a truly humane society one must transcend one's own consciousness; if not, then perhaps Adam Smith was right after all!

To the Editors:

It was my pleasure this past Friday to have been the guide for Mr. Paul Cavanaugh of Medford, a representative to the Massachusetts General Court. I should like to call attention to the fact that Mr. Cavanaugh's name was not listed as part of the visiting dignitaries. I'd just like to add that Representative Cavanaugh's sympathies are with the students.

To Get Her

To the Editor,

Concerning the presence of ROTC in the university: some people favor the retention of ROTC for the reason that all facets of an academic issue should be permitted equal facility on a college campus. Simply stated, I feel that an organization that teachers men and women how to wage war and to kill deserves no place anywhere in a "humane" society, much less on a campus. To assume that ROTC, or any teaching of ROTC is one side of an academic issue is folly. Anywhere in the world, free discussion of principle should be the order of things, but we must not permit any group to practice war-making and war-training in the meantime.

People may argue that courses of study such as Home Economics, Art, Food Sciences, and other subjects are also not academic concerns. They are not. But neither do they foster continuation of the "war machine." These studies do have a place on a campus supposedly devoted to learning and betterment. I urge EVERYONE, (especially those in "high" places) to give resistance, (substantial, not only verbal), to any war-related activity.

Love,
DOUG

These are letters and passages from letters written by seventh grade students expressing their opinions on the war in Southeast Asia.

Dear Mr. Nixon:

Our seventh grade class was asked to write to you. I'm writing my views on the Cambodian problem. GET OUT! Take it easy - it's later than you think! I'm not going to say if you're right or wrong but I wouldn't want to be in your shoes if they were made out of GOLD. When you sent our men to that forsaken place you signed a death warrant and another piece of paper stating another war for sure. I am just a 13 year old girl but I have considered Cambodia and think you have made a stupid, stupid, STUPID mistake. Did you ever stop to consider how many relatives I've lost? Somewhere around 25,000 I'd say. Yes, brothers, fathers, uncles and so on. Black, white or others. You've gone war happy and blood thirsty.

Dear President Nixon:

You are a lousy president. Why is it that every time you withdraw about 12,000 troops you put more than you took out in? That doesn't make sense!

When you were inaugurated the first thing you did was to visit other countries that isn't concerned about us. You should of waited and got settled in the White House and take part in your own country. The other presidents didn't do this but you had to be the oddball. I know you are trying the best you can do. But you are just messing up important things.

Dear Mr. Nixon:

You are the worst jackass that has ever seated in the presidency. Nobody can change that right now so I'll get to the point. You think you're so hot because you're behind that desk but man, you ain't shit. You still got our men in Vietnam. Why don't you drag your big ass over there. Our country didn't ask for a statue, we asked for a man that was going to do something.

Dear Mr. Nixon:

You ain't helped this country one bit. By the time I'm about twenty I'll probably be in Viet Nam and I'm a girl. At the rate you're going we all will. I have more respect for the kids in Viet Nam that for MR. PRESIDENT and will until they're out of there.

The National Guard, Cambodia, Out Hands Whatever We Have Left

You break open your hands
into the long wetness I left you

You break open your hands

into the long wetness I left you
there is a barn with the gifts

the young see floating through a slip of clouds
a smell of burnt hair fills the three districts of Phnom Penh it is still moist on the insides of your thighs

you reach down, three men are unrolling silver protection blankets for the tiny, delicate heads of bombs this is not an instant

it is what we touch for soldiers openfire it is your gently cupped hands that are wrapped in those blankets

soon we will know we have said enough

we will dance on the small faces of the dead

Conciliation

To The Editor:
BEDROOM IN THE WHITE HOUSE
Dick: Pat, Pat, wake up!
Pat: What's wrong dear?
Dick: I can't sleep.
Pat: Why don't you go for a drive, see the sights.
Dick: At five in the morning?
Pat: Why not?
Dick: OK, but if Spiro gets loose again, call me right away.

LINCOLN MONUMENT
Dick: Driver what are those quaint colorful things over there?
Driver: They are Hippies your Highness.
Dick: Hippies! In my city! Stop the car, I want to get a better look at them.

CONFRONTS HIPPIES
Dick: Er...excuse me, I AM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, what are you doing here in my city?
Hippies: We came to protest the war in Indochina
Dick: My God, how many are there of you?
Hippies: About one hundred thousand.
Dick: Driver take me back immediately, this is serious.

EMERGENCY MEETING IN WHITE HOUSE
Dick: I called this meeting to tell you we face a grave crisis, right now ut there are thousands of hippie-type bums that came to protest the war.
Senator Rivers: Drop the bomb on those bearded gooks!
Mrs. Mitchell: Why come to us, since when does the government listen to the people? Besides they are probably communists.
Mr. Mitchell: Dick, you better do something fast, you can't ignore them this time; there's no football game to watch.
Dick: How about if we crucify your wife, that may pacify them.
Mr. Mitchell: No way, they probably want all of us.
Sec. Rogers: Let's try something new, conciliation, tell them we are really on their side.
Spiro: Even I am not dumb enough to say that, and I am the number one fool, besides nobody would fall for that, especially those educated college types.
Dick: Listen Spiro, I am the boss around here, what I say goes. I think it's a great idea. If I want to be a bigger fool then you, I'll do it. Don't forget I AM the President.

ADDRESSES CROWD
Dick: My fellow Americans, you don't seem to understand, I want the same things you do.....

No Military, No ROTC

There can be no compromise with the presence of a United States military organization on the UMass campus. ROTC must be put off campus. ROTC's role in the Vietnam war is obvious indeed; they cannot be allowed to remain here and carry on business as usual because that business as usual just happens to be in support, over support, of the United States governments' policies of imperialism, both economic and military, all over the world.

The strike in progress at this time at the UMass campus and many other campuses across the country is in opposition to those governmental policies which we, the people, consider to be illegal and harmful to our rights and freedom. If you are opposed to Nixon's U. S. involvement in Cambodia and Vietnam and Laos and Thailand, etc, etc; etc., then you must be also opposed to the presence and function of ROTC on this campus as it is obvious that it is an integral part of the war in southeast Asia. You cannot separate a desire for peace from a desire for an end to militarism. Just how is it you can be against a war that lies a whole world away and not be against the local manifestation of that war. Whether you realize it or not, violence against property is not the same as violence against people. Guns can be destroyed. Would you consider violence against your draft files or the files of your friends to be harmful violence?

As of yesterday, ROTC interests, apparently unopposed, went back into the building that they consider to be theirs (and which doesn't belong to them and longer) and tried to begin functioning once again as before. They have no interest in the strike; they have no interest in dialogue except to fool people into not taking action; they have no interest whatsoever in building a new human nation but only in supporting militarily the old decadent culture. THEY ARE NOT ON OUR SIDE IF THEY OPPOSE US!

It is our right to do with the building what is good for people, not bad. It is up to us to enforce the third demand of the student strike and prevent the military from carrying on business on this campus. It is up to us, as human beings, as people, to try and win the ROTC cadets, destroy the system which rewards young men for being ROTC cadets. And if we cannot do that peacefully, we must do it by any means possible. ROTC function and equipment does not belong on campus, and neither does project Themis.

If it is not the purpose of this strike to make this world a better place to live, then what is it for. Sisters and brothers, stop ROTC.

TED PRATO

Genthemen may cry peace, peace -- but there is no peace...What would they have? Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the prices of chains and slavery?

PATRICK HENRY, 1775

As for conforming outwardly, and living your own life inwardly, I do not think much of that.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, 1850

Cautious, careful people always casting about to preserve their reputation and social standards, never can bring about a reform. Those who are really in earnest must be willing to be anything or nothing in the world's estimation and publically and privately, in season and out, avow their sympathies with despised ideas and their advocates, and bear the consequences.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY

Tell a man whose house is on fire to give a moderate alarm; tell him to moderately rescue his wife from the hands of the ravisher; tell the mother to gradually extricate her babe from the fire into which it has fallen...

No reform is possible within the existing partes. History has proven that no reform was ever yet worked inside the party or sect in which originated the corruption complained of.

STEPHEN SMITH, SECY.
Farmer State Assn. of Ill., 1873

Social change is violence itself. You cannot have progress without friction and upheaval. For social change, two systems must clash. This must be a violent clash, because it's a struggle for survival for one and a struggle for liberation of the other. And always the powers in command are ruthless and unmerciful in defending their positions and their privileges.

Feeding Hungry Kids

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following are excerpts from a tape made at one of the Panther Breakfast Programs in New Haven. Keep in mind that Vanessa is 8 years o-l-d. Yo-u-th will m-ake the revolution!

PEOPLE'S NEWS SERVICE: Do you go here every day?

GIRL: Mm.

PNS: How do you like it here?

GIRL: Fine.

PNS: Where did you go before the Brea-kfast Program started?

GIRL: I've forgot.

BOY: We didn't have no breakfast. Sometime s we have bacon and eggs.

PNS: Good. How do you like it here?

BOY: Fine.

VANESSA: I think it's a good thing because the Panters are feeding the kids a-round here a-nd a-rou-nd in New Haven an-d I'm glad they've got a brea-kfast there because that's where the kids really don't eat . . . But kids that do eat come here - just to have fun.

PNS: You like the Panthers?

VANESSA: Yes.

PNS: Wha-t's your name?

VANESSA: Vanessa Ha-rris.

PNS: How old a-re you?

VANESSA: 8.

PNS: Why do you think they keep Chairman Bobby in prison? Why do you think they gag him?

VANESSA: Because they don't like to be called pigs. And he got ma-d. Sometimes you can't help it. And he got mad and called them "fa-scist pigs." But that was right, becaus e that's what they a-re. He got mad a-nd someti-mes you ca-n't help to answer like that. If I get mad I can-'t help to answer like that. I would call him a fascist pig, I don't care if I'd be there for a hundred years. If I went to jail just because some funny phony and just because I ca-lled somebo-dy a fascist pig I wouldn't care how long I would be there. 'Cause sometimes you just can't stand there.

PNS: Wha-t do you think will ha-ppen next?

VANESSA: I think that the Panthers will be taking over, because we do-n't need pigs. We don't need them! That's what I was trying to tell the Pan-thers.

PNS: I want to show yo-u someth-in-g. Wh-a-t is this picture about? (Picture shows two children a-t the free breakfa-st program.)

VANESSA: About how poor people live a-nd . . . like . . . I'm poor. I'm not rich a-nd I'm not in the mi-ddle but I'm poor, right? I think . . . like if I was rich like 5 color TV's in one room. But I'm not rich. Like I have a color TV but I don't have like 2 right? And you see I think that the sisters they're on TV saying that they're giving something to the po-or. They a-re not giving nothing to the poor. They give it to the rich people a-nd the pigs becau-se they're trying to get rich. If somebo-dy is a pig and he drops like a little crumb to me like that to make me jealous I'll be begging him my knees for more, right? Because if I eat something and then I'll get hungrier and hungrier and hungrier a-nd then h-e'll be tea-sing me. And th-at's what I'm trying to say like . . . when they say that the hip-pies didn't really shoot the police - not everything in the Crow, but some things in the Crow, and nothing in the papers, 'cause that's all a lie.

PNS: Yes. The New York Times a-nd the New Haven Register.

VANESSA: No, that's just out of order, because the only papers that you could believe is the Black Panther Pa-per. It's the only thing that will tell you the truth.

PNS: Why do you think she gives (pointing to an EMORY picture) the rifle to the boy?

VANESSA: To shoot a pig.

PNS: Is there a difference you think between pigs a-nd rich?

VANESSA: No, not really.

PNS: Wha-t do you think will happen? What will happen to Bobby Seale?

GIRL: Bobby Seale . . .?

VANESSA: He's like chained. Did you hear about Bobby Seale? He got chained in a chair. Like my father and her father were to this place. Her fa-ther was the head of the HPA and my fa-ther was the head of the HPA and they went to this pl-ace . . .

PNS: What's HPA?

VANESSA: HPA stands for the Hill Parents Association. Her fath-er and my father went to this place. It was a rally, I'm not sure 'ca-use I did not know about nothing. I learned about Black Panthers when I was at the Libera-tion School.

PNS: You go to the Liberation School? H-ave you been going to the Liberation School for a long time? Are your parents in the Bla-ck Panther Pa-rty?

VANESSA: Not my father. He would be a Pa-nther but he doesn't a-gree with what they're saying "white and black together." But that never would be 'cause you see the pigs they're making it a bla-ck and white's fight, right? They're running away like here on the color TV they're making it a black and white fight to see which one is gonna get it and he runs away with it. That's what happens and that's what the pigs are doing but nobody won't listen to that.

PNS: Do you parents like that you're here?

GIRL: My mother does.

VANESSA: My father agrees on mostly everything, but not everything.

PNS: Why do you think he's got a rifle? (referring to EMORY picture.)

GIRL: Because he's gonna shoot the pig.

BOY: NO! He's a-iming a-t that target.

GIRL: No, cause he's gonna shoot the pig.

BOY: In the nose!

PNS: Do you know any Chinese people?

ALL: Yes!

PNS: Mao Tsetung?

VANESSA: Ma-o Tsetung! They said that he was dead. The pigs sa-id that he wa-s dead, but he wa-sn't. Then when he died (obviously Ho Chi Minh) they sa-id to people that he was de-ad.

GIRL: He is, not dead!

VANESSA: He is, isn't he?

PNS: No. Who is Mao Tsetung, what's he doing?

VANESSA: He said that if they only free Bobby Sea-le and other Panthers . . . He sa-id that . . . free the political prisoners.

PNS: When did you first come to the Pa-nther pro-gram here?

BOY: About the second week a-fter it sta-rted.

PNS: How do you like it?

BOY: It's very nice, 'ca-use you know for one thing you get free breakfast.

PNS: How do you like the Pa-nthers?

BOY: I don't like pigs myself you know.

ANOTHER BOY: I think tha-t the Black Panther Pa-rty Free Breakfast Program is nice, it give a cha-nce to the kids who haven't ate brea-kfast in the morning.

PNS: What do you know about the Pa-nthers?

BOY: I know they are trying to free Huey P. Newton, the leader is Bobby Seale, and they're revolutionary. I don't believe that the Pa-nther killed that man. I believe the pigs killed him. Because why would the Pa-nthers want to kill one of their brothers like that? I think that the Pa-nthers are very good to the kids who co-me here. They eat their breakfast and go to school.

PNS: What do you think will happen the next few years?

BOY: I don't know what will happen but I know what I hope will ha-ppen. Tha-t they free Huey P. Newton. And Bobby Seale.

ANOTH-ER BOY: I think the Breakfast Program is nice, because when you wake up in the morning you ha-ve to fix you food

Group Will Bring Strike to Hometowners

The Summer Organization group has been organized to help direct strikers carrying the strike to their home communities through the summer. For the strike to be more than an expression of "Youthful exuberance" or mere outraged moralism, it is essential that the issues of the strike be expanded beyond the campus.

The Summer Organization Committee is offering a two-day workshop to enable students from various regions to become working political support groups before leaving campus. This workshop will be held Thursday and Friday, may 14 and 15.

Emphasis will be given to:

(1) Basic facts of the conflict in Southeast Asia, political repression and the political role of the University

(2) Techniques in canvassing, political work for peace candidates, labor organization, economic boycotts, etc.

(3) Utilization of existing community resources.

To help carry out the strike, to make your concern felt, come to the workshops on May 14 and 15; contact the Summer Organization table in the Student Union for specific topics , times, and places.

Trainers are needed for the workshop. You do not need special skills. Trainees will work in pairs and there will be two sessions on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 12 and 13, to give the necessary confidence and skills for this task. If interested, contact the Summer Organization table and come to a trainers' meeting at Mahar Auditorium at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

"Speak Daggers"-Workshop Drama, Will Concern Violence and Society

"SPEAK, DAGGERS," an original one-act "revolutionary" play, prepared especially as a Strike workshop, will be presented at 8 tonight in Bartlett Auditorium. There will be no admission charge.

Directed by Jack Deaver of the department of Comparative Literature, the play's three characters - Hamlet, Raskolnikov, and Lorenzo de Medici - debate the use of violence. Murderers all, they discuss societal commitment and violence as a means of reaching desired ends.

The cast consists of David Zucker as Raskolnikov, Steve Schnetzer as Lorenzo de Medici, and Mr. Deaver as Hamlet. Originally submitted by Janet Ananian as a Comparative Literature term paper, the script has been revised by Miss Ananian and Mr. Deaver - and all that now you just go over here a-nd go to school fro-m here.

PNS: How do your parents like your going here?

JOHNNY: Yes she like it. I live with my grandmother. She like the Pa-nthers.

THOMAS: The Black Panther Pa-rty is the best thing that ever happened. In New Ha-ven. The thing I lik-e about the Black Panthers like if somebody's fighting they try to say "Brother cool it" or something like tha-t. They don't want nobody fighting. The Pa-nthers come here and they use their own time to help to feed us. They come here every day and feed the kids. They use their own gas to get the kids to school, they just try to ma-ke the kids happy and everything.

NS: Do you think there has to PNS: Do you think there has to be a revolution in Ameria?

THOMAS: Yeah.

PNS: Why do you think it is necessa-ry to make a revolution?

THOMAS: 'Casue they've got to free Bobby Seale.

PNS: You like the Pa-nther Pa-per?

THOMAS: Oh yeah. I hang it up on my wall like posters. My sister tried to get one from outside to put in her room.

PNS: Why do you think the pigs put the Pa-nthers in jail?

THOMAS: They don't want them to have their rights.

JOHNNY: I think the pigs are trying to keep the Bla-ck Panthers down because they think tha-t the Black Panther Party makes other people turn a-gainst them and fight them so. they try to make it look ba-d so tha-t other people can't join the Party. They're trying to say that the Pa-nthers killed so and so 'cause they figure if the Pa-nthers a-re killing people why would other people join them.

Vets Petition Senators

A small group of veterans at UMass, dedicated to "support and legislation to withdraw troops from Cambodia and Laos" will be leaving for Washington with a list of ten thousand voting aged veterans from Brandeis, Boston College, and B.U.

The group, which first organized this campaign among the veterans at UMass will present the petitions to Senator Kennedy and Senator Brooke. The group organizer, James Cotter, a resident of Butterfield House - UMass has been co-ordinating the veteran movement with Tom Lehrer at the M.I.T. strike information headquarters.

The petition which calls for withdrawal of troops from Cambodia and Laos, has been publicized over the air-waves of WBCN in Boston and WMUA in Amherst.

A table will be set-up all day today in the main lobby of the Student Union to gather more signatures before the four veterans from UMass will "hand carry it" to Washington. The Group also hopes to meet with Senators Fulbright, Muskie, and Javitts.

Economic Boycott

Representatives of the UMass Economic Boycott Committee will meet today with members of the National Economic Boycott Committee at Clark University in Worcester. Problems with modes of action and national coordination will be discussed.

The purpose of the boycott against Coca Cola, Inc, and Philip Morris, Inc., is to try to mobilize business support behind the anti-war movement so that they will effectively utilize their political and economic resources to aid the peace movement.

Thinking About the Strike

(Editors' Note: The following is an outline for analysis of the student strike written by Vaclav Holesovsky of the Department of Economics. The Collegian presents it in the hope it will help students to organize their personal feelings on the strike.)

A great number of students have tired to clarify for themselves the issues and events of the "strike phenomenon." Many came to my office and to class to compare notes and asked for help in sorting out their ideas. In response to this request, I have jotted down an outline of a cool and methodical approach to three hotly debated issues: (1) the nature of the strike, (2) U. S. involvement in S.E. Asia, and (3) the function of the University.

I. Nature of the Strike

A purely spontaneous reaction to the "strike phenomenon" may lead to this: either you are swayed by it, or you experience uncritical revulsion. A thinking man's way is to try and gain intellectual distance, to analyze the matter rationally. Only then does he commit himself to a stand.

I propose to "unsplice" the phenomenon analytically into a few distinct aspects.

1. SOCIAL-PSYCHOLOGICAL PREDISPOSTION. The sweep and pace of the strike phenomenon indicated an underlying psychic readiness for participation in some such movement. This readiness may be traced to two major factors: (a) a deeply felt--and not necessarily conscious-- NEED to be linked to other human beings by a sense of a SUPRAPERSONAL COMMON PURPOSE. Purposes with a narrow personal horizon (grades, job, car, house, family) tend to set people apart. Dominant values of an acquisitive market society leave the need for common collective purposes unsatisfied: this is one side of modern alienation. Common goals of the strike have come to fill the void.

(Once such a phenomenon starts rolling it tends to feed upon itself: outsiders feel drawn to join and become insiders, for fear of being left out from the exhilarating experience of the communion.)

(b) A LINGERING FEELING OF PANIC, below the threshold of consciousness, due to legitimate fears that towering social problems will not be effectively taken care of and solved. Strike phenomenon has provided an outlet: a feeling of being-able-to-do-something-about-it.

2. THE TRIGGER FACTOR. The event which activated the predisposition: extension of military operations into the border regions of Cambodia. How come? Because, on the face of it, it was a flagrant betrayal of hopes fed for months by the prospect of U. S. withdrawal and "Vietnamization." A closer examination of all circumstances might reveal that the operation has been compatible with the hopes and did not amount to still another war in still another country. However, the interpretation in the sense of a breach of promise seemed plausible enough to create the effect of a sudden disappointment, anger, and the wave of an exacerbated anti-war sentiment.

3. ELEMENT OF ORGANIZATION. The moribund organizations for Peace Mobilization (which had folded up nationally a few days earlier) got a powerful shot in the arm. A new unhoped-for occasion for deploying activity. They did their duty, naturally.

4. ELEMENT OF MANIPULATION. Other groups with other objectives than Peace injected their own slogans into the withdrawal - from - S.E. Asia program. They succeeded in producing a fusion, an AMALGAMATION OF DIFFERENT OBJECTIVES, gained enormous audiences for their views and propaganda. Riding the wave of the antiwar sentiment they manipulated it for their own special purposes. The tactics are not new, have been tried before, often with success.

5. THE SILENT ONES. An effect of optical--or rather acoustic--distortion has been produced by the fact that the vocal ones practically monoplized the scene while those with alternative opinions have kept silent. Having often qualified and differentiated views, being busy with their work, not wanting to offend their vocal friends at the height of their emotional excitement, they did not produce a counterpart to the various forms of "direct action" taking place. Thus, the vocal ones appeared as representative spokesmen of all.

II. U.S. Involvement In S.E. Asia

This is not a brief for one particular view, even though I have one. Rather: demonstration of a systematic handling of the question--"How to evaluate the significance of local international conflicts? How to determine intelligently our attitude, i.e., with full awareness of the implications and consequences of the attitude we choose?"

1. PACIFIST ARUGMENT: "War means killing. Killing is bad. Hence, all war is bad and to be opposed." Implication: "We want to stay out of any war no matter what the consequences for us and others." Logic defensible if consistently applied, also to past wars and all regions of the globe. However, it is the logic of a moral, quasi-religious, essentially non-political attitude, which cannot help but have political consequences.

2. POLITICAL – MORAL ATTITUDE starts with the question: "How is a local conflict related to the general pattern of international relations?" Connection may be tenuous or nil: tribal wars in New Guinea. Or it may be strong: military conquest of Ethiopia by fascist Italy in the 'thirties. (The international significance of the aggression was entirely independent of local specifics--a case of a primitive, non-democratic country practicing slavery. The significance was in testing British and French willingness to resist aggression and defend principles of "collective security." Failure eased the way to WW II.)

3. It continues with the question: "WHAT ARE THE DOMINANT CHARACTERISTICS OF GLOBAL INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS?" Turning to the here-and-now: various interpretations are possible, though not equally valid. Some possibilities: (a) two or three major centers of imperialist expansion; symmetrical conflict between symmetrically evil powers.--(b) Communist regimes are inherently progressive, United States reactionary.--(c) Totalitarian imperialist expansion, cloaked by a progressive rhetoric, faces Western-type systems which have not ceased playing a historically progressive role but in the face of totalitarian expansionism have adopted a defensive posture of containment.--(d) Devil take all interpretation--right or wrong, my country! (I lean toward c.)

4. Next question: "HOW DOES A GIVEN LOCAL CONFLICT FIT INTO THE GENERAL PICTURE? Do local characteristics of the situation (e.g., personalities of Thieu, Sygman Rhee, or Haile Selasie) have to be subordinated to other priority considerations? What objectives of the various parties to the conflict are involved? Whose objectives can I support as closest or most helpful to my own?" -- The model of power relations and objectives (all under conditions of imperfect information and uncertainty) gets more and more complicated as we progress toward the most concrete and pressing problems of the day. No room to pursue this any further. Systematic procedure helps you to become aware of which ultimate objectives and outcomes you support by the attitude you choose.

5. Other related questions: "IS YOUR SIDE BUNGLING UP THE ROLE YOU WISH IT TO PLAY, perhaps to the point of executing it in a self-defeating way? Does the long-range strategy of your side match the long-range goals you wish it to pursue in the world around us? Does it have a long-range perspective at all?" Most important issues, all transcending the question of Cambodia. They should be dealt with seriously as soon as current excitement subsides.

III. Function of the University

No model of what the University should be like is valid A PRIORI. Many possibilities: Ivory towers of scholastic ruminations; professional-training places; workshops for the articulation of social and political issues, ranging from scientific research to pure ideology; etc. Mixture of roles has been possible, too. IMPORTANT PROVISO: Some functions are compatible, some are not. Conflict over possible models is permanent: "The school is, and will remain, a political issue." (Frederic the Great?)

Right now the conflict rages over two incompatible conceptions of the University:

1. Should the University be an INSTRUMENT OF SOCIO-POLITICAL ACTION on behalf of one group of the University community and its goals?

In the words of Fred M. Hechinger: "Radicals see this as the only legitimate course, and the extremist fringe among the radicals would gladly destroy the University that refuses the role of revolutionary activism. But the concept is also very appealing to many students (and faculty, V.H.) who, though not radicals, are deeply concerned over racial injustice, poverty and American military policies." (New York Times, May 3, 1970)

It should be stressed what this conception implies: (a) that a particular group among the University people-- and it doesn't matter whether it is a majority or minority-- knows guaranteed best what is good for society and how to achieve it, and (b) that the judgement of that group concerning the importance of a given cause justifies overriding the rules of due process necessary for the preservation of the University as a free and orderly workshop for the search, preservation, and dissemination of knowledge.

2. Should, on the contrary, the University strengthen its character as an INSTITUTION OF UNHAMPERED SEARCH FOR KNOWLEDGE AND UNDERSTANDING, of free dissemination of findings through teaching, publishing, popularizing, and consulting? This is a social function of crucial importance. THIS constitutes, in my view, the special contribution of the University to the solution of our problems, social, political, and technical. This function can be fulfilled optimally only on condition that the University AS AN INSTITUTION does not become part of the process by which political will is organized, or party to any particular programs.

Basic assumption here is: Only by remaining neutral as to the content of ideas, and partisan only in defense of its AUTONOMY FROM ANY GROUP PRESSURES can the University protect dissenters, minorities, or simply scientists too busy with their own work, from ever-changing streams of opinion within and without the University.

Urban Center Director To Be New UMass Prexy

By MARK SILVERMAN
Managing Editor

Robert C. Wood, director of the joint Harvard-MIT Center for Urban Studies, will be named President of the University at a press conference in Boston this afternoon.

The DAILY COLLEGIAN predicted the appointment last month, and while rumors about Wood being named president have circulated in the media for several weeks, two wire services predicted yesterday that the announcement would be made after today's Trustee meeting.

University spokesmen have refused to either confirm or deny these reports, but one administrator close to the Trustees said yesterday, "I will be very surprised if the announcement is not made before the end of the week."

Wood, 46, will succeed John W. Lederle who has served as President since 1960, and has seen the University grow in enrollment from 6,000 students to nearly 20,000. Lederle announced last June that he will return to teaching in the UMass government department after he takes a year's sabbatical, beginning next fall.

The Trustees selected Wood from a list of 16 candidates, after those 16 were chosen from a group of more than 300 candidates suggested by students, faculty and students from the school's three campuses.

Sources close to the Trustees said yesterday that Wood was selected because of his academic credentials, his management skills and his ability to get along with the State's political leaders--a major criteria since much of his job will center on lobbying for the University's budget.

Wood, the source says, was also chosen because the Trustees were interested in finding "someone attuned to the problems of the day."

They are convinced, the source believes, that Wood is "hard nosed to maintain order" and "sympathetic to student points of view."

Wood will receive between $40,000 and $45,000 a year as President.

When he takes office in September, the University will officially enter its reorganized administrative structure, with the President located in Boston and Chancellors appointed to run the three campuses. The Chancellors are Oswald Tippo in Amherst, Francis Broderick in Boston and Lamar Souttar in Worcester.

Official Grading Policy

Upon recommendation of those present at a meeting on Monday May 11 at 4 p.m. to which all faculty senators were invited, the Administration has adopted the following NEW grading policy, to be in effect only for the Spring Term 1970. This supercedes the guidelines dated May 7, 1970.

GRADING POLICY FOR SPRING TERM 1970

1) Each student may choose among the following grading options:
   a) To receive either a 'P' or a 'W'. (A student choosing this option will receive a 'P' if he was passing the course as of 4 May 1970.)
   b) To receive a letter grade, based on his work through 4 May 1970.
   c) To receive an 'Incomplete'.
   d) To take the final exam or the equivalent, and then be graded on the basis of the term's work.
   e) If a student has not chosen an option by the time of the scheduled final examination, the instructor shall apply option 1-a.
2) Final examinations will not be taken by students electing options 1-a and 1-b. The usual final examination policy of the course, or a mutally agreeable alternative, will be followed for those electing option 1-c.
3) The grade of 'P' is recognized as fulfilling University, college and department requirements.
4) The period for removing 'Incompletes' is extended indefinitely, subject to further discussion.
5) Grades need not be turned in until the strike is over, unless a student specifically requests his instructors to turn in his grades as soon as possible.
6) A grievance committee will be formed to protect students, teaching assistants and faculty members from retributive (punitive) measures.
7) Points of this resolution will apply to undergraduate and graduate students, teaching assistants and faculty members.
8) During the period of final examinations, all members of the University community will be invited to participate in workshops and other activities related to the aims of the strike.
9) The grading system for spring, 1970, will in no way be looked upon as a precedent for furture grading systems for the University.

Detailed interpretation will be announced today.

The May 12 grading policy signed by the Provost is the official University policy for this semester. Professors must grant the options outlined. No student may be held responsible for any work or exams due after May 4 against his wishes Violations of this policy will be dealt with by the grievance committee. . . .52874.

Violence Erupts in Georgia; Maddox Orders National Guard

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - National Guardsmen with live ammunition and orders to shoot if necessary stood by Tuesday to prevent a renewal of racial violence that has claimed six lives.

Gov. Lester Maddox left Atlanta by plane Tuesday afternoon for an inspection of the riot torn area as black and white leaders sought a permanent end to the unrest.

Violence erupted late Monday after a march by Negroes through the downtown section.

Black unrest in the city began after a 16 year old Negro prisoner, Charles Oatman, was beaten to death. Sheriff's officers said he was beaten by other prisoners. Negro militants claimed there were reports that Oatman had been beaten by officers. Oatman had been charged with murder in the death of his 5-year-old niece.

Sheriff E. R. Atkins said two Negro cellmates had been charged with murder in the fatal beating of Oatman. Blacks have been protesting over crowded jail conditions which they said allowed the beatings to take place.

After the peaceful protest march Monday, roving bands began smashing windows and creating disturbances in downtown stores. Fires, looting and sniper fire broke out later, and Maddox ordered National Guardsmen and state police into action at the request of Mayor Millard Beckum.

Before the situation was brought under control early Tuesday, six Negro men were dead of gunshot wounds, more than 60 persons injured, scores arrested and widespread property damage.

Maj. Gen. George J. Heard, Georgia's adjutant general, said Tuesday that Augusta police were responsible for four of the deaths.

"We didn't do any shooting," Hearn said of his troops.

Police Chief Broadus L. Bequest told a meeting of city officials and Negro leaders Tuesday that his officers had been told to apprehend any individuals looting or burning, but to avoid taking a life if possible.

He said his men were forced to return fire when snipers fired at them, but they aimed low and this was why many were wounded rather than killed.

Negro leaders charged at the meeting that racism had existed in the city for a long time and that members of the white community have failed to respond to indications of impending trouble.

Maddox said he thinks the riot was part of "a Communist conspiracy." He said the Guardsmen have guns and ammunition and are under orders to control the situation. "Those sniping at our Guards men - we're not going to ask them to stop. If they continue that, they'd better be prepared to meet their Maker." he said.

Statement on Georgia

Statement to be presented to the Strike Steering Committee:

We deplore the actions of the Augusta, Georgia police department in placing material concerns before the value of human life. After hearing of the death of a 16 year old black youth in jail (police claim he was beaten to death by fellow black prisoners, prisoners claim he was beaten to death by prison guards), members of the black community attempted to lower a flag to half mast at a city building. Police and National Guardsmen, ordered in by Lester Maddox, moved on the blacks precipitated a riot and then police shot four people, two other deaths are not accounted for.

Students at UMass must identify with those murdered in Augusta just as much as we identified with those murdered at Kent. We must all be together now and forever. We mourn those murdered in Orangeburg, Kent, Augusta, Viet Nam, Laos, Cambodia, etc. We cannot allow it to continue. Seize the time. Off the pig.

ROTC Demonstrators Stress Non-Violence

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

Late yesterday a decision was reached by the Anti-ROTC Committee in taking a new stand on Dickinson Hall activities this morning. This Committee decided that any disruption of the usual business procedure carried on by officials at Dickinson would be UNobstructive. This stand came in opposition to a stand taken earlier when the Committee stated that it would obstruct today's ROTC activities at the building, not allowing the officials to carry on business as usual.

Last night at eight o'clock, a marshal training meeting or a non-violent workshop was conducted at 212 Dickinson Hall for the purpose of coordinating reactions to the Anti-ROTC Committee's proposal of unobstructively limiting ROTC business this morning at Dickinson.

The set-up of the gathering was like this: In the front of the room, seated on a table, were to members of the strike marshals. In the audience were 50 listeners, who attended the workshop to become marshals themselves. These 5[illegible] marshals, plus other marshals not in attendance, will be in Dickinson this morning to react non-violently to the unobstructive actions proposed to be taken by Anti-ROTC and its followers.

Those two in front of the room outlined the marshals' theme of non-violence. They revealed a three-point plan on how to deal with an aggressive person. To deal with such a person, marshals were told to use (1) their bodies, (2) their minds and (3) their actions toward other people.

The idea of using one's body was explained as turning one's back on someone who might resort to aggression. In such a case, those in the audience were instructed not to use their hands, just use their bodies in a non-attacking manner.

The concept of using one's mind was explained as a means of talking a person out of committing an undesirable act. The new marshals were urged to talk as softly as possible, keeping their hands by their sides and were told never to use the word "no".

Using one's actions toward other people was explained as a way to express non-violence. In reacting to an aggressive situation or one that threatens to become aggressive, the new marshals were told to react calmly, to walk and not to run, to "keep cool."

The great majority of those becoming new marshals are UMass ROTC cadets. After the two coordinators had outlined the non-violent theme, the various ROTC persons stood up to ask questions, which were dealt with sufficiently, and to state their positions as regards a reaction to this morning's activities.

Each who spoke on his desired reaction to the morning's affairs expressed a desire for non-violence and wished to go on record as saying that "ROTC does not want fighting." "We want non-violence all the way," one said.

The gathering decided, in its theme of non-violence, not to obstruct any person who forces himself into an office. On the other hand, ROTC cadets said that their officers would not remain in their offices if they were obstructed in any way that made work impossible to carry out.

One thing was added by the cadets; they pointed out that one room would be held for business that is very important to them. They stated that the door to this room would remain closed and only people who have a purpose relevant to the business conducted inside would be allowed to enter. They reiterated that they needed the room to get their work done more efficiently.

The meeting ended on the same note with which it had begun, a note or theme of non-violence. The marshals planned to spend last night in Dickinson and to react when reaction was called for. Officers are scheduled to arrive between 7 and 7:30 a.m. today.

Anti-ROTC Group Changes Plan Business Flows Uninterrupted

By JOHN SULLIVAN
Sports Editor

There was no disruption of the normal flow of ROTC business in Dickinson Hall yesterday because the Monday night meeting of the anti-ROTC Committee, which earlier had planned to block ROTC officials from conducting "business as usual," made a switch in its plans.

This switch came very late in the meeting, which concluded at 2 a.m. on Tuesday; it had begun at 8:15 p.m. Monday. It was the appearance of G. Putnam Barber, professor of sociology, at that meeting that caused the change.

Barber convinced the gathering to put off until Tuesday its plan of disrupting ROTC business, under the knowledge that he would meet with Chancellor Oswald Tippo Tuesday morning in an effort to arrange a meeting between the Chancellor and the anti-ROTC Committee.

In following through with his half of the deal, Barber arrived at Tippo's office at 8 a.m. Tuesday and met with the Chancellor a half hour later. The two of them discussed the situation until 9 a.m., and Tippo agreed to meet with the Committee.

At this point, the two went about their other duties, meeting again, in Tippo's office, at 10 a.m., at which time the format of the proposed meeting was decided upon. It was to be an affair open to all UMass students and faculty and was to be held at 1 p.m. at 112-114 Dickinson Hall.

The next words heard from Tippo came when he attended the one o'clock meeting. On the other hand, Barber, as convener of the Strike Steering Committee's Subcommittee on Non-Violence, held a meeting of that subcommittee at 12:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

This meeting was an appendage to a larger gathering of the Strike Steering Committee. The Committee had decided earlier ,by a majority vote, to support the stand taken by the anti-ROTC Committee, which at the time was planning to go ahead with a Wednesday morning disruption of ROTC business in Dickinson.

After the Steering Committee broke up, Barber got together with concerned members of the Non-Violent Subcommittee to decide what "frame of mind" they would enter the one o'clock meeting with. It was, and still remains Barber's desire to get negotiations started with the Chancellor, so that the proper legal action can be taken to eliminate ROTC, if such a desire is the popular expression, as a part of the UMass academic programming.

But, one was also under the strong assumption that Tippo will refuse negotiations should the business in Dickinson be disrupted by the anti-ROTC's. It was also Barber's feeling that it is not his position to tell the anti-ROTC Committee not to block ROTC offices. A dilemma existed for Barber, at the time. The members of the subcommittee agreed with him, that the best he could do was approach the meeting with all such things in mind.

ROTC Cadets, Tippo Exchange Views

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

Four army ROTC cadets met with Chancellor Tippo about 9:00 last night in Whitmore. In a general discussion the cadets presented their point of view on their rights as cadets, the abolition of ROTC and the occupation of Dickinson Hall.

Tippo said that if officers were not allowed to conduct their normal activities in the office, he wouldn't allow it indefinitely. He said he would act to prevent people from blocking activities, but the action would come only if the obstruction continued for a few days and after he had met with those concerned (strikers, ROTC members etc.)

Tippo also stated that the administration would follow the decision made by the faculty senate concerning ROTC.

A campus-wide petition is presently being circulated by Army ROTC cadets to keep ROTC from being abolished. There are no results as of now.

About a dozen or more cadets slept in Dickinson over night in sleeping bags to make sure nothing happened to the building.

Both Army and Air Force ROTC cadets attended the Marshal training meeting to aid as marshals themselves to insure non-violence.

Strikers Run On Banks

By BERNARD BLAIN

Hoping to affect the financial status of the U.S., about 1200 faculty, students, and towns people marched from Mahar Auditorium to the Amherst Common yesterday afternoon where some marchers withdrew their money from the local banks.

Leading the long line of marchers was Prof. Gruman of the history department who organized the march to "Stop War Dollars." Prof. Gruman was pleased with the march, but felt that the concurrent ROTC meeting hurt the numbers in the march. However, he said,there were enough marchers to gain the desired publicity for their cause.

The Strike Committee described the march as a "symbolic act." They feel that this act will urge others in the country to join them in attempting to "alter contemporary society."

Bank employees were kept busy with the withdrawals for about 20 minutes, but the lines never did reach any large proportion. Bank officials stated that this run on the bank will not affect their business since students usually take their money out at this time of the year anyway.

After the march, which lasted just over an hour, the marchers went off in various directions, and no attempt was made to march together back to the campus. However, some marchers returning to campus were a little richer for their efforts. The march itself, according to officials, will have little effect on the economic status of the country.

Tippo Pledges ROTC As Long as Its Legal

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

UMass Amherst Chancellor Oswald Tippo told a crowd of over 150 students, faculty and administration officials meeting in Dickinson Hall yesterday afternoon that "I propose to have them (ROTC) Conduct their activities here until they are told to go by legal means," and called for members of the anti-ROTC strike committee "not to interfere with the rights of others!"

The one-hour question-answer period was called by the anti-ROTC Strike Committee. There were many ROTC Cadets and staff present also.

Chancellor Tippo's remarks were met by an outburst from Student Senate President Glenn Elters that, "This building has been liberated! There will be no business as usual in this building!" He called for an organized attempt by anti-ROTC students to prevent ROTC personnel from using the building. Elters earlier accused ROTC of committing "genocide" and "murder" and said it has no legitimate right to be on this campus."

Tippo responded to Elters' remark by merely saying that, "I hope someone is recording this."

The 60-minute meeting began with statements by Professor Philip Jones on proposals made by the faculty Senate on the Present ROTC program. He pointed out that at a January meeting of the Senate there was discussion for the academic rank of lecturer to be conferred on cadre officers and professor on the senior officer and in addition for the federal government to reimburse the University for having the program.

Chancellor Tippo also told the audience that the administration also currently plans to renegotiate contracts with both Army and Air Force concerning the ROTC Program at UMass.

Professor Howard Gadlin of the Psychology Department criticized Tippo at this point by saying that the administration 's action "In no way deals with complicity in the war effort. It doesn't deal with the issue." Anti-ROTC committee member Eric ("the Rat") Walgren agreed with Gadlin by saying that "The University is going backward," on its ROTC stand.

Tippo countered this statement by saying that "I believe a number of people want ROTC training and that they are here now."

Anti-ROTC committee member Norm Bender then presented three demands concerning ROTC: (1) All ROTC contracts be abolished; (2) That there be established in Dickinson Hall a child day care center; (3) The University subsidize present ROTC "stipends," of cadets. He added that the anti-ROTC people have a "right to kick ROTC off campus because it is screwing people."

When questioned as to whether or not there is any possibility of getting rid of ROTC from the U-Mass campus by next September he stated that "We are obligated to give the Army and Air Force one year's notice. I will assume the program is to last at least one more year."

One ROTC cadet complained that cadets and ROTC staff have not been allowed to conduct classes and other day-to-day activities due to the present occupation of the building by anti-ROTC committee members. Tippo answered this by stating that "Every class has a right to meet, even ROTC. This is part of the University's position of remaining open during the strike." He added that if such is not the case in Dickinson Hall then the University has "failed" in its job.

The University administration was criticized by one student at this point for trying to remain a "neutral arbitrator." The student added that ROTC is "not an educational training program" and "has no more right to be here than a counter-guerilla force does."

Tippo declared his belief that "there is educational value in ROTC", and furthermore that "because a man wears a uniform I don't think that should deny him credit."

As to the event of a possible sit-in by anti-ROTC students, Tippo said that this would be "interfering with the rights of others. We are going to respect the rights of others. It would be absolutely wrong to do this." The Chancellor would make no positive commitment as to just what he would do in the event of a sit-in saying only that he would conduct an emergency meeting and discussion with strike and ROTC people.

Senate Confirms Blackmun for Court

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate, which rejected President Nixon's first two choices to fill a year old vacancy on the Supreme Court, unaminously confirmed Tuesday his nomination of Judge Harry A. Blackmun of Rochester, Minn.

There was little debate before the 94-0 vote, but Sen. Ernest P. Hollings, D.-S.C., and other Southern senators said that in Blackmun's case the Senate was applying a different standard of judicial ethics than it did in rejecting Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr.

Haynsworth, whose home is in Greenville, S.C., was the first of two Southern judged nominated by Nixon for the post, both of whom were denied Senate confirmation. The other was G. Harrold Carswell o' Tallahassee, Fla.

"Apparently if a judge is from South Carolina a higher standard of ethics is required than if a judge is from Minnesota," said Hollings.

No one rose to dispute him, but senators who fought Haynsworth's nomination contended that, unlike Blackmun, he failed to take steps to avoid an appearance of conflict of interest.

Red China Interferes With Sihanouk

TOKYO (AP) - In two months Red China has turned Prince Norodom Sihanouk's woes into its own again. Peking now has a more commanding voice than ever before in the councils of Indochina's communish. It likely is dreaming of wider opportunities in East Asia.

The circumstance which brought this turn of events was the Cambodian parliament's March 18 ouster of Sihanouk as chief of state.

Some Protests Continue While Some Others End

(AP) - More than 1,000 student anti-war demonstrators blocked the entrances to the federal building in Albany, N.Y., Tuesday, virtually cutting off mail service for about six hours in New York's capital city.

Elsewhere around the nation striking students at many universities returned to the classroom although protests - in a few cases violent - continued on a number of campuses against the Indochina war and the deaths of four Kent State students.

National Guardsmen were posted at the main entrance of the University of South Carolina where classes resumed after rampaging students vandalized part of the administration building and clashed with troopers and Guardsmen Monday night. The campus was under a 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. curfew until further notice. About 1,000 demonstrators of the 15,000 student campus were involved.

The student strike information center at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass. reported that 286 schools were on strike indefinitely.

But more schools reopened and others announced they would Wednesday. There are about 1,500 four-year colleges in the country.

Most of the protesting students in Albany were from the State University campus there. They marched on the federal building, which houses the main post office, and stood six deep at the entrances, keeping workers out.

Only a few letter carriers managed to get in and out of the building, virtually halting all mail service in the city of 130,000 persons.

Except for two minor scuffles when employees atiempted to enter the building, there was no violence. The demonstrators stood by, their hands folded over their chests. Earlier, many of the students had demonstrated in front of the State Capitol and State Office Building.

At Michigan Tech University in Houghton, about 200 ROTC cadets joined 1,000 other students in building a one-acre park near the campus in what was termed a symbolic protest against the war and the Kent State deaths.

Cambodian Limit Still Unclear

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 21.7 mile limit established for U.S. military operations in Cambodia obviously has some flexibility but just how much is unclear from administration statements or discussions with officials.

Indications are that orders to Saigon permit commanders some latitude, perhaps a few miles, if circumstances require it.

But officials are emphatic in saying any major penetration into Cambodia, beyond what is considered the general enemy base area, would have to be approved by Washington.

In the present domestic political climate, administration sources consider it highly unlikely such approval would be granted.

Although the limitation was reported designed to keep U.S. ground forces in check, it covers river and air operations as well, officials say.

Included is U.S. air support of South Vietnamese forces in Cambodia, they said.

Nixon Adm. May Delay Super Plane

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon administration will insist on answers to "significant environmental problems and uncertainties" before allowing commercial development of supersonic transport planes, Congress was told Tuesday.

Russell E. Train, head of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, said the administration already is moving to combat SST noise problems.

He noted that the current program is for development of two prototype craft, with commercial production held up until a final decision is made on several factors including economic and foreign policy aspects as well as environmental considerations.

Train said regulations will be issued soon dealing with noise levels to be permitted in and around airports once the SST comes into commercial use.

University Housing

Because of the construction workers strike it is clear that the "1970 dormitories" will not be open for the start of the fall semester, which will result in a serious shortage of student housing. We anticipate having to house approximately 1000 more students than current facilities will allow. (These students have already been accepted.) In order to avoid "forced tripling", several options are being made available which we hope will ease the shortage of space in September. They are as follows:

1. VOLUNTARY TRIPLES
Where facilities are adequate students are encouraged to move together, three to a room. Each student in a voluntary triple will receive a 30% REDUCTION IN ROOM RENT. (In a $550. per year room, this would amount to a savings for fall semester of $82.50 each). This arrangement would be for the fall semester. Students who voluntarily triple first semester will be given first choice on available space for the spring semester. Students who wish to use this option should contact Mr. Cochrane in the Housing Office, 232 Whitmore, tel. 545-2100.

2. OFF CAMPUS HOUSING
Members of next year's Junior and Senior class will be given permission to live off campus if arrangements can be made now. Persons who wish to use this option must complete an Off Campus Housing Form, available at the Area Coordinator's office in each area. Notification of such arrangements must be in the Housing Office not later than June 1, 1970.

3. COMMUTING STUDENTS
Those students who normally live within a reasonable commuting distance are requested to make plans to live at home for the fall semester rather than in University housing. Such students who wish to return to University housing for the spring term will be given priority over incoming students.

4. FRATERNITIES AND SORORITIES
Any Greek organization which has facilities not filled to capacity for the fall term are asked to contact Mr. Cochrane in the Housing Office, 232 Whitmore, tel. 545-2100, so that arrangements can be made in assisting you in filling your house to capacity.

Any student who might be willing to live in a Fraternity or Sorority on a rental basis for the fall semester should contact Mr. Cochrane for further information.

On Violence

Non-violence is a good thing. If it were possible to achieve liberation without any bloodshed every political activist in history would have been overjoyed. No one who is committed to serious social change and the betterment of the lives of the peoples of the world looks forward to maiming and death.

However we live in a violent system. When Martin Luther King died, Lyndon Johnson came on the television and talked about how the American people should dedicate themselves to non-violence in King's memory. Lyndon Johnson's non-violence is a crock of shit; he's the man that got us into Vietnam and that ordered the napalmings and bombings; he was in office at the time of the massacre in Song My. When those who run the National Guard, the war in Vietnam and Cambodia and Laos talk about students remaining non-violent they're really interested in maintaining the monopoly on violence which they have held for decades. It's hypocrisy, which, in the light of the events at Kent State and Augusta, is heartbreaking.

The marshals who hope to maintain non-violence in this strike are different from the Nixons and Johnsons. There is no blood directly on their hands anymore than there is on mine (in a certain sense all North Americans have blood on their hands). However, perhaps the marshals (and all of us) should try to achieve a sense of proportion when they define "violence." What are a few broken windows in the ROTC building compared to napalm and anti-personnel bombs in Vietnam? What are even a few blown up buildings in the USA compared to the violence that keeps black people in their place? What are a few thrown rocks compared with tear gas, M16s, hellcopters, etc., etc., etc.

Personally I have no wish to see National Guard on the UMass campus. I don't want to see anybody get killed, paralyzed. But I do want the marshals (and others who see non-violence as an end in itself) to know who is really violent and to make an intelligent analysis of the enemy that we all face, the enemy who killed four kids at Kent State and who would willingly kill again at UMass.

Means toward an end may be either violent or non-violent. We cannot let non-violence become an end in itself without selling out our struggle for liberation and the struggles being waged by colonized people all overthe world.

WENDY CAHILL

Students around the country are on strike for three demands. The two primary demands are for the U.S. to get out of SE Asia and for all political prisoners to be freed. We don't think students alone can effect these two issues altogether but there are some ways we can effect small changes by "sabotaging" the war effort -- by getting rid of ROTC and taking away the supply of officers.

Both the student senate and the strike steering committee have overwhelmingly endorsed the removal of ROTC from the UMass campus. The anti-ROTC committee (consisting of members of various student groups including SDS) was formed at the beginning of the strike to deal with the question of ROTC which we feel is the only demand that can be met now.

What has happened so far is that every time the anti-ROTC committee has planned some action, the administration has used one form or another of selling us out. At first we were told that ROTC would not be using the building for the rest of the semester, but on Monday we found ROTC officers conducting normal business in their offices. (It must be remembered that paperwork rather than fighting is what the majority of armed services work consists of -- without paperwork few triggers would be pulled.)

On Monday with the backing of the Strike Steering Committee, the anti-ROTC Committee began to plan an obstructive sit-in, meaning that ROTC Officers would be blocked by non-violent students, so that the officers would not be able to do their paperwork. The sit-in was scheduled for early Tuesday morning. At a meeting Monday night to discuss this activity, a faculty member led us to believe that Tippo would not consider negotiation with us if we took such action. We were also threatened with the possibility of violence and this prompted many people to abandon the idea of a non-violent obstructive sit-in in the hope that Tippo would meet with us in good faith. This proved to be false. At one o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Tippo attended a meeting called for by the anti-ROTC and Non-Violent Committee. Time and again he showed his lack of concern for the fact that the University was complying with the war effort. He was in favor of keeping ROTC on campus. Also he said he will not necessarily be bound by a faculty senate decision. Instead he tried to create an issue of academic freedom.

We don't think the question is whether ROTC cadets have the right to take these courses, because we also think that the U.S. has no right to be in Southeast Asia and that the University has no right to teach courses which aid this war and other imperialist wars. And for the same reason we don't think ROTC officers should be allowed into their offices to do paperwork. If they do this work we will be allowing them to aid the imperialist U.S. armed forces.

We think that an important lesson to be learned from the past few days is that we can no longer rely on these deals and tricks made by the liberal leaders in power.

According to Tippo, the faculty senate has to vote on the ROTC issue. But to make our feelings known before the Thursday faculty senate meeting we propose that everyone on campus who wants ROTC off campus should picket the ROTC building Wednesday and Thursday mornings starting at 7:45 a.m.

END ROTC NOW!

1. Abolish ROTC immediately (sever contract now)

2. Replace ROTC stipends with University scholarships.

3. Establish a Day Care Center financed by the University in Dickinson Hall in September. (For children of faculty, workers, and students).

Why the Free Breakfast

The Free Breakfast for Children is just one of the programs being carried out by the Black Panther Party that can be attributed to Huey P. Newton. Huey P. Newton, organizer and Minister of Defense of the Black Panther Party says that the Party must go forth to meet the basic desires and needs of the people. Huey says the members of the Party are oxen to be ridden by the people.

How is the Party ridden by the people? Pathers working the breakfast program get out of bed at approximately 6:00 a.m. every school day. They set tables, clean facilities, cook and prepare the food, they direct traffic to see that the children cross the streets safely. After a day's breakfast has been completed, the Panthers attend to the constant task of procuring food from the merchants who do business in the community, to see that the program is constantly supplied with the necessary food. Why a Breakfast for Children Program? The answers to this question need be answered for only those who belong to the upper or so-called middle class. The majority of Black, Mexican-Americans, Orientals and poor Whites know from their American experience that it is impossible to obtain and sustain any education whenone has to attend school hungry.

Huey P. Newton knew that these conditions existed and that the American school system has not seen it to alleviate them. Validity has been added to Huey's knowledge by the fact that the Free Breakfast program has spread like wild fire across the United States wherever Black Panther Chapters and Branches exist.

The Free Breakfast for Children program is a socialistic program, designed to serve the people. All institutions in a society should be designed to serve the masses, not just a "chosen few". In America this program is revolutionary. In capitalist America any program that is absolutely free is considered bad business. The Black Panther Party is a vanguard organization and a vanguard organization educates by example. The Black Panther Party is educating the people to the fact they have a right to the best that modern technology and human knowledge can produce.

"The world belongs to all the people."

The Way

"Behave in a way that will impress people all over the country." With these words, Provost Jerome Weisner closed the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and stated what is appearing to become the predominant philosophy of the Movement. It has taken more than five years for bitter and frustrated people to realize that confrontation politics is not the same as civil disobedience, and that non-violent, utilitarian tools such as those that freed India in 1948 have not been so thoroughly explored in this country so as to reject them. Furthermore, the activism of formerly apathetic, but sympathetic, college students has given a moderate base to the movement that can only serve to broaden "establishment" support. The legitimacy given to anti-war protests by President Nixon will further decrease the alienation and polarization of "middle America".

It has been clear, not only to those in the Movement, but to our parents, that Marxist rhetoric and solutions to 19th century problems will not solve the problems of the 21st century. Nor can the cliches that began with the "frightful" call for "Black Power" ever hope to gain a broad base of support. There is a difference between "The People" and people. Violence, as the Movement seems to be learning, is not a good tactical weapon in the face of government tear gas, grenades, prisons, and M-16s. One would hope that the government will be able to teach the same lesson to the construction workers of New York.

As we enter a turning point of our times, I would hope that we have enough faith in our ideals to believe that ROTC will erode because we have persuaded people not to join, that Peace will come because men no longer believe in violently confronting each other, that the Nixons of the world will no longer be in office because we have educated men not to vote for them. You cannot fight for Peace, Peace is the way.

For A Cause

Seven days ago, a wonderful thing happened. Thousands of people came together and thought and talked and discussed and decided that a wrong had to be righted. The students of UMass shared a common goal and apathy has decreased to a great extent. People are working long and hard to help stop a war. By in large everyone believes in this cause with every pamphlet they pass out, every talk that they give, and every long, long meeting they attend. All this renews faith in people. It gives one a warm feeling deep down to know that everyone is communicating and are all pulling together. But, after overhearing a student say, "Some people don't want to strike until they know what their grade is," the joy that one may feel at first, fast disappears. Because if you believe in something you fight for it all the war. You take the consequences whatever they may be. Realistically, it is true that grades are very important. However, in relation to what is going on in the world as of now--they mean little. If you are going to strike, then work long and hard because you are needed desperately. But only do it if you are prepared to give up something. Only do it if it means everything to you. Strike because you are sick and tired of killing and bloodshed, and injustice and oppression. Otherwise, you are a hypocrite. And--hypocrisy is not a part of fighting for a cuase.

"Back!"

Tomorrow's dead walk ahead today
They see those that dig their graves
And they see those that weep
They see the remnants
Of a weeping nation

They are gripped by a terrible fear
Which they cannot understand
As they look toward the future
And see the remnants
Of a weeping nation

With a slow and fairly steady step
With spirit broken and all faith gone
They march ahead toward open graves
Watched by the remnants
Of a weeping nation

With the marchers dead the diggers die
Along side the ones who have wept
And no one will be left alive anymore
To bury those remnants
Of a weeping nation

Business Cycles and The Presidency

There used to be a time when most people believed in a business cycle. It was more than a cycle of business conditions; it involved a social and psychological 'feeling for the times.' As the nation rode the crest of prosperity, it was thought, morals and religious observances would plummet and expectations of a better standard of life would rise. Similarly, when the economy began to constrict hemlines would fall, religion would begin to play a greater part in men's lives, and expectations would become more modest.

It may be that Nixon has in mind this sort of business cycle theory as he makes policy decisions. Along with monetary and fiscal actions, his Administration has mounted an attack on "inflationary psychology." This effort has been, in effect, a campaign to change expectations, to push the society towards the more modest psychology of less affluent times.

It may also be that Nixon feels that as the economy slows, student dissent will be quelled. Students' families having less real income, more students will need to work to support themselves. Also, the knowledge that industry is actively recruiting graduates leads, in this view, to a confidence on the part of students.

"What they need," some of my more conservative friends have been saying, "is a good, stiff recession to shake it out of them." We will soon find out what effect a slowing economy has on the nature of student unrest - as business conditions have worsened recently, man/corporations have ceased or restricted campus recruiting.

The same cycle which Nixonites feel may change the national mood in their favor suggests that their party's stay in the White House will be brief. Since FDR, Republican administrations have been succeeded by Democratic administrations in times of a slowing economy. The opposite has occurred in times when the economy presses towards the full employment of labor and plants.

Roosevelt was swept into office near the nadir of the Great Depression in 1933. His policies, which were aimed at bringing the economy to a higher level of employment, also worked to better the level of social welfare.

Similarly, John Kennedy, another liberal Democrat, was elected while the nation was experiencing a business slump. His Presidency aimed at increasing the level of economic activity and like Roosevelt's included programs for improving the standard of life of his constituents by governmental action.

Eisenhower and Nixon were elected at the end of periods of economic advance. Both inherited war and inflation.

Nixon is now faced with cooling an overheated economy and reducing aggregate demand. He does not have under-utilized resources at his command to offer the nation reform programs, even if he cared to. He must rather conserve the resources available.

If the President really does view the business cycle as a weapon to be used against student dissent, he had better consider this: Once the level of business activity has been reduced, even granting a change in the national mood, then his raison d'etre (in this limited sense) as President will have disappeared. The electorate will throw him out for one who will bring back the 'good old prosperity.'

Campus Comment

To all seniors:

Much is currently being said about the upcoming commencement - should it be cancelled? If so, why?, etc., etc., But there is another very important and meaningful day for seniors which is being somewhat overlooked in the shadow of the commencement debate. This is Senior Day. It is currently scheduled to take place on Friday, May 29, the day before commencement.

This day was budgeted for by the senior class executive council way back in April of 1969. The budget was approved by the senate. The purpose of the day was then - as it is now - to provide one final opportunity for graduating seniors to get together informally before going their separate ways. To quote last year's INDEX:

> "Here at last was a momentary pause in which to feel the passing of friends, in a handshake or in a scribbled address shoved quickly into my grasp."

I believe that after four years of life here at the university, we as seniors are entitled to this ONE day.

However, this year some controversy has been thrown into the idea. The strike. I personally am in support of the strike and its ideals. I have been attending workshops, boycotting my classes, and am currently working to promote awareness in my home town. But, we can't spend every minute of every day on the strike, as was so well demonstrated by the festivities at the pond on Saturday and Sunday. If the strikers can take a day or two to unwind after striking for a week, why can't the seniors take out one day after four years?

Please consider this idea, and get out and make your opinion known by VOTING in the referendum this Wednesday and Thursday in the Student Union lobby from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

LYN NEVINS, Treasurer,
Class of '70

To the editor:

We respect our fellow students' opinions in regard to altering or cancelling graduation, but we feel the cancellation of graduation would alienate the adult population. If students want to demonstrate their political feelings on the strike, they should be free to do so by wearing symbols such as a strike fist or a mourning band. In keeping with the present non-violent stand at UMass, we strongly urge a peaceful, anti-war graduation.

To the editor:

Censorship is not new to campus publications. Yet the University of Massachusetts has the dubious honor of being the first, so far as we know, to have students take upon themselves the role of censors. YAHOO Magazine, the widely-read humor and satire publication of this University, was in 1966 the victim of repressive censorship originating at the State House. After four years of hard work on the part of this committee, the editors and staff of YAHOO, the Student Senates of past years, and a number of administrators, YAHOO has finally returned to publication without censorship this year.

Yet no sooner is it revived, than it is censored by the Budgets Committee of the Student Senate. YAHOO's budget for its second year of publication changed each time it was before the Committee, because each time the membership of the committee was different. The discussion of YAHOO by the Committee was not based upon financial considerations, as it should have been, but centered upon YAHOO's content and specific editors of the publication who were, to say the least, disliked by certain members of the committee. One Senator actually complained that YAHOO has too much Senate-directed satire and humor. Others complained that YAHOO was not printing THEIR kind of humor. In a community as large as UMass, it is literally impossible for YAHOO, or for any publication, to please all of its readers. And to tailor its content to fit the attitudes and tastes of the Senate Budgets Committee would mean that YAHOO is selling out the rest of the campus. It has not done that, and as a result, is in serious trouble with that Committee and possibly the Senate.

Equally disturbing is the fact that the Budgets Committee refused to consider a plan proposed by YAHOO's new Board of Editors that would eliminate YAHOO from the SATF within three years, and which, by making YAHOO financially independent, would free YAHOO from any chance of censorship by either the State or the Student Senate and its Budget Committee.

What, we would like to know, does the Budgets Committee want? If it wants to lower the SATF, one could safely assume it would be interested in a plan to remove YAHOO from the Student Tax completely. Yet the Committee voted not to consider or even listen to that plan. We can only conclude, therefore, that the intent of the Committee is one of two things. Either it wants to retaliate against criticism through the method of death by attrition, (which cutting YAHOO back will do quite well), or it wants to maintain the power of censorship over YAHOO (which is accomplished by keeping YAHOO on campus and financially dependent upon them), or both.

In any case, the FREE PRESS COMMITTEE calls it censorship, and is appalled at the fact that censorship, generally a tool of a corrupt and frightened government, is being used by our own Student Government. We are aware of the immense power of the Budgets Committee, and are fully cognizant of the fact that it will take a full two-thirds vote of the Student Senate to alter the unfortunate and unprecedented actions of the Committee. We sincerely hope that the Senate will approve of YAHOO's attempt to become independent, as this will benefit both YAHOO and the Student Body. And, for the sake of freedom of the press on this campus, we ask that the Student Senate, at the very least, reconsider the YAHOO budget and decide for themselves in a more open and justificable manner than that which prevailed in the Committee "hearings."

To the editor:

We the undersigned, undergraduates, graduate students and faculty at the University of Massachusetts: registered voters of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and veterans, support any legislation to withdraw troops from Cambodia and Laos.

We are attempting to coordinate activities of other veterans at Brandeis, B.C., and B.U. We will have a table in the Student Union Monday May 11, 1970. Our aim is to obtain 10,000 signatures of registered voters who are also veterans and with elections coming up in the fall to use the petitions as leverage to get either Sen. Kennedy or Sen. Brooke to come to this campus to answer any and all questions about our involvement in Cambodia and Laos. Names can be dropped off at Butterfield Dorm Rm. 218 over the weekend. We would prefer that signatures be dropped off at the Dorm instead of calling the Dorm. We would appreciate any information or assistance to us.

To the editor:

As a concerned faculty member, I feel that ANY external attempts to pervert the relation between students and myself are infringements of academic freedom. The most recent Faculty Senate statement on grading does just this. Despite its air of liberality and concern for student welfare, it is a monumental copout.

If the Senate knows of faculty or departments who are acting unethically, why does it not deal with them directly? Are there more than just a handful? If so, the Senate should make this knowledge public. Surely the Faculty Senate must not protect those whom they believe are using grades as punitive means of repressing political dissent. By forcing a blanket grading proposal on all faculty, it compromises those who are working to develop fair solutions for ALL their students.

SHELDON CASHDAN

To the editor:

My primary concern with the strike, as it stands now, is how long it's impetus will last. As long as school is in session, the impetus should remain strong, but as soon as school closes or is shut down and these facilities and places of congregation are no longer available, I fear that the strike impetus will dissolve. A solution to this, I believe, is to begin forming groups from specific urban and rural areas to carry on the strike movement during the interim sessions. This MUST be done now while the forces are available to reorganize. Thus I believe that starting next week, along with the list of various workshops, there should also be a list of various appointed places where people from the Northampton-Amherst area, Needham, Pittsfield, and Hyannis, etc. can unite and plan the forms of social pressure, mass media pressure, canvassing that they will do during the interim sessions, also including places (which in this case would be various individual's homes) where weekly or bi-weekly meetings can occur. These smaller groups would be incorporated into a larger, regional group, which in turn, would be directed by an even larger group and so on.

Unless these concepts are taken into consideration NOW, the strike impetus is doomed by failure and will be a thing of memory and nostalgia.

If I can be of any help do not fail to contact me.

DAVID J. MANNING

To the editor:

I want to do away with violence on this campus and in this society. And since the government of the United States is the chief perpetrator of violence in the world, in this country, and on this campus, it is the terrible violence of that government I am chiefly concerned with.

What incredible hypocrisy for a man who is employing systematic violence in Vietnam, in Cambodia, in Laos, in the Carribean, and in the black colony back home to shake his head about violence of student demonstrators! What self delusion it is for comfortable professors to groan about smashed windows and to preach law and order on the campus when the government's ROTC is recruiting and training students to smash heads and villages. ROTC is the violence. Corporations that contribute to the war machine, they are the violence. Research that enables that war machine to stop oppressed people from taking what's rightfully theirs - that is the violence.

We have to stop systematic violence before we worry about the violence that disturbs the sleep of Spiral Agony and Richer Noxious. If we don't stop it, then for all our "concern", we're contributing to the real violence, the violence of the status quo, the vile-ence of a system scared of not being able to hold on to its power over people's lives and people's wealth.

JOHN CLAYTON

To the editor:

I would like to express opposition to the student strike.

My reasons are the following.

1. All the demands presented by the strike do not warrant such an action. The movement should be oriented toward halting the increasing involvement in Southeast Asia, only.

2. Reasonable doubts can be raised pertaining to the effectiveness of a strike. The fate of the last moratorium is a case in point.

3. A strike means a loss of freedom. Anyone wishing to pursue studies would not be allowed to because of a political issue. Attending classes should not become an expression of an individuals opinion.

4. I believe an effective campaign against the war can be waged while classes are in session.

The program I propose consists of four points.

1. A massive mail campaign to elected officials expressing ideas about the Cambodian issue.

2. Support for elected officials who propose legislation pertaining to the Tonkin Resolution, or censure, or impeachment.

3. Support for peace candidates in all positions.

4. A National referendum to decide what a majority of U.S. citizens think about immediate withdrawal of troops.

In closing, I think that the government is moving to resolve the Vietnam-Cambodia situation and that a strike here will hinder that movement.

To the editor:

Simply quitting, I do not feel is the right course. We simply have wasted too many years, dollars, and men to simply stop. I agree we should withdraw, but not before we can leave behind a nation which will not be subjected to a government which they don't want. The only way to prevent this situation from occuring is to make the South Vietnamese ready to handle the full burden of war. This is being done! Nixon has announced the withdrawal of 150,000 troops by this time next year, a fact which has been overlooked these last few days. The President is bringing men back and at a reasonable rate. As far as Cambodia is concerned I feel that the President has the safety of our men utmost in his mind. Nixon feels that the Viet Congs' strongholds in Cambodia represent such a sizeable threat to our men that nothing else was left for him to do but to try and knock them out. This garbage about spreading the war has no basis. After all Cambodia is thriving with Viet Cong which makes it her war too. For us to simply enter a few miles into a country already deep in the war cannot be taken as an escalation. Especially since the 'invasion' is only for a limited time.

I don't want to appear as a hawk. I want to see us out of Vietnam and soon. I simply feel the President is in the best position to judge the situation. He has hundreds of men at his disposal for advice plus. He must know many things of which we are unaware. Has anyone ever wondered why four different Presidents thought this war important enough to continue? Maybe they understand things we don't.

Nixon was elected to this office and thereby give the reins of the government. I feel we owe him our trust and patience. He is putting an end to the war and in the most suitable way. Let's stop spitting on him and the country.

BILL TAYLOR

To the editor:

Once again the New Left has won a major college campus victory over freedom of expression. University of Mass. Distinguished Visitors Program officials informed Young Americans for Freedom today that they would have to cancel a speech by conservative anti-communist professor Ernesto Blanco scheduled for tomorrow night at the University.

Reasons given were their fear that New Left militants might precipitate a riot in protest and that the University "could not afford" further trouble at this time.

The point which I as Western Mass. Coordinator for Young American for Freedom must make is that the Left has made it impossible for an opposing view to be heard and that once again the middle ground policy makers have capitulated. It is my fear that "crises" or threats of crises will prevent moderates and conservatives from speaking whenever it suits the wishes of the other side.

While I recognize the danger of angry confrontation, it is YAF's view that such appeasement will lead to greater violence and ultimately to the death of freedom.

Expected Violence Blocks Wall Street Demonstration

The planned Wall Street Confrontation set for May 11 and postponed until May 14 has been definitely cancelled for several reasons. The Committee cancelled original plans because of violence in New York City by construction workers. On May 11, such protests were still occuring.

Secondly to make the protest rally effective, the Committee was working with the New York City schools like NYU, Columbia and CCNY. In discussions with people from these colleges, the Wall Street Confrontation Committee discovered that they were not as committed to non-violence as they were and, in fact, some of the people advised them to bring their own guns and mace.

Because of the high risk of violence the Committee after much debate, decided that it could not take the responsibility of sending 400 students to Wall Street, with the chance that many of them could be injured. Busses were discharged and contributed monies returned.

One phase of the operation is still being carried out. Four business majors from UMass left Amherst on Sunday to meet appointments Monday, Tuesday, and today with representatives of the American Stock Exchange public relations firms, and 10 of the largest stock brockerages in the city.

It is hoped that with the attention that is being focused on Wall Street, that their dialogues with these people will mobilize them sufficiently so that they can organize and decide on action of their own to economically cripple the war in Southeast Asia.

Committee For Grad SU Meets Tonite

The Committee for a Graduate Student Union will sponsor a general organizational meeting and workshop for all graduate students tonight (Wed. May 13) in Room 104, Thompson Hall, at 9:00 p.m. The meeting-workshop will attempt to establish the most effective means of creating a viable graduate student union on the U-Mass campus. All graduate students, irrespective of their personal position on the strike, are urged to attend.

Ad Hoc Seminar Formed Collects Strike Documents

All interested people are invited to join a newly-formed AD HOC seminar in which supporters of the strike will collect documents and other information related to the strike. The next meeting is today at 10 a.m. in 107 Herter.

This seminar, which will continue to meet until its members leave Amherst, plans to study the nature of the strike support and opposition on and off campus, the sudden emergence of a strike leadership, and the personal responses of seminar members to the events of the past week.

Seminar members may study the strike as it has affected their dorms, their teachers, their parents, their friends, and themselves. For example, they will try to get their dorm-corridors to keep collective "strike diaries".

Economic Boycott

The National Strike Committee has set up a national boycott of Coca Cola, Inc. and Phillip Morris, Inc. Products of these corporations are the following:

Coca Cola: Sprite, Fanta, Fresca, Pekoe Tea, Tab, Cope aspirin, Real Gold, HiC, Minute Maid, Snow Cron.

Phillip Morris: Marlboro, Parliament, Virginia Slims, Alpine, Paxton, Persona, Clark Gum, Burma.

There are 4 reasons why these two corporations were chosen for an economic boycott:

1. They can be seriously affected by a nationwide consumer boycott because they are in narrow, youth-oriented market.
2. They can in turn affect public policy because they have large lobbies in Washington.
3. This boycott would not unfairly hurt the small businessman because he can sell comparable products.
4. The boycott requires no undue sacrifice by the consumer because there are comparable substitutes.

Housing Office Maps New Plan for Incoming Frosh

By JIM GOLD
THURSDAY ISSUE EDITOR

Because of the construction strike, the Housing Office has been forced to draw up alternate plans to accommodate 750 new students who will be living on campus next fall. According to Mr. Bruce Cochrane of the housing office, these alternatives were decided upon after much consideration of the responsibilities of the University to the state, itself, and its students.

The options were drawn up after it was decided that the number of incoming Freshmen should not be cut. These options should also stop any forced tripling. All those accepted for the fall semester will be allowed to enter.

These options will lead to near 100% occupancy, which has been stressed in the past to keep room rates down. That way, when the new dorms open hopefully in the spring, occupancy will drop to 85% but the yearly average will remain high enough to stave off another rent hike.

By offering a 30% reduction voluntarily for tripled students, the housing office encourages students to get together to make room for the incoming Freshmen. Students who notify the housing office of their choice to triple by July 1 will receive their reduction on the summer bill. After July 1, reductions will be returned next November. Also, tripling students will receive first choice for rooming second semester. The housing office recommends this option to students who claim that they could not afford the regular rent increases. Next year's juniors and seniors will receive permission to live off campus if they can make arrangements now. Those students should complete an off campus housing form, available from their area coordinators. These forms should be completed by June 1st.

Students able to commute are requested to make arrangements to do so. For second semester next year, these students also will receive preference if they wish to move on campus.

Any Greek Organization which has room in its house is asked to call the housing office for help in filling their empty beds. Students willing to live in a fraternity or sorority house are also asked to contact the Housing office.

Other plans include keeping Prince House a Grad Student dorm instead of having an international house and housing students in the new Campus Center until space can be found.

Possible plans which the Housing Office does not want to institute are as follows: encourage students to enter the swingshift program; encourage students to enter the deferred entrance plan; and using strict admission policies for students transferring from UMass/Boston.

US Leaving Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said today "several thousand" U. S troops have already been withdrawn from Cambodia, more would come out by the end of the week and major operations against the Communist sanctuaries would be completed by June 15.

The secretary told the Senate Armed Service Committee that while the operations "have exceeded our expectations" and all U. S. forces will be out of Cambodia by June 30, the Nixon administration remains opposed to a proposed limit on U. S. forces in Cambodia approved Monday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Such a limit, Laird said, might interfere with President Nixon's ability to protect American troops.

The secretary also held out the possibility that future drives will be needed into Cambodia but said that the South Vietnamese would be able to handle these.

"The South Vietnamese will be in a position by the time the rain season ends to handle any such operations should they be necessary in the future," Laird said, adding that such renewed efforts would likely not be needed until next November at the earliest.

He said that "The South Vietnamese have performed very well in this entire operatin."

Laird said the Nixon administration has "lived up to the limits of Congress" which barred U. S. combat ground forces in Laos and Thailand. But he noted that the proposed restrictions for Cambodia would go beyond those.

President Nixon is now so firmly committed to a June 30 deadline for withdrawal of American forces from Cambodia, officials doubt he could prolong the operation even if he found it militarily advisable to do so.

End-the-War Amendment

Campus Vote to Examine Cutting of War Funds

A campus referendum on the McGovern-Hatfield amendment to prevent funding of the war in Southeast Asia will be conducted today in all dining commons and the Student Union as part of a national student referendum. Voting will be held in all dining commons at each meal today. Voting for commuters and Greeks will be held in the Student Union lobby from 9 to 5. The referendum is being run by the Student Government Affairs Committee of the Student Senate.

An addition to the Military Procurement Authorization Act, this amendment cuts off funds for military operations in Cambodia 30 days after passage. It begins the cutoff requiring withdrawal from Vietnam and Laos, effective December 31, and concluding with all forces out by June 30, 1971 -- unless a joint and specific declaration by the President and Congress can demonstrate the need for a specific, publicly recorded reason for an extension of time. In addition to permitting funds for the safe and systematic withdrawal of our forces, it permits funds to arrange for the exchange of prisoners and for asylum in friendly countries of Vietnamese who might feel threatened by our withdrawal.

It was introduced May5 by Senators McGovern and Hatfield and has since drawn at least 12 more co-sponsors. It is expected to come up for a vote in the U.S. Senate in approximately three weeks.

The national student referendum is an attempt to put direct political pressure on those in a position to control American action in Southeast Asia. It is felt that the amendment faces excellent chances of passage if enough general support can be demonstrated.

Massachusetts is being used as a pilot area for the referendum project. Nearly all major colleges and universities in the state are participating in the referendum. For the full impact of the project to be felt, as many students as possible must vote.

McGovern said of the amendment:

"No longer will we just make speeches lecturing the President on what we think we should do. No longer will we ask him to bear the risk and the opportunity alone of ending or continuing the war. Rather, we will force the Congress to share that risk and opportunity on a broad bipartisan basis. If the President is fearful of the political recriminations of either continuing or ending the war by withdrawing our forces, this amendment is saying: 'Mr. President, we are now going to share that risk with you.'

"But this amendment does more than that. It seeks to reclaim the Constitutional power of Congress over issues of war and peace. It seeks to prevent the arbitrary decisions of the Executive by restoring to the Congress as elected representatives of the people the power the Constitution intended.

"It provides, too, a constructive alternative to citizen powerlessness and despair and violence."

A national campaign is underway to present petitions of support to members of the Senate before the amendment comes to a vote.

McGovern-Hatfield Amendment

A. Unless the Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this Act or any other law shall be expended in Vietnam after December 31, 1970 for any purpose arising from military conflict; provided that funds may be expended as required for the safe and systematic withdrawal of all United States military personnel, the termination of United States operations, the provision of assistance to South Vietnam in amounts and for purposes specifically authorized by Congress the exchange of prisoners, and the arrangement of asylum for Vietnamese who might be physically endangered by the withdrawal of all United States military personnel from Vietnam shall be completed no later than June 30, 1971, unless the Congress by joint resolution approves a finding by the President that an additional stated period of time is required to insure the safety of such personnel during the withdrawal process.

B. Unless Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated to this Act or any other law shall be expended after December 31, 1970 tofurnish to Laos any military advisors or to support military advisors or to support military operations by the forces of the United States or any other country in or over Laos.

C. Unless the Congress shall have declared war, no part of any funds appropriated pursuant to this act or any other law shall be expended after thirty days following enactment of the Act to furnish to Cambodia any defense article or any military assistance or military advisors or to support military operations by the forces of the United States or any other country in or over Cambodia.

D. For the purposes of this section the term "Defense Article" shall have the same meaning given such terms under Section 644 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961.

Senate to Consider ROTC Tonight

by JOHN J. DUBOIS
Senate Reporter

In the closing moments of last night's Senate meeting, the Student Senate called a special meeting for 7 p.m. tonight to consider a motion supporting the continuation of ROTC.

The meeting last night, close to a quorum throughout was marked by long and tedious final consideration of the budget act, and unsuccessful attempts to consider a motion to support the current Faculty Senate stand in favor of continuing ROTC with major modifications, and to rescind the recent Student Senate action favoring complete elimination of the program.

An attempt early in the meeting to table the budget act in order to take up the ROTC bill failed, and a motion to go into special business towards the end of the meeting failed by 20-16-5. Though the motion failed, the Senate nonetheless allowed a non-Senator who supported the bill to speak. Citing the returns of the April 10 - 11 referendum (out of 5,000 undergraduate returns, a 2-1 margin supporting retention of ROTC), and the pro-ROTC petition (which has obtained 2,000 signatures), he contended that a majority of the student body supports retention of the program.

That presentation was followed by a motion to adjourn which failed on a voice vote. President Elters, noting the special business vote, declared the meeting adjourned for lack of a quorum. He acceeded to a roll call vote on the motion to adjourn. The roll call (7-28-5) confirmed both the voice vote and the lack of a quorum. A subsequent motion to adjourn until 7 p.m. today carried, and the Senate by voice vote adjourned.

In other action, the Senate unanimously supported a proposal by the Senior class to increase student influence overthe selection of honorary degree recipients and commencement generally by the formation of a commencement committee of three students, two faculty, and two trustees. The arrangements are now made by a trustee group. The proposal will go to the Board on May 29.

The Senate also approved a bill to take RSO out from under the Treasurer and place it under the jurisdiction of the Student Activities Office, a move sponsors contended would substantially reduce delay in processing financial transactions.

Noting that this will be the last issue of the Collegian, and the continuing need for a campus newspaper in the coming week, the the Senate appropriated $1,800 for a daily newspaper to be called the Massachusetts Student Gazette.

ROTC Members Meet With Administration

By RICHARD LANE
Senior Reporter

A group of officers and cadets from the Army and Air Force ROTC program here, along with two members of the UMass faculty met with Associate Provost Jerimiah Allen yesterday morning to protest a sit-in conducted by members of the anti-ROTC strike committee at Dickinson Hall.

According to a statement presented to Associate Provost Allen by the ROTC group, the purpose of the morning's meeting was to ask the University administration to "support our legitimate request for our rights as members of this community," because the anti-ROTC sit-in has "hindered students of our department from carrying on business in Dickinson."

Yesterday morning's action followed a sleep-in by ROTC cadets and a marshal training session attended by ROTC cadets on how to deal with a non-violent obstructive sit-in. The anti-ROTC group had earlier pledged itself to some kind of activity to prevent the ROTC personnel from using the facilities of Dickinson Hall and conducting "business as usual."

The ROTC officers came in to work at 8 a.m. and were met by a crowd consisting of 25 to 30 cadets. There were no protestors present at this time.

Five members of the University faculty were also present at the request of the ROTC people to serve as "faculty observers" in an "unbiased", "objective" capacity. These faculty members were Robert Novack of the Engineering Department, Dale Sheckles of the Engineering Department, Donald Scott, Robert Monopoli, and Richard Trueswell, all of Engineering.

At 8:15 the sit-in began in front of ROTC offices and in the halls. Protestors sat in groups of two to three. Colonels Connolly and Friedman of Army and Air Force ROTC decided to protest the sit-in to the administration because "We are being harrassed and just can't work." Faculty observer Donald Scott stated to ROTC people and the Collegian that "I did witness total physical blockage of Air Force officers."

Associate Provost Allen called for an emergency meeting of the Faculty Senate advisory committee, consisting of faculty, strike steering committee, marshalls and ROTC people.

The meeting with Allen contained much debate in which ROTC did state that "there has been difficulty in conducting business as usual," and accused members of the advisory committee of "brinkmanship" in trying to escalate the issue and create a violent confrontation. Glenn Elters of the strike steering committee stated that the sit-in was not "infringing" upon any individual rights but stopping business as usual."

Faculty member Professor Sidney Kaplan and others of the anti-ROTC group expressed satisfaction with a "remarkably non-violent situation at Dickinson." Dr. Seymour Shapiro, however, believes the sit-in to be potentially inflamatory "incident with the possibility of provoking 'confrontation' " Professor Philip Jones, member of the Academic Affairs sub-committee on Military Science also pointed out the possible "long range implications of the University not enforcing its picketing code," in light of this recent sit-in protest.

Trustees Meet in Boston;

Invading Students, Seek ROTC Abolishment

RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

Minutes before the final vote by the Board of Trustees naming Robert C. Wood president of the University, approximately two hundred students from UMass/Boston barged into the Statler-Hilton conference room calling for an end to R.O.T.C. on the Amherst campus.

After the initial furor subsided, the Board, chaired by Joseph P. Healy, unanimously named Dr. Wood to the new position which will pay him $42,000.00 per annum. Subdued hisses and boos eminated from the volatile group of UMass-Boston students, as the salary was announced.

The action came after a brief closed session of the Trustees.

Dr. Wood, presently the Director of the MIT-Harvard Joint Center for Urban Studies and the Chairman of the M.B.T.A., will become the 17th President of the University system in Massachusetts. Wood will not only be the top administrator for the UMass system, but will also hold a full professorship on Political Science at the respective campuses. He plans on staying "in contact with reality" at the University by teaching.

In a prepared text, Wood stated that "at the present time no one lightly undertakes the direction of any University. He pointed to the Universities of this nation as being in the "vanguard of criticism" questioning the "purpose and goals of the United States" nowadays.

Wood quoted John Kennedy in calling off a "peaceful revolution of hope." He suggested, again quoting Kennedy, that "civility is not a sign of weakness and sincerity is always subject to proof." He went on to say that although we are far from our goals today, "if we are to retrieve them, we begin with the University."

"We must never forget what the purpose of the University is: to expand the knowledge of the world, the universe and ourselves and to transmit that knowledge to all who care or need to know" said Wood warning the Trustees that "we must be prepared to change the practices of Higher education rapidly and drastically." "We must never practice politics on the University for the sakeof politics or practice", said Wood.

Dr. Wood ended his prepared text by stating that "This commonwealth can and must have a first - class PUBLIC university system."

After reading the statement Wood and Chairman of the Board Healy left for a press conference in another Statler-Hilton meeting room. The crowded open meeting of the Trustees, however, became the debating ground for the students from UMass-Boston who were calling on the Trustees to abolish ROTC on the Amherst Campus.

A student from UMass-Boston estimated that more than half of the 3700 students attending U.M.B. were calling for an end to the Amherst ROTC program.

The debate became vehement at times both on the part of the Trustees and the students. Many students wanted the Trustees to "abolish ROTC" that afternoon. The majority were willing to accept the rationale of Trustee Gordan, who emphasized that the Board of Trustees, as long as he had been a member had never acted upon anything concerning R.O.T.C." and that they would not act without going through the normal Board procedures.

The Board as a whole reacted favorably to the debate on the issue. Trustee Gordan promised the students that concerning the ROTC issue "the buck won't be passed." There promises to be further action on the part of students concerned.

Chairman Healy said that he "was completely surprised" by the arrival of the students. The mass entrance of the students into the richly decorated, poorly designed Statler conference room was prompted by the lateness of the trustee meeting. Several Trustees were apparently supposed to attend an open meeting at UMass-Boston."

The new president Wood, who will not assume full responsibility of the post until next fall expressed the view that the University should "not make it impossible for people who want ROTC" to have it. He did state that "all" ROTC courses should be "examined" to determine their academic value. He went on to state that "ROTC should be here. . .but not in its present form."

The debate over the ROTC issue stretched for a couple hours. In the end there were invitations given and accepted for future meeting and discussions concerning R.O.T.C.

Wood Named UMass Prexy

By RICHARD C. HANSON
Asst. News Editor

"I'll let him (the chancellor) handle the disorders and I'll pass out the Degrees" mused Robert C. Wood, waiting for the UMass Board of Trustees to call the final vote for his appointment to the office of President.

The decision concerning the appointment had been publicized long before yesterday's meeting and press conference. The procedures yesterday were anti-climatic, considering the role Dr. Wood will have to play. The University is expanding onto three campuses; the president of the University system will be directly attached to none of them. His office will be in Boston, because that is where his prescribed function will be centered.

Wood told the press that his position will encompass three major responsibilities: to help the individual campus' sustain themselves by providing resources (primarily through the legislature); to mediate the "comparative activities" of the three campuses; and to constantly be evaluating the entire system.

Dr. Wood plans to leave the individual campus' fairly autonomous "in the conduct of everyday life on campus." He felt that direct action on his part will only occur on "rare issues".

Dr. Woods feelings as expressed yesterday on some of the pertinent issues of our times are as follows:

VIOLENCE - "I just can't accept violence." Wood said that he would only use outside force as an absolute "last resort. . .and then most reluctantly." Dr. Wood has been involved in many violent situations, especially with his work as Director of the MIT-Harvard Joint Center for Urban Studies. He called the riots in places like Newark and Detroit, the "Domestic Pearl Harbor."

R.O.T.C. - Dr. Wood was confronted with the 200 UMass-Boston students demonstrating their desire to see R.O.T.C. off the Amherst Campus. He pledged to meet with the students. He views ROTC on campus as an "opportunity for those college students who want to participate." For those who want it Wood feels it "should be maintained." He felt, however, that the legitimacy of ROTC courses for credit should be examined. "The burden of proof is on the defense department" to maintain the academic status of ROTC. Wood did strongly state that R.O.T.C. will not remain "in its present form." Wood has been involved with two institutions which have abolished ROTC; M.I.T. and Harvard.

Dr. Wood's position could have kept him completely apart from the "23,000" students of the University system and concerned mainly with the "47 million" dollars which pays for the system. He has chosen to do the opposite; he will actually maintain a teaching role at the University.

Wood is a capable man. His past performance indicated this. His initial exposure to the press and the students give the impression that he will be able to function effectively with the legislature and the students.

Student Strike Continues Most Protests Peaceful

(AP) - Student strikes and demonstrations continued on many of the nation's campuses Wednesday and the echoes reached to the White House where it was announced that the President's daughter and her husband would not attend their college graduations.

Most protests were peaceful. At some schools, students sponsored petition drives, and at the University of Maine student s donated blood for servicemen in Vietnam.

The student strike information center at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., reported 267 schools were on strikes of indifinite length. The center reported 286 schools on strike Tuesday.

A nationwide sampling showed only 15 colleges officially closed. There are about 1,500 four year colleges in the nation.

The White House announced that Julie and David Eisenhower have decided not to attend their graduation exercises at Smith and Amherst colleges, which are among campuses disturbed by anti-war protests.

The Smith graduation ceremony was scheduled for May 29 and President and Mrs. Nixon earlier had indicated their plans to attend their daughter Julie's graduation.

The two young people decided not to return to their campuses at all. Both have good enough grades to receive diplomas without further exams, the spokesman said.

Eisenhower, 22, enters the Navy officer candidate school at Newport, R.I., in September.

At the University of Denver, National Guardsmen, moved onto the campus while workmen demolished a shantytown built by antiwar protesters.

There was no violence as the Guardsmen, most with unloaded rifles, remained on the campus for about 2-1/2 hours. The approximately 200 inhabitants of the commune, which they called "Woodstock Nation West" had evacuated before the troops arrived.

Police had torn down the tents, lean-tos and shacks Monday, but when they withdrew, the protesters rebuilt the commune. About 8,300 students at tend the University.

Police in Blacksburg, Va., using dogs, evicted more than 100 antiwar protesters from a building they had occupied overnight on the campus of 10,000 student Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Dr. T. Marshall Hahn, Jr., Virginia Tech president, said, "anarchy must be dealt with" and added that the school had no alternative but to call police. He said the students had caused significant damage within the building and left behind "components for the manufacture of fire bombs."

All 107 were arrested on charges of trespassing and told they were summarily suspended from the university.

Michigan Gov. William Milliken declared a state of emergency in Ypsilanti after violent antiwar demonstrations by dissident students. Col. Frederick Davids, head of the state police, said the emergency was declared after police informants reported that some students planned to seize Walsh Hall, the campus ROTC building, and set it afire.

Nearly 2,500 of the 7,800 students at the University of Maine have volunteered to donate blood for servicemen in Vietnam. Antiwar protesters said the blood drive will demonstrate that their primary goal is to save lives.

In Washington, D.C., some 50 students from Westminister Choir College in Princeton, N.J., holding aloft a banner reading "singers for peace," sang their especially composed "peace anthem" in Lafayette Park across from the White House. They also sang in the rotunda of the Capitol and at the Washington Monument.

At Washburn University in Topeka, Kan., plans were announced for a one hour assembly in the football stadium Friday to be called "College Appreciation Day" to express thanks for education.

Bill Martin, main organizer of the assembly and spokesman for a student group called Kansas American Youth for Education, said: "We feel this is not a time for us to be silent." He said he hopes 10,000 students, parents and taxpayers will at tend. About 4,000 students attend the university.

The leaders of the Vermont Federation of Young College Republicans announced they "totally oppose" the strikes at many of the nation's colleges.

"We recognize that many students are supporting this. . .program in good conscience. . .But we further believe the strike is simply a tactic in the hands of cynical organizers," a statement said. A spokesman said the group has 150 members on 10 Vermont campuses.

War Protestors Improve Image

(AP) - Some American college students are getting haircuts and shaving off beards and mustaches in an attempt to improve their image while waging door-to-door antiwar campaigns.

More than 50 war protesters at San Jose, Calif. State College had their beards shaved off and long hair trimmed to "standard" length Tuesday by four professional barbers who did it free.

"We thought turning skinhead would be the supreme scrifice, but it's really working out," said Lou Solitske, a senior.

"The only way we are going to get this war stopped, he said "is to get off campus and start mobilizing people. . .and we can do it better if we don't offend ordinary people with our appearance."

For the same reason, the student strike headquarters at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., now has a barber chair. Amateur barber Steven Shirey, Rochester, N.Y., mans the chair to cut hair of students who fear shagginess will make a bad first impression on New Hampshire citizens. Shirey was reported doing a brisk business.

"Cut your hair before you canvass," reads a sign at the regional student strike headquarters, in Providence, R.I. The headquarters, coordinating strikes at Brown University, Rhode Island School of Design, the University of Rhode Island, and Rhode Island College, also has provided a barbering service. The service was run by girls from Pembroke College, Brown's sister school. They charged 50 cents with the money going to the strike fund.

In Mount Vernon, Washington, students from Skagit Valley Community College listened as Prof. William Larson proclaimed he was tired of having people laugh at his long hair. He jumped from the truck where he had been speaking and had a coed cut it.

Before the rally ended, about two dozen followed his lead. After the rally, students went from door to door seeking signatures for an antiwar petition.

Some faculty members and students at Maine State University in Orono urged protesters going on door to door campaigns to trim their hair and beards.

And these moves toward a more conventional look was not limited to hair removal. Students at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., donned shirts and ties for a college antiwar canvass. Later they put on sports jackets for a canvass of the city and its suburbs.

L.A. Teachers Vote to Return To Classroom

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Teachers who struck a month ago for improved wages and educational conditions voted Wednesday to return to work and to skip an offered five per cent salary hike so the money could go for smaller classes and improved reading programs.

Although it was a salary stalemate that precipitated the strike, teachers had insisted from the start that better classroom conditions were the crux of their concern. School officials, citing a $42 million deficit for the upcoming budget, had offered five per cent before the strike.

Schools in the nation's second largest district remained open during the strike, in which about half of the 25,000 teachers remained on the job. Student absenteeism, due to curtailed instruction, had been running 30 to 40 per cent.

Thurmond Questions Princeton Project

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. said Wednesday the federal government should investigate a project sanctioned and aided by Princeton University to elect doves and defeat hawks in Congress.

"I feel that there is a serious question here as to whether or not Princeton can legally sponsor this project and provide facilities to aid in its success while maintaining a tax exempt status," Thurmond said in the Senate. "I intend to ask the Treasury Department to investigate this matter thoroughly to determine what action should be taken."

Russia Acknowledges Fears Won't Get Bogged Down in Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State William P. Rogers acknowledged Wednesday there are widespread fears at home and abroad that the United States might become bogged down militarily in Cambodia.

He declared the Nixon administration has no intention of getting involved in support of the present government of Premier Lon Nol - or any other government of the neutral country.

Appearing without prior announcement at his second news conference of the year, Rogers said in response to questions that the initial reaction around the world to the U.S. operation in Cambodia was "reserved or negative." He said it was similar to the reaction of many young people in this country and he added, "There was concern on the part of some nations that we may get bogged down."

But Rogers said much of this has changed because of President Nixon's assurances that the United States is pursuing a limited operation in Cambodia both as to time and objective and that there has been no change of basic U.S. policy. He reiterated that U.S. troops will be out of Cambodia by June 30.

He said that if the United States had changed its objectives and was seeking a military solution, then such anxiety would be well founded. But he insisted the Cambodia operation is not an attempt to win a military victory or to escalate the war.

"We do not intend to become committed to the military defense of the Lon Nol government," Rogers said at one point. "The President announced we are going to provide some limited assistance... any larger program would require congressional approval."

He was referring to the transfer of some captured Communist rifles and ammunition to the Cambodian army.

Rogers said it is too early to tell whether the operation has complicated U.S. Soviet relations, but said it has not appeared to have any effect on the strategic arms limitation talks in Vienna.

The fact that ousted chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk formed a government in exile that was "incubated and hatched in Peking" has caused some concern in Moscow, Rogers said.

Rogers made these other points:

-He has not had any difficulty in getting to see Nixon. "When I call the President and tell him I have an important problems to take up, he says, 'Come right over.'"

-He agrees with Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel that the Nixon administration needs to do more to communicate with young people.

-The United States is pleased that Israel has withdrawn troops from Lebanon after a raid Tuesday on guerrilla positions. He called on both sides to avoid further escalation.

- The United States expects talks with Communist China in Warsaw scheduled for May 20 to be held. There has been no indication Peking would cancel the meeting as a result of the Cambodia operation.

-The U.S. South Vietnam patrol of waters off the Cambodian coastline in the Gulf of Siam extends to both coastal and international waters.

Enemy Troops Fail to Fight In Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) - Enemy troops in the Cambodian sanctuaries failed to follow a stand and fight order, a Pentagon spokesman said Wednesday.

He said the enemy command in the area sent out such an order early in the allied drive into the North Vietnamese and VietCong base areas.

"So far, there's been no fight," the spokesman said, describing the resistance as only light and sporadic.

The matter came up when newsmen asked the spokesman about reports that at least two enemy regiments fled ahead of advancing American and South Vietnamese troops' in the Fishhook area of Cambodia.

Jerry Friedheim, deputy assistant secretary of defense refused to discuss specific units, but said there were about two regiments in that region when the allied attacks began April 30..

He said he was unable to tell whether the enemy failure to put up a major fight was the result of a breakdown in communications or defiance of orders.

Israeli Forces Withdraw From Bases in Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) - An Israeli armored force returned to Israel Wednesday after mopping up Arab guerrilla bases in the foothills of Mt. Hermon in Lebanon, the military command announced.

The withdrawal was made without resistance or interference, the spokesman said.

The air war along the Suez Canal at the same time erupted with strikes against enemy positions along the waterway by both Egyptian and Israeli war planes. But there were no reports by either side of air battles.

The Israeli military spokesman claimed one Egyptian MIG 17 was hit by antiaircraft fire but was not seen to fall. The Egyptian spokesman said all planes returned safely, a Cairo dispatch said.

The Israeli spokesman said 30 guerrillas were killed and 15 taken prisoner during the 32 hour operation in southern Lebanon.

Two Lebanese policemen and a Lebanese soldier on leave in one of the villages in the 45 square mile area occupied over night by the Israelis were among the prisoners.

The military announced completion of the withdrawal more than four hours before a U.N. Security Council meeting in New York to determine whether Israel had complied with a resolution adopted Tuesday calling for an immediate pullout of troops.

In a message to the 15 nation council, Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir informed Secretary General U Thant that "all our forces that were involved in this action have returned to their bases."

The raid was the largest ever mounted by Israel into Lebanon. It followed repeated warnings to Lebanon by Israeli leaders to halt persistent Arab Guerillas attacks against settlements along Israeli's northern border.

The Israeli action proved, according to the military, that the southwestern slopes of Mt. Hermon were under the complete control of the guerrilla fighters.

Six Lebanese villages were surrounded by Israeli troops during their search for guerrillas.

The Israelis have not revealed the size of the force that went into Lebanon. The ground troops were supported actively Tuesday in the dawn penetration by artillery and aircraft.

Israel claimed three Syrian jets were shot down in dog fights.

Senate Debates Cambodia Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate plunged into debate Wednesday on the U.S. role in South Asia with a warning from one of its committees the nation may find itself fighting on and on a seemingly endless war.

Addressing itself to the military movement into Cambodia, the Foreign Relations Committee report said the United States faces "the grave risk of repeating the errors of Vietnam in Cambodia, and of finding our armed forces fighting on yet another front in a war which seems without end."

The report on a military sales bill includes also the committee endorsed Cooper Church amendment which would bar funds for retaining U.S. ground forces in Cambodia and place strict limits on American aid and air operations in that country.

Supporters of the Cooper Church amendment said they are in accord with the June 30 termination date set by President Nixon on the Cambodian operation. But the chairman of the Armed Services Committee said one can't be certain that deadline can be met.

"I just don't think anyone can foretell just when they can carry out a mission," Sen. John G. Stennis, D-Miss., said. He opposed the amendment, saying the United States might have to renew such attacks in the future.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana told reporters that voting on amendment to water down the Cooper Church limit - and in effect grant President Nixon authority for operations in Cambodia when aimed at protecting U.S. troops in Vietnam would come "maybe this week or more likely next week."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho opened the debate by telling the Senate that the amendment which has a total of 30 sponsors "presents Congress with an historic opportunity to draw the limits of American intervention in Indochina."

He said "legislative action is needed now, not only to make certain that the avowed perimeters of our attack upon Cambodian sanctuaries are not exceeded, but also to bar the beginnings of an escalating military assistance program to the new Cambodian regime."

Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania told reporters he has advised the White House that the Senate "is getting up a head of steam" to declare itself against any wider U.S. involvement in Cambodia.

Anti-ROTC Committee Pusues Non-Violence

By JOHN J. DUBOIS

The Anti-ROTC Committee has resolved to pursue, at least for the immediate future, a non-militant course of action, emphasizing lobbying of the Faculty Senate and learning the details of the contractual agreements between the University and ROTC, particularly those financial and academic conditions which the University might impose which would cause ROTC to voluntarily terminate the program. That plan of action was contained in a report from the ARC heard yesterday morning by the Strike Steering Committee.

The deliverer of the report, which was for information and required no action by the SSC, stated that the committee would explore these channels before they take any further action which might entail "very serious consequences which the ARC is not prepared to face at this time."

The committee report occasioned considerable criticism from SSC members, including charges that Dickinson was not in fact a liberated building; that there is no reason to believe that the administration is committed to removing ROTC; that the strike is becoming all talk and no action. One member asserted that concrete actions were needed to maintain the momentum of the strike, and that ROTC was one matter susceptible to direct action. A number of members noted with frustration and some anger the failure to implement motions previously passed by SSC calling for occupation of Dickinson and forcible prevention of the functioning of ROTC offices.

Defenders of the committee report responded that the committee, in response to the urging of Professor Howard Gadlin (Past SSC chairman) and Senate President Glenn Elfers (current chairman), opted for "continued cool action until the Faculty Senate comes to a decision." (The Senate meets today at 4) Defenders further contended that the appearance of inaction was an illusion, that the course chosen by the committee was "just a matter of strategy"; that "ROTC will end when the contract is terminated"; and that it would be a mistake to "antagonize the Faculty Senate and the administration" at this time.

The ARC representative urged the SCC to consider the consequences of any forcible termination of ROTC functions, contending that "any act by any group cannot be counterproductive to the national movement", implying that any such forcible termination at this time, and its consequences would be counter-productive.

In other business, the SCC heard a report from Professor Gruman, advisor to Tuesday's action to remove funds from the Amherst banks , who reported that $15,000 had been withdrawn thus removing, by estimate of economics experts, some $75,000 from the economy.

There was extended discussion on the role of marshalls, critics charging that, in addition to cooling actual violence, the marshalls had assumed responsibility for discouraging or preventing activities which in their judgement might lead to violence. There was also controversy regarding whether marshalls were under SSC or an independent group. The acting SCC chairman noted that a resolution had been passed putting the marshalls under SSC. The whole matter was postponed by a measure providing for a 5-man committee to meet with the marshalls' heads about these matters, with a report due for today's SSC meeting.

SSC set aside Friday as a day for action workshops only, postponing all non-action oriented workshops originally scheduled for that day. The intent of the measure is to channel people into those projects which will be engaged in action past the close of school.

Professor Barber, on behalf of the Non-violence Subcommittee obtained SSC permission to send a telegram in its name to the Board of Trustees requesting a special meeting on ROTC before the close of school.

Conscription Corner

By ARLEN BRUNSON

What can I do? How can I effect change? Well there is a way. Just observe yourself. Judge yourself against the three demands - stopping the war, political repression, complicity. What action can one take? Draft resistance may be the answer. The draft is vital if the war is going to continue. Is conscription repressive? Is involuntary servitude? Most of all, what could be a better example of complicity than blindly complying with the Selective Service System and being coerced into fighting an unjust and illegal war?

Purge yourselves, of your own complicity. Don't help to add the word hypocrite to the long list of Nixon-Agnew descriptions of students. If you really want to see the war ended, draft resistance provides a non-violent means. It can work if we get together. A UMass Chapter of the Union for National Draft Opposition is now being formed. Its goal is to eliminate the draft. The means - massive co-ordinated resistance. Come to our table in the Colonial Lounge in the Union or to our Draft Resistance Workshops. We must work together. Remember, if there are no soldiers, there is no war. Seize the time!

Official Grading Policy

Upon recommendation of those present at a meeting on Monday May 11 at 4 p.m. to which all faculty senators were invited, the Administration has adopted the following NEW grading policy, to be in effect only for the Spring Term 1970. This supercedes the guidelines dated May 7, 1970.

GRADING POLICY FOR SPRING TERM 1970

1) Each student may choose among the following grading options:
   a) To receive either a 'P' or a 'W'. (A student choosing this option will receive a 'P' if he was passing the course as of 4 May 1970.)
   b) To receive a letter grade, based on his work through 4 May 1970.
   c) To receive an 'incomplete'.
   d) To take the final exam or the equivalent, and then be graded on the basis of the term's work.
   e) If a student has not chosen an option by the time of the scheduled final examination, the instructor shall apply option 1-a.
2) Final examinations will not be taken by students electing options 1-a and 1-b. The usual final examination policy of the course, or a mutally agreeable alternative, will be followed for those electing option 1-c.
3) The grade of 'P' is recognized as fulfilling University, college and department requirements.
4) The period for removing 'incompletes' is extended indefinitely, subject to further discussion.
5) Grades need not be turned in until the strike is over, unless a student specifically requests his instructors to turn in his grades as soon as possible.
6) A grievance committee will be formed to protect students, teaching assistants and faculty members from retributive (punitive) measures.
7) Points of this resolution will apply to undergraduate and graduate students, teaching assistants and faculty members.
8) During the period of final examinations, all members of the University community will be invited to participate in workshops and other activities related to the aims of the strike.
9) The grading system for spring, 1970, will in no way be looked upon as a precedent for furture grading systems for the University.

Detailed interpretation will be announced today.

The May 12 grading policy signed by the Provost is the official University policy for this semester. Professors must grant the options outlined. No student may be held responsible for any work or exams due after May 4 against his wishes. Violations of this policy will be dealt with by the grievance committee. . . .52874.

FROM OUR SIDE

Worthwhile or Worthless

The DAILY COLLEGIAN ceases publication today for the academic year with unique feeling of a semester yet unfinished. The reasons for the end of publishing are numerous (financial, legal, budgetary, contracts, manpower, sanity, etc.) But usually when finals time come around, the only thing left active around UMass is the tent for senior day.

This unique feeling isn't pleasant. It's a feeling of disbelief at a semester so full of monumental campus events. It's a feeling of frustration at knowing virtually all active student efforts for change have failed. It's a feeling of bitterness, bitterness toward individuals for those usually petty reasons that develop when interests clash, and toward those who make all efforts seem worthless, and society aimless.

It has not been a semester for benign neutrality. The rent strike, Mills House, the Tippo and Wood appointments and the procedure used to make them the Humphrey incident, and the ongoing student strike left little room for inaction.

Right now it's impossible to look back at all that affected us all, and all that affected us individually, and to be either rational or perceptive. Fatigue and involvement, and their accompanying biases and frustrations, don't lend themselves to astute analysis of situations. It's pretty easy to abandon a lot today, to succumb to the obstacles that the university, the government and society are placing in the way of the most articulate generation in history.

Perhaps this feeling of hopelessness can be overcome. For it has been a semester that got people involved in some of the things in which they were never involved before. It was a semester that made more people aware of what surrounds them than ever before. So if some minds have been changed, if some ideas have been born, if horizons have been expanded, then this hectic, confusing, quickly changing and unforgettable semester may have been worthwhile.

If all this has not been worthwhile, this has been a wrenching and exhausting experience for nothing.

Peter F. Pascarelli
Editor- in-Chief

Mir 1st Egal

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who have worked in the editorial department since February, and all the people who have contributed to making this semester, for better or worse, a very interesting one.

I read somewhere recently, I think it was in FRONTIER MAGAZINE , a publication out of England, that "the younger generation is devoid of a sense of humor and lacking; in any real sense of joy." This type of statement while false, seems to be typical of thr sentiment of observers within "the revolution" (for want of a better word) and those outsiders who find their own sick sence of joy at finding something wrong with youth.

Another comment that was discriminately dropped during the past two weeks by an elderly observer was "Why do you take life so seriously?" Well the answer to this, I guess, is that somebody before us didn't take life seriously enough.

In spite of everything that has happened in this country, whether it leads to new freedom or repression - I think some people have found a sense of joy in committment to peace. I believe that if the life culture is suppressed it will not be for long. Peace!

Poor Economics

The UMass Strike Committee and the National Strike Committee are guilty of poor economics.

The UMass Strike Committee authorized and conducted a campaign to withdraw deposits from area banks. "The theory involved," said yesterday's Collegian, "concerns the idea that for every dollar withdrawn, five less dollars are spent by the Federal government for defense."

It is true that for every dollar withdrawn on balance, a bank will be required to constrict the amount of loans it can make. But the question is - loans to whom?

Those who will be hurt most by actions such as this are the students who apply for tuition loans, the families who seek mortgage loans, and the cities and local authorities who want to do such outlandish things as build sewers and control pollution. The federal government can always finance its expenditures by borrowing aided by the Federal Reserve System.

The proper course for those who wish to see the least dislocations in the civilian economy, is for them to deposit dollars in local banks such as those in Amherst, and especially in savings and loan associations and savings banks which loan only to homeowners and students. The government securities which they own, they are required to purchase by law.

There is no reason to expect the federal government to cut its military budget rather than its domestic budget when faced with a shortage of funds. Those programs which have recently been cut are precisely the ones which the country needs the most: education, medical research, urban renewal, anti-poverty, etc.

The most effective way to redirect the resources of our country to truly productive uses is to pressure legislatures and government officials. November is not that far away and they know it.

The National Strike Committee has called for a boycott of the products of the Coca Cola and Philip Morris corporations. There is little reason to believe that, as the NSC insists, they can be made to "affect public policies because they have lobbies in Washington."

The products of the American economy which deserve to be boycotted are not made by such companies as Coke. They are rather produced by United Aircraft and McDonald Douglas. Again, the only really effective way to pressure these firms is through Washington.

The economic problem of the strike, according to Dr. Arthur Wright of the economics department, is that those involved have limited resources. They ought to use their time and energies, he said, in projects which will have positive and real results.

I urge you to join those at UMass who are acting to change this nation and its economy through the election of a new government. Contact the MOVEMENT FOR A NEW CONGRESS by calling Pat Pinto 549-6029.

Thank you and have a productive summer.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Hearing Aides for Nixon

Everyone has been complaining about the communications gap between the campus and the Capitol, these days, and some people have been trying to build bridges over it, too.

Mr. Nixon himself, last Fall, appointed Stephen Hess, a former deputy assistant to the President, to head up a conference on Youth. Mr. Hess said at the time that he would seek to involve young people to provide positive answers to questions affecting them.

As soon as we read the announcement, we wrote Mr. Hess and volunteered the services of a national collegiate press organization that has direct pipelines to student editors around the country. His "Director of Communications" replied enthusiastically, some two months later, that she was enthralled with the offer of help. And she promised to "keep in touch with specific projects."

Then, the typical White House silence.

We tried again, after the Kent State Massacre, last week. This time, it was to the newly-formed Tennessee Collegiate Press Association. Coincidentally, Chancellor G. Alexander Heard of Vanderbilt was named that very afternoon to be Mr. Nixon's ears (get the pun?) on the campuses. What better opportunity to be heard than by one's fellow Tennesseans?

So we told them, these student representatives of a potential 57 campuses in the state, "It seems singularly appropriate that Tennessee should be in the forefront of any fight for freedom, since your great state has spawned such as Davy Crockett, Daniel Boone and Andrew Jackson."

Pointing out that the events of the first week of May cried out for participation, we added that the youth of America today have no voice in Washington. And yet, there are almost nine million students in the colleges. And 50 per cent of our population is under 25 years of age.

And while our youth are subjected to villification from high places, thousands are dying in far off battlefields and others even now on campuses close at hand.

There is an obvious communication gap that needs to be bridged.

The White House needs to be told what it's really like on the campuses of America.

But not by professional pundits who are too long beyond youth to know what it's really like to be frustrated and ignored and driven to childish actions because the so-called "adults" can't understand that chronolofical age may have little to do with being "adult."

Therefore, we suggested a peaceful, respectful and friendly mission to the White House to bring the word from the campus direct to the President.

We want communication, NOT confrontation.

And we suggested that the proper emissaries should be the editors of the student press in America. They alone can make the best hearing aides for the President.

Our reasoning was that, first, the gospel according to Youth is being spread in print, these days, by a force of some 160,000 part-time campus journalists who are reaching more of the best minds in the country than any other single segment of the population.

These campus media men bombard the campuses today with some 6,810 student newspapers, yearbooks and magazines - which is more printed material than is produced by any other single special-interest group in the United States.

And to prove that these student editors are responsible members of the economic community of these United States, be informed that they are decision-makers for the spending of some $300,000,000 of the nation's economy. Because this is what it costs to produce the student press, when one considers the hidden costs of unrewarded labar and students and faculty advisers, plus the costs of administering the finances of the publications and the value of light, heat, shelter and telephone services that most get free from their parent institutions.

Second, if anyone on the campus knows what's going on, it's got to be the campus editor, , for he gets the story from all sides. He talks to more people (including students, faculty, administrators and cleaning women) than anyone in these United States.

Who indeed, would be better qualified to advise the President of the United States on the state of the campus today?

A third reason to assume that the campus press is most qualified as a spokesman for the campus, is purely emotional. For the fact is that the "Massacre on Taylor Hill", occurred at the doorstep of the journalism building at Kent State University. The building is named for William (Wild Bill) Taylor, the founder and longtime chairman of the School of Journalism, which houses all the Journalism activities on that beleaguered campus.

This fact alone gives collegiate editors a vested interest in the incident.

And we also urged a reminder of that other segment of our youthful generation - thehigh school editors, who are looking to us for leadership in preparing their campus world for them to inherit, next autumn, and the autumn that follow.

The University of Wisconsin, a couple of years ago, estimated that high school journalism involves something like 250,000 students who, with the help of their teachers and principals, produce some 33,000 student newspapers, yearbooks and magazines.

And they spend some $65,000,000 a year in cash - which doesn't include office space, light, heat and salaries of their teachers.

Between the colleges and the high schools of America, the student press produces about 40,000 publications that reach about 25 percent of the population of the entire United States.

And that intelligence gains in significance when it is measured against the fact that professional journalists produce only 53,000 periodicals for consumption by the "Straight" world.

"Therefore," we said to TCPA "you all are in a position of power to make your facilities known in this matter which will be critical in deciding what your world, and your children's world, will be like after the present generation gets through with it.

"You all should be issued immediately to all student editors who would join in calling upon the President of the United States with a message from his young constituents, who also have a voice in this democracy.

"And they should tell this man who has vowed to represent himself as a president of All the People - they should tell him precisely what their fellow students are thinking and doing on the campuses. And they should tell him they are ready to bring his word back to their constituents that the president is willing to listen, and is willing to act in specific ways to satisfy the reasonable desires and hopes of the youth on the campus.

"And their strongest appeal to the President should be for the establishment of a working channel of communication with the young. As it is, the Cabinet includes no one of an age or disposition to remember what it is to have dreams and ideals and energy that say, 'The impossible we begin to overcome, today.'

"Remember that we propose communication, NOT confrontation."

John F. Kennedy once said that "The longest journey begins with but a single step."

Student editors must take that very step today and begin their journey across the communication gap between campus and Capitol. Only thus can they win comfort for the afflicted youth of our land and help to bring reason and understanding to the disaffected leadership.

We are happy to report that the editors of Tennessee acted upon this appeal with a telegram to Chancellor Heard. They are now waiting to hear his acceptance of their offer to bridge the gap.

Campus Comment

To the editor:

The Strike has come to the University and with it comes questions that never have been asked. One of these questions is whether or not we should have Commencement.

If you feel the main purpose of the strike is to stop all school business - then the answer is: "No, we should not have commencement."

However, if you feel, like myself, that the strike's main purpose now, is to broaden its base of popular support and to show our concern and disgust over the many evils in America - then the answer is: Yes, we definitely should have commencement.

Commencement offers a great deal to the strike in its aim to reach other sectors of society. There will be close to 20,000 parents, relatives and friends in the Stadium watching Commencement. A non-violent protest (such as stenciling caps and gowns, arm bands, signs, or even singing "Give Peace A Chance" instead of the National Anthem) would show our complete concern over what is happening in America. If an overwhelming part of the degree recipients protest in such a way, it would blow the middle-class idea that the strike isn't followed by a majority of students. Many of the spectators would be so taken aback they would have to think instead of blindly condemning us for our views.

A second virtue of graduation is the political forum it creates. Kingman Brewster will, I am sure, speak out on the issues that confront us as students and as Americans. Lederle and Sargent would not be well received if they did not. I, as the student speaker, will make known our anger, despair, and frustration over the policies of the U.S. Government and the hypocrisy and injustice in our society. Thus, if we did not have Commencement we would in effect deny many (20,000) people the political forum and information they so desperately need.

Since Commencement is such a highly publicized event the information about a protest and the text of the speeches would, by use of the media, go into the homes of all Massachusetts residents. If we didn't have Commencement, we would miss this golden opportunity of needed state-wide publicity.

Some have asked whether we should cancel Commencement completely and offer an alternative. How many parents would come to the University if they could not see their son or daughter graduate? Very Few. How many parents would feel alienated if they could not see their kid graduate. Very Many.

Thus, if we did not have Commencement, we would lost publicity, a chance for a broad base of support, a perfect political forum and we would gain alienation from those students and parents who want to go to Commencement.

For the above reasons, I ask you to vote for Question 2 on the poll on Commencement that will take place in the Union on Wed. and Thurs. of this week.

DAVID VEALE
President, Senior Class

To the editor:

I personally sympathize with the ideas of the Strike and listened at the Senior Class meeting last night as various people expressed their opinions on the value of Commencement and Senior Day. Some did not seem realistic in their proposals. First of all, people have to consider what Commencement means to most parents. It is an expected part of their sons' and daughters' education. The major part of these parents are middle-class members of "the establishment", the people whom the strikers are trying to get through to and with whom all the seniors will have to deal next year.

As far as the kids graduating are concerned Commencement is an end to four years of learning and growing of all kinds but more important, a BEGINNING, from the word itself, of a career and life on the outside in which the student tries to fulfill himself and test out what he has learned.

Not to have any exercises would prove nothing; why let go of an audience composed of the very people you want to talk to and educate? A traditional program is impossible with the state of affairs on campus now. As far as an alternate program it is really hard to change people and such a change at this late date might alienate more than educate the parents. The Strike is a part of the learning which we have participated in and a part of what we will try to communicate to people next year and the years after so should, I think, be included in the Commencement exercises. If some sort of traditional program with APPROPRIATE protest could be arranged which would not "turn off" the people whom we want to "turn on" to new ideas, I think that everyone could benefit.

Senior Day, as far as I know, is optional; no one has to go. It is possible to go along with the Strike and still want to see friends you've had for four years whom, for the most part, you'll never see again.

All in all, I hope that the seniors will consider realistically the meaning of Commencement, the relation it has to the Strike, and the people who will be there, in voting. I also hope that a large number of seniors will turn out to vote for this last issue of their college lives, and attend the meeting Sunday to discuss these issues more fully.

To the editor:

The Distinguished Visitors Program has been accused of denying Dr. Ernesto Blanco his freedom of speech by cancelling his lecture scheduled for May 6. First of all, we did not actually cancel the lecture, as we are planning to reschedule it for the Fall semester. We decided to postpone the program because the members of the Distinguished Visitors Program felt that the attention of the University community was focused on the Strike and mass rally on the Amherst Common. We felt that it would be a waste of the University's resources to sponsor a program unrelated to the Strike on that particular evening, as very few people would have attended. We also believed that it would havebeen unfair to Dr. Blanco to ask him to make a four hundred mile round trip from New York City in order to speak to such a small audience. Before making our decision to postpone the program until the Fall, we spoke with Eugene Rizzo and Mike Cavanaugh, the Chairman and Secretary of the University of Massachusetts chapter of Young Americans for Freedom with whom we were co-sponsoring the program, and they agreed fully with our judgement.

The Distinguished Visitors Program in no way tries to deny the right of platform of any political group.

To the editor:

I wish to make an appeal to the Strike Committee regarding the use of its funds. Many organizations, including my dormitory (Kennedy Lower), have donated funds to further the goals of the Strike. As a business major, I can not help but wonder how this money is being managed especially under the pressure of the Strike "emergency". With the cancellation of the New York trip, I have even begun to wonder if the Committee has more money than it can use. I call on the Strike Committee to make available to the public a statement of its accounts including receipts and disbursements. I also call on the Strike Committee to adhere to generally accepted accounting practices in so far as possible. I realize that the immediacy of the Strike may require that some of the usual "red tape" be cut. I make these requests not because I question the use of the funds but rather as a matter of ethics and good faith.

I am concerned about one additional problem which I would like to bring to the Committee's attention. Nearly every building on campus has been plastered with the fist symbol. I was very disappointed at this needless desecration since it in no way furthered the goals of the Strike. I call on the Strike Committee to set aside a portion of its funds, right now, to pay for the damage after the Strike is over. Again, I regard this as a matter of ethics. It would probably mark the first time that students have ever volunteered the use of their own funds to pay for student damage.

The Strike not only must sell itself to President Nixon - it should also take the steps I've outlined above to avoid any "credibility gap" right here on the campus.

Respectfully yours,

As a post script to the letter referring to returning oil company credit cards as a form of economic protest to the war in Southeast Asia. If you wish, this type of action could also be an effective means to protest the oil company's total disregard of our environment. If you do not wish to express your concern over Southeast Asia in this manner, then send the cards back to call direct attention to the environmental problem they cause. Send back the credit cards and applications you do not wish to use to the company, telling them of your concern about their abuse of the environment. Ask them for a reply to your objection. Show them that you do care; act today.

On Guns

While the student strike opposing the Indochina War continues at area colleges, the University of Massachusetts Police Department has refused to agree to respond to any calls with unloaded weapons.

A near-strike of the 19 campus security police at UMass was averted Friday by a meeting of police representatives and top administrators.

The situation today resulted from an article in the Daily Collegian, the student newspaper citing guidelines for maintaining campus order laid down by Chancellor Oswald Tippo.

These guidelines stated, "Officers will not enter strike activity areas unless requested to do so by the student marshal chairman. Under these circumstances they will be escorted by marshals and will not carry loaded firearms."

The guidelines further stated that marshals would be invited to escort officers responding to individual complaints in other campus areas.

The article said the guidelines were issued after extensive consultation with the University Police and the Non-Violence Sub-Committee of the Strike Steering Committee.

A memorandum from University Police to Chancellor Tippo yesterday said police would continue to cooperate with the strike marshals whepever possible but would not respond to any call with an unloaded weapon.

The campus police memo said police would respond to individual compaints and would not invite the strike marshals to accompany them.

"The job of effective law enforcement is difficult enough without having inexperienced and untrained personnel accompanying the police," the memorandum continued.

The police said the chancellor's guidelines were not acceptable and had not been derived through extensive consultation with police as mentioned in the guidelines.

The police memo said their bargaining agent was not present at any consultations and since guidelines affected working conditions they considered this a violation of their contract with UMass.

Police said their contract was negotiated between UMass Administration and the Employes of the University and it was improper action to enter a third party (Strike Steering Committee) into any negotiations or consultations regarding employes of the university.

"The University of Massachusetts Police Department considers any guidelines derived at through these negotiations - consultations invalid," the memo said.

Police requested a meeting with Tippo regarding these matters and asked for a reply as soon as possible.

Randolph W. Bromery, special assistant to Chancellor Tippo, issued clarifications of the guidelines for maintaining campus order yesterday.

The memo noted, guidelines issued by the Chancellor's Office should not be construed as indicating an intent to disarm the police officers.

"It is and has been the department's normal operating procedure for police officers to unload weapons before entering a riot or a potential riot situation," the memo of clarification noted.

The guidelines are only in effect so long as the marshals of the Strike Committee can maintain order, Bromery said.

Bromery's notice concluded by commending police officers for their understanding and cooperation during the current campus strike and expressed appreciation for their concern for order in the entire campus community.

Marshalls Clarify Stand

In the light of the present misconception of the marshall position we issue the following statement:
1. The primary commitment of all marshalls is to the strike and to the three demands of the strike. Non-Violence is a TACTIC which we are committed to.
2. Marshalls support strike and steering committee resolutions.
3. Only those individuals with marshall training are marshalls.
4. Marshalls have been organized into three groups:

A. Marshalls with specific time shifts assigned to liberated areas in compliance with steering committee's resolution concerning liberated areas.

B. Cell groups with a known co-ordinator who will be available for marshall duty when contacted by marshall communications.

C. Individuals who practice their convictions and agree to maintain non-violence.

5. Marshalls are no longer required to wear armbands, unless specifically requested to do so by the head marshalls.
6. As of 5-10-70 Guy Toss and Marty Cohen resigned as head marshalls and will from this date function as a liaison with the administration.
7. The executive council of the marshalls will consist of four people who will be responsible for contacting other marshalls and for dealing with grievances and communications. (Greg Miller, David Reid, John Bronos, Stephanie Reynolds).

Three Students Chosen For Argentine Exchange

Three UMass students have been selected to participate in the new exchange program between the University of Massachusetts and the Consejo Argentino de Intercambio Estudiantil (CADIE) of Buenos Aires. Jean Lozoraitis, Erica Frouman, and Damaso Swiatkowski together with students from Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, and the University of Bridgeport will fly to Buenos Aires in mid-July.

There they will have a 35 day program of cultural and social activities. They will be guests of Argentine families and will participate as auditors in classes of their choice at universities in Buenos Aires. The various activities tentatively planned include a visit to the Larreta Museum, tours of Buenos Aires and its surrounding areas, a visit to a ranch, a reception given by the American Ambassador and possibly a yacht trip to the Parana River Delta.

Jean Lozoraitis and Erica Frouman are both Spanish majors. Damaso Swiatkowski was born in Argentina but has not returned since 1963. In Buenos Aires they will renew acquaintance with the three Argentine students who visited at the University of Massachusetts in January and February, living in Prince House, auditing courses, and participating in a variety of events including the activities of the Club Hispano.

Additional U. M. students who wish to participate in the Argentine Exchange Program should apply immediately to the Office of International Programs.

Workshop Finds Means For Economic Protest

A workshop Tuesday in J.Q.A. upper discussed further means for economic protest. All seniors who receive credit cards or credit card applications could returm them to the President of the company with a letter stating that they do so in protest of the war.

This type of protest when coordinated would include 1.6 million college seniors. It should be obvious that oil companies do a large percent of its business with the credit cards and that they rely on catching the college market.

Although it is best to write your own letter, form letters can be found in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

Departments Take Stands on Strike

Mental Health

The staff of the University Mental Health Service wishes to make clear its reaction to the tragic events of the past weeks and the state of the country in general.

We see the recent invasion of Cambodia as part of our country's authoritarian militarism, exemplified by Richard Nixon. The killings at Kent State are one expression of the polarization along class and educational lines given impetus by the widespread mood of frustration by the unresponsiveness of our government to concerned citizens' demands for peace and justice, and by the recklessly hate-filled speeches of Spiro Agnew (under the covert direction of President Nixon).

We are shocked and sickened by the mentality of war and the oppression of political dissenters and minority groups. As mental health workers we deplore the emotional climate which legitimizes violence by the State, whether in Southeast Asia or in our own country. There is no "psychotherapeutic" solution to this erosion of humane values. Only major changes in American foreign and domestic policies will allow for a return to sanity.

While we plan to continue offering appointments to students at the Mental Health Service, we fully support the strike and its aims, and we pledge our active participation.

Human Development

1. We oppose President Nixon's extension of the Vietnam War, into Cambodia. We feel that the United States military involvement in Southeast Asia must end immediately.
2. We view the continued and systematic persecution of the Black Panther Party as but one instance of a long history of repression of black people in this country. We feel that this must end.
3. We deplore the involvement of the University of Massachusetts in the immoral war in Indochina. The presence of ROTC on this campus is evidence of that involvement. We feel that this must end.
4. We support the present student strike. The members of our cation for the maximizing of human potential. We regard the present course of the United States Government as antithetical to that goal.
5. We favor lowering the voting age to 18 and we urge that this be done by legislative action rather than by constitutional amendment.

Art Dept.

Resolved: that the Faculty and T.A.'s of the Art Department support the student strike by either actively participating in the strike or respecting the right of any student, staff, T.A. or Faculty member to do so.

The Faculty and T.A.'s of the Art Department support the right of the teaching members to hold or not hold classes and final exams according to the individual's discretion, and to grade on an individual basis, within the terms of the legal changes introduced by the Provost's communication of May 7, 1970.

Both resolutions passed unanimously.

THE HUNGRY-U

UNIVERSITY HOUSING

Because of the construction workers strike it it is clear that the "1970 dormitories" will not be open for the start of the fall semester, which will result in a serious shortage of student housing. We anticipate having to house approximately 1000 more students than current facilities will allow. (These students have already been accepted.) In order to avoid "forced tripling", several options are being made available which we hope will ease the shortage of space in September. They are as follows:

1. VOLUNTARY TRIPLES

Where facilities are adequate students are encouraged to move together, three to a room. Each student in a voluntary triple will receive a 30% reduction in room rent. (In a $550. per year room, this would amount to a savings for fall semester of $82.50 each.) This arrangement would be for the fall semester. Students who voluntarily triple first semester will be given first choice on available space for the spring semester. Students who wish to use this option should contact Mr. Bruce Cochrane in the Housing Office, 232 Whitmore, tel. 545-2100.

2. OFF CAMPUS HOUSING

Members of next year's Junior and Senior class will be given permission to live off campus if arrangements can be made now. Persons who wish to use this option must complete an Off Campus Housing Form, available at the Area Coordinator's office in each area. Notification of such arrangements must be in the Housing Office not later than June 1, 1970.

3. COMMUTING STUDENTS

Those students who normally live within a reasonable commuting distance are requested to make plans to live at home for the fall semester rather than in University housing. Such students who wish to return to University housing for the spring term will be given priority over incoming students.

4. FRATERNITIES and SORORITIES

Any Greek organization which has facilities not filled to capacity for the fall term are asked to contact Mr. Cochrane in the Housing Office, 232 Whitmore, tel. 545-2100, so that arrangements can be made in assisting you in filling your house to capacity.

Any student who might be willing to live in a Fraternity or Sorority on a rental basis for the fall semester should contact Mr. Cochrane for further information.

April 10-11 Round-up

Referendum Shows Faculty, Student Splits

The results of the University's largest campus-wide balloting in its history were announced late yesterday by members of the April 10-11 Committee, who sponsored the poll of sentiment on certain issues arising from discussions and workshops on University affairs held on campus earlier this spring.

More than 74--persons--undergraduates and graduate students, faculty, staff and administration--expressed their opinions on such matters as University-wide course and teacher evaluations, grading policies of the University, ROTC, campus recruitment, the University calendar, and further development of semi-autonomous residential colleges. Until this week, the average of 4000 students who vote each spring in Student Senate and class officer elections was the largest turnout at any campus vote.

"We are deeply gratified at the genuine interest people across the campus have taken in the policies and the future of their University community," Allen Davis, moderator of the April 10-11 Steering Committee, remarked. "Our committee--which is made up of volunteers from undergraduates, graduates, faculty, and staff--now plans to take these results to the three Senates at the University. We hope for some decisive action by early fall."

Ballots accumulated by the thousands in Whitmore as students returned pre-registration forms during the final days of last week. Faculty and student workers on the April 10-11 Committee, meanwhile made their rounds to department offices and to staff supervisors Friday and Monday collecting the hundreds of ballots which were returned, in large and small numbers, to nearly every central office on campus.

A computer was used to tabulate responses, according to Barbara Heron, instructor in Speech, who was in charge of keypunch operations. The computer program for this balloting was written by Richard Story, staff member of the Provost's office.

Overwhelming "Yes" Votes

Four issues received an overwhelming affirmative vote from the total number of those who balloted, although students and faculty did not always agree.

For example, 6553 favor University-wide course evaluation and University - wide teacher evaluation by students; 469 were opposed and 396 need more information. But undergraduate students favor this proposal 21 to 1; faculty favor it 2-1/2 to 1.

Student s and faculty disagreed concerning a voting student membership on all University personnel committees. Of the total vote, 5,386 favor the addition of a voting student member; 999 voted against this move; and 855 need more information. Broken into categories, however, on campus undergraduates support the move 3825 to 373 and off campus undergraduates favor it 969 to 141. On campus graduate students favor this action 84 to 25 and off campus graduate students support it 204 to 86. But faculty were strongly opposed to such a policy. They defeated the proposal 197 to 117, with 25 needing more information and were supported by the administration which narrowly defeated the proposal 29 to 27. The staff was also split, 148 to 140.

Unanimity previaled across the various segments of the community in favoring semi-autonomous residential colleges and expanded draft information and counseling services.

On residential colleges, 4,572 support further development, 1,311 voted against it, and 1,583 need more information.

Greater support for draft counseling was approved 6,532 to 503 with 438 requesting more information. A detailed box score, by each segment of the community voting on each issue is given in the accompanying article.

Clear Trends

Clear trends were established on all the issues polled, although the final tallies were less decisive on the remaining questions. In summary, results run like this:

Grades: Undergraduates are strongly and graduate students moderately against the current grading system; faculty, administration and staff are strongly for it; unidentified voters are strongly against it. The undergraduates strongly favor instead both (a) dropping the F and entering no record instead and (b) allowing all students an option for all courses of either grades or pass/no record with portfolio. On both these issues, faculty, staff, and administration are strongly opposed; unidentified voters are mixed.

Academic calendar: Students, staff, and administration are in agreement, moderately to pro - nouncedly favoring the present system. They would also favor the tri-mester system (three semesters of equal length covering all twelve months of the year) but strongly disapprove of the quarter system (four terms of three months each). The exception in the voting on this question is by the faculty who approve strongly if the courses are given on a no-credit basis. Graduate students agree in moderately favoring a no-credit ROTC program. Faculty, staff, and administration are all in favor of the current status of ROTC, although the faculty (not the staff or administration) also support ROTC for no credit. According to the April 10-11 balloting, no group on campus wishes to abolish ROTC.

Campus Recruitment: Under - graduates are moderately against Defense Department research and strongly in favor of industrial recruiting; their other responses, on recruiting by the armed services and by companies making arms and munitions, is mixed.

Barbara Heron takes ballots for the April 10-11 Referendum in Whitmore. Over 7000 members of the University community voiced their opinions on University policies.

But the April 10-11 Committee, according to members Thomas Lindeman UCF and John Hunt, Master of Southwest, is not limited to these workers and is in fact seeking additional help during the summer and fall. The Summer Continuation Committee, chaired by Mary Jo Lynch, University Library, will formulate proposals based on the results of this poll so that specific ideas will come before the Senate in the fall.

Meanwhile, Gary Sho, English, John Hunt, English, Karen Karvonen 1973; and Doug Robert, 1973 have been working since April 11 with a Proposals Committee, formulating other proposals for action based on other suggestions made by the more than 50 workshops conducted by members of the faculty, administration, and student body on April 10 and 11. It is hoped that from the 2000 people who are estimated to have attended the conference and the 350 who attended the plenary session of the conference moderated by Allen Davis, graduate student, in Mahar Auditorium on April 11, other volunteers will form a number of active committees in the fall.

Work on the results of the poll and on other proposals will continue under the coordination of Barbara Heron. Volunteer workers may reach her by calling 5-2043 or talking with her in 409 Machmer. She will be working with Mary Jo Lynch during the summer and with all the groups in the fall.

A final open meeting for all members of the campus community who wish to sign up now to work on proposals will be held in Arthur Kinney's apartment, Crampton House, Southwest, at 9 p.m. on Tuesday, May 26.

Foriegn Students Take Strike Stand

We, the undersigned foreign students at the University of Massachusetts, hereby support the strike and the ideas underlying it.

FURTHERMORE, we strongly believe that these are but symptoms of a much larger malady involving the state of affairs of the entire international community at the present time.

We deplore:

1. All political, social, cultural, economic and military intervention in the affairs of any sovereign nation, by any outside power.

2. The exploitation and the denial of the independence of the majority of humanity by a minority, throughout the world.

3. The polarization of the world between several blocks.

We wish to stress the close relationship between the above statements and the purposes of the strike.

National Guard Moves To University of Denver

DENVER, Colo. (AP) - National Guardsmen, most with unloaded rifles, moved onto the University of Denver campus early today and surrounded a war protesters' shantytown until it was torn down for the second time since Monday.

There was no violence or confrontation because the approximately 200 overnight inhabitants of the commune, which they called "Woodstock Nation West" had evacuted a few minutes before Guardsmen arrived.

Two youths carring an American flag and riding a motorcycle up and down the street in front of the commune were arrested.

There was some applause from fraternity houses nearby as the Guard came onto the campus and an occasional shout from the few students who watched as troops with bayonet mounted rifles surrounded the shack area.

A Guard spokesman said Gov. John A. Love issued the order to activate the Guard, which already was on alert, about midnight.

Brig. Gen. Felix L. Sparks, the Army Guard commander, took personal charge. He said he brought more than 1,000 Guardsmen onto the campus and had 180 Air Guardsmen in reserve a few blocks away.

Police Chief George Seaton said he had 200 men at the scene. "We're here to destroy the village and we'll stay until the job is finished," he said.

Sparks said as soon as the demolition was finished, the Guards men would pull out. "But if they put these things back up, we'll be back, " he said.

Police and campus maintenance workers began tearing down the shantytown after officers of the Denver Police Department bomb squad checked it out.

The Grievance Committee asks that anyone who attended the Tuesday afternoon coffee hour with Chancellor Tippo come to the Grievance Committee Office, Norfolk Room, second floor, Student Union, or phone 595-2874.

A European Singing tour is is store for the UMass chorale starting May 23.

Chorale to Visit Europe

Take seventy students at the University of Massachusetts, train their voices in long hours of rehearsal, place them in front of Dr. Richard du Bois and the result is a very special treat--a performance by the University of Massachusetts Chorale.

Just such an experience is in store for audiences in England, the Netherlands, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and France this year.

The Chorale is scheduled for a 21-day concert tour, with ten appearances at universities, churches and schools in Europe. It will be the first UMass musical organization to represent the University outside the U. S. Where possible, the Chorale will sing works by native composers in the language of the country. The Chorale plans to leave May 23 for Europe.

In the four years of its existance the UMass Chorale has grown from forty singers who made their debut in Belchertown to seventy who have gone on concert tours from Massachusetts to Chicago. The Chorale has gained a reputation as one of the best organizations of its kind in New England. Its repertoire includes such difficult pieces as the Poulenc Mass in G.

The Faculty Brass Trio and soprano Dorothy Ornest will accompany the Chorale on its tour. Their participation will open to the students an opportunity to perform late Renaissance and Baroque motets for brass and choir. In addition, the Brass Trio, John Jenkins Larry Weed and Walter Chesnut, will assist Dr. du Bois in holding seminars on the history of music in the countries the group visits.

The students in the Chorale are paying their own expenses for the venture. A fund-raising committee has been formed, under the chairmanship of Barry Wendell, to provide scholarships for those members unable to pay their own way.

The tour schedule is three concerts in England from May 24 through May 27; then a concert in Amsterdam May 30; two in Berlin June 1; one in Innsbruck, Austria, June 4; two in Switzerland June 5 and 7; one in Munich June 9; and a recording session June 11 in Paris.

Art Dept. Displays Wares

Work by University of Massachusetts art department Master of Fine Arts degree candidates is currently on display at three locations on the Amherst campus.

The exhibitions are part of the annual spring series of thesis shows by graduate students in art. Openings are from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday and the exhibitions run through May 16. They are open to the public without charge.

Paintings by Thaddeus Dabrowski will be at the Student Union Gallery, which is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Paintings by Kenneth Surabian will be at the University Gallery, Herter Hall 123, open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Ceramics by Stephen Skillitzi will be exhibited at Munson Annex, hours 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The final six thesis exhibitions by University of Massachusetts Master of Fine Arts degree candidates have been listed by the UMass art department.

Opening May 17 and running until May 23 will be four shows: ceramics by Richard Crown in the Munson Annex Gallery, paintings by Carol MacArthur in the Herter Hall Gallery, prints by Bruce Manwaring in the Memorial Hall Gallery and paintings by Grace Yang-Tze Tong in the Student Union Gallery.

Two sculpture exhibitions May 24 to May 30 will close this year's thesis series. Work by Armand Balboni will be in the Herter Hall Gallery and work by Robert Mansfield will be in the Berkshire Gallery at the Southwest Residence Area.

All exhibitions are open to the public without charge. Schedules of openings and gallery hours are available from the UMass art department.

Glee Club Presents Memorial Saturday

The Mozart Requiem will be performed this Saturday evening, May 16th at 7:00 p.m. in the Quadrangle behind Johnson Chapel on the campus of Amherst College as a memorial to those who have lost their lives in North and South Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, and here at home.

"This will not be a 'performance' in the normal sense of the word," according to Bruce G. McInnes, Director of the Amherst Glee Club, "as there will be no fancy programs, no formal dress and no applause. Rather this will be an opportunity for us to say what we feel individually and to express it as a group through this great music."

The Amherst Clee Club is inviting community participation and support for this program and those familiar with the Mozart Requeim are in vited to participate as singers. Many leading choral groups have indicated their intention to join in this concert including members of The Sarah Lawrence Glee Club, the Smith College Glee Club, the Vassar Choir, the Hamilton College Choir and the Yale Glee Club.

There will also be participating singers and orchestra members from Dartmouth, Harvard, Mt. Holyoke, Trinity, Williams, Radcliffe, The University of Hartford, the University of Massachusetts, and the Union Theological Seminary.

Mr. McInnes has announced the following schedule incidental to the concert. A rehearsal for concert will be held in Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College on May 16th from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. which will be followed by a buffet supper at 5:15 in Valentine Hall. Elliot Forbes, retiring Director of the Harvard Glee Club is expected to be present. The concert is open without charge and in case of inclement weather will be held in the Amherst College Cage.

'Black Manifesto' To Start Today

"Black Manifesto," a gala of events in black expression is being presented today through Saturday by the UMass Black Cultural Center. Tonight, "The Miracle," a social protest play will be performed by a black drama group from American International College. This event will be held in Bowker auditorium at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are on sale today at the Student Union and will also be available at the door.

Friday night A. B. Spellman, a musicologist and poet from Atlanta, Georgia Center for Revolutionary Artists will be featured at the Black Cultural Center.

Saturday night at 8:30 the Cultural Center will present Billy Leroy and the Soul Deacons, poet Ebon Dooley , and the Marion Crown Jazz Trio with Steve McCall on drums and Richard Abrams on trumpet.

U.S. Breaks Embargo Sends Arms to Greece

WASHINGTON, D.C. (LNS) -- The Greek junta received $26 million worth of surplus military equipment from the Pentagon, above and beyond the $37 million already authorized by Congress for fiscal year 1969, it was learned today in a report leaked to Congressional circles here.

This extra $26 million was granted in circumvention of the Congressional arms embargo imposed on Greece in 1967 as a response to the coup which overthrew the constitutional government of Prime Minister Papendreou and set up a right-wing military dictatorship in its place. The embargo, against "heavy" military items was never publically defined and the flow of arms and equipment has continued at levels considerably above those approved by Congress under the military assistance program.

The Administration, under pressure from the Defense Department, is considering cancelling the embargo altogether. Claiming that a Soviet build-up in the eastern Mediterranean requires a more "solid" Greek regime, the Defense Department is pushing for total support for the Greek junta. The Defense Department puts Greece in the category of "friendly defense countries" along with Taiwan, South Korea, and Turkey. All four of these nations share a similar background -- they are all controlled by right-wing military regimes which base their shaky existence on Defense Department aid.

Some Congressmen, once again faced by the fact that the Pentagon makes foreign policy without their "help", reacted indignantly to the revelation. Senator Stephen Young of Ohio introduced a resolution requiring the Pentagon to make "complete and prior disclosure of all proposed disposals of surplus weapons."

ROTC-Administration Statement

I The administration has received a statement from the students of Military and Air Science which reads as follows:

We the students of Military and Air Science request that the Chancellor of the University accept the following statements of fact.

1. The students of Military and Air Science have gone out of their way to be a non-provocative force on campus. Specifically, we have taken the following actions:
   A. cancellation of practice for Spring Review
   B. cancellation of Spring Review
   C. cancellation of Honors Awards Ceremony
   D. cancellation of Scabbard and Blade social events
   E. cancellation of field training briefings
   F. cancellation of Brigade Activities
   G. Military Ball held off campus
   H. no uniforms worn on campus

2. In accordance with University Policy, we are unable to hold academic classes.
3. We have held open workshops.
4. We have cooperated by making facilities available to the Strike Committee.
5. Many of our students support most of the strike demands.
6. We have endorsed and taken part in non-violent marshall training workshops for all concerned students.
7. The students of our departments are now being hindered from carrying on business in Dickinson Hall.

We therefore ask the Chancellor and the Administration to accept the following proposals.

1. That we appear here today as students of the University asking for our rights as students.
2. That the University Policy in regard to operating building and activities on optional basis be maintained in Dickinson Hall.
3. That the University Picket Code be enforced.
4. That the University support our legitimate request for our rights as members of this community.

II. After consultation with the Faculty Senate Emergency Advisory Committee, and representatives of the Student Senate Executive Committee, the Strike Steering Committee, the Strike Marshals, and the Graduate Student Senate, the administration wishes to make the following statement:

A. First, we wish to emphasize the unique nature of the present crisis, on this and other campuses of the nation. Stresses are being generated that call for PATIENCE, MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING and FORBEARANCE if we are to avoid violence and possible tragedy at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

B. We find that the current activities of the anti-ROTC group in Dickinson Hall, where they are sitting in the doorways of the offices, constitute a measure of disruption that violates the spirit of the agreed-upon guidelines and the Student Picketing Code, and that they infringe upon the rights of those students who have chosen to engage in authorized activities. It is our opinion that these methods of demonstration could provoke an incident of violence. So far, they have not. This, in large measure, is due to the commendable restraint that has been exercised by ROTC officers, cadets and other personnel, and to the efforts of the strike marshals.

C. The University administration will make every possible effort to avoid invoking force. We therefore call upon individual members of the Strike Steering Committee, the Strike Marshals, and other persons dedicated to the non-violent, persuasive methods of the strike to do everything in their power to persuade the anti-ROTC demonstrators to allow free and unimpeded access to all offices and classrooms in Dickinson Hall and other buildings.

Julie and Dave Won't Attend Graduation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Julie and David Eisenhower have decided not to attend their graduation ceremonies at Smith and Amherst colleges, which are among campuses disturbed by antiwar protests.

A White House spokesman said today President Nixon's daughter had talked over the situation with her mother. The two young people also had conferred with officials

Coalition Sends Telegrams to Senators

The New Politics Coalition, 25 Main Street, Northampton sent the following telegram to Senator Fulbright, Mansfield, Cooper and Aiken: "The invasion of Cambodia signals the failure of Nixon's Vietnamization policy. His refusal to accept a coalition government in Vietnam suggests he is still committed to winning an impossible military victory. His action indicates a shocking contempt for public opinion, for his own claim of disengagement from Vietnam, and for the constitutional prerogatives of Congress in decisions of war and peace. We urge Congress not to be subdued by soft Presidential rhetoric in the next few weeks. Congress must act firmly to force withdrawal of American troops from Indochina and to reassert its central role in foreign policy."

William E. Connolly, Chairman of the NPC stated that his group had collected over 5,000 signatures from the Amherst-Northampton area in the last few days to statements urging Congress to constrain the President in Indochina. The NPC is also working with a National Committee for Congressional Responsibility with offices in Rochester, which seeks to get 20,000,000 signatures in the next month urging firm Congressional action.

Astrological Forecast

by Sydney Omarr

Anyone who tells you it is possible to write an astrological column by computer — and still do an accurate and entertaining job — is insulting your intelligence. This column has nothing to do with a computer. And it is not likely that any column claiming to be computerized has much to do with one, either.

STUFFING ENVELOPES - Throngs of people gathered on the Morrill side of the pond yesterday to send copies of the proposed Anti-Crime Bill home to their parents. This bill is now before the United States Senate and it is believed by many that, if it is passed, it "would greatly reduce and abolish the following rights: 1. freedom of speech, 2. freedom of assembly, 3, freedom to plead the fifth amendment and many more rights."

A question of curiosity: How come those tennis courts that were not ripped up by the construction of Tobin Hall have not been fixed up for decent play, and how come no action has been taken toward constructing some other courts to replace those that were torn up?
